

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/gs to ease his wrongs, engagd, fir. Congress Hall, in Philada Feb. 15.1798. 8 E. Cor. 6 th chasmut &

. • . • .

. •

•

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE,

AND

NOTES AND QUERIES

CONCERNING THE

ANTIQUITIES, HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY

o P

AMERICA.

VOL. VIII.

NEW YORK:
JOHN G. SHEA,
88 CENTRE STREET.
1864.

,
		·

PREFACE.

THE HISTORICAL MAGAZINE, established originally in Boston, and edited during the first year by John Ward Dean, Esq., whose agency in establishing a work of such real value, and launching it fairly into the American public, deserves the grateful remembrance of scholars of the historic past of our country, has now passed entirely into the hands of the present editor, who has directed its columns since its advent to New York, except for the first year, when it was under the direction of the Hon. George Folsom.

Appreciating its value as a contribution to American history, a record and auxiliary to the constantly increasing and laboring Historical Societies, a stimulus and helper to all students in the science to which it is devoted, and all conscious of my few qualifications for the task, I have grown to regard the Historical Magazine as part and parcel of myself. When the publisher who had so ably commenced and conducted it found it necessary to relinquish its management, I felt reluctant to see it pass to other hands or cease.

Its condition has not been too prosperous. A large southern subscription, lost by the war, has not been replaced by an increased northern list; but I felt assured that, properly brought to the notice of societies and students, this would soon be remedied; and that its friends will, each in his own sphere, exert themselves to increase its list.

With the January number will begin the series of promised papers on American historians. These will, in many instances, be accompanied by portraits; and I shall endeavor to give, also, other illustrations not unbecoming the character of the Magazine. Endeavor shall be made to render the General Department more attractive by giving it a popular character, without impairing its general and recognized form.

Hoping to continue for years the connection so long and pleasantly made as editor, the proprietor ushers in the ninth volume of the Historical Magazine.

JOHN G. SHEA.

NEW YORK, December, 1864.

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

JANUARY, 1864.

[No. 1.

General Bepartment.

CARICATURE OF AN EARLY FRACAS IN CONGRESS.

In presenting to our readers a copy of an early caricature of what unfortunately has been a precedent too often followed, we are happy to give the following account of the scene from the pen of one of our kind contributors.

"The disgraceful scene which the accompanying engraving presents occurred in the United States House of Representatives, then sitting in Philadelphia, on the 15th of February, 1798. The building in which Congress then met is that at the S. E. corner of Sixth and Chestnut streets. The Senate sat in the back room, second story, now occupied by a branch of the District Court for the City and County of Philaof Representatives.

"The combatant with the uplifted cane is the Hon. Roger Griswold of Connecticut; he with the brandished tongs is the died only a few years ago.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

Connecticut, May 21, 1762; graduated at Yale College in 1780, and studied law. From 1795 to 1805 he was a Representative in Congress from Connecticut. In 1801 he declined the appointment of Secretary of War, offered him by President Adams, a few days before the accession of President Jefferson. In 1807 he was chosen a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State; was Lieutenant-Governor from 1809 to 1811, and then elected Governor; while holding that office he refused to place four companies under General Dearborn at the requisition of the President, for garrison purposes, deeming the requisition unconstitutional, as they were not wanted to "repel invasion," etc. He died in 1812.'

"'MATTHEW LYON. He was born in Wicklow County, Ireland, in 1746, and having emigrated to this country when thirteen years of age, participated to some extent in the revolutionary struggle, havdelphia. In the room below, near the ing, in 1777, been appointed temporary Court of Quarter Sessions, sat the House Paymaster of the Northern army, and in 1778 Deputy Secretary of the Governor of Vermont, and at the same time Clerk of the Court of Confiscation. He settled in Vermont after the war, and was elected a Hon. Matthew Lyon of Vermont. The member of the State Legislature in 1789 Speaker, the Hon. Jonathan Dayton, of and the three following years. In 1783 he New Jersey, is in his chair; beneath him founded the town of Fair Haven, where he sits the Clerk of the House, Jonathan W. built saw-mills, grist-mills, established a Condy, Esq., of Pennsylvania. In the left forge or iron-foundry, manufactured paper hand corner, leaning his elbow on his knee, from bass-wood and established a newsis the Rev. Ashbel Green, an eminent Cler-paper called The Farmers' Library. He gyman in the Presbyterian church, who served that town in the legislature ten years. In 1786 he was Assistant Judge of "Of the two prominent actors in the Rutland County. He was a Representative scene we have the following account in Mr. in Congress from Vermont, from 1799 to Charles Lanman's 'Dictionary of the Uni- 1801, and it was during his first term that ted States Congress.' (Philadelphia, 1859.) he had a personal difficulty on the floor of "'ROGER GRISWOLD, born in Lyme, Congress with Roger Griswold of Connec-giving the vote that made Jefferson Pre- face. sident is well known. At the end of his mont he removed to Kentucky, served two years in the Legislature of that State, and was a Representative in Congress from that retirement from Congress, and on November 13, 1811, the Speaker of the House of Representatives presented a petition from him, setting forth that he had, many years before, been prosecuted and convicted under the sedition law (see "State Trials of "On the 1st of February a letter from the United States") that he had suffered Mr. Lyon to the Speaker was read, in imprisonment and been made to pay the sum of $1060.90, and that he wished to respect to the House. have the money refunded to him. On July heirs the specified sum, with interest from to the House and recommended the passage from Vermont, and at the close of his ser- until the 12th of February, when the vote vices in Congress from Kentucky he was upon the question of expulsion was taken employed to build gun-boats for the war, and stood-ayes 52, nays 44. A vote of but became bankrupt from the operation, two-thirds being constitutionally required In 1820 he was appointed a Factor among to effect an expulsion the motion was lost. the Cherokee Indians in Arkansas; when that Territory was organized he was elected Bluff, Arkansas, August 1, 1822.'

"The encounter represented in the curious engraving herewith reproduced was not is holding a handkerchief in his hand and the first which had occurred between Messrs. Lyon and Griswold. On the 31st of January, in the same year (1798), a difficulty occurred between them, of which the following account has been abridged from The Aurora newspaper (Republican).

"The House of Representatives was engaged in balloting for managers to con-Senator Blount of North Carolina, the his eyes on a paper before him. Mr. Gris-Speaker being out of the chair. Just be wold left his seat with a stout hickory club. fore the adjournment, Mr. Griswold and came up to Mr. Lyon on his right front, and Mr. Lyon being outside of the bar, the without warning struck him once and again former made some allusion to a story cir- over the head and shoulders before he could culated in some of the eastern states that rise, and repeated his blows, which Mr. Mr. Lyon had been obliged to wear a Lyon endeavored to ward off with his arm, ticut, when an unsuccessful effort was made wooden sword for cowardice in the field. to have him expelled. The fact of his Upon this Mr. Lyon spit in Mr. Griswold's

"'Mr. Sewall desired that the galleries second term as a Representative from Ver- might be cleared, and when the doors were closed he moved that Mr. Lyon be expelled. The House ordered the doors to be opened and the subject was then referred to the state from 1803 to 1811. After his final Committee on Privileges. The committee soon reported to the effect that, if either of the members offered any violence to the other before a final decision of the House, he should be considered guilty of a high breach of privilege.

which he disclaimed any intentional dis-

"'On the following day the Committee 4, 1840, a law was passed paying to his of Privileges reported the facts of the case February, 1799. It was while in prison at of a resolution for Mr. Lyon's expulsion. Vergennes that he was elected to Congress The debate upon this report continued

"'Of the affair of January 31st, a caricature is in existence representing Mr. the first delegate to Congress, but did not Lyon as a lion standing on its hind legs live to take his seat, having died at Spadra and having a man's head in profile. A wooden sword is hanging by his side. Griswold, whose name admitted of no pun, exclaiming, "what a beastly action.";

The Aurora of February 16th, 1798, gives the following anecdote of the battle represented in the engraving.

"' Yesterday, after prayers, nearly half an hour after the time to which the House had adjourned, and after the Speaker had taken the chair, Mr. Lyon was sitting in his seat (which is the centre of a row of desks) duct the impeachment before the Senate of with his hat off and inclining forward with while extricating himself from the sur-stroke across Mr. Lyon's head, who was rounding desks and chairs. Mr. L. at-sitting uncovered and looking down upon tempting to close in, in order to avoid the some papers upon the desk, which stood blows, pushed forward towards the Speak-between him and Mr. Griswold. er's chair; Mr. G. endeavoring to preserve stroke was so sudden and unexpected that the distance and repeating his blows. Mr. Mr. L. did not even make an effort by L. at length got hold of the tongs; but raising up his arms to ward off the danger. after one stroke with them, his antagonist Mr. G. repeated his stroke before Mr. Lyon closing in, both the tongs and the club could rise from his seat. Mr. L. put his were dropt and the two members fell, Mr. cane between his legs when he first sat G. having Mr. L. partly under him. There down but seemed to have lost it, as he was no call of order from the Speaker all pressed forward unarmed to extricate himthis time. Two members endeavored to take Mr. G. off by pulling him by the legs. The Speaker alleged he should be taken assault during the favorable opportunity off by the shoulders; they were, however, furnished by Mr. L.'s embarrassed situation, separated.

standing in that part of the house where had got into the open area before the water is placed for the use of the members. Mr. L. came up to the same place, with a cane in his hand; as soon as he recognized by the wariness of his antagonist, he seemed Mr. G. he struck him with his cane; on which Mr. Sitgreaves brought Mr. G. a hickory club; but the members interfered, the Speaker then called to order and not so much hurt as might have been expected from the violence and manner of the G., who quickly caught hold of the tongs assault.'

Messrs. L. and G. separated.

"So far from the organ of the Republican party. The following account, copied from a newspaper slip, appears to be from some paper of the Federal party:

"'PHILADELPHIA, February 16.—Ano-er Fracas in Congress.—Yesterday morning, immediately after prayers were over, and while the Speaker was in the chair, but before the house was called to order, Mr. Griswold, a member from Connecticut, observing Mr. Lyon, of Vermont, Griswold met at the water-table near the in his seat, left the chair in which he usually south-east door; Mr. Griswold was now sat and moved diagonally towards the table without any stick and Mr. Lyon had a cane occupied by the sergeant at arms. He in his hand; their eyes no sooner met than made a momentary halt, assumed a fierce-Mr. Lyon sprang to attack Mr. Griswold, ness of countenance to which he is unac-who, stepping back, in some measure customed, grasping at the same time with avoided the blow. Mr. G. continued to firmer nerve the hickory stick he had in his retreat until another cudgel was put into hand, passed on with three or four quick his hand by Mr. Sitgreaves, but on the steps till he came near to Mr. Lyon, when Speaker and some of the members calling to he raised his stick and draw a violent order the business terminated for the present.

self from the chairs and desks with which he was surrounded. Mr. G. continued his gave several severe strokes, one of which "'A few minutes afterwards Mr. G. was visibly staggered him. As soon as Mr. L. Speaker's chair he attempted to close with Mr. G., but finding this not easily effected, compelled to seek for arms that should put him more on a level with Mr. G. With this view he passed on to the nearest fireplace, followed by Mr. G., who continued striking. At length Mr. L. seized the fire-"'We are happy to add that Mr. L. is tongs and proceeded to repel Mr. G.'s attack, but in this he was prevented by Mr. also and made a thrust with his cane at Mr. L.'s face. The combatants now closed and abandoned their weapons; after a short struggle they fell side by side on the floor, when several other members interposed and separated the combatants. Mr. L. immediately expressed a wish that they had been left alone to settle the matter in the way Mr. G. had proposed.

"'A few minutes only had intervened when, by accident, Mr. Lyon and Mr.

"'Mr. Lyon suffered considerable per-burnt, the French ships anchored off Tysonal injury from the blows he received in bee, the Fowey get off at high water. the first attack. Mr. Griswold appears to have sustained little or no bodily hurt dur- channel leading to Savannah, the Fowey, ing the whole affray."

OF SAVANNAH IN 1779.

NOVEMBER 3, 1779. Saw from Tybee Light house four large ships in the offing; came alongside, sent 8 nine pounders, 400 sent Lieut. Lock in the pilot-boat to reconshot and eight barrels powder, &c. to the noitre them.

4th. The Lieutenant returned and reported the strange ships in the offing to be French ship a-ground, the French fleet at two French ships of the line, two frigates, anchor without the bar; at 7 A.M. weighed, and a sloop.

again.

with advice to New-York of the enemy river, at 11, anchored at Five FathomHole. being on the coast, but was chased in by the French.

we hope escaped the enemy; employed in into it and mooring them.

Light-house of seeing 18 sail, at sun-set only enough to keep the ship free; posted counted 41 sail, 32 of which appeared large the officers and seamen to the different batships; an officer and reinforcement came to terios in the line; the General received a Tybee fort, which had only one 24 pounder summons from Count d'Estaing to sur-Savannah armed ship transports and prison ships ready to go up Savannah river, morning.

16th. The remainder of the Rose and leaded the ouns were tier.

some of them in chase of a schooner with teries; Colonel Maitland and the troops English colours which they took.

10th. Four of the enemy's ships got under way at high water and stood for Tybee, highest spirits. the Fowey made the signal to weigh, weighed with the Fowey, Keppel and viz. till gun fire P.M. Comet galley and run up Savannah river as far as Long Reach; the Fowey got aground 19th. Hands sent down to bring the on White Vester Bank, ordered the Kep-ships up near the town; all the ships anchors, &c. the fort was abandoned and night.

11. Employed sounding and laying off the Keppel and Comet galley anchored there.

12th. At sun-set a French ship anchored off Tybee, two more anchor'd in the South AN ENGLISH JOURNAL OF THE SIEGE Channel and one in the north, perceived she was a-ground.

13th. At 2 P.M. a sloop, the Crawford, army; the Comet galley moved to Cockspur and exchanged some shot with the as did the Fowey, Keppel and Comet gal-5th. They stood off this day and appeared ley, at half past, the ship took the ground, but soon floated, anchored with the small 6th. Lieut. Whitworth was dispatched bower, at 8 weighed and came up the 14th. Sent Lieut. Lock, 26 seamen, Capt. Rankin and all the marines to reinforce the 7th. Lieut. Whitworth sailed again and army per order from Commodore Henry.

15th, at 2 the Keppel and Comet went sounding the North Channel and bringing down the harbour to cover and protect the the Rose, Keppel and Germain men of war troops expected from Beaufort; this day I joined the army with the remaining part of 8th. The signal was made from the the officers and ship's company, leaving and one 81 inch howitz. Came down from render, &c. &c. TO THE ARMS OF THE Cockspur and anchored in the North French King; a council of war was called Channel; his Majesty's ship Fowey, the on the occasion, and an answer was sent; a Savannah armed ship transports and prison trooper of Pulaski's was brought in this Fowey's guns were landed, the guns were 9th. At day-light saw the French fleet, immediately mounted on the different batfrom Beaufort arrived, 71st and New York Volunteers, brave fellows; Savannah in the 17th. A truce agreed on for 24 hours,

18th. Continued truce.

pel and Comet to her assistance with boats, moved; the pickets firing most part of the ship, rebel galleys moving up the river, were driven from them by our batteries, in orders from Capt. Henry to scuttle and the evening the rebel gallies advanced up sink the Rose man of war in the channel, to the Rose, but were obliged to retire by which was immediately done, after getting the fire from the Comet and Thunderer out as many of her stores, &c. as the time gallies;—continue throwing shells and would admit. The Savannah armed ship firing on their works during the night. and Venus transport were burnt with their guns and provisions, ammunition, &c. two a few shot at the Fort on the left of the or three transports sunk at Five Fathom encampment without effect, a French fri-Hole or thereabouts with all their sails gate advanced to Five Fathom Hole. burnt, &c. &c.

the left fired on them occasionally from the during the night. batteries.

23d. Strengthening the works and throwing up intrenchments in front of the different corps in the line.

24th. At seven in the morning saw the enemy very busy intrenching themselves to the left of the barracks, three companies of light infantry made a sortie with great spirit, the enemy being too numerous French frigate and began to cannonade obliged them to retreat under the fire of our batteries with the loss of 21 killed and wounded; Lieut. McPherson of the 71st new entrenchment on the left, raised was killed, it is supposed the enemy suffered considerably; the enemy fired several cannon in our line from 2 eighteen pounders and some 4 pounders, a flag was sent to bury the dead on both sides, in the afternoon the enemy's gallies advanced near the works, our galleys exchanged several battery; the new battery behind the barracks finished this day, mounted with two 18 pounders, two 9 pounders and field pieces, throwing up intrenchments in front of the different corps in the French lines, about half a musket shot from our abbatis; batteries every fifteen minutes.

20th. New works thrown up, the French mounted two 18 pounders en barbette, but

26th. At 11 A.M. the enemies' gallies fired

27th, at 3 A.M. a small fire of musketry 21st. Two Negroes deserted from the from the pickets; 8 A.M. a flag from the enemy report them strong, Gen. Lincoln French with private letters from the Briwith the rebel army having joined the tish prisoners: destroyed the barracks and French, and that they are preparing for the carried off the wood, &c. leaving the lower attack; strengthening our works, firing part as a breastwork, to prevent it being occasionally on the enemy to disturb them. fired from the enemy, continue throwing 22d. The enemy still opening works to shells and cannonading the enemys works

> 28th, at 1 in the morning a small firing between the picquets, a rebel taken close to our abattis, about 2 another firing from our picquets; at 9 A.M. a French frigate moved up the Back River and moored her stern and head—every thing quiet this day, the enemy are carrying on their works. 8 P.M. the Thunderer galley moved near the her, the frigate did not return her fire.

> 29th. At daylight this morning saw a during the night by the enemy, within half musket shot of our lines; employed throwing up breastworks to the right and left of the barracks, fired on the enemy's works every 15 minutes from the batteries and howitzers during the night.

30th. At daylight perceived the enemy shot with them and returned under the sea working and extending their entrenchments; at 7 A.M. the Thunder galley advanced toward the French frigate on the Back River and fired at her, she did not return a shot—the Thunderer returned, having broke the platform of her gun. At 10 A.M. a brig came up to Five Fathom the pickets exchanged shots the greatest Hole, the rebel gallies on their former stapart of the night, we throwing shells into tion near the works below; the Rose, a their works and firing on them from our boat with a small gun, fired at the Thunderer without effect, a launch and another 25th. The French throw up new works boat went up the Back River; a man came on the left of the barracks, in which they in from the enemy, gives no satisfactory on the right, and the armed vessels on the threw several shells into the town and enemy at Yamacraw, as well as from the camp, at day break they opened their batbatteries in the front and the left on the teries and fired warmly into the town, but French intrenchments. This night an offi-none into the field. cer of Polaskie's was wounded and brought into the line by the picquets.

October 1st. At 7 A.M. the French fri-returned by us. gate in the Back River fired some shot toembrasures, &c. a flag from us to the firing as usual; heard a cannonade at sea. French with letters from the wounded officer taken last night, still employed in camp, and town; the line turned out at strengthening our lines, particularly in dawn on an alarm that the enemy were front; sent out of the lines two dragoons approaching; the cannonade and bombardof Polaskie's legion by a flag, who had ment continued all night. been detained some time here, and received from the batteries in front, and threw some and burnt one house. shells into the French intrenchments.

2d. Rainy weather, wind E.N.E. the but during the night cannonaded and bomenemy still working in their intrenchments barded the town furiously. and preparing the batteries; at noon the enemy's gallies advanced near the sea bat-French attacked us warmly on the right tery and began to cannonade, as did the and endeavoured to storm the redoubt and frigate in the Back River, several of their Ebenezer battery, the grenadiers of the shot came into the rear of the camp without 60th regiment advanced to support them, doing execution; the Thunderer returned and after an obstinate resistance by the a few shot, the sea battery did not; a de-French, they drove them back with great serter from Polaskie's legion reports the slaughter: their loss is reported to be 6 or enemy's batteries to be near ready, a de-700 killed, wounded and prisoners; our serter from the French likewise, with the loss Captain Tarves of the dragoons, who same account; the frigate in the Back River fired again in the afternoon without redoubt, 7 of the 60th killed and wounded, effect; threw shells and fired from the bat- and two marines killed and four wounded. teries into the French intrenchments to A flag from the French to bury their dead, disturb them during the night.

frigate firing on the rear of the camp with- destroying the houses. out effect; at 12 o'clock this night the 10th. This morning sent a flag to bury intelligence; some firing from the battery enemy opened the bomb batteries and

4th. The enemy still continue their fire from the bomb and other batteries, it was

5th. The enemy still cannonading the wards the town and at the negroes on camp and town, at night a house took fire, Hutchinson's Island; perceived the enemy but it went out without communicating to in front and on the left busy in their works, any other building, the frigate and gallies

6th. The enemy still firing on the works,

7th. Still continue cannonading and an officer of the same legion with a flag, throwing shells on both sides, the enemy Mons. Bentoloso, who came to see the offi-throwing most of their fire towards the cer that was wounded and brought in last town, which suffers considerably; a 9 night; employed in strongly throwing up pounder in our battery to the right of our a new battery on our left, to be mounted | barracks burst and wounded a seaman; with 8 nine-pounders, to act on the enemy's carpenter employed in repairing the platbatteries; in hourly expectation of the form in the Ebenezer battery, which had attack; this afternoon fresh breezes from been broke by the shells. At 7 at night the E.N.E. and rain; fired during the night enemy threw several carcases into the town,

8th. The enemy fired little this morning,

9th. At drum-beating in the morning the died nobly fighting on the parapet of the which was granted; at 8 at night the 3d. Rainy weather, wind E.N.E, the French beat a parley, but were refused by enemy still working in the intrenchment us; they fired cannon and shells during and compleating their batteries, the French the night without any other effect than their dead, the Rebels sent one for the same the fire, which seemed to come from one purpose; the truce lasted from ten till four gun; nothing more material during the P. M., the French fired several cannon when night. it expired. Between 8 and 9 P. M. our picquets fired on the right several shots; and Rebels who make the same report as the lines lay on their arms all night, and the former—at nine this morning a flag out the seamen stood to their cannon. No to settle an exchange of prisoners; some other firing from either side during the information gives us reason to suspect a night.

from the enemy, our line very alert and in cannon, sick and wounded—we fired at high spirits: the French and Rebels sent times during the night on the enemy's in flags of truce during the greatest part of works, they returned two shot only, from the day; the enemy employed burying two small pieces, supposed to be six their dead, carrying off their wounded, and pounders. searching for their missing. The French take off all their cannon and mortars in the ing, we could not hear the Rebels revallie night, leaving only some small field pieces to amuse us, our whole lines in spirits, morning gun; a light ship came to Five ready for another attack. Several deserters, French and Rebel, come in, and all report gallies joined the two former ones-more that the enemy are moving, and that their deserters come in and report the enemy to loss in the attack is much more than we be on the retreat, that their loss the mornimagined, the Rebels miss 1300, the French ing of the engagement was very great, loss uncertain, but greater than the Rebels, as they fought like soldiers, and were killed very sickly, and discontented with the and wounded, but the Rebels loss is from Rebels; the regiment Darmagnac are on desertion immediately after the defeat.

12th. The French amused us with four cannon shot at day break, more deserters d'Estaing was at the attack and was dangerously wounded in two places, and the flower of the French army killed or rebels did not; more deserters from the wounded—Count Polaskie mortally wounded. The enemy very quiet all night, open'd a new battery on the right of three 4 pounders.

morning, the French returned two shot, French. the whole line very alert, and under arms, water—hear'd several guns from the sea, which we suppose signals; more deserters come in, who reported the enemy's loss to be great, the Rebel militia are mostly gone off, and the rest dispirited and ready to

14th. More deserters from the French vigorous attack from the French, as soon 11th. This morning very foggy, no alarm as they have got off their heavy baggage 15th. The enemy very quiet this morn--the French beat the drums, but fired no Fathom Hole, suppose to water. particularly in their best officers, they are their march to Bewis, with baggage, sick and wounded, the night quiet, firing occasionally from the grand battery on the come in,—say they are retreating, Count enemy's entrenchment, they returned 3 or 4 shot.

16th. The French beat the revallie, the French confirming the former reports of their great loss and retreat, we are however on our guard. The frigates in the river loose their topsails, as we suppose, to 13th. We fired a gun at three in the drop down and cover the retreat of the An alarm at sunset, that the enemy was forming in our front, the lines a flag out at nine to return the wounded under arms; the rebels set fire to some French officers and soldiers—the frigate in houses on our right, as well as in our the Back River moved down at high front—our armed negroes skirmishing with the Rebels the whole afternoon, we fired occasionally during the night on the ehemy's works and camp; they returned two shot.

17th. The French beat the revallie, the march to Charles Town; our batteries in Rebels did not; heard the report of several front fired on the enemy's works at in-cannon; a manager of Sir James Wright's tervals during the night, the enemy returned from Ogeeche, reports that the enemy were preparing for a retreat, that they lost the tunity of answering your kind letter as that day of the attack 1500 men, killed and of Coll Johnston, altho, an interview would wounded, and the desertion very great; much better serve to disclose or unburthen fire as usual at the enemy's works, they the mind which cannot so properly be done returned three shot.

18th. The French beat the revallie, the Rebels did not, but were heard working in the woods, the armed negroes brought in two Rebel Dragoons and eight horses, and killed two rebels who were in a foraging party; only one deserter this day from the French, who gives the same account the front line of my highest fears and deepest as the former ones; many boats observed passing from the enemy's vessels and their army-nothing material during the night, we fired as usual on their works, and indebted, and whom our delinquency in paythey returned three shot from a six pounder, our lines very alert and generally on their arms ready to receive the enemy.

Rebels not, but were heard cutting in the woods; the ship that came to Five Fathom but doubted by too many, for altho' it is Hole moved down the river, as we sup-did not fire the morning gun; two deserters that came in this day, say the fixing the money at forty to one, and there-Rebels marched off yesterday evening, fore decry the measure. Mr. Laurens by fell down lower, but the wind being against her, she could go no further.

LETTERS OF STRONG OF GENERAL JOHN ARM-KITTANING TO WM. IRVINE.

Armstrong made himself famous by his affair at Kittaning, and was a man of parts. He was a personal friend of Washington, having served with him in the French nation in the business of Qr. M. Gi-

His correspondence with General Irvine (for which our readers are indebted to a descendant of the latter, who obligingly favors us with contributions from General Irvine's papers) possesses an interest as a portraiture of the men and times, indepenembraced.

PHILADELPHIA, 8rd August, 1780.

DEAR GENERAL,

I cannot pass so favourable an oppor-

by Pen and ink.

Your soldiers shirts are by this time I hope gone forward, with Overalls, and as much dispatch in procuring Shoes as can well be made. As you are now to have but a fewe hints, the great concern of an Empty Treasury with a thousand daily demands, forms distress—we want at this moment to draw money, produce, transpor ation, &c. from these States to whom we are already deeply ment disenables from advancing those Taxes whereon at present we depend.—How the scheme of business and Finance contained 19th. The French beat the revallie, the in the resolution of the 18th of March last will operate for our relief is yet uncertain considered by many good judges to be posed, full of water and the French baggage. at once just and wise respecting the pub-20th. The French beat the revallie, but lick at large, yet various individuals suppose themselves injured or disappointed by after having fired their camp; the frigate our reverse of fortune in South Carolina has been retarded in his voiage to Holand for which place he sets out from hence in a few days for the purpose of borrowing money for the United States. Mr. Sarel was set out (before yr. letter came to hand) for Holland also, in order to procure Cloathing for the Pennsylvania line of our army, with some other necessaries for the State, which if he is successful, I hope may be of some use to us. Genl. Greens peremptory resigrefusal to act under the new regulation for that department, at this very critical moment, has at once disappointed and thrown Congress into a degree of vexatious distress greater than can well be expressed, or has yet happened in regard of any individual, nine tenths of the difficulty arises dent of the historical value of the facts from the importance of the present moment. The Committee of Congress at Camp appears to make Genl. Greens continuance of absolute necessity—so that if he is retained the measures of Congress for reforming that department must be rescinded, & the censures of the publick must remain agst. Congress, as deaf to their remonstrances for the reformation of abuses. The remonstrance of the Genl. Officers was this morning read & committed to a respectable Committee, the greater part whereof will in my opinion meet the cordial attention of be discharged from all other-to-day must Congress, who are as well disposed to do anything in their power that is in itself will present my best wishes to the gents.

right, as men can be.

Hand gives some pain to all your friends he sets out. that I have heard speak of it, as tending to derange many things now established & DEAR GENERAL, introduce a new field of dispute which cou'd not be well settled again—these and ables me to say more at present than sundry such sentiments prevail at the Board that I reached home about a week ago of war, whom it is said are possessed of —and found Mrs. Irwin & children, with written opinions of high authority which my own Family also in usual healthclearly conclude agst. the utility, if not also and that I beg you will favour me with a agst. the right of your claim; for they will line on the prospects of an investiture of not allow that the Resolution of Congress New Yorke which by the way I consider for securing the rank of Prisoners extends through the unexpected stay of the Count to your case, or at least that this is doubt- & many other circumstances, as abortive ful.—That the first appointment of Genl. for this season. Officers being wholly with Congress, belongs not to the ordinary line of rank is made for the subsistance of the General secured by the resolution to which we Officers of the Army, which at leaving have alluded. I cou'd, especially with the Congress I impressed on the minds of some consent of my colleagues, bring this matter members who promised suddenly to have before Congress, but whether brought on it on the carpet, and to which I think in this way, or by a plain & dispassionate there wou'd be no opposition. If any memorial from yourself, the immediate uneasiness shou'd arise to you, my advice consequence would be a reference to the still is that you write either to Congress Board of War, and from thence (as far directing to the President or to the Board as I can learn) to the Commander-in-Chief and a Board of Officers at Camp. I have your confidence that justice will be done thought it necessary to write you thus you. My compliments to Coll Hay-I plainly, having strong apprehensions that am, dear General, sincerely yours, if carried to the uttermost, it will ultimately go agst. you. I therefore wish you cou'd either reconcile it to yourself from pounds &c. what you may have learned of the sense of others, to give it up, or to write me soon, Dublin, will visit the Camp, give me leave that it may be brought to a period—be to recommend him to your particular nosuccess to yr. claim in the present question. I hope you will judge right-and DEAR GENERAL, am most sincerely yours.

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

The present state of our Southern Department is very forbiding, the letters of Genl. Gates & Baron De Calb, draw the picture of universal want, more particularly in the articles of money & provisions. Genl. Green having so peremptorily refused the necessary service, is likely to end this disagreeable matter. I beg vou of our line. I intend this by Coll John-The controversy betwixt you & Genl. stone, together with a conference before

CARLISLE, 80th October, 1779.

A cold joined to a late hour disen-

JOHN ARMSTRONG. Wheat £15 per Bushel, Indian corn 9

I suppose Doctor Shiell, lately from assured that sentiments from Camp, and tice—He is a gentleman—a genuine Whig also sentiments formed here promise no and a man of very good sense and breeding. PHILADA., 17th August, 1780.

By Coll. Johnston I had the pleasure of writing you at some length which I hope you received—the bearer Captain Vanderhorst-otherwise Vanross, I beg DEAR GENERAL, leave to recommend to your civilities & those of the gentlemen of the Pennsyl-|may readily conceive, is only to shew that vania line.—He is a gentn. who lately we have you in remembrance, and perhaps possessed a very pretty Fortune in the at a leisure moment to draw something neighbourhood of Charleston from whence better from you. he has been obliged to flee with great loss, whoes hospitallity hath often been wit-Stone or Brick going on in this town; and nessed by Coll. Coner & myself-he yet money is almost invisible-what shall designs only a visit to Camp, wishes the we think of a late estimation of 25,000 £s pleasure & curiosity of seeing Our Commander-in-Chief, then returns to South distinct from all other debts either to the agitation at Camp of a certain point of de-time that all ranks should change their licacy and honr. wherein the Officers of gates. two years more in our present the Army, but more particularly those of course, must sell plantations and change heard this matter but imperfectly, shall Storekeepers - Lawyers & Speculators, decline the honr. of that particular com- both hands! mand.* But if our officers must make a sacrifice, please to remember, it is not to an have had a tolerable good crop, and a individual only, but to the weal & safety of favourable season fore securing it; what many, to the publick good of these Com- quantity thereof will go to the payment of monwealths at large—a sacrifice this, which publick dues, is yet unknown. if I mistake not, is second, only to that I had a late visit from a sensible but which we owe to God Himself. My Health rigid Constitutionist—he said if the Asthe arms of America.

I am, Dear General, affectionately yours, JOHN ARMSTRONG.

Genl. Irwin.

CARLISLE, 16th August, 1787.

The design of the following lines as you

There are no less than ten new houses of due on the Storekeepers Books of this town, -I am grieved to hear of the publick or to individuals! is it not high our line are deeply interested—having property very fast & very cheap—Some only take the liberty of making two short must be the nabobs of this country—we observations-I hope the young gentn. ery out against an aristocracy, but are will have prudence and address enough to practically laying the foundation of it with

Our country thro' the favour of God,

has been in jeopardy of late by excessive sembly altered the funding law, or made heat business and confinement, in this city any discrimination respecting the alienated where many of late hath made a sudden certificates, it was but a forerunner of, a exit from the present world—but if my previous step to throwing off the whole health is spared until the memorial of the debt! I asked if he thought the State able General Officers is carried through, Mr. to pay the whole of the interest agreeable McClane being now come, I intend to re- to the law? he acknowledged it is not able, tire, before which you will hear from me but altho' we had taken too much debt in a future letter. I begin to doubt upon us, it is only owing to the bad whether the 2d Division of the F. Fleet management of the republicans, whom he will arrive in time, but still hope that this thinks has opposed the best measures for Campaign will not pass over without some a discharge of the debt. I thought there happy event to these States & laurels to was powerfull reasons for making a distinction in the payment of interest, due on these securities at least in point of time, and perhaps in the manner of doing it too, but that none of them should be disavowed or rejected—and that it is hard to suppose we have any set of men in the rank of legislatures, capable of such an atrocious degree of robery & villany, as to discard the whole! and thereby injure a great many of their own political friends as well as others. He said aristocracy was their object, and that no wreck nor ruin would by some be regarded (if like Sampson they themselves should even die with the Philis- pecting the time or call of new members to tines) in order to get clear of the humiliating a seat in Congress I see is very plain, and line of republicanism &c. These are afflicting considerations, but depraved as mankind are, I hope they would not go these the President will some way notify distant lengths, but if any of our citizens are so totally lost to reason & conscience, there is a farther hope that they will not be permitted. From the prevalence of these kind of jealousies amongst ourselves there is whether you franked a letter for Johnny much to fear. Amongst other things, how some short time before Mrs. Irwin went to hard may we suppose it to be, for the Contown? I sent it by some person who said vention to throw out any thing that will he would see you, I remember telling him, give general satisfaction, impossible but if he found you at leisure to give my comhowever, or rather whatever their system pliments & ask you to throw a over it—but may be, altho' it must be examined both by if he found you busie, to leave it in the post Congress & the different States, and per-office as it was, but cannot recollect who haps may either require or endure amend-this person was—the reason I mention this ments; but in my private opinion, it trivial matter is, that by a late letter from ought not to be scaned with an eye too him, he complains as having heard nothing critical, but with great candour and many from me since my last, only a few lines I allowances, nor should cold water be pour- had wrote to his wife. ed upon it, because such opposition might imadversions.

Referring to the appointment of Major McPherson to a command in the Light Infantry over the heads of others.

We expect to hear from you soon—Mrs. Irvine & the Children are in good health. their mercys and our own—this check of I wish you to talk farther with Genl. Ver- these combined tyrants (tho' we cannot non on the sale of our College land—the call it more) is evidently from the supreme soil I believe is strong & well watered. lord of the universe, who has thrown his What have you done with yr. Nagg, or have you obtained some decent old pacer back by the way they came, not with for him—I have two good mares, yet laurels, that disdain to grow in such a nothing to ride. If you come shortly to soil, but covered with a double coat of Philadelphia you will probably come home shame! the policy and arms of France has for two or three days.

I am dear General, affectionately yours, JOHN ARMSTRONG. CARLISLE, 5th January, 1798,

DEAR GENERAL,

I now acknowledge & thank you for your favour of Novr. last. The point resmost probably will not happen before the time you mention—if it should, no doubt members before hand. I have shown your letter to the Doctor with which he is very well satisfied.

You will scarcely be able to recollect

We are much elated with the late good naturally produce bad consequences among news from France—and happier would it the people—because it is apparent enough be both for them and us, did our expresthat we are not at present fit, or in a capa- sions of joy still rise higher & shew themcity to adopt the most perfect system of selves thro' different mediums from those Government—and because, an indifferent of ringing Bells, lighting tapers & washing one is better than none—I wish how many down an Oyster Supper; not that I object of yr. body may be thus mild in yr. and to these in due measure, but we should send them bread to eat, and gratefully & publickly acknowledge the real author of hook into their noses and turned them no doubt been a mean of impeding the diabolical career of these haughty invaders. but the mortifying blood descended from another quarter; and if the whole scene end well, the event will call for the general adoration & thanks of this nation. Two things however have a tendency to dash distressed friends—I mean the gross ignor- ble servant, ance of divine revelation expressed in some of the speeches of that people & their abuse of Old King David, once a greater General of Irvine lately from the Lurgg in Irethan any in France—also the report of the land, of whom Mrs. Irvine can tell you Prussians marching against them—as to somewhat—they are pretty good English the former (and the latter may not be true) scollars decenter than common from that altho' infidellity which must produce bad morals also (if this be the prevailing charac- store—the Elder brother is lame of one Leg ter of the nation) is indeed the very worst the younger about 20 years old they are system that can attend them, yet their grandsons of Ned Armstrongs of Lisnaban cause is a good one, and not the cause of & appear to be proper objects of some notice. France only, but of humanity in general I have mentioned them to you merely at therefore there is ground of hope from a a venture in case any little opening shou'd Sovereign God who hates oppression and present itself. The father is far from being a tyranny. I hope your family are all well, the children recovered of their complaint in their eyes & particularly our Grandson, whom with his Mama, my wife is frequently wishing back again—all is quiet at your house, Callender keeps his College hours punctually, and has taken a part in a wondrous play lately acted here, I saw it not, but if things, together with the place of your report may be credited, no part nor person present residence, will undoubtedly subfailed, and in point of dress it could scarce ject you to some trouble in presenting the be surpassed—I must not therefore shade applications for Military Commissions, of it's beauty by an awkward attempt to de-various candidates of your acquaintance scribe it, nor would this sheet admit the but this trouble is now to be expected & half—so much for vanity—but apropos—if by it you can render your country any is it possible that the new playhouse in real service I'm persuaded you will have Philadelphia is considered of so much importance as to justify labour on the Sab- is, I now take the liberty of recommending bath day? this report true or false, origin- to your notice & assistance, Mr. John ated in the city—It is too glaring & at-|Steel of this Town, as a person aparently trocious to gain credit here; on the other well formed for military service. hand, the report, or strong suspicion having been brought by so many different persons acquaintance with military movements & best it is but a disagreeable story, and so improbable that I have hesitated on the sider him well suited to the Western Serbare mentioning of it even to you—as the vice. With respect to rank, I need not present is supposed to be the favourable tell you, that all men look as high as they season of application on behalf of our Colupon your generalship in the several you, as I now do with full freedom—and branches of the business—Mrs. Arm- am dear General strong joines in our best wishes to your self Mrs. Irvine & the Children—with the hopes we have conceived for these our dear General your sincere friend & hum-

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

There are two young lads of the name country & fit to write either in an office or mean or despicable man, but has not that command of himself that is sufficient to resist company & strong drink. I pitty him much for this—perhaps he may reform, he is recommended by my Br. Andrew.

Your knowledge of Military men & pleasure in doing it. On this principle it

He is personable, very active, has some & to various of the back towns, that at exercise, a genteel appearance & possesses a fine constitution, whereby I should concan at setting out, but as in that respect all lege, and as I know you are wrote to on cannot be gratified, they must be content that subject, I need only add, that a suf-with their lot. Mr. Steel has been very ficient degree of dependance is placed desirous that I should recommend him to entire forgetfulness; for altho, at present said to be bro't down by Coll. Proctor of if I count right you are a few lines in the ill temper of the Senecas has a bad arrears with me I mean in respect of number, but as to wright, having so little to to strike, if they should, they probably say, and so long unable to say that little, draw Monseys, Wyandotes and Delawares my claim of compensation is but very light. against Pennsylvania.

> Very respectfully yours, John Armstrong.

CARLISLE, 1793.

DEAR GENERAL.

We have however the pleasure of hearing frequently of the health of your family, any openings of this session beyond the and that Armstrong continues his progress report of a committee you sent Mr Montin length and breadth—indeed he has been so much the subject of enquiry, that poor to me the same appearance as that of the Bill and his little Sisters have been almost opening of roads and waters, taking up too forgotten; as has been the case with John many objects at once; blending things of & Horatio also, in preference to the other poor things who may happen to be favoured with as much merit as they—but parental weakness is of an antient date & seldom diate establishment. The great plenty of out of the need of amendment.

The killing of the late King of France, or rather the hopes of not killing him, is a common topic here—and some of us regret why Congress & our President have not life. Two things appear to me to dash our and humble servant, hopes of french liberty, tho' they may not overthrow it-one is the sending missionaries, some say into various parts of Eu- day. rope, all say into the Belgic provinces formally & publickly to seduce the subjects of other powers and induce them to adopt their political creed—the other is the killing of Louis Capet—which I consider no more a national object to the people, than to decree the death of a crow, or a chicken on the dunghill! on these two points I cannot reason on this bit of paper, but think I see an ample field for it, of which their enemies may but too naturally avail on the footing of Canaanites or Amalekthemselves—It is not easie to clear either ites." Bancroft, III. 408, and practically they are replete with ill policy & national indignity I have no doubt.

nation entitled as they are to our good trate the temper of the times. wishes and more—but what think you of our own situation—things seem to me as Indians first became Inhabitants of this stagnant, or in an indigested state, I mean mighty Continent, yet we may guess that our military affairs, nor are the causes probably the Devil decoy'd these miserable thereof hard to discover—indeed I pity Salvages hither, in hopes that the Gospel our old friend the president & think he is inevitably puzzled, whatever may The design of this is only to prevent an have been the causes thereof.—The report aspect. I hope they will not be permitted

Is there any efforts for the College, or gomery? I heard it once read & it had lesser importance & better brought forward more gradually, with others of more publick concern, requiring a more immemoney said to be deposited in the State treasury had induced warm expectations of going on with the building. Mrs. Irwin is soon expected up—until which time My wife joins in our respects to you thrown their weight into the scale of his all, with dear General your sincere friend

> John Armstrong. Callander is in health I saw him yester-

> HISTORICAL NOTES ON SLAVERY IN NORTHERN COLONIES ANDTHE STATES.

> > Continued from Vol. VII., page 867.

NO. III. - MASSACHUSETTS.

The colonists of Massachusetts assumed to themselves "a right to treat the Indians of these possitions of moral guilt; but that regarded them from the first as forlorn and wretched heathen-possessing few rights which were entitled to respect. Cotton We have been talking a little of a foreign Mather's speculations on their origin illus-

"We know not When or How these of the Lord Jesus Christ would never come in those days between the colonists and the here to destroy or disturb his Absolute natives. Empire over them." Magnalia, Book III. Part III.

of the United Colonies to Major Gibbons,

1645, further illustrate this spirit.

He was directed to have "due regard to the honour of God, who is both our sword and shield, and to the distance which is to be observed betwixt Christians and Barbarians, as well in warres as in other negociations." It was indeed strange that men, who professed to believe that God hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, should upon every occasion take care to preserve this distinction. Perhaps nothing more effectually defeated the en-Southwick, who were fined ten pounds, deavors for Christianizing the Indians. It but their fines not being paid and the parseems to have done more: to have sunk their spirits, led them to intemperance, and extirpated the whole race." Hutchinson Collection of Papers, 151.

In 1646 the Commissioners of the United Colonies made a very remarkable order, practically authorizing, upon complaint of | trespass by the Indians, the seizure of "any fines. of that plantation of Indians that shall entertain, protect, or rescue the offender." The order further proceeds, "And, because surers to sell the said persons to any of the it will be chargeable keeping Indians in English nation at Virginia or Barbadoesprisone, and if they should escape, they are in accordance with their law for the sale like to prove more insolent and dangerous of poor and delinquent debtors. To acafter, that upon such seazure, the delin-complish this they wrested their own law quent or satisfaction be againe demanded, from its just application, for the special law of the Sagamore or plantation of Indians concerning fines, did not permit them to go guilty or accessory as before, and if it be beyond imprisonment for non-payment. denyed, that then the magistrates of the Mass. Laws, 1675, p. 51; Felt's Salem, Jurisdiccon deliver up the Indians seased to II. 581; Mass. Records, IV. i. 366; Mass. the party or parties indamaged, either to Laws, 1675, p. 6; Bishop's N. E. Judged, serve, or to be shipped out and exchanged for Negroes as the cause will justly beare." Plymouth Records, IX. 71.

not blind to the severity of this proceeding, although they alleged that it was "just."

for Negroes, and the measure of "justice" to Barbadoes, in execution of the order of

It may be observed that in these notes we have not drawn the lines between the The instructions from the Commissioners Plymouth Colony and that of the Massachusetts Bay. In this connection they may on being sent against the Narragansetts in justly be regarded as one, indeed they cannot be separated, for in these and similar proceedings, to quote a significant proverb of that day, "the Plymouth saddle was always on the Bay horse."

In 1658, June 29, certain persons were punished by fines by the County Courts at Salem and Ipswich for attending a Quaker meeting and otherwise "syding with the Quakers and absenting themselves from the publick ordinances." Among them were two children, Daniel and Provided Southwick, sonne and daughter to Lawrence ties (as is stated in the proceedings) "pretending they have no estates, resolving not to worke and others likewise have been fyned and more like to be fyned"-the General Court were called upon in the following year, May 11, 1659, to decide what course should be taken for the satisfaction of the

This they did, after due deliberation, by a resolution empowering the County Trea-85; Hazard, II. 563.

The father and mother of these children, who had before suffered in their estate and The Commissioners themselves were persons, were at the same time banished on pain of death, and took refuge in Shelter Island, where they shortly afterwards died. There are here two features of historical Mass. Records, IV. i. 367; Hazard, II. importance which the reader will not fail to 564; Bishop, 83. The Treasurer, on atnotice, viz. the export for trade of Indians tempting to find passage for the children sale, found "none willing to take or carry them." Thus the entire design failed, only through the reluctance of these shipmasters Indians, "being men, weomen, and chilto aid in its consummation. Bishop, 190; Sewel's Hist. of the Quakers, I. 278.

Provided Southwick was subsequently in the same year, in company with several other Quaker ladies, "whipt with tenn stripes," and afterwards "committed to prison to be proceeded with as the law directs." Mass. Records, IV. i. 411.

The indignant Quaker historian, in recounting these things says, "After such a manner ye have done to the Servants of the Lord, and for speaking to one another, . . . and for meeting together, ransacking their Estates, breaking open their Houses, carrying away their Goods and Cattel, till ye have left none, then their wearing apparel, and then (as in Plimouth government) their Land; and when ye have left them nothing, sell them for this which ye call Debt. Search the Records of former Ages, go through the Histories of the Generations that are past; read the Monuments of the Antients, and see if ever there were such a thing as this since the Earth was laid, and the Foundations thereof in the Water, and out of the Water. . . . O away by the Treasurer." ye Rulers of Boston, ye Inhabitants of the into slavery. Mass. Records, V. 58. Massachusetts! What shall I say unto you? Whereunto shall I liken ye? In- the Treasurers cannot be accurately ascerdeed, I am at a stand, I have no Nation tained from any sources now at command. with you to compare, I have no People But great numbers of Philip's people were with you to parallel, I am at a loss with sold as slaves in foreign countries. In the you in this point; I must say of you, as beginning of the war Captain Moseley cap-Balaam said of Amalek when his eyes tured eighty, who were confined at Plywere open, Boston, the first of the Nations mouth. In September following one hunthat came out thus to war against, to stop dred and seventy-eight were put on board Israel in their way to Canaan from a vessel commanded by Captain Sprague, Egypt." Bishop's N. E. Judged, 90. who sailed from Plymouth with them for

At the time of King Philip's War, the Spain. Drake, 224. policy and practice of the Colony of Massachusetts, with regard to slavery, had been already long settled upon the basis of nity. The Apostle Eliot's indignant repositive law. Accordingly the numerous monstrance is a glorious memorial of his "captives taken in war" were disposed of fearless devotion to reason and humanityin the usual way. The notes which follow to which neither rulers nor people of Masare mainly from the official records of the sachusetts were then inclined to listen. colony, and will be sufficient to show the general current of public opinion and action | Council, sitting at Boston this 13t. of the at that period.

In August, 1675, the Council at Plymouth ordered the sale of a company of dren, in number one hundred and twelve," with a few exceptions. The Treasurer made the sale "on the countryes behalfe." Plymouth Records, V. 173.

A little later the Council made a similar disposition of fifty-seven more (Indians) who "had come in a submissive way." These were condemned to perpetual servitude, and the Treasurer was ordered and appointed "to make sale of them, to and for the use of the collonie, as opportunity may present." Ib. 174.

The accounts of the Colony of Massachusetts for receipts and expenditures during "the late War"—as stated from 25th June, 1675, to the 23d September, 1676, give among the credits the following,

By the following accounts received in or as silver, viz: Captives; for 188 prisoners at war sold 397.13.00

Plymouth Records, X. 401.

There is a peculiar significance in the phrase which occurs in the Records—"sent It means sold

The statistics of the traffic carried on by

These proceedings were not without witnesses against their injustice and inhuma-

"To the Honorable the Governor and 6t, 75, the humble petition of John Eliot, Sheweth that the terror of selling away to a Destroying Ignorance, meerly for fear such Indians unto the Ilands for perpetual of thereby losing the Benefit of their Vasslaves, who shall yield up y-selves to your salage; but now he made a motion to the mercy, is like to be an effectual prolonga- | English within two or three Miles of him, tion of the warre, and such an exasperation that at such a time and Place they would of them, as may produce we know not send their Negro's once a week to him: what evil consequences, upon all the land. For he would then Catechise them, and Christ hath saide, blessed are the mercyfull | Enlighten them, to the utmost of his Power for they shall obtain mercy. This useage in the Things of their Everlasting Peace; of them is worse than death . . . it seem- however, he did not live to make much eth to me, that to sell them away for slaves Progress in this Undertaking. Mather's is to hinder the inlargement of his [Christ's] Magnalia, Book III. 207 (325). Compare kingdom . . . to sell soules for money also p. 209 (327). seemeth to me a dangerous merchandize. If they deserve to die, it is far better to be that whereas there is an Acte or order made of his soule, how much less lawful is it to time then prefixed they should be forfeit to Book VII. 109 (753), concerning the neglect to proselyte the Indians, etc.

There is nothing to show that "the Council gave heed to the petition of Eliot," but each town of this Jurisdiction are hereby a careful examination of the archives dis-ordered to take notice of any such Indian closed only a report of a Committee of the or Indians staying in any of the respective General Court, dated Nov. 5, 1675, and towns of this Colonie after the time preadopted by the Magistrates and Deputies fixed and shall forthwith bring them to the sent away. MS. Letter.

Eliot appears also to have been the first Records, XI. 242. in America to lift up his voice against the treatment which Negroes received in ceptions made to this order, in favor of cer-New England. Towards the end of his tain Indians, who had been assured by life, Cotton Mather states, "He had long Capt. Benjamin Church that they should lamented it with a Bleeding and Burning not be sold to any foreign parts, upon Passion, that the English used their Ne- good behavior, &c. Ib. 242. gro's but as their Horses or their Oxen, and digy, that any wearing the Name of hostility with the Colony, or had lived of Devils in them, as to prevent and hinder and were taken by force, and given or sold the Instruction of the poor Blackamores, and to any of the inhabitants of this jurisdiction,

In 1676, November 4th, it was ordered put to death under godly governors, who by the Councell of War bearing date July, will take religious care, that meanes may 1676, prohibiting any male Indian captive be used, that they may die penitently. . . . | to abide in this Jurisdiction that is above Deut. 23, 15-16. If a fugitive servant from fourteen years of age att the beginning of a Pagan Master might not be delivered to his or their captivity and in case any such his master but be kept in Israel for the good should continue in the Collonie after the sell away soules from under the light of the the use of the Govt this Court sees cause to gospel, into a condition, where theire soules ratify and confirme that order and acte, and will be utterly lost, so far as appeareth unto do therefore order; that all such as have Plymouth Colony Records, X. any such Indian male captive that they Compare Mather's Magnalia, shall dispose of them out of the Collonie by the first of December next on paine of forfeiting every such Indian, or Indians to the use of the Collonie; and the Constables of the same day, by which several were to be Treasurer to be disposed of to the use of the Government as aforesaid. Plymouth

There were a few, about five or six, ex-

The Mass. Genl. Court made an order in that so little care was taken about their 1677, 24 May, that the Indian children, immortal Souls; he look'd upon it as a Pro- youths or girls, whose parents had been in Christians should so much have the Heart among its enemies in the time of the war, confine the souls of their miserable Slaves should be at the disposall of their masters or their assignes, who were to instruct them of the country." in Civility and Christian religion. Mass. 57. Records, V. 136. Note the distinction between friendly Indians whose children Indians escape the relentless hostility and were to be held until 24 years of age, both in this order and in Plymouth Records, V. 207, 223.

The Court, in the following year (1678), found cause to prohibit "all and every person and persons within our jurisdiction or elsewhere, to buy any of the Indian children of any of those our captive salvages that were taken and became our lawfull prisoners in our late warrs with the Indiaus, without special leave, liking and approbation of the government of this jurisdiction." Ib. 253.

In the following year (1679) the following entry appears in the records:

"In reference unto severall Indians bought by Jonathan Hatch of Capt. Church, the brothers of the woman, desireing shee might be released, appeared in Court with the said Jonathan Hatch, and came to composition with her for the freedom of both her and her husband, which are two of the three Indians above named; and her brothers payed on that accompt the sume to England, and so to get home. If the of three pounds silver mony of New Eng-Lord shall please to move your charitable land, and have engaged to pay three heart herein, I shall be obliged in great pounds more in the same specie, and then the said man and woman are to be released; and for the third of the said Indians, it being younge, the Court have ordered, that it shall abide with the said Jonathan Hatch untill it attains the age of 24 years, and then to be released for ever." Plymouth Records, VI. 15.

It were well if the record were no worse. but to all this is to be added the baseness of treachery and falsehood. Many of these prisoners surrendered and still greater numbers came in voluntarily to submit upon the promise that they and their wives and children should have their lives spared and none of them transported out of the country. In one instance, narrated by the famous Captain Church himself, no less than "eight score persons" were "without any regard to the promises made them on their surrendering themselves, carried away to rate of his finished and beautiful orations, Plymouth, there sold and transported out has narrated the story of two of the last HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 3.

Church, 23, 24, 41, 51,

cupidity of the whites. Besides other cruelties, instances are not wanting in which some of these were sold as slaves, and under accusations which turned out to be utterly false and without foundation. Gookin's Hist. of the Christian Indians.

Some of them are probably referred to by Eliot, in his letter to Boyle, Nov. 27, 1683, in which he says, "I desire to take boldness to propose a request. A vessel carried away a great number of our surprised Indians, in the times of our wars, to sell them for slaves; but the nations, whither she went, would not buy them. Finally, she left them at Tangier; there they be, so many as live, or are born there. An Englishman, a mason, came thence to Boston, he told me they desired I would use some means for their return home. I know not what to do in it; but now it is in my heart to move your honour, so to meditate, that they may have leave to get home, either from thence hither, or from thence thankfulness, and am persuaded that Christ will, at the great day, reckon it among your deeds of charity done unto them, for his name's sake." M. H. S. Coll., III. 183.

Cotton Mather furnishes another extract appropriate in this connection.

"Moreover, 'tis a Prophesy in Deut. 28, The Lord shall bring thee into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof I spake unto thee. Thou shalt see it no more again; and there shall ye be sold unto your Enemies, and no Man shall buy you. This did our Eliot imagine accomplished, when the Captives taken by us in our late Wars upon them, were sent to be sold, in the Coasts lying not very remote from Egypt on the Mediterranean Sea, and scarce any Chapmen would offer to take them off." Mather's Magnalia, Book III., Part III.

Mr. Everett, in one of the most elabo-

Captives in that famous war, in a passage of surpassing eloquence which we venture to quote:

"President Mather, in relating the encounter of the 1st of August, 1676, the last but one of the war, says 'Philip hardly escaped with his life also. He had fled and left his peage behind him, also his squaw and son were taken captive, and are now prisoners at Plymouth. Thus hath God brought that grand enemy into great misery before he quite destroy him. must needs be bitter as death to him to lose his wife and only son (for the Indians are marvellous fond and affectionate towards their children) besides other relations, and almost all his subjects, and country also.

"And what was the fate of Philip's wife and his son? This is a tale for husbands and wives, for parents and children. Young men and women, you cannot understand it. What was the fate of Philip's wife and child? She is a woman, he is a lad. They did not surely hang them. No, that would have been mercy. The boy is the grandson, his mother the daughter-in-law of good old Massasoit, the first and best friend the English ever had in New England. Perhaps—perhaps now Philip is slain, and his warriors scattered to the four winds, they will allow his wife and son to go backthe widow and the orphan—to finish their days and sorrows in their native wilderness. They are sold into slavery, West Indian slavery! an Indian princess and her child, sold from the cool breezes of Mount Hope, from the wild freedom of a New England forest, to gasp under the lash, beneath the blazing sun of the tropics! 'Bitter as death; aye, bitter as hell! Is there any thing,-I do not say in the range of humanity—is there anything animated, that would not struggle against this?"

rett's Address at Bloody Brook, 1835; Church, 62, 63, 67, 68. Well might the poet record his sympathy for their fate—

"Ah! happier they, who in the strife For freedom fell, than o'er the main, Those who in galling slavery's chain Still bore the load of hated life,— Bowed to base tasks their generous pride, And scourged and broken-hearted, died!"

or in view of this phase of civilization and progress, sigh for that elder state, when all were

"Free as nature first made man, Ere the base laws of servitude began, When wild in woods the noble savage ran."

After the death of King Philip, some of the Indians from the west and south of New England who had been engaged in the war, endeavored to conceal themselves among their brethren of Penacook who had not joined in the war, and with them of Ossapy and Pigwackett who had made peace.

By a "contrivance" (as Mather calls it) which savors strongly of treachery, four hundred of these Indians were taken prisoners, one half of whom were declared to have been accessories in the late rebellion, and being "sent to Boston, seven or eight of them who were known to have killed any Englishmen, were condemned and hanged; the rest were sold into glavery in foreign parts."

Some of those very Indians, who were thus seized and sold, afterwards made their way home, and found opportunity to satisfy their revenge during the war with the French and Indians known as King William's War. Belknap, I. 143, 245; Mather's Magnalia, Book VII. 55 (699).

Edward Randolph, in 1676, in an answer to several heads of enquiry, &c., stated that there were "not above 200 slaves in the colony, and those are brought from Guinea and Madagascar." Hutchinson's Collection of Papers, p. 485.

Gov. Andros reported that the slaves were not numerous in 1678—"not many servants, and but few slaves, proportionable with freemen." Col. Hist. III. 263.

In May, 1680, Governor Bradstreet answered certain Heads of Inquiry from the Lords of the Committee for Trade and Foreign Plantations. Among his statements are the following:

"There hath been no company of blacks or slaves brought into the country since the beginning of this plantation, for the space of fifty years, onely one small Vessell about two yeares since, after twenty months, betwixt forty and fifty Negroes, most encouraging the bringing of white ser-£15 and £20 apiece, which stood the mer-being slaves." Drake's Boston, 525. chant, in near £40 apiece: Now and then, two or three Negroes are brought hither made under this instruction of the town of from Barbados and other of his Majestie's Boston, but they failed to accomplish plantations, and sold here for about twenty anything. Indeed, the very next enactpounds apiece. So that there may be ment concerning slavery was a step backwithin our Government about one hun ward instead of an advance towards redred or one hundred and twenty. . . . . There are a very few blacks borne here, I think not above six at the most in a year, none baptized that I ever heard of. . . M. H. S. Coll. III. viii. 337.

The following century changed the record. Many "companies" of slaves were "brought into the country" and the in- security is not given." This act was still stitution flourished and waxed strong.

he was sent out in 1688, as Governor of New the decisions of courts affecting the set-England, required him to "pass a law for tlement of town paupers. the restraining of inhuman severity which ill masters or overseers may be used by Indian, Negro and Molatto servants or towards the Christian servants or slaves; wherein provision is to be made that the night, &c. wilful killing of Indians and Negroes be punished with death, and a fitt penalty imposed for the maining of them." Col. Issue, &c.;" punishes Negroes and Molat-Doc. III. 547.

trading or trucking with any "Indian, molato or negro servant or slave, or other striking a Christian, by whipping at the known dissolute, lewd, and disorderly persons, of whom there is just cause of sus- be convicted. It also prohibits marriage picion."

Such persons were to be punished by whipping for so trading.

The Law of 1700, chapter 13, was enacted to protect the Indians against the marriage to Negroes with those of the exactions and oppression, which some of the English exercised towards them "by Usage, or Custom, to the contrary notdrawing them to consent to covenant or withstanding." bind themselves or children apprentices or servants for an unreasonable term, on pre- Massachusetts passed an "Act for the tence of or to make satisfaction for some orderly solemnization of Marriage," by small debt contracted or damage done by section 7 whereof it was enacted "that no them." Other similar acts were after-person authorized by this act to marry wards passed in 1718 and 1725, the latter shall join in marriage any white person having a clause to protect them against with any Negro, Indian or Mulatto, under kidnapping.

In 1701, the Representatives of the town voyage to Madagascar, brought hither of Boston were "desired to promote the women and children, sold here for ten, vants, and to put a period to Negroes

> We have no knowledge of the efforts form.

The law of 1703, chapter 2, was in restraint of the emancipation of "Molatto or Negro slaves." Security was required against the contingency of these persons becoming a charge to the town, and "none were to be accounted free for whom in force as late as June, 1807, and con-The royal instructions to Andros, when tinued until a much later period to govern

Chapter 4 of the same year prohibited slaves, to be abroad after nine o'clock at

The Law of 1705, chapter 6, "for the better preventing of a Spurious and Mixt toes for improper intercourse with whites, The Law of 1698, chapter 6, forbids by selling them out of the Province. It also punishes any Negro or Molatto for discretion of Justices before whom he may of Christians with Negroes or Molattoesand imposes a penalty of Fifty Pounds upon the persons joining them in marriage. It provides against unreasonable denial of same nation, by any Master—" any Law,

> In 1786, the legislature of the State of penalty of fifty pounds; and all such marriages shall be absolutely null and void."

when it was repealed by a special "act relating to marriages between individuals of certain races."

import duty of four pounds per head rowful effects of the Rebellion and Hoson every Negro brought into the Province tilities" of the Indians, and the fact that from and after the 1st day of May, 1706, for the payment of which both the vessel held in bondage in the Province at the time. and master were answerable. A drawback was allowed upon exportation, and the servants for life were estimated as other like advantage was allowed to the pur-Personal Estate-viz: Each male servant chaser of any Negro sold within the for life above fourteen years of age, at Province, in case of the death of his Negro fifteen pounds value; each female servant within six weeks after importation or for life, above fourteen years of age, at bringing into the Province.

more effectually to secure the Duty on and not as Personal Estate. the importation of Negroes" was passed, dying within twelve months.

1735, but another of a similar character personal estate, according to their sound was passed in 1738, which recognised the judgment and discretion. old law of 1705 as being still in force. It portation.

Free Negroes not being allowed to train in the Militia, an act passed in 1707, chapter 2, required them to do service on the highways and in cleaning the streets, &c., as an equivalent. The same act prohibited very ungovernable." A glimpse of future reform is to be caught in this act, for it The prohibition continued until 1843, recognises the increase of slaves as a "discouragement to the importation of White Christian Servants." But the chief motive of the act was in the peculiar circum The statute of 1705 also provided an stances of the Province "under the sorgreat numbers of Indian slaves were already

In 1727, all Indian, Negro and Molatto ten pounds value. The assessor might In 1727, the traffic in slaves appears to make abatement for cause of age or inhave been more an object in Boston than firmity. Indian, Negro and Molatto Male at any period before or since, and in the servants for a term of years were to be following year (1728) an additional "act numbered and rated as other property,

In 1734 the law was changed, and all by which more stringent regulations were Indian, Negro and Molatto servants, as adopted to prevent the smuggling of well for term of years as for life, were insuch property into the Province, and the cluded in the rateable estates. The supply drawback was allowed on all negroes bills for 1738, 1739, 1740, directed the assessors to estimate Indian, Negro and This act expired by its own limitation in Molatto servants proportionably, as other

An Indian girl brought fifteen pounds, reduced the time for the drawback on the at Salem, in August, 1710. Coll. Essex death of negroes to six months after im- Institute. I. 14. The highest price paid for any of a cargo brought into Boston in 1727, was eighty pounds. Felt's Salem:

II. 416.

"The Guinea Trade," as it was called then, since known and branded by all civilized nations as piracy, whose beginthem to entertain any servants of their nings we have noticed, continued to own color in their houses, without per-flourish under the auspices of Massachusetts mission of the respective masters or mis-merchants down through the entire colonial period, and long after the boasted Declara-In 1712, an act was passed prohibiting tion of Rights in 1780 had terminated the importation or bringing into the Pro- the legal existence of slavery within the vince any Indian servants or slaves. The limits of that State. Fell's Salem: II. 230, preamble recites the bad character of the 261, 265, 288, 292, 296. Those who are Indians and other slaves, "being of a curious to see what the instructions malicious, surley and revengeful spirit; given by respectable merchants in Masrude and insolent in their behaviour, and sachusetts to their slave captains were in Salem, II. 239-90; probably the only specimen extant. The slaves purchased in Af- with "a young negro that has had the rica were chiefly sold in the West Small Pox"-and competitors offer "Likely Indies, or in the Southern colonies; but negro men and women just arrived"—when these markets were glutted, and the "negro men new and negro boys who have price low, some of them were brought to Massachusetts. The statistics of the trade "just arrived, a choice parcel of negro are somewhat scattered, and it is difficult boys and girls." "A likely negro man to bring them together, but enough is born in the country and bred a Farmer, known to bring the subject home to us. fit for any service," "a negro woman about In 1795, one informant of Dr. Belknap 22 years old, with her boy about 5 months," could remember two or three entire car- &c., and a "likely negro woman about 19 goes, and the Doctor himself remembered years and a child about six months of age one somewhere between 1755 and 1765 to be sold together or apart," must conclude which consisted almost wholly of children. these extracts. Sometimes the vessels of the neighboring At this point it may be necessary to colony of Rhode Island, after having sold interpose a caution with reference to the their prime slaves in the West Indies, judgment which may be pronounced against brought the remnants of their cargoes to the policy which has been illustrated in Boston for sale.

very everywhere are the same—the same that his language requires very little change disregard of human rights, the same in- here. difference to suffering, the same contempt for the oppressed races, the same hate for forget the change of times, to see in the those who are injured. It has been as Fathers of New England and their sucserted that the miseries of slavery were cessors mere commonplace slavemongers; mitigated, and that especially in Massachu- to themselves they appeared as the elect to setts, some of its worst features were un-whom God had given the heathen for an

the suggestion.

rica illustrates among its advertisements imitated the example and assumed the the peculiar features of the institution to privileges of the chosen people, and for which we refer, and in its scanty columns their wildest and worst acts they could of intelligence may be found thrilling ac-claim the sanction of religious conviction. counts of the barbarous murders of mas- In seizing and enslaving Indians, and tradters and crews by the hands of their slave ing for negroes, they were but entering cargoes. The case of the Amistad ne- into possession of the heritage of the saints; groes had its occasional parallel in the and New England had to outgrow the colonial history of the traffic—excepting theology of the Elizabethan Calvinists that the men of New England had a symbol before it could understand that the Father pathy at home in the 17th and 18th cen- of Heaven respected neither person nor turies, which was justly withheld from color, and that his arbitrary favor-if their Spanish and Portuguese imitators in more than a dream of divines—was conthe 19th. As the advantages of adver-fined to spiritual privileges. tising came to be understood, the descrip- Froude's Hist. of England: viii. 480. tions of slave property became more frequent and explicit.

the year 1785 will find them in Fell's parel, Gold Watches and other Goods-

Coll. M. H. S. I. iv. 197. these notes; and a recent writer of English The records of the slave-trade and sla- history has so clearly stated our own views

It would be to misread history and to known. But the record does not bear out inheritance; they were men of stern intellect and fanatical faith, who believing The first newspaper published in Ame-themselves the favourities of Providence,

It was not until the struggle on the part of the colonists themselves to throw Negro men, women, and children were off the fast closing shackles of British mixed up in the sales with wearing ap-loppression culminated in open resistance to the mother country, that the inconsishand while pleading and striking for freedom with the other, compelled a reluctant and gradual change in public and one advertisement, form its whole con-opinion on this subject.

It is true that at no period of her history was Massachusetts without her "protestants" against the whole system; but their example was powerless in their day and generation. The words and thoughts of a Williams, an Eliot, a Sewall, and a Dudley, fell unheeded and unnoticed on the ears and hearts of the magistrates and people of their day, as the acorn fell two centuries ago in the forests by which they were 12d to 5s and not to exceed; Who may surrounded. E. Y. E.

JOHN CAMPBELL,

THE PUBLISHER OF THE FIRST REGULAR AMERICAN NEWSPAPER.

On looking over the remarkable collection of autograph letters and other historical documents belonging to Peter Force, Esq., relative to the early history of this country, I found two autograph memorials of John Campbell, who started the first regular newspaper on this continent; they are probably unique. With the kind per-filled its pages in the political discussions mission of Mr. Force, I have made exact that culminated in the American Revolucopies of them for the Historical Maga-tion.

memory of her first printer and publisher, WM. Bradford, a short sketch of the tioned in the News-Letter of March 7, pioneer Boston newspaper publisher may 1728: be excused. It appears he was a Scotchman, the Postmaster of Boston, and started rant, about 8 a Clock died here John the Boston News-Letter "April 17 to 24, 1704." It was printed in a half sheet of Post Master in this place, Publisher of the old-fashioned pot paper, in small pica type. The first page of No. 1 is filled with an extract from "The London Flying Post," respecting the Pretender (who styled himself James VIII. of Scotland,) sending Popish missionaries from France into Scot-Capt Generall And Governour In Chief in land, by which the kingdoms of England and over Her Maj's. Province of New and Scotland were endangered. The Hampshire &c And to the Honble Her Queen's Speech to both Houses of Par-Maj's, Council liament on the occasion; a few articles tency of maintaining slavery with one under the Boston head; four short paragraphs of marine intelligence from New York, Philadelphia, and New London; tents. The advertisement is from Campbell, the publisher of the paper, and is as follows:

"The News-Letter is to be published weekly; and all Persons who have any Houses, Lands, Tenements, Farmes, Ships, Vessels, Goods, Wares, or Merchandises, &c to be Sold or Lett; or Servants Runaway; or Goods Stoll or Lost may have the same Inserted at a Reasonable Rate; from agree with Nicholas Boone for the same at his Shop next door to Major Davis's, Apothecary in Boston near the Old Meeting House.

The News-Letter was carried on by Campbell till 1722, when he transferred his interest to B. Green. The latter died in 1733, when the paper was continued by John Draper, his son-in-law, till 1762; and after several changes, its publication ceased in 1776, when the British evacuated Boston,-seventy-two years in all. It was the first regular newspaper published in America, and the only one printed in Boston during its siege. Many able Tory writers

CAMPBELL, the original proprietor, died As New York has recently honored the about five years after he transferred his emory of her first printer and publisher, right to Green. His death is thus men-

> "On Monday Evening last, the 4th cur-Campbell, Esq Aged 75 Years, formerly Boston News-Letter for many Years, and One of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Suffolk."

> Here follow Mr. Campbell's memorials: To His Excellency Joseph Dudley Esqr.

The Humble Petition of John Campbell, Post-Master of New England,

Showeth

That Whereas yor. Petitioner, has had a yearly Allowance from this Government, the better to enable him to discharge his Trust, in the management of sd Office, And taking due care of the Publick Letters, which saves this Colony Considerably in a year, seeing that the Income by the sd office are not yet able to allow him a Com- in Duty bound Shall ever pray, being all-petent Sallary for the same,

Your Petitioner also having last year sett on Foot a Weekly Letter of Intelli- dient & faithful servant gence for Foreign and Domestic occurrences expecting that the Income thereby, being sett a Moderate Rate would be sufficient to defray the necessary charge Thereof, the which it did not do, And several Gentlemen Merchts. and others being willing it should be continued, have agreed to contribute Toward its support, yet notwithstanding there are not a competent number to carry it on, And it being found of Publick use and service to the country.

Your Petitioner therefore most Humbly Prays, That your Excellency and Honble. Council will be pleased to take the premises into yor. most Mature and wise consideration and Grant yor. Petitioner such allowance and Encouragement as may enable him in the discharge of both Trusts.

And yor. Petitioner as In Duty bound

Shall ever Pray being always

Yor. Excellency's and Honours most Humble, most obedient and faithful Servant JOHN CAMPBELL.

[Endorsed]

John Campbell's petition

Postmaster

1705.

To His Excelly. Joseph Dudley Esqr. Capt. Generall Govr. In Chief In and over Her Maj's. Province of New Hampshire &c And to The Honble Her Maje's Council The Humble Petition of John Campbell Post-Master of N. England

Showeth

That Whereas your Petitioner has had no allowance since the First of Febry. pointments, the "advice and consent" of Seventeen Hundred & three, for his extra-the Senate is required by the Constitution.

ordinary Services and care about the Public Letters, in giving Due dispatch to the

Your Petitioner therefore most Humbly prays

That your Excellency and Honours will be Pleased to take the same into your most mature Consideration and grant your Petitioner allowance to encourage him in said Duty for the future, and yor. Petitioner as Yor. Excelly's, and Honours most obe-

JOHN CAMPBELL:

[Endorsed]

Petition John Campbell

Rd May 1705.

Read and allowed 6th in Council.

The sum allowed is very obscure; it may be 6s. or £6. It looks like 6ts in the MS.] J. B. R.

Washington, D.C.

EARLY CONGRESSIONAL CUSTOMS.

THE late movement in the House of Representatives for inviting Cabinet Officers to take seats in the House, make explanations, and take part in debates relating to their particular branches of the Government, as is done in the British Parliament, brings to mind the early practice of the Senate on this subject.

When the government was first organized under the Constitution, in New York, in 1789, it was customary for the Senate to sit with closed doors in all cases, legislative This practice continued and executive. till the 20th of February, 1794, when the contested election of Albert Gallatin was under discussion. It was then directed, by a vote of 19 to 8, "that suitable galleries be provided for the Senate chamber, and that the same be opened every morning, except in such cases as in the opinion of the Senate require secrecy."

In forming treaties and in making ap-

Washington very naturally gave these words their obvious meaning, and thought tary of State in 1822, he entered the House, the advice and consent should be obtained it was said, to request some member to beforehand. In executive sessions, there-make a call for a certain paper connected fore, he attended the Senate in person, and with his famous controversy then pending took the presiding officer's chair. latter was assigned a chair on the floor of the Senate, and was considered as the immediate presiding officer; he put all questions to the Senators, who answered Aye or No. The President consulted the violation of "the proprieties of his posi-Senate beforehand, upon the negotiation tion." of Indian Treaties, and had the Secretary of War present to give all necessary explanations. The other Secretaries attended the Senate when required to bring papers and give explanations; a method now supplanted by their Annual Reports. The early Senators thought the former mode the best to obtain the exact information wanted, and the best security against the appointment of incompetent Secretaries.

Other customs connected with the inauguration of a new President have fallen into disuse; such as the proclamation by the Chief Justice, after administering the oath, "Long live George Washington, President of the United States!"—the President then repairing to church to attend divine service, accompanied by both Houses of Congress-then re-conducted to his own house by a Committee of both Houses—and the Answer to the Inaugural Address by the

Instead of taking the "advice" or asking the "consent" of the Senate beforehand in the formation of treaties, for many years | Port.—The recent appearance in print of they have been generally negotiated without even the knowledge of Senators, and then their ratification urged as an administrative measure.

A Col. Fishbourne, having been nominated as Collector of Savannah, was rejected by the Senate at the wishes of the Georgia Senators, who preferred another seven years of age when she was stolen at any more executive sessions, and the a tailor dwelling in Boston, was in need of into disuse.

When John Quincy Adams was Secre-The with Jonathan Russell respecting the Fishery question at the treaty of Ghent. His political opponents in the violent Presidential campaign then opening, affected to consider his presence in the House a great > President Polk consulted the Senate in the formation of the Oregon Treaty of 1846, asking their advice beforehand on the point of establishing the boundary line with Great Britain on the parallel of 49°.

> Secretary Chase was frequently in attendance in one of the Committee rooms of the Senate during the session of the last Congress, when his important financial measures were under discussion. How much more direct and satisfactory for the Secretary to have been present in the House. and given all necessary explanations in person. J. B. R.

Washington, D. C.

Motes and Queries.

PHILLIS WHEATLEY, THE NEGRO-SLAVE the poetical writings of Phillis, the negro servant of Mr. John Wheatley of Boston, leads me to present at this time a few facts relating to this remarkable woman, which are not generally known, and which have escaped the notice of her biographers.

Phillis is supposed to have been about Washington was evidently annoyed from her parents in Africa and brought to by this rejection, as the Colonel had been a Boston in the year 1761, to be sold as a favorite officer with him during the Revo-slave. Fortunately, at that time a benelution; and it is asserted he never presided volent woman, the wife of John Wheatley, attendance of his Secretaries also soon fell a domestic possessing traits of disposition which would make her an agreeable companion rather than a drudge and servant cellent teachings of the Rev. Dr. Joseph of all work. Phillis, being of feeble con-Sewall. About this time Phillis began to fail stitution, and very gentle in her demeanor, in health, and in the fall of 1773 her deappeared to be just the person Mrs. Wheat-cline became so apparent that by the advice ley required, and was, therefore, purchased of friends she left Boston to visit England, of the slave-dealer and taken home; where, in company with Mr. Nathaniel Wheatley after decent clothing superseded her mise- and his family, he going to London to open rable rags, she gave evidence of vivacity of a branch of his mercantile business, which genius, a superiority of intellect, good per-had already become large for a New Engsonal appearance, and affectionate disposi-lander. While in England she received tion, which surprised and gratified, not only much attention from the patrons of literathe family in which she was domesticated, ture; and there her poems were published, but also the principal personages of the and were bringing her into considerable town, who were frequent visitors to Mr. note, when she was recalled to Boston to Wheatley's hospitable mansion.

The family consisted then of Mr. Wheattime when the young folk should leave the left Phillis alone. heads of other families. Miss Mary, then niel was married and residing in Loneighteen years old, took charge of the new don. inmate of the family, and so rapid was the ence she became acquainted with a "co-young negress in the acquisition of learn-lored gentleman," John Peters, whom ing, that in less than a year and a half after she married in April, 1778, about a month the time of her importation, she could con- after her kind master's decease. He was verse fluently in English, a language she indeed a colored gentleman, for report says had never heard spoken before she was of him that he kept store, wore a wig, and kidnapped, and could read and correctly carried a cane, and felt himself superior to pronounce the most difficult passages of all kinds of labor. At the time of her marthe sacred writings; and before she had riage she was styled "a free negro," and been under pupilage ten years she wrote it is supposed that Mrs. Lathrop, who beletters and poetry that astonished the lite-came her owner at the decease of her father, rary men of New England, who were then gave her her freedom, perhaps in words sinumerous, and had acquired for the metro-milar to those of the Rev. Increase Mather, polis the name of the Modern Athens.

On the thirty-first of January, 1771, when about seventeen years of age, Phillis was that my negro servant called Spaniard shall called to suffer her first grief; her young not be sold after my decease, but I do then mistress was taken from the family to be-give him his liberty-let him then be escome the wife of the Rev. John Lathrop, teemed a 'free negro.'" the pastor of the second church in Boston. Boston, then destitute of a settled minister, coming too lazy to do anything that would attend her mistress in her last hours.

Mrs. Wheatley, her kind friend as well ley, his wife Susanna, and their son Na- as mistress, died in the sixty-fifth year of thaniel and daughter Mary, twins, with a her age, on the third of March, in the year few slaves who had grown old in service, 1774, and Mr. Wheatley on the twelfth and who could not be relied upon for the of March, 1778, aged seventy-two. This Mary was the wife mansion of their parents to become the of the Rev. Mr. Lathrop, and Mr. Natha-At this sad hour of her existwho manumitted his slave with the following words in his will: "It is my mind and will Sadder times, however, came to Phillis. The event may have led her to the step A few months later she lost her kind young which she took on the eighteenth of the friend; for Mrs. Lathrop died at the age following August; for then, under the of twenty-five on the twenty-fourth of Sepsimple and unpretending name of Phillis, tember, 1778, and she was left entirely to with no surname whatever, she became a her miserable husband, who proved to be communicant of the Old South Church in improvident, failing in business, and bebut which had lately experienced the ex-conduce to her comfort in the days of her sickness and sorrow. In the summer of the reason of our Hiding our selves—That 1788 Mr. Nathaniel Wheatley also died, the White People think that we are Norapidly increased, and on the fifth of December, 1788, at the early age of thirty-one drew her last breath, and soon, together and I asked their minds as the Tommyhave been left till then to make the occa- the Moncys Spoke & told me they was not sion more mournful, was carried to her last Drunk about this affair—As you writ to friends of her prosperity to follow her, and minds easy about this Affair.—As you Writ without a stone to mark her grave.

of this talented person may be summed up present time about it. in the following notice published on the Thursday succeeding her decease, in the Right, & you will hear a little what Bears-Independent Chronicle: "Last Lord's day, Oil Chief said as he was sent there by the died Mrs. Phillis Peters, (formerly Phillis Chiefs of Conniatt (Conyaut) I send You Wheatley,) aged 31, known to the literary three Strings of Wampum given to me by world by her celebrated miscellaneous po- Bears Oil Chief & his words were that God ems. Her funeral is to be this afternoon, at almighty had mad day and Night, and 4 o'clock, from the house lately improved when he saw me it appeared to him as if by Mr. Todd, nearly opposite Dr. Bulfinch's it was Daylight—Brother says Bears Oil, at West Boston, where her friends and acquaintances are desired to attend." Could Conneat every Summer & I see the bad the spot of her burial be found, there could Indians and always tell them not to intebe no more befitting epitaph than the words rupt our friends this Way. from her own pen-

Remember, Christians, negroes black as Cain May be refined, and join the angelic train.

N. B. S.

CURIOUS LETTER OF CORNPLANTER, THE INDIAN CHIEF, FROM THE IRVINE PAPERS. GINASHADGO, 24 May, 1794.

Sin:—I have Returned home safe. wrote a letter to you, (hope you received it,) in Regard to the British sending a man says he was sent by all the Chiefs, & they to Catarogaras & he sent for me-I went looked out which was the best way for him to see him, not him alone, but likewise the to Go. by Water their was a lake that God Moneyes Respecting the man that was almighty had made for every Body & he killed at French-creek as you wrote to me hoped that Gen1 Washington would have concerning that buisness.

Brother this man that sent for me to Catarogaias wanted to know what we were | Nations I have com to know your minds about, it seemed to him as if we were hide and if you want me to com down hear to the last of her natural protectors, and about body—I have told him every thing from this time she lost two of the three children the Begining. That the Six Nations could born to her while she temporarily dwelt in not be heard By any Body-This was all Wilmington, Mass. And now her disease passed between this British man & myself -his Name is Wm. Johnston.

Brother then I spoke to the Moncves in years, poor Phillis Peters, alias Wheatley, Regard of your writing to me to help you, with her last offspring, which seemed to hawk was Sticking in their Heads.—Then earthly resting-place, without one of the me, and told me You wanted to make our to me that you wanted our minds easy— All that is known of the death and burial It Shall be so—This is all I have to say this

As I went there every thing happened

Bears Oil says his mind is very uneasy and the Reason is, that he cannot hardly keep these Western Nations back any more,* as they the white people are making Forts in their Country and another thing Our Worriors & Children are very uneasy. They say that they cannot go out of Doors to ease themselves for Fear of Spoiling Gen1 Washingtons lands—& that may (which must) be the Reason we will or can (are to) be Killed.—Bears Oil speeks and Nothing to say if he went by Water

Now Brothers says Bears Oil to the six ing ourselves. I spoke to him, & told him live, I shall com, and I send you five strings of Wampum as his speech on that head-Sovereign Lady Anne by the Grace of God I spoke to Bears Oil Chief for Wm. Johns- of Great Britain, France and Ireland, ton to help him, as the white People thinks Queen, Defender of the Faith, &c. Be-Nothing of us, Then Johnston spoke and tween His Excellency Robert Hunter, told him he would help him, and for (told) Esqr; Capt. General and Governour in him to go home and tell his Worriors & Chief of the Provinces of New York, New Children to go to work, plent Corn & Git Jersey, and Territories depending thereon their living—I then spoke to Bairs Oil my- in America, and Vice-Admiral of the same self to make his mind Easy & go home, and if he See (saw) any of the Western ford of the City of New York Printer of Nations Going to war, to tell them not to enterupt any Body about French-creek or lency in Council having determined the Chiefs to Rise and Likewise Gen<sup>1</sup> Chapin Supirent of Indian affairs.

Then Mr Johston spoke & said if the six Nations went, he would Go with them.— Their is but Eight Days to Com when they will meet at this Place if they like what I Tired of talking, because, none of you will hear me—It will be but a few Days Before I will know whether they are Coming, & if they are Coming, you will Know it Imea-

deatly

I am Your friend & Brother his JOHN X OBAIL mark (Cornplanter)

Lieut. John Polhemus Commands F F

I wrote you Last about stoping the Troops—I hope you will till Affairs is (are) settled 1

INDENTURE OF JOHN PETER ZENGER. [From Indentures of Palatine Children in Secretary of State's Office, Albany, N. Y.]

any where in that Country, and if he putting out of the Orphans of the Palatines Should see them, to tell them to go Back, (and some of those other Children whose to those that ware at war—I told Bears Parents have too many to look after them Oil afterwards that if You dont see any of and mind their Labour) for a certain time. them, & they do any Mischief we cannot upon the Conditions following, (to wit) help it—Then after that I Considered & The Boys till they arrive at the Age of Dispached Runners to Oswego & to Buff-Twenty one years, and the Girls till they low-creek & to the Genessees for all the arrive at the Age of Nineteen years; The Persons taking them entring into Indentures, and Bond with Surety, in the Secretary's Office, to provide them with Good and Wholesom Meat, Drink, Lodging and Cloathing, and at the Expiration of the time to Surrender them to the Governhave said—Brothers at French-creek if it ment; his Excellency and Council enshould happen that they dont come You gaging they shall respectively serve till must not Blame me, for it is not my fault, they arrive at the Ages aforesaid. Now Because you know very well I am almost this Indenture Witnesseth, That John Peter Zenger of the Age of Thirteene Years or thereabouts, Son of Hannah Zenger Widow One of the Palatines aforesaid, of his own free and Voluntary Will by the Consent of his said Mother and also By the consent and approbation of his Excellency, hath put him self out to the said William Bradford his Executors and Administrators with him and them to dwell and serve from the day of the date hereof for and during and unto the full end and term of Eight years from thence next ensuing and fully be compleat and Ended, for all which said Term of Eight years the said John Peter Zenger the said William Bradford his Executors and Administrators well and truly shall serve his & their Commands lawful and honest every where he shall do; The Goods of his said Master This Indenture made the Twenty Sixth his Executors or Administrators he shall Day of October Anno Domini, 1710, and not waste or destroy, nor from the Service in the Ninth Year of the Reign of our of his said Master his Executors or Ad-his said Excellency, or to the Governour or letter, which was conclusive upon both Commander in Chief of the said Province points. of New York, for the time being. In Witness whereof his said Excellency and the Uzual Knapp, who was buried at the Head said William Bradford have hereunto Interchangeably set their Hands and Seals the day and year first above Written.

WILL BRADFORD [Seal.] Sealed and delivered in the Presence of (the several Interlineations aforesaid of ye Words Executors and Administrators being first Interlined.)

H. WILEMAN.

THE LAST SURVIVOR OF WASHINGTON'S LIFE GUARD.—Among the papers of my father I find the following letter. It will be remembered that about 1852 a revolutionary soldier named Gibson died in Orange County, and it being supposed at MY DEAR SIR. the time that he was the last of the Life Guard of Washington, he was buried in Gibson, "the old Life Guardsman," of Greenwood at the expense of one of the Washington's being escorted to Mt. Vernon New York City Regiments and with mili- in 1783 by a hundred horsemen is a fable. tary honor—having lain in state during the day prior to the burial in the Governor's FANTRY. When the Chief had taken leave Room in the City Hall. He claimed for of his officers in the memorable scene at many years before his death that he was Francis' Tavern, he proceeded himself on not only one of the Guard, but a short his way to Annapolis, then the seat of Gotime before his decease stated to the Rev. vernment, and there to resign his commis-ministrators day nor night shall absent or was one of a hundred horsemen (Life prolong him self, but in all things as a good Guards) who escorted Washington to Mt. and faithful Servant shall bear and behave Vernon at the close of the Revolution. him self towards his said Master his Exe- Mr. Armstrong subsequently published cutors & Administrators during the said this statement, and it was, I think, gene-Term aforesaid. And the said William rally credited. My father (who had pre-Bradford for him self his Executors and viously published several articles to show Administrators and every of them doth that the Life Guards were INFANTRY and Covenant, Promise and Grant to and with not mounted men) discredited the statehis said Excellency and his Successors, that ment of Gibson as to the escort to Mt. he the said William Bradford his Execu- Vernon. This led to a controversy in the tors & Administrators shall and will during Newburgh papers between Mr. E. and Mr. all the said Term of Eight years find and A. as to the fact whether the Guards were provide for the said John Peter Zenger footmen or horsemen. The former wrote good, sufficient and wholesom Meat, Drink to George Washington Parke Custis, then and Cloathing; And also shall and will at Arlington House, detailing the statethe end and Expiration of the said Term of ment of Gibson as to the escort, and also Eight years Surrender and deliver up the asking him as to the military character of said John Peter Zenger, well Cloathed to the Guards. It brought the following

> The real survivor of the Life Guards was Quarters of Washington at Newburgh. The remains of his wife (whom he had survived for many years) were subsequently deposited by his side. The graves are within a few steps from the north-east corner of the old building. A portrait of Mr. Knapp by Charles Rice, Esq., hangs in the large room of the building. I believe it is the only likeness ever taken of him. He was an exceedingly intelligent and pleasant man, of small stature, though compactly built, and with one of the finest profiles I ever saw.

Yours truly, JOHN M. EAGER.

ARLINGTON HOUSE, April 2, 1852.

Yours is received. The story told by

The Life Guards was a corps of in-Robert Armstrong, of Newburgh, that he sion, accompanied only by two aide-deof any sort! He tarried with Robert Morris—called at his head-quarters when ir Philadelphia, and then on to Annapolis.

After the resignation of the commission, Washington, as a private citizen, accompanied by Colonel Humphries (one of his up, jiminy, killing, to kick up a row, aide-de-camps at Yorktown), called at my grandfather's, the Honorable Benedict Calvert, at his seat in Prince George's some parts punk, is given only in the incor-County, Maryland, and stayed one night, and rect form. then reached Mt. Vernon on the next day.

During the journey the beloved chief boggin.

The book is worth a closer examination

The book is worth a closer examination was greeted by the love, gratitude, and acclamation of the people, who turned out as volunteers to bid him welcome to their hearts and homes, and everywhere escorted him from place to place; but not a single Continental soldier escorted him anywhere.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant, GEORGE W. P. Custis. Hon. Samuel M. Eager, Newburgh, New York.

AMERICANISMS IN GERMAN ENGLISH DICTIONARIES.—German English Dictionaries have always been noted as receptacles for slang, inserted not as slang but as genuine English. Taking up Elwell's New English and German Languages, New York, 1851, I have been amused to see what amount of vulgarisms has been thrust into it as English.

Not by a jugfull, is favored with an especial heading.

name of a shell fish, is not.

Boss, is given as a noun and as a verb. Bubbler, a word unknown to me, is given as the name of a fish in Ohio.

Buster.

Burgoo, is given as a preparation of oat-

Carpetwed, as a creeping plant. Cisco, as a small fish.

Frough, is given as meaning rancid.

Forment is interpreted gegenüber, but on been printed Manor Kill.

camps and three servants. Not a soldier looking to that German word I find he intended the Irish forninst !

> Energize, citizenize, funkify, noncommittalism, and many similar words abound, and the pages bristle with such expressions as fork over, hurry up the cakes, the jig is kinder, kilter, loaf, lovyer.

Spunk, underwood, improperly called in than I have taken time to give it, by any student of Americanisms.

THE JURISDICTION OF THE BISHOP OF London in America.—In 1786, Owen Salisbury Brereton, Esq., exhibited to the Society of Antiquaries of London an impression of a seal used prior to the reign of George I. by the Bishop of London for American documents. It bore the legend, "SIGILLUM EPISCOPI LONDINENSIS." COMISS. AMERICANIS." It is stated in Notes and Queries that in the reign of George I. this question was referred to the law officers of the crown: "Whether America was so far to be deemed within the diocese of London, that the bishop thereof had all power in America?" They decided that and Complete American Dictionary of the a royal patent was necessary to sustain such a power, but Dr. Gibson, Bishop of London, refused to take out a patent.

REVISED STATUTES.—At page 225, vol. 1, of the 5th ed. of this work, the beginning of the town of Lewis, Essex Co., is stated Clamshell, is given as one of the equivalous to be "where the river Raquette crosses lents of mouth, but the word clam, as the the town line." There is no river "Raquette" in Essex County. The river of that name is in St. Lawrence Co. The Essex County river is called Boquet, and it ought to have been so printed in the Statutes, for it is so written in the minute of the Board of Supervisors, which is

In the same vol., p. 206, the town of Gilboa is described as beginning at the mouth of the "Mauer" Kill. It should have RESOLVED WALDBON'S will was proved He left the following 1st June, 1761. John, Jacob, Adrian, Anne, children: Elizabeth, Peggy, Caty. Anne m. Strauts Springstein; Elizabeth m. Patrick Kine; Peggy married Abraham Lent, and Caty m. Alexander Buleen. Jacob settled eventually at Haverstraw, Orange County, near Strong Point, on lands inherited from his father. It may be well to preserve these particulars of the descendants of one of Gov. Stuyvesant's ambassadors to Vir-E. B. o'C. ginia.

CLOCKVILLE, MADISON Co., N.Y.—This is an instance where the misspelling of a word destroys the only link whereby correct information may be obtained of the origin of the name of the place. It was called "Klockville" after John Klock, the original grantee of lot No. 10 in the town of Lenox, in which the village is situated, and has no connection with those timepieces called "clocks," as one would be led at present to infer. E. B. 0'C.

"During Men."—This name, as I was informed by the late Samuel Stevens, a son of Gen. Ebenezer Stevens, of Revolutionary memory, was used to distinguish the troops enlisted to serve through the War of Independence, as contra-distinguished from those called out for a limited time.

AN ANTIENT LANDMARK.—One Thomas Jones petitioned in 1709, for 2000 acres of land in Orange County, the bounds of which are described as beginning "at a certain wiggwam on the North side of Murderer's Creek, about seven miles from its mouth." It is evident from this that the Indians inhabited the Highlands in the neighborhood of Westpoint, at the above date. o'c.

THROGS NECK.—This name is most absurdly converted into "Frogs neck" in lowing label:the Revised Statutes of our state. It is deas 1658. It is about time, is it not, that Barnes, or Berners, Prioress of Sopwell those who undertake to form or revise our laws should know something of the early history of the country?

Bellomont - Joe Daveiss.-EARL Although the New York Colonial History and Colonial documents give the name of Earl Bellomout correctly, as above, in accordance with his own custom, for I have his handsome autograph before me, the earlier writers, such as Hutchison, and even some as late as Grahame, Sparks, and Hildreth, write it Bellamont. The title is, inverted. that of one of Napoleon's Generals, the Duke of Montebello, and exists even in England in the French form Beaumont. How the incorrect letter came in is not easily explained.

Jos. H. Daveiss, who was killed at the battle of Tippecanoe, in 1811, and after whom several counties in various states have been named, spelt his name as I have written it. In the official list of post-offices it is uniformly spelt Daviess. These particulars are not important, but it is pleasant to see names correctly printed.

J. B. R.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

DYING IN THE LAST DITCH.-This expression, so frequently used by the Rebels, originated with the Prince of Orange, in his reply to the Duke of Buckingham in 1679. "There is one certain means," said the prince, answering the remark that the Commonwealth was ruined, "by which I can be sure never to see my country's ruin; I will die in the last ditch." Hume's Hist. of England, vol. iv., page 261.

BELFAST, MAINE.

A BIBLIOGRAPHICAL ANECDOTE.—The visitor to the British Museum who pauses at Show-case VIII., in the King's Library, where specimens of the early English press are displayed, may notice, quite at the end, an open volume, bearing the fol-

"The book of St. Alban's. The bokys rived from that of John Throgmorton, who of Haukyng and Huntyng, and also of obtained a patent for the land as far back Coot armuris. Written by Dame Juliana Bequeathed by the Right Hon. Thomas Grenville."

The following adventures which befell this very volume before it found its present secure resting-place, are, I think, worthy of a place in the first rank of bibliographical romance.

The story has never, so far as I know, been published; and originally formed part of a letter written on bibliographical matters by the Rector of Pilham, in 1847, to the Rev. S. R. Maitland. By the kind permission of the latter gentleman, I have been allowed to copy it:-

"In June, 1844, a pedlar called at a cottage at Blyton, and asked an old widow named Naylor whether she had any rags to sell. She said, 'No!' but offered him Book of St. Alban's and others, weighing 9 lbs., for which she received nine pence. The pedlar carried them through Gainsboro', tied up in a string, past a chemist's shop, who, being used to buy old paper to wrap drugs in, called the man in; and, struck by the appearance of The Boke, gave him three shillings for the lot. Not being able to read the colophon, he took it to an equally ignorant stationer and offered it to him for a guinea; at which price he declined it, but proposed that it should be exposed in his window as a it. It was accordingly placed there, with in his books what he held to be his coat. the label—"Very old curious work." cimen at a reasonable price; not knowing, however, the great value of the book. While he was examining the book, Stark, The volume was afterwards splendidly to whom Mr. Bird at once ceded the British Museum. right of pre-emption. Stark betrayed such visible anxiety that the vendor, Smith, declined settling a price. Soon after, Sir 107 YEARS AGO.-C. — came in, and took the book to collate; and brought it back in the morning, having found it imperfect in the middle,

Nunnery. Printed at St. Alban's in 1486, and offered 5l. for it. Sir Charles had no book of reference to guide him to its value; but in the mean time, Stark had employed a friend to obtain for him the refusal of it. and had undertaken to give a little more than Sir Charles might offer. On finding that at least 51. could be got for it, Smith went to the owner and gave him two guineas, and then proceeded to Stark's agent and sold it for 71. 7s. Stark took it to London, and sold it to the Rt. Hon. T.

Grenville for 70 or 80 guineas.

"It must now be stated how it came to pass, that a book without covers of such extreme age was preserved. About fifty years since, the Library of Thonock Hall, in the parish of Gainsboro', the seat of the Hickman family, underwent great repairs; and the books were sorted over by a most some old paper; and took from a shelf The ignorant person, whose selections seem to have been determined by the coat. All books without covers were thrown into a great heap, and condemned to all the purposes which Leland laments in the sack of the Conventual Libraries by the visitors. But they found favor in the eyes of a literate gardener, who begged leave to take what he liked home. He selected a large quantity of Sermons before the House of Commons, local pamphlets, tracts from 1680 to 1710, opera books, &c., &c. He made a list of them, which was afterwards found in his cottage; and No. 43 was 'Catermouris.' The old means of eliciting some information about fellow was something of a herald, and drew A After his death, all that could be stuffed collector of books went in, and offered 2s. into a large chest were put away in a gar-6d. for it. This excited the suspicions of ret; but a few favorites, and The Boke the vendor. Soon after Mr. Bird, the among them, remained on the shelves of Vicar of Gainsboro', went in and asked the the kitchen for years, till his son's widow price, wishing to have a very early spe-became so stalled of dusting them that she determined to sell them."

Here ends the material of the story. a very intelligent bookseller, came in, bound, and is now the only copy in the

DESCRIPTION OF A FASHIONABLE LADY

THE PETITION.

Artful Painter, by this Plan Draw a Female if you can Paint her features bold and gay, Casting Modesty away; Let her Air the mode express, And fantastick be her Dress; Cock her up a little Hat Of various colours, this and that: Make her Cap the Fashion new An Inch of Gauze or Lace will do; Cut her hair the shortest dock Nicely braid the Forehead Lock; Put her on a Negligee, A short Sack or Sheperdee, Ruffled up to keep her warm. Eight or ten upon an Arm; Let her Hoop extending wide Shew her Garters and her Pride. Her Stockings must be pure and white, For they are seldom out of sight. Let her have a high heel'd shoe, And a glittering Buckle too; Other Trifles that you find, Make quite careless as her Mind. Thus equip'd she's charming ware For the Races or the Fair. NEW YORK CITY, March 29, 1756.

QUERIES.

Negro Burying Ground.—There was a "Negro burying ground" in 1738 upon a place called Little Neck, in the town of West Farms, Westchester Co. Does any trace of it remain?

Epishemo.—Can any one give me the derivation of this word, in common use in Oregon, meaning the housings of a horse? I have looked in vain in French and Spanish dictionaries for a word from which it might come.

O'REILLY AT ALGIERS.—Can any of your correspondents give an account of the Spanish expedition which, under the command of an Irishman, General Count O'Reilly, and of an English Baronet, went from Carthagena to take Algiers, but according to Lord Byron (note to Don Juan) instead of O'Reilly taking Algiers, Algiers 166).—As applied to individuals by Irving, very nearly took him? What was the in his History of New York. "The Yanreal story? P. O.

They were originally published in Mr. Force's National Journal, and afterwards collected in a pamphlet of 96 pages. They relate to Mr. Calhoun's course as presiding officer of the Senate, when the famous "Retrenchment" Resolutions were before that body; and John Randolph, for day after day, indulged in those well remembered rhapsodies of hostility to the administration without reference to its measures, outraging all decorum by his gross personalities against Mr. Adams, Mr. Day, and their friends both in and out of Congress. As far as Mr. Day was concerned, it resulted in a duel between himself and Mr. Ran-

Mr. Calhoun's course was severely reviewed in a series of letters in the National Journal, signed "Patrick Henry." They were written in a trenchant style, and have abundant evidence of the pen of John Quincy Adams, to whom they were generally inscribed in the papers of the day.

Norris's Journal of Sullivan's Ex-PEDITION TO THE GENESEE COUNTRY, 1779. -I have the original manuscript journal of Major James Norris, of New Hampshire, who was in the campaign. It covers 70 foolscap pages, and is much more intelligent than the account of Grant. (Hist. Mag., vol. vi., page 233.) Was this journal of Norris ever published, and if so, when and where?

J. W.

J. W.

BELFAST, ME.

JOHN PAUL JONES.—Was he ever allowed by Congress to receive a title from France, and if so, when and where?

BELFAST, MAINE.

COPPERHEAD: WHEN WAS THE TERM FIRST USED? (Hist. Mag., vol. vii., page kees sneeringly spoke of the round-crowned burglars of the Manhattoes as the Copper-LETTERS OF "PATRICK HENRY."—Who heads." (See the author's revised edition, wrote the letters to Vice-President Cal-1849, page 385). In the modern sense of houn, in 1826, signed "Patrick Henry?" | the term it was probably first used by E.

W. Flagg, Esq., of Bangor, in the Maine Commissioners to settle the Maryland Democratic Convention, in August, 1861. J. W.

BELFAST, ME.

"CEASE, RUDE BOREAS, BLUSTERING RAIL ER." (Vol. vii., p. 198.)—This ballad must have been well known as early as 1779, for it is contained in a manuscript collection, dated "Wyoming, Forty Fort, July 6, 1779." The following song from the collection I do not remember to have seen before. It may be interesting at the present time.

Husbands must leave their loving wives, And spritely youths attend, Leave their sweet hearts and goe with speed, Our country to defend.

May their heavens guard us in the field. And keep us safely their; We Pray the Lord to be our Shield Where thundering Cannon Roar.

And in the Great Jehovah's Name And under his command. We will goe forth against our foe, While they Invade our Land.

The Cause for which we Do Contend We know is just and rite, Therefore we Pray the Lord of host to Put our foes to flight.

Our Property we will maintain, Our rights we'l near Resign; They Shan't be sold for glitering gold, Nor heaps of Spanish Coine.

BELFAST, ME.

J. W.

REPLIES.

John Simcock, etc.—I can give your correspondent, "Philadelphia," some facts relating to three of the persons mentioned in his communication .- John Simcock, is "The Redeemed Captive Returning to John Cadwalader, and Nicholas Newlin.

John Simcock, of Ridley, Esquire, came from a place of that name in Cheshire with Reports of Divine Kindness: or, | Re-Wm. Penn about 1682. He was a mem-markable Mercies | should be faithfully ber of the Provincial Council and Assem-published, for the Praise of God the Gibly, and sometimes Speaker of that body; ver. | Set forth in a Sermon | preached at a Judge of the Common Pleas, and, after-Boston Lecture December 5, 1706. | By wards, of the Supreme Court; one of the John Williams | Pastor of the Church of HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

boundary; and Deputy President of the Society of Free Traders. He was a Quaker preacher, and was at one time fined £100 and imprisoned fifteen months for his religion. He was a large landowner. He died in 1703, aged 73. His son John was Deputy Recorder of Chester County, and his son Jacob was Deputy Register General under James Claypoole.

The John Cadwalader referred to is, doubtless, the Quaker Preacher of that name. There was a John Cadwalader in the Assembly, I suppose it was the same person. The Philadelphia family is, I think, descended from another John Cadwalader and not this one. Of this, however, I am not certain.

Nicholas Newlin, of Birmingham and Concord, Esquire, was an English gentleman of ancient family, and came to Pennsylvania from Mt. Mellick in 1683. He was a member of the Provincial Council, and a Judge of the Common Pleas. He died in 1699 aged 70. His son, Nathaniel Newlin, of Concord, Birmingham, and Newlin, Esquire, was a Justice of the County Courts, a Member of the Provincial Assembly, Commissioner of Property, one of the Trustees of the General Loan Office of the Province, etc. He married in 1685 Miss Mary Mildenhall, of Mildenhall in Suffolk, and died in 1729 aged 70. His son, Nathaniel Newlin, of Concord, Birmingham and Newlin, Esquire, was a Justice of the County Courts, and Member of the Assembly. Newlin Township was first purchased by and called after the elder Nathaniel.

THE REDEEMED CAPTIVE (vol. vii. p. 382).—I have a fragment of a volume containing only 56 pages. The running title Zion." The titlepage of the work itself is gone, but that of the sermon is as follows:

Christ in Deerfield, soon after his return one of these was a well worn one in the from a doleful captivity. Psal. 107. 13, 14, 15, 32 (quoted in full); Psal. 34. 3 (quoted in full). New London: Reprinted and sold by T. Green, 1776.

I think it adds one to the list of editions given by G. in the Magazine for December.

D. W. PATTERSON.

WEST WINSTED, Conn.

ALDEN FAMILY (vol. vii. 855).—There were families of this name seated at Newton Longville, Bucks, and Rickmansworth, dador, y Ex-Guardian de tres Colegios, Pre-Herts., in 1634; and their pedigrees are fecto de las Misiones | de Propagande Fide preserved in the British Museum. I do not know whether they were connected with the American family or not, nor how long they had been seated at this place. Sims gives the references to these pedigrees in his Index to the Herald's Visitation in the British Museum,

X. Y. Z.

NEW YORK NAMES.—Mr. Strong, of Irving, N.Y., is represented as saying (Hist. Mag., vii. 313), "he has not been able to find a river, creek, lake or mountain in our state that now bears the name of any herbivorous animal." By turning to the map of Northern New York, Deer River, and Moose River, and Deer Lake and Moose Lake will be found laid down.

E. B. o'C.

Letrospectibe.

LITERARY AND ANTIQUARIAN.

THE LIFE OF FATHER ANTONIO MAR-GIL-A very uncommon though comparatively recent work is the life of the Franciscan Missionary in Texas and other parts of Mexico, Father Antonio Margil de Jesus. It is, as I am informed by one of the best informed scholars in the Spanish part of our history, so rare in Mexico and Spain that he met with but two copies in his investigations in both countries, and hands of the Margil family at Valencia. It is possible, however, that its strange title may have caused it to be overlooked in some cases. The title is as follows:

El Peregrino | Septentrional Atlante: Delineado | en la exemplarissima Vida | Del Venerable Padre | Fr. Antonio Margil | de Jesus | Fruto de la floridissima ciudad de Valencia, | Hijo de su Serafica Observante Provincia, Predicador Missionero, Notario Apostolico, Comissario del Santo Oficio, Funen todas las Indias Occiden- | tales, y aclamado de la piedad | Por nuevo Apostol de Guatemala | Dedicase | A los dos gloriosissimos Juanes Bautista, y Evangelista: A expensas de un amartelado del V. P. y de la Serafica Religion. | Escrivela | El Padre Fr. Isidro Felix de Espinosa, Predicador, y Misionero Apostolico, Ex-Guardian del Colegio | de la Santa Cruz de Queretaro, su Chro- | nista, y menor Hijo. | Con Licencia: | En Valencia: Por Joseph Thomàs Lucas, Impressor del Illustris- simo Señor Obispo de Teruel. Año de 1742. Vendese en casa de Salvador Fauli, Librero, en la Plaza de Villarrasa.

It is a quarto of 426 pages double column. Title and preliminary pages unfolioed 10, then page 1 to 411, 412 blank, and 4 pages Indice without folios.

His Texan missions are described on pages 248 to 265. It is divided into three books, two of which are historical, the third being, as is usual in the lives of saints, devoted to a portrait of his virtues, each head being treated separately.

The volume contains, moreover, some very curious matter relative to the Pagan rites secretly preserved among the Indians.

Father Margil was born at Valencia Aug. 18, 1657, and died at Mexico Aug. 6, 1726.

Societies und their Proceedings.

CONNECTICUT.

. NEW HAVEN HISTORICAL SOCIETY .- New Haven, Nov. 30, 1863.—The New Haven Historical Society held their first annual meeting under the charter from the State Legislature. After the usual preliminaries attending such meetings, Henry Bronson, M.D., read a paper on the Currency of Massachusetts and Connecticut. began with an introductory concerning the wants of all communities, whether civilized or barbarian, of a medium of commercial exchange, and the various devices which have been adopted to meet such want. The early settlers found the aborigines using for money what they termed wampum, consisting of several kinds of shells, the value of which was determined by its light or dark color, and by other circumstances. For many years this wampum, to a certain extent, passed current among the settlers, the value being determined by act of court. The Doctor presented many highly interesting facts concerning this shell money, as also the method of exchange in commodities in those early days, and then passed to the use of coin, the mode of coining the coin being hammered out-and the gradual development of our system of bills of exchange and the general features of our system of banking.

The report of Mr. John Collis, the Curator, was read. It showed that there had been received during the year 444 bound volumes, 2,064 pamphlets, 16 bundles newspapers, 27 handbills, 88 volumes of autograph letters and manuscripts, 70 volumes manuscripts, 7 mounted maps, 20 framed engravings, 34 other engravings, 2 oil paintings, 1 bust, 59 curiosities, 7 pieces ancient furniture.

The Treasurer's report shows a balance in hand of $388 48.

Mr. White was elected President, Dr. E. E. Beardsley, Vice President, Mr. Horace Day, Secretary, and Mr. Nathan Peck, Treasurer. The Directors are Messrs. Leonard Bacon, Henry Bronson, Wm. A. Reynolds, Thos. R. Trowbridge, Samuel Punderson, Elliott T. Foote, Henry C. Kingsley, Chas E. English, Elisha L. Cleveland, Chas. R. Ingersoll, Edward H. L. Leffingwell.

It was voted that a book be procured for the reception of the autographs of visitors.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Chicago, Nov. 17, 1863.—The annual meeting was regularly held—W. L. Newberry, Esq., President, in the char.

The additions to the library for the past month (in all 1,066) were received from 61 contributors; and included the entire publications, in uniform binding, of the documents of the first and second sessions of the 37th Congress; those of the "Loyal Publication Societies" of Boston, New York, and Cincinnati; the entire documents of the Territory of Colorado; the Journal of the (seceding) Convention of Louisiana, in English and French, with Gayarré's History of Louisiana, the obliging gift of Maj. General Banks; numerous publications on the war, and relics from the battle-field of Gettysburg, etc.

Of the correspondence for the month reported (nineteen letters received and seventy-one written), letters of interest were read from Gen. Charles B. Stuart, Geneva, N. Y., relative to material improvements in the North-west; from the Hon. John Young, M.P.P., Montreal, in regard to the Provincial Documents of Canada; also from the Hon. Charles Mason, New York; Gov. J. Evans, of Denver City, Col., and George Liver-more, Esq., of Massachusetts.

The following were then elected to fill the principal offices of the Society for the ensuing year

President, Walter L. Newberry, Esq.; Vice-Presidents, Hon. W. B. Ogden, and J. Y. Scammon; Treasurer, Dr. F. Scammon; Rec. Secretary and Librarian, William Barry; Corresponding Secretary, E. B. McCagg, Esq. The usual Committees of Business, Research, etc., were re-elected with slight modifications.

The Society's thanks were directed to be returned to the editors or publishers of serials forwarded to the Library the past year.

Nov. 24.—The adjourned annual meeting was held at the private residence of Mr. Bross, and was numerously attended by members, with their ladies and invited guests.

An address was read by Mr.

An address was read by Mr. J. Y. Scammon, presenting a historical sketch of Banks and Banking in Illinois; which was followed by the annual report of the Secretary, reviewing the transactions of the year.

The following summary was given of the Society's collections :

Bound books	 ts .	For the year. 1,005 9,779	Aggregate. 12,829 51,892
Files of serials .		197	1,573
" " newspapers		48	1,020
Old and rare newspapers .		40	320
Maps and charts		108	1,097
Manuscripts .		762	1,242
Prints, photographs, etc		45	159
Cabinets single and collective		44	73
Collections of miscellanies .		47	82

MASSACHUSETTS.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCI-ETY.—Boston, Wednesday, Dec. 2.—A stated meeting was held this afternoon, Rev. Martin Moore, Vice-President for Massachusetts, in the

Rev. Caleb Davis Bradlee, the Corresponding Secretary, reported that since the last meeting letters had been received from the following gentlemen accepting the membership to which they had been elected, viz.:

Corresponding.—Hon. George P. Fisher, of Washington, Judge of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Resident.—Thomas Parsons, M.D., of Boston, Edward S. Moseley, of Newburyport, and Charles

C. Dana, of Boston.

William B. Trask, the Historiographer, read an able and very interesting memoir of the Right Honorable John Singleton Copley, Lord Lyndaccounts of Washington's executors, rescued hurst, an Honorary Member of the Society, who at Fairfax Court House by Captain James B. died in London, Oct. 12, 1863, at the age of 91 Kirker, and presented to the Society.

John H. Sheppard, the Librarian, reported as donations, during the past month, 21 volumes, 33 pamphlets, large map, and three photographs. These photographs, which represent a relic recently discovered at Valley Forge, were sent to the Society by John A. McAllister of Philadelphia, who gave this account of the relic:- "A few weeks ago, workmen engaged in removing the founda-tions of an ancient building near Washington's Head Quarters at Valley Forge, found what appeared to be a block of wood three inches square. It remained among the rubbish for several days, when one of the laborers turned it over and discovered it to be a box. This outer box appears to be of some composition metal resembling copper, but somewhat corroded. On removing the outside box another was discovered plated with silver, and in this case, carefully packed to protect it from moisture, was a miniature beautifully painted and in excellent preservation. The miniature represents a person in an embroidered coat, ruffled shirt, and powdered wig, and from the costume was evidently painted between 1730 and 1740. The painting is on enamel and has on its edge near the right shoulder, the letters HALL, which can be distinguished in the photograph with the aid of a powerful magnifier. The house in which the relic was discovered is said to have been built about the year 1770." Mr. Sheppard suggested that HALL might be the name of the painter.

After the transaction of the ordinary business the meeting was dissolved.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—December, 1863.—The regular meeting of the Society was held in the Fire Proof Building, the Rev. Dr. Dewitt in the chair.

Among the important matters transacted was the appointment of a committee to nominate officers for the election in January.

Mr. Moore, the librarian, also read a notice of the career of the late Judge Macdonald, and offered a series of resolutions expressive of the regret of the Society for the loss of one who, amid the annoyances of ill-health, so cheerfully devoted himself to literary and historic pursuits.

The paper of the evening, a Memoir of Edward Lovington, the law-giver of Louisana, was read by Mr. Charles H. Hunt, and was an interesting account of one of our greatest men.

Onondaga Historical Association.—Syracuse, Dec. 3 .- Officers: President, Mr. Clark; Vice-Pres., N. B. Smith; Secretary, R. F. Trowbridge. The regular meeting was held at the Society's rooms, President Clark in the

A number of contributions to the library and museum were reported.

The Secretary read a letter from H. C. Van Schaack, Esq., offering to present an unbroken file of the New York Spectator for more than twenty years, on certain terms, which were agreed to by the Board.

A communication from Prof. Agassiz having been received, Mr. Smith moved that the Lecture Committee be instructed to circulate a subscription.

Mr. Noxon introduced Mr. Griffin, an Indian, who produced a number of Indian curiosities. His conversation showing him to be intelligent; he was employed by the Board to secure Indian relics and curiosities for the Museum, and a sum of money advanced to him for that purpose.

Mr. Noxon, from the Committee on Rooms, reported the bills of expenditure, &c., in rearranging the rooms. The bill of D. S. S. P. Geer $32.29, Alpetre & Hoffman $95.41, E. R. Dandford $24.60, balance of Stoddard's account $19.75, Jas. Noxon $7.22, were audited and ordered paid.

Mr. Leach reported the lease as drawn, wnich was accepted, and on motion the President or Vice-President was authorised to execute it on the part of the Association.

Mr. Noxon moved that an insurance of $1,000 be procured on the property of the Association. The following letter was read by the Secre-

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Dec. 8, '68. R. F. TROWBRIDGE, Esq., Sec'y of Onondaga Co. Historical Society, &c.:

DEAR SIR:—Please accept in behalf of the Onondaga Historical Society the accompanying portrait and biography of one of Onondaga's pioneers—Capt. Oliver Teall. It is needless for me to pronounce a eulogium upon his character, for he was too well known throughout this section of the State to require it at my hands. Suffice it to say that he was one of Nature's noblest works-an honest man.

Yours, for the welfare of the Association, GEO. G. GARDNER.

The portrait and biography were received, and the thanks of the Association given to the

The thanks of the Association were also voted to several other donors, and the Board adjourned.

OHIO.

FIRE LANDS HISTORICAL SOCIETY, New London, December 9, 1863.—The Society convened in the M. E. Church at half past 10 o'clock, A. M., and was called to order by Judge S. C. Parker, Vice President.

The minutes of the Quarterly Meeting of Fairfield were read, after which the report of the Secretary was presented. It noticed the progress of the work of the Society, the reception of publications from the Essex Institute of Salem, Mass., H. A. Smith, Esq., of Cleveland, A. Banning Norton, Esq., of Mt. Vernon, and Judge Parker, of Greenfield, and called attention to the necessity of early steps to secure the publication of the next volume of the Pioneer.

Letters were read from Samuel Holden Parsons, Esq., of Middletown, Conn., and Rev. John Seward, of Tallmadge, Ohio. The former, a grandson of Judge S. H. Parsons, the first Judge of the Northwestern Territory, suggested some a book entitled "Congregationalism and Church corrections in the history of the Fire Lands Action," and last, but "not least," a copy of the grant, in the 3d vol. of the Pioneer, from docu- New England Primer, edition of 1691. ments in his possession. The latter gave some additional facts concerning his Missionary tour to the Fire Lands in 1819, and expressed his intention to give a more full description of it at some future time.

The names of standing Historical Committees of the several townships were called, and the following presented reports: Dr. Skellenger, of New London-Sketches of Joseph Seymour Merrifield and Mrs. Hendrix, early Settlers of that township. D. A. Pease, Norwalk—a genealogical sketch of Rev. Hezekiah Ripley, from whom the township of Ripley was named, and a letter from the venerable Thomas D. Webb, of Warren, relating to the manner in which the Fire Lands were distributed among the proprietors. Rev. C. F. Lewis, Wakeman-Indian Reminiscences, relating in particular to the method of manufacturing canoes, sap troughs, etc., of

The following special Committees, appointed to secure the histories of the townships named. reported their work as in progress: Greenwich, Luther Mead; Richmond, J. H. Niles; Ruggles, S. C. Sturtevant; Sherman, D. H. Pease.

The Constitution was then read, and thirty-nine persons became members of the Society. A portion of the last Annual Report of the Secretary was then read by the Rev. C. F. Lewis, and on his motion the Society requested the press of the Fire Lands and other papers circulating there to publish it. The Society also, on motion of the same, voted to request of the Rev. L. B. Gurley a copy of the Poem referred to in his address, for preservation.

The President, Platt Benedict, Esq., having arrived, made a few appropriate remarks on assuming the chair, expressing for himself and the Society their gratification at the interest manifested at this meeting by the citizens of New London, as well as of Ruggles, Rochester, and other adjoining towns, so many of whom were

The Rev. John Keep, of Oberlin, then delivered an address on the duty and advantages of not only gathering history for ourselves and posterity, but of living it. It was remarkable for power, variety, and originality, and held the undivided attention of the crowded audience till its close. The Society, on motion of Dr. Skellenger, unanimously requested a copy for publication. The Rev. Mr. Keep also presented the Society a copy of the book containing the first sermon ever preached in New England, and also accounts of the first prayer meeting and first Thanksgiving on "Wild New England Shore;"

Castalia was selected as the place for the next meeting, March 9, 1864.

PENNSYLVANIA.

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST HISTORICAL SOCIETY, was founded in Philadelphia about ten years ago. It aims to collect whatever remains of the history of the Church, and especially of such portions of it as in every age have maintained the sentiments of those who now constitute the Baptist denomination. Also books and pamphlets by Baptist authors on any subject, all religious Baptist periodicals, existing or extinct; likenesses, autograph letters and manuscripts of British ministers; and views of Baptist churches and literary institutions.

The Society is incorporated. President, Rev. Howard Malcom, D.D., LL D. Its library is yet small, embracing about 1200 volumes, 7000 pamphlets, and some valuable manuscripts. Its constitution connects it intimately with the American Baptist Publication Society, and its room is in their building, 530 Arch street, Philadelphia.

VERMONT.

THE VERMONT HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Montpelier, October 20, 1863.—At the annual meeting of this Society, October 20, choice was made of the following officers:

Highland Hall, North Bennington, President.

Daniel Kellogg, Brattleboro', Rev. William H. Lord, Montpelier, George W. Benedict, Burlington, Vice-Presidents.

George F. Houghton, Recording Secretary.

Albert D. Hager, Proctorsville, John S.

Adams Burlington, Corr. Secretaries.

Adams, Burlington, Corr. Secretaries.
Charles Reed, Montpelier, Librarian and Cabinet-Keeper.

George B. Reed, Montpelier, Treasurer. Rev. John A. Hicks, D.D., Burlington, Rev. F. W. Shelton, Montpelier, Henry Clark, Esq., Poultney, Rev. P. H. White, Coventry, Dugald Stewart, Middlebury, and John B. Perry, Swanton, Curators.

The Publishing Committee were, on motion, requested to publish a volume of Collections as soon as sufficient funds were raised for the purpose. Dr. David P. Holton argued the importance of preserving a careful record, not only of Vermont officers, but of all the men who had joined the Volunteers from Vermont. Albert D. Hager, Esq., then read a paper on the "Copper Mines of the United States and Canada." Several valuable donations were reported from General J. Watts de Peyster, of Tivoli, N.Y., Hon. W.C. Watson, of Port Kent, N.Y., H. B.

Dawson, Esq., of Morrisania, Rev. W. H. Lord, and Dr. Earl Cushman, of Orwell. Messrs, L. C. Kellogg, A. Clark, Moses Cheney, Dr. H. F. Stevens, and A. D. Hager, Esq., were requested to prepare papers on given subjects to be read at some early meetings of the Society. The subject of "Ancient Mining in the Lake Superior region" was assigned to Albert D. Hager, Esq. In the evening the annual address was delivered to a large audience in the Representatives' Hall, by General J. Watts de Peyster, of Tivoli, N.Y., upon the subject of Secession in Switzerland. The speaker drew a line of comparison between the secession of Swiss Cantons and the Seceded States of the American Union. He traced the war for the preservation of the Swiss Republic. and told the tale of the triumph of those braves who triumphed for human liberty. General de Peyster predicted a similar success in our own country, and that the doom of the rebels in Switzerland awaits the Southern arch-rebel and his co-conspirators. The address was learned, and eloquent, and very acceptable to the large audience assembled at the State House.

The President then introduced Hon. Winslow. Watson, of Port Kent, N.Y., who read an elaborately prepared and interesting paper on "The Life and Services of Hon. Richard Skinner, Governor of Vermont in 1820, '21, and '22."

Thanks were returned to the speakers, and copies of their papers solicited for the archives of the Society.

Luther G. Emerson, Esq., of Ontonogon, Michigan, was, on motion, elected a corresponding member of the Society.

The next special meeting of the Society willbe held at Brandon, January 27th and 28th, 1864, and the summer meeting will be holden at St. Johnsbury in the month of June, 1864.

The Standing Committees for the year 1863-4 are constituted as follows:

On Library and Cabinet—F. W. Shelton, Albert D. Hager, and Henry Clark.

On Printing and Publishing—George F..

Houghton, Charles Reed, and Pliny H. White.
On Finance—Daniel Kellogg, Albert D.

Hager, and Charles Reed.

To Manage and Superintend the Historical Department—W. H. Lord, P. H. White, and Henry Clark.

To Manage and Superintend the Department of Natural History—George W. Benedict, John B. Perry, and John A. Hicks.

To Manage and Superintend the Department of Horticulture—Daniel Kellogg, John A. Hicks, and Dugald Stewart.

Aotes on Books.

An Address delivered at the Celebration by the New York Historical Society of the Two Hundredth Birth-day of Mr. William Bradford, who introduced the art of Printing into the Middle Colonies of British America. By John Wm. Wallace, of Philadelphia. Albany: Munsell, 1863. 8vo.

A TRIBUTE to a printer most fitly calls for typographic beauty, and Mr. Wallace, in giving his address in full, inserting the parts omitted in delivery, has given Mr. Munsell full scope, and must certainly feel satisfied with the edition which he has privately issued. Of the address itself we need not speak. Our readers are to some extent already acquainted with it.

It is here given complete, with many interesting notes, including a well merited tribute to the Alban disciple of Aldus.

Mr. Wallace, in his enthusiastic admiration of our first printer, has gathered all the items of his history, and gleaned all interesting information as to the issues of his press, but not content with embodying all this in his address, makes it in items a more permanent monument.

The work is inscribed to the honor and memory of the late Mr. Bradish, and we have seldom met with a dedication more noble in idea or more appropriate in word.

Journal of the Expedition against Quebec, under command of Col. Benedict Arnold, in the year 1776. By Major Return J. Meigs; with an Introduction and Notes by Charles I. Bushnell. New York: Privately Printed, 1864. 8vo. pp. 57.

The readers of the Magazine will recollect a query as to this journal, announced on the title but not found in the body of an Ohio work. Mr. Bushnell has therefore done well to give it in this attractive form. His notes elucidate all obscurities and give the needed information as to the characters that figure in it. There is a disposition, which we certainly commend, to save these Revolutionary relics, and gentlemen could not find a better work for leisure moments and a comparatively small expenditure than to put them beyond all possibility of loss, as Mr. Bushnell has so frequently done.

Historical Sketch of Continental Paper Money. By Samuel Breck. Philadelphia: 8vo. 1863. This is a timely reprint by Mr. Kline of the very interesting paper of the late venerable Mr.

Breck, which many have since used with profit. As the original pamphlet was printed twenty years ago, it has become quite rare.

The Lateralist: A Collection of Essays written in favor of the New Constitution as agreed upon by the Federal Convention, September 17, 1787. Reprinted from the original text, with an Historical Introduction and Notes. By Henry P. Dawson. In two volumes, Vol. I. New York: Charles Scribner, 1863.

No work more timely than that which Mr. Dawson has so well performed. This edition of the Federalist is a national boon. At the moment when broader and more statesmanlike discussions of our Constitution must occupy the public mind, when the plan of a new government will be debated, a thorough study of the present Constitution and its adoption must be made.

New York was most averse to the new Constitution, and the articles of Hamilton, Madison, and Jay undoubtedly won over the State and enabled the General Government to commence. Mr. Dawson, as part of his plan, presents in this volume the text of the Federalist, printed from the newspapers on which it originally appeared, without the least alteration, and with such notes only as the authors gave at the time: a second volume will contain the alterations made by the authors and illustrative notes, with a full and copious index. A subsequent volume will embrace, under the title of the Anti-Federalist, the essays which these of Hamilton, Madison, and Jay so successfully met.

Mr. Dawson, in giving this authentic copy of the Federalist, renders his edition of the highest authority; this great service is increased by the valuable introduction. It embraces a history of the circumstances which led to the work, gives a full, fair statement of the claims as to the authorship of certain numbers, especially 18, 19, 20, 48 to 57, 61 to 63, and a table showing the various claims. A full bibliographical account of the various editions of the work completes the history of the Federalist.

It is a matter of gratification that an edition has at last appeared, edited by one so thoroughly conversant with the history of the period, so painstaking, accurate, and critical. It is the only edition to stand on the shelf of a choice library, and is one that few libraries can dispense with.

A Brief and True Narrative of the Hostile Conduct of the Barbarian Natives towards the Dutch Nation. Translated by E. B. O'Callaghan. 8vo. pp. 48. Albany: Munsell, 1863.

This is quite an interesting little tract of the Dutch times, the value of which is enhanced by an appendix containing the treaty of 1645, correspondence in regard to it, opinions of Stuyvesant, La Montagne, Van Tierhoven is list of the survivors of Van de Capelle's Colombia and the Proclamation of January 27, 1656.

A Sketch of the History of the Episcopal Church in Portland, Maine, from the organization of St. Paul's Church, Fulmouth, Nov. 4, 1763, to the Present Time. By the Rev. W. S. Perry, M.A. Portland: 1863.

A VERY interesting history of the Episcopal Church in Portland during the last century. Mr. Perry is too thorough a historic scholar and too polished an orator to fail to invest his narrative with interest and value.

Life and Letters of John Winthrop, Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Company at their Emigration to New England, 1630. By Robert C. Winthrop. Boston: Ticknor and Fields, 1864. 8vo., pp. 452.

This elegant volume is the first part of the life of John Winthrop, written with all the affectionate interest of a scholarly descendant, but in no spirit of what might have been excused as a laudable pride. The narrative is told mainly by Winthrop and his family in their letters and other writings. Apart from its interest as a biography of one of the great men of American colonization, as a picture of the life of the gentry in England at the time, it possesses a remarkable value to all readers here and in England.

Another thought arises. Where is the vaunted gentleness of the Virginian and more southerly families? How stands the assumption that all at the South are descended from the English gentry, and all at the North from the boors? What Southern State can give us a life of its first governor, written by a descendant maintaining a position of honor and distinction in the State?

Miscellany.

Mr. C. B. RICHARDSON, the publisher of this Magazine, has commenced the United States Service Magazine, a periodical devoted to the interests, descriptive of the progress, and illustrative of the honorable services of the United States Army and Navy, regular and volunteer.

This enterprise has been undertaken at the solicitation of many prominent officers.

Stuyist of Esq., Professor of English Literature and History in the University of Penn-ylvania (Philadelphia), whose military experience and literary attainments are sufficient warrant that the Magazine will be rendered worthy the patronage of all, in and out of the Service, who are interested in military and naval affairs.

Its principal articles will cover the entire scope of war topics, including Modifications and Inventions of Arms of all kinds; Notes on the Organization of Armies and Navies; Historical Sketches and Illustrations; Interesting Narratives of Personal Experience; Stories of Military and Naval Life; Military Hygiene, and such other themes as are directly or indirectly connected with the great subject. The Publisher has the pleasure of announcing that, in this department, contributions are promised by many of our most distinguished officers, and other writers of the highest authority.

Mr. Faxon, of Hartford, paid a soldier $5 for a lot of relies from the Revolutionary battle-ground before Yorkawn, Va. He found among the articles a small that one, which upon cleaning proved to be a garnet; and a further inspection revealed the interesting fact that it had once formed a part of the signet ring of the Marquis de Rochambeau, the liberty loving commander of the French army in this country, who acted in concert with Washington in plans which won for us the battle of Yorktown. It contains the noble Count's motto, in Latin, and his family crest.

On the 19th of October, 1863, the St. Jean Baptiste Society of Quebec, C. E., inaugurated an elegant monument on the heights of St. Foy to commemorate the battle of April 28, 1760—the second battle of Quebec in which the French so nearly regained the colony. It is a bronzed metal column on a stone base, surmounted by a bronze statue of Bellona, presented by Prince Napoleon. The base bears the inscription, "Aux braves de 1760, erigée par la Société St. Jean Baptiste de Québec 1860;" and on two other faces the names of Levis and Murray. It stands on a beautiful spot on the brow of the cliff overhanging the valley of the St. Charles. The successful erection of this tribute to the brave of the last century is due in no slight degree to Dr. Bardy.

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

FEBRUARY, 1864.

[No. 2.

General Begartment.

NOTES ON SOME PORTRAITS OF WASH-INGTON.

BY GEORGE GIBBS.

MASONIC PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.-Mr. Charles B. Richardson, the publisher of this Magazine, some time since showed me may exist, as it seems to have been the ara photograph from a portrait of Washington, representing him in Masonic Regalia. The original was stated to be by an artist named Williams, and preserved in the lodge at Alexandria. At my request Mr. Benson J. Lossing undertook an inquiry into its authenticity, and at the same time I addressed a letter to Mr. C. Cammack, Sr., Grand Treasurer of the District of Columbia, for the same purpose. Mr. Lossing has obtained from Mr. S. Hayden of Athens, Bradford Co., Pa., an account of the picture, from which I extract the following:

Mr. Hayden has no knowledge of the artist beyond what is stated in the records of lodge, but the gavel with which he laid the the Alexandria lodge, by which it appears that in August, 1793, Mr. Williams offered to compliment that body with a portrait of now in the custody of a lodge at Georgethe President of the United States, provided it would prevail upon him to sit, and that the lodge made application to that effect accordingly. In October, 1794, the portrait was received, and an appropriation passed to defray the expenses of the artist in going to Philadelphia on the business. In the "Recollections and Private Memoirs of Washington," p. 523, there is a mention, which Mr. Hayden cites, as follows: "A Mr. Williams, a painter in Crayons, had sittings about 1794, and made a strong likeness, but we have no further knowledge of him or his works." He is undoubtedly the person referred to in a letter to Gov. Lee of Virginia, dated at Philadelphia in July, 1792, at which time Washington declined to sit, but it would appear that the request of Alexandria lodge, of which Washington had formerly been Master, subsequently prevailed on him. Mr. Hayden has seen a copy of this portrait in the possession of a Baltimore lodge, and surmises that others tist's expectation to make them.

The authenticity of the portrait as one taken from life may be therefore considered as established. It represents Washington as bearing greater marks of age than any other I have seen. He wears the apron, sash, collar, and jewel of a Past Master of Masons. The picture, with the other property and archives of the lodge, has been removed since the rebellion broke out, but they are said to be in security. The apron, Mr. Cammack informs me, was a present to Washington from Madame de la Fayette. These articles all belong to the Alexandria corner-stone of the Capitol at the city of Washington (which he did in regalia), is town.

It may be added that a full length statue of Washington in Masonic dress was executed by Powers just before the rebellion, and was designed to be erected at Fredericksburg. It never was set up, however, and is now concealed somewhere at the South.

The Williams portrait is now being photographed from Mr. Richardson's copy by Fredericks of Broadway, New York, where cartes de visite can be obtained.

THE "PIEHLE" PORTRAIT.

A well known, though not very common

HIST, MAG. VOL. VIII.

engraving, is one of quarto size, in an oval included within a shaded square, "published by T. Holloway, and the other proprietors, May 21, 1794," representing Washington in military dress, with a tablet beneath of Cornwallis's surrender, lettered "Event of the 19th of Oct., 1781, at Yorktown, in Virginia," and with the following note, "The English Artist has followed the lines of the Print in the French original after a picture by Piehle, on account of the remarks of Mr. Lavater." The features, as Mr. Tuckerman has observed, would not be recognised for those of Washington. I have never seen the French Cambridge, Massachusetts, informs me that it was formerly the property of a Mr. Streckeiser, of Basle, in Switzerland, and now belongs to his daughter, Mrs. Righiner. The late Theodore Parker, who saw the picture when travelling in Europe, requested Dr. Beck to procure a copy, and that gentleman caused two to be executed, one of which he retains himself. It is a small painting, and bears the following inscription; "Le General Washington, Peint d'après nature à Philadelphie, par N. Piehle en 1783." The family account of it is that it was purchased in a shop in Paris during the French Revolution. This is in all probability one of those by C. W. Peale.

BROWN'S STATUE IN UNION SQUARE.

duplicate of Houdon's bust, originally executed by that artist for the Hon. Rufus King, which came into the possession of friends are anxious that I should make a the late Col. George Gibbs, and is now the likeness, a bust in wax, to be placed in the property of the Hon. Hamilton Fish.

WAX MEDALLIONS OF WASHINGTON.

I have recently seen a profile photograph of Washington, purporting to have been taken from "the wax original by Mrs. Wright." Having in my possession a wax medallion of Washington, apparently its counterpart, I am anxious to ascertain upon what authority the one referred to is ascribed to that artist.

actual relief, and is encased in a deep oval have five points.

frame, is nine inches in height, including head and bust, and represents Washington with much the same profile as in Houdon's marble. The hair is drawn back from the forehead, curled at the side, and tied with a ribbon in a very long queue. A military cloak is thrown back over the shoulder so as to exhibit the epaulette, upon which are three four-pointed stars.* The lappel of the coat is buttoned back, showing the waistcoat, and a very prominent shirt frill.

The profile looks to the right.

The Mrs. Wright in question is undoubtedly Mrs. Patience Wright, an American who pursued her art in England, as a moprint, but am able to give a clue to the picture by "Piehle." Dr. Charles Beck, of lution, where she made herself useful to her deller in wax during the war of the Revocountry by transmitting valuable information to Franklin, then in Paris. A short biographical notice of her may be found in Dunlap, and an amusing anecdote in Elkanah Watson's "Men and Times of the Revolution." In a note to a letter of Franklin, by William Temple Franklin (Works of Franklin, vol. vi.) she is styled Mehitable Wright, but Dunlap writes her name as Patience on the authority of her own letters, and says that she was also called Sybilla, as she professed to predict future events. The following letter from her to Jefferson is published by Dunlap.

MRS. WRIGHT TO JEFFERSON.

London, at the Wax Work, Aug. 14, 1785.

"HONOURED SIR: I had the pleasure to The head in this is taken from a marble hear that my son Joseph Wright had painted the best likeness of our Hero, Washington, of any painter in America; and my State house, or some public building that may be erected by Congress. The flattering letters from gentlemen of distinguished virtues and rank, and one from that General himself, wherein he says: 'He shall think himself happy to have his bust done by Mrs. Wright, whose uncommon talents, &c., &c., make me happy in the prospect of seeing him in my own country.

* Mr. Elias Dexter also has a photograph, apparent-This portrait, which is in about half the ly from one of these medallions, in which the stars

"I most sincerely wish not only to make 1787, by her modelling in wax. the likeness of Washington, but of those younger daughter married Hopner, the five gentlemen who assisted at the signing rival of Stuart and Lawrence as a portrait English king, I would go to any trouble before her return to America. and expense to add my mite in the stock it is thought proper to pay my expense of other works by the same hand exist, and same time see the picture, and if possible Mrs. Platt, are yet to be found.* by this painting, which is said to be so like him, make a likeness of the General. I wish likewise to consult with you, how we may honour our country by holding up the likenesses of her eminent men, either in painting or wax work. A statue in marble is already ordered, and an artist gone to Philadelphia to begin the work (Houdon). This is as I wished and hoped."

It is to be inferred from this letter that she had not at its date (1785) executed any model of Washington. Cértainly she could not have done so from life, for she had never seen him, and according to Dunlap she died during the same year.

Mrs. Wright's son, Joseph, not only executed a portrait, well known among those taken of Washington, but as mentioned by Watson, took a cast of his face in plaster in the year 1784, and Washington, in describing the operation, mentioned that an impulse to smile "gave his mouth a slight twist or compression of the lips observable in the busts Wright afterwards made." Whether the busts thus spoken of were in wax, or what other material, I cannot find. They are not, I believe, mentioned in the catalogues of the Washington portraits. There is nothing peculiar in the mouth of the one I have.

Besides this son, Mrs. Wright had two daughters, of whom Dunlap says: "The was the British flag displayed from a large elder married an American of the name of Platt, and inheriting some of her mother's works and talent, returned to this country and died here. Mrs. Platt made herself well known in New York about the year the subject of the medallions.

The the treaty of peace, that put an end to so painter." It might be conjectured that the bloody and dreadful a war. The more publimedallion in question was by Miss, instead lic the honours bestowed on such men by of Mrs. Wright, but I should judge from their country, the better. To shame the Dunlap's expression that she had married

I trust that some correspondent will of honour due to Adams, Jefferson, and ascertain by whom the medallion really others, to send to America; and I will, if is; how many copies of it there are, what travelling to Paris, come myself and model finally if any authentic modellings by Mrs. the likeness of Mr. Jefferson; and at the Wright, her son Joseph, or her daughter

OPERATIONS IN MAINE IN 1779.

JOURNAL FOUND ON BOARD THE HUNTER, CONTI-NENTAL SHIP, OF EIGHTEEN GUNS.

Monday, 19th of July, 1779.—The fleet sailed from Nantasket road this morning, consisting of 16 armed vessels, with about 20 transports.

Wednesday, 21st.—We arrived at Townsend about sunset, where 1000 militia were in readiness to embark, including those that came from Boston in the transports under command of General Lovel.

Friday, 23d.—The troops embarked on board the transports.

Saturday, 24th.—This morning we sailed from Townsend, or Booth-Bay Harbour, and favoured by a pleasant N.W. gale, arrived at Penobscot Bay, anchoring under four islands, about one league above Owl's Head.

Sunday, 25th.—We made sail, and about two o'clock came up to the entrance of a harbour called Magebagiduce, about 12 leagues from the sea, where lay at anchor three British ships, viz. the North of 20 guns, the Albany of 18, and the Nautilus of 18, &c. On the north side of the harbour came to anchor about one mile above, covered by the ship Sally and brig.

* There is a notice of Wright's bust in a letter from Washington to Mrs. Wright, dated June 26, 1785 (H. M. vii. 65), but it throws no additional light on

Monday, 26th.—Our ships in turn approached the harbour's mouth several quarters of a mile of the British encamping an equal number with little annoyance, some troops on the south point, out of fort, to which all those that fled had rewhich Major Littlefield and two privates sorted. Several of our men have been British party of their unfinished fort, killing taken and brought on board the ships. one man; after which our troops finished it and brought several 18-pounders to bear to fortify. P. M. All the ships are ordered upon the ships, which caused them to be removed further up. This evening our ships came to anchor in a line across the harhour's mouth.

held this day on board the Commodore's frigate, the result of which was that the marines from all the ships should join the troops and land under cover of the Hunter further up the harbour out of our reach. and Sky-Rocket; pursuant to which, about two o'clock at night, the ships came to an fortify without much annoyance within half anchor within musquet shot of the place a mile of the British fort. assigned for the landing the men, being the north side of the harbour on a beach just above which arose a very high hill full the fleet, is concerting a plan for all the of trees, brush, and craggy rocks, where marines to go ashore about midnight, untwo or three hundred Highlanders and der the command of Captain Burke, and some Britons lay in ambush.

Wednesday, 28th.—About four o'clock in the morning the two ships began to fire into the woods, which was continued alling by taking that, the communication most incessantly for about half an hour, that the troops might have the opportunity | ships. to land without being annoyed; as soon as fort on a regular eminence, below which in number about six or seven hundred) the were two batteries, on the south side ano- Britons from the hill fired upon them and ther battery was forming; the whole made killed 16 men, and wounded as many; our a pretty formidable appearance. Some of men with great resolution returned the our largest ships passed by the harbour's fire, ascended the almost impassable precientrance several times within reach of their pice, routed them and took possession of cannon, and discharged a number of broad-the hill, killing (as they supposed) about as sides at the ships and fortresses, which many as they lost, and taking a few prisonwere returned with great vigour and intre-ers; from thence they advanced to a batpidity; in the meantime our transports tery near the large fort, and possessed themselves of it, with considerable artillery and baggage. The action continued near an hour with great spirit and resolution on both sides; the party that ascended the times in the course of the day, within three hill and put the Britons to flight were chiefly marines, consisting of about one ment, and discharged many cannon, receiv- hundred; the Captain of marines and eight privates belonging to the Warren were excepting one unfortunate shot which over- killed. The troops are this day engaged set one of our boats, as they were landing in building a breastwork near the large were drowned. They pursued their object wounded in the course of this day by shot with great activity, and dispossessed the from the fort. A number of cattle are

Thursday, 29th.—Our troops continue to anchor within the mouth of the harbour, where they were considerably annoyed and some men wounded by shot from the fort. The prisoners inform us, that the fort and Tuesday, 27th.—A council of war was shipping contain about 1000 men, much artillery, and two years' provision. prospect of succeeding appears at present very dubious, the British ships are removed

Friday, 30th.—Our troops continue to

Saturday, 31st.—This day the Commodore, in consultation with the Captains of in conjunction with the land troops, to attack a breastwork on a point near the British shipping just below their fort, thinkwould be cut off between the fort and

Sunday, August 1st.—The attack was the boats had landed our men (who were made about 2 o'clock at night with great vigour and resolution, and notwithstanding the arduous opposition that was made with cannon and small-arms, they were obliged to desert the breastwork in a little time British party soon retired to their fort, and repair to the fort. We lost about after which some of our people set fire to a fifteen men, and had as many wounded dangerously, killing and wounding (as is fort, which were soon entirely consumed. supposed) about as many of the British party; after being in possession of the place it was found impracticable to maintain without much annoyance from the fort and ships, therefore after destroying a few hogsheads of rum and dismounting the three nine-pounders in it, we resigned it to them again.

Monday, 2d.—Major Sawyer and the Second Lieutenant of the Vengeance, with several others, died this day of their wounds.

Tuesday, 3d.—Many shells as well as shot are thrown from our fort into the British.

Thursday, 5th.—Many cannon are discharged this day from our fort into the British.

Friday, 6th.—A signal from the Commodore was displayed for all the Captains of the fleet to come on board to consult about attacking the British shipping and fort; the result was, that if the General would attack the fort with his army, which as we should be exposed to the fort, which consisted of about 1200 men, including we could not in the least annoy. The conofficers, a number of the largest ships dition of this vote was, that the General should go into the harbour and attack the should attack the British fort at the same shipping. The plan was sent to the General for approbation.

Saturday, 7th.—The above plan was not conceded to by the General, supposing that, as his army consisted chiefly of militia that were undisciplined, he should be defeated in the attempt, therefore the conclusion was to continue the siege till intelligence could be obtained from Boston respecting reinforcement. Several boats were discovered to be landing men from the British ships on the south part of the tery on the north side of the harbour, and 250 proceeded to the small battery near about 100 regular troops who were near their two-gun battery, tho' they were not near enough to inspire each other; the number of houses and large barns near the The procedure was judged to be conducted with great imprudence, as it would only have a tendency to distress the poor inhabitants; previous to the landing of the British boats the Commodore and the Captain of the Hampden had landed in the same place to view the land, who were obliged to flee into the woods, losing their

Sunday, 8th.—The Commander returned to his ship about ten o'clock in the morning, after much fatigue, travelling through the woods.

Monday, 9th.—A signal was displayed from the Commodore for all Captains to come on board, to consult what measures should be most advisable; after much debate and vote passed for the ships to go into the harbour, and attack the British ships, though it was judged by the Commodore and many others, that the attack would be attended with great risque and danger of having our ships much injured. time, which was sent to him for concurrence. A general uneasiness is discovered through the fleet at being detained so long, many desert from the ships every night.

Tuesday, 10th.—Consultation was attended upon this day on board the Com-modore; the result of which was, that an attack should be made the ensuing day, by the ships entering the harbour, and the land forces attacking the British fortress at the same time.

Wednesday, 11th.—The General not beharbour above our small breastwork, which ing ready for the proposed attack, thought were prevented by the landing of about proper to advance out upon a plain between 100 men from our ships near by, in the the British citadel and the harbour to mamean time a skirmish commenced between nœuvre his men, being about 750, leaving a party of our men near our three-gun bat- about 500 in the fort, a detached party of

they had paraded themselves in the batdamning their soldiers, and the soldiers their schemes. this night by the General in camp, the would leave the ships, and not risk an atresult of which was, That he judging his tack by a superior force which was daily army was not sufficient to oppose the Bri-expected. While matters are thus altertish on account of their inexpertness and cating, five or six British ships hove in want of courage, and not being in expect-sight, making a formidable appearance, ation of any reinforcement, thought it high- which has thrown our fleet and army into ly advisable, with the advice of his officers, great consternation, the ships are all heavto raise the siege. ted the ensuing morning (Thursday, 12th) ted the ensuing morning (Thursday, 12th) the transports, waiting to see what force to the Commodore, a general council with this consists of, and consulting how to esthe Captains of the navy were held in camp, passing a vote to continue the siege, not-cluding to attempt an escape by the west withstanding they thought themselves in side of Long Island, or run the ships ashore adequate to the attempt proposed; that is, and betake ourselves to the woods. of encountering the Britons in the field, so as to give our fleet an opportunity of attacking the ships. For unless the General could possess himself of the point near the THE HESSIANS IN THE REVOLUTION.* British ships, it would not be advisable for our ships to go in, as they would be exposed to the fort and artillery run down from the point, which would annoy us to a very great degree; as the harbour is so narrow that we cannot readily get out again,—therefore the plan for the ships going in has proved abortive.

Friday, 13th.—Very great uneasiness appears throughout the fleet at being thus detained at the risk of British reinforcements arriving, and the prospect of reduc-inischen Befreiungskriege, 1776 bis 1783. ing the place, either by sea or land, was so dubious. Three weeks have now elapsed since our siege began, and little or nothing is effected to our advantage. In the mean 397 and 271.

the S.E. point to excite the British troops time our opponents are fortifying, and have to attack them from their citadel; after compleated a very formidable citadel, where they are secure against us; which tery, about fifty-five regular troops sallied at our arrival was only a breastwork, confrom their citadel, and advancing with reso-taining five or six-pounders, which then, in lution and intrepidity, put the whole party all probability, we could have reduced very to flight, without discharging a gun; they easily, as also their shipping, as they have pursued them to the main body, and then since acknowledged; in the course of which discharging a volley, drove the whole se-time thirteen or fourteen councils of war ven hundred and fifty into the fort, in the have been held, resolving one day to atgreatest confusion imaginable—the officers tack, and the next day reversing their The Commodore complaining officers for cowardice, many losing their that the General is backward, and the Geimplements of war, &c. The Captains of neral that the fault is in the Commodore; our ships were invited to see this grand the people censuring both, and are determanœuvre of the militia troops. The de-mined, unless something is directly done, tached British party returned, exulting that is either to attack vigorously or raise with loud huzzas. A Council was convened the siege (preferring the former) that they This being transmit-ing up, the land forces embarking on board cape if the force should be superior, con-

THAT the Indo-European or Caucasian race is the leading family of mankind,

"-the heir of all the ages in the foremost files of time;"

and that its Germanic branches, more or less pure-whether unmixed Teuton, Anglo-Saxon, Franco-Celtic, or Composite American—furnish its file-leaders and the champions of every genuine and prolific thought of modern days—these are truths baseness of a hireling. This feeling, excuthe destiny of the whole human species. Numerous are the means which it has pleased Divine Providence to employ in their countrymen's share in resisting our disseminating over the earth this goodly seed of Teut: their love of travel and adventure, not loath to take the kindred Eelking-already favorably known to us Norman graft of piracy, so palpable in our as author of "The Life and Actions of British brethren; their assimilative tend- General von Riedesel," commander of the encies, whereby they make themselves Brunswickers in Burgoyne's expeditioneverywhere at home, even as they once Germanized the Eternal City while Romanizing themselves; their habits of industry, wherewith, as their own poet says, they "Gather on every plain honey they know not for whom;"

* Die Deutschen Huelfstruppen in Nordamerika-Von Max von Eelking.

The German Auxiliary Troops in the North American War of Independence, 1776 to 1783. By Max von Eelking. Hanover, 1868. Two vols. 8vo., pp.

their loyalty to their chiefs, which leads them to make their prince's foreign quarrel their own domestic grief, and his shrewd policy their plain interest.

The hated Hessian of our Revolutionary war came hither to fight against our fathers under this last influence. He had been brought up by the good old rule and simple plan to "fear God and honor the king," for Napoleon Bonaparte, the potent "Robespierre à cheval," had not yet leavened with new ideas the European lump. The and is, therefore, accessible only in German. type and representative hero of these oldfashioned docile men might well be seen in their commander-in-chief, Lieutenant-General Baron von Knyphausen, sitting, as he and the merit of its execution, eventually is depicted in the attractive production take rank, when Anglicized, as a standard before us, on a rock in front of Fort Washington, New York Island, holding his of the war. watch in his hand till the one half-hour which he had granted the besieged Colonel city of New York and its vicinity, during Magaw for capitulation should expire, and that fateful period, enlivens this new conlooking down with contemptuous abhorrence on the captured rebel standards as A few of these remarks we purpose to they were successively laid at his feet. translate, by way of whetting the appetite The "blinde Hess," even now not famed of the antiquarian reader, till some painsfor insight, as this his standing title shows, taking linguist serve him up a full repast in must then have thought it the height of the guise of a complete version. After an sentimental absurdity that his fidelity to ocean-passage, on which the Hessians were the sovereign, who, in profound king-craft, so crowded, herring-like, between decks, had, by solemn treaty, sold him to Great that the oldest man was placed at their Britain, should be imputed to him as the right wing to give a word of command which we hold to be as evangelical as that sable in the anxious patriots of those preg-Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity, cor- nant days, has long subsided and given rectly understood, are the birthright and place to an enlightened curiosity to learn from trustworthy German authorities the details, from their own point of view, of great appeal to arms.

Now appears the worthy Captain von with his two excellent volumes, which go very far toward satisfying our desire. we can be allowed to pun, we will say that he bears an appropriate family-name, for the Eel is well known to be-forgive us, Max!—a scavenger of the waters, or, more delicately speaking, a gleaner of neglected matter, and Max is a king among such literary eels. He gives a list of no fewer than thirty-eight manuscripts-principally diaries kept by officers during the war-which have been made use of by him as sources This being the fact, the of information. work has that inimitable freshness and lifelike movement which can never pertain to a stately history compiled from second-hand materials. The Life of Riedesel has, we believe, been overlooked by translators. That such should be long the case with the book which we are considering, we think quite impossible. It must, from its subject and essential complement of all narratives long-desired aid, with salvos of cannon and musketry. The officers, in particular, vied The English camp was on a rocky height advantageously situated with a splendid view of the harbor of New York, and as over the adjacent American camp on Long Island. The wonderful scenery, and the charm of novelty, after the long, monotonous, and toilsome voyage, cheered up officers and men."

Many an interesting observation on the tribution to American historic literature.

August, 1776, on Staten Island.

"Immediately on their arrival, the German officers were obliged to have everything of silver removed from their uniforms, as the British had already done. The object was to make them less easily recognizable by the dreaded riflemen, who were especially fond of aiming at officers." P.

27, vol. i.

We have next a sketch of the condition of affairs in America at that moment, including curious pen-and-ink portraits of the two brothers, Lord Richard and Sir Wm. Howe. Has a faithfully minute biography of the former, in succeeding years one of England's greatest naval heroes, ever been We think not. He it was, who, written? as we recall to mind from our anecdotal good-natured, bon-vivant general, who, fortunately for the American cause, filled a position originally destined for that BenThe camp was pitched in two lines, but in when they had all lain till one side was gal tiger, Lord Clive, would, if well related "ripe," whereat all turned over on the by some judicious countryman of theirs, other side, the troops disembarked, in hardly fail to afford us important facts as well as amusing gossip. We are disposed "On landing, the Hessians were most to class with Carlyle's "books which are iovously welcomed by the English, as a no books," the pompous and decorous "Life of Richard Earl Howe, K.G., Admiral of the Fleet, and General of Marines: one with another to meet the Germans in by Sir John Barrow, Bart, F.R.S.," wherea friendly manner, and invited them into in we read that the mother of the two their tents. General von Heister was asked Howes was "Mary Sophia Charlotte, to dinner by the British commander-in-chief. daughter of Baron Kielmansegge, Master of the Horse to George I., when Elector of Hanover, by Sophia Charlotte, daughter of Count Platen, of the Empire;" whereas over a part of the interior country, as well it is no secret that she was the natural child of the Hanoverian "Defender of the Faith," Richard and William being thus, with a bar sinister, cousins-german to King George the Third's Father, Frederick, Prince of Wales.

> The battle of Long Island was now impending, and some of the newly arrived Hessians relieved a portion of the English troops hitherto posted on Staten Island, but destined to take part in that action. This movement gives occasion for a description of Staten Island and its inhabitants and neighbors at that date:

"Von Stirn's brigade received the order to move forward upon the Jersey Sound, an arm of the sea which separates the island from the mainland, and there to relieve the 35th English regiment and a part of the 5th. In the morning of the 19th of August the brigade began its march, their tents and baggage being packed in The singular vehicles, small, wagons. odds and ends, bore among the sailors the painted red, and drawn by two little nickname "Black Dick," from his swarthy horses driven by a negro, appeared to the and serious countenance, and in whose good Hessians new and strange enough. honor, doubtless, after his great victory When the brigade arrived at its destined over the French fleet off Ushant, June 1, place, the English officers had the politeness 1794, was drunk the queer and very apt to invite the Germans to dinner. The relief "First and Second of David's took place at nightfall. The advanced posts Third!" which the sagacious reader may were stationed, which stood very near to interpret for himself. A veracious life and opposite those of the enemy on the of the admiral, comprising, of course, pro-other side of the narrow sound. The entire per notice of his brother, the popular, brigade was distributed along the shore in a few days had to be moved some distance be at war in an enemy's country. backwards, as the Americans fired across the first fear and excitement of the populafrom the other side with their long rifles, tion had passed away, and they perceived The out-posts being more and more molest-that, after all, they had no robbers or caned in this way, Grenke, lieutenant of artil- nibals to deal with, the fugitives gradually lery, was directed to pitch a few cannonballs into Amboy, after which the Americans behaved more quietly."

'The width of the sound might be a little over three hundred paces. Americans on the other shore, who here saw for the first time the dreaded German strangers, collected themselves in crowds on the bank, more to satisfy their curiosity than to await a demonstration from this side. A Hessian officer says in his journal: 'They stretched their necks mighty long. Some among them were in uniform, but the most in the dress of a promiscuous

"The landing of the foreign re-enforcements had spread no slight terror among the Americans, Especially did they fear the Germans, whom they imagined to be half devils. A large part of the inhabitants had therefore fled with the greatest haste into the principal towns, particularly to New York, leaving their property, and even, to some extent, money and valuables. This dread was further increased when the troops took possession by force of the quarters assigned them. and refused at first by the obstinate inhabitants."

"The soldiers had been most urgently the greatest moderation towards the people, even those of hostile sentiments; for the hope of an amicable arrangement of differences was still cherished, and it was desired to spare 'his Majesty's subjects' as much fort to rebel against a government under as possible, and avoid everything that which they were apparently so well off.

might irritate them still more.'

man generals as well as the British. But of the German States! The country-noblethis moderation was, in many instances, man in Germany lived hardly so much at not recognized; the billeted soldiers were his ease in his castle as the most ordinary met in the rudest manner, nay, there was agriculturist did here upon his farm." Pp. even a disposition to kick them at once out 30-32, vol. i. of doors, which naturally gave occasion to But military marauding is a genuine all sorts of collisions and excesses, since German practice, as the verb "to maraud?" officers and men considered themselves to is a genuine German word, derived from

When returned, and were not a little surprised, not only to find their dwellings just as they had left them, but also their furniture, utensils—aye, even money and valuables, for The the Germans, accustomed to discipline as they were, demanded no more than was due to them. The mutual relations now assumed a more agreeable aspect, and not unfrequently some rank liberal treated his billeted inmate better than a guest, and carefully tended the sick or wounded soldiers."

"The portions of country thus taken possession of, situated in a mild climate, had, with their rich and changeful natural beauties, joined to their great fertility, the appearance of a paradise. The finest fruits, the most fragrant and beautiful flowers, grew here almost wild. Everywhere neat and cheerful country-houses and villages met the eye, and newly-founded towns which were manifestly growing. Almost universally, prosperity, even luxury, prevailed among the inhabitants, who with slight toil gained an easy and abundant return. Almost every little farmer had his cabriolet and his black servants. Although Staten Island and Long Island had, since the beginning of the war, been occupied, now by our side, now by the commanded by their superiors to exercise American, and had, therefore, been disputed points, yet this had left scarcely a trace behind. The newly arrived Germans wondered greatly how it could occur to people thus living in superfluity and com-And how trifling were the imposts and "Such was the serious wish of the Ger-taxes in this country compared with those itself in the subsequent stage of the contest, when reconciliation had become hopeless, and it was no longer thought worth while to treat the insurgents with forbearance. More particularly was this absence of restraint observed while Knyphausen commanded the garrison of New York during Sir Henry Clinton's successful expedition to the South. It was the celebrated winter of 1779-80, concerning whose severity we gain from Eelking some new facts:

But military marauding is a genuine

"The ice on the East River was eighteen feet thick, a thing without precedent. The soldiers had to chop up old ships, and even fell the trees in the beautiful walks and gardens, as the only means of procuring necessary fuel. A small board cost from six to eight pence." P. 83, vol. ii.

For the privations and anxieties of this season, during which the city was accessible to the enemy on every side, the ice being, as is well known, strong enough to bear the transportation of heavy artillery from New York to Staten Island, Knyphausen, early in the ensuing spring, indemnified his men by a plundering excursion to Hackensack. The detachment consisted of English, Hessians, and Bayreuthers. Among the latter was a certain musketeer, Doehla, who has left on record the following naïve account of his winnings:

"We gained considerable booty, as well in money, silver watches, silver plates and spoons, as also in furniture, good clothes, fine English linen, silk stockings, gloves, and cravats, with other costly silk stuff, satin, and dry goods. My plunder, which I safely brought back with me, amounted to two silver watches, three silver buckle it lay the former Government House and a rims, a pair of woman's woolen stockings, a pair of man's mixed summer stockings, two shirts and four chemises of fine English linen, two fine table-cloths, one silver tablespoon, and one silver teaspoon, five Spanish been built within them. Another fortificadollars and six York shillings in money, tion of stone was situated beneath the The rest, namely, eleven ells of fine linen, former, on the water-side, extending along the old Counts of Merode, noted freeboot-six silver plates and a silver goblet, all tied ers in the Thirty Years' War, whose castle together in a bundle, I had to throw away we have seen between Aix-la-Chapelle and leave to the pursuing army, on account Cologne. The national trait developed of the long and rapid march." P. 86,

> The city of New York, as it existed in those days, seems to have struck the strangers with admiration. Even at an advanced period of the war, when much injury and mischief must have been already done, troops are represented as marching with music through its "beautiful streets" to occupy their camp near Corlaer's Hook. (p. 48, vol. ii.) In the night between Sept. 20 and 21, 1776, one-third of the town had been reduced to ashes by a conflagration which American writers agree in deeming accidental, but which our author views as undoubtedly the act of a fanatic mob. He expresses his surprise, too, that no attempt has ever been made to give it the color of a great national sacrifice, which the burning of Moscow is wrongly supposed to have been. As early as the winter of 1776-7, the British army being encamped about one mile north of the city, in two masses, the left wing on the Hudson and the right on the East River, the sidewalks had begun to lose that peculiar ornament for which the New York of former days was so distinguished.

> "Owing to the impending want of fuel, many of the beautiful trees had been cut down, which stood along the houses, on both sides of the streets, and were wont to yield a cooling shade amid the heat of the sun." P. 103, vol. i.

> From his authorities Eelking proceeds to describe, as follows, the situation of things in New York at that time:

> "On the harbor stood Fort St. George, a quadrangular work, with four bastions and mounted with twenty guns. Not far from chapel, in ruins since 1741, both buildings having been demolished in the Negro Insurrection of that epoch. Wooden barracks for the reception of the garrison had now and over two dozen silk handkerchiefs, with the point of the island, and mounting ninety cannon. It was particularly intended for are no more: in a word, the exquisite the defence of the mouth of the Hudson loveliness of this island has been converted Along the East River stretched the fine into fearful ruin. It pains a well-disposed streets, Queen and Water streets, in which man to see destroyed in one day what it wealth and luxury had chiefly gathered, for will take generations to restore." Pp. 166here lived the foremost men of the mercan- 7, vol. ii. tile class in houses like palaces."

the many prisoners."

"As everywhere, so in New York, par- of blunders which no one, perhaps, but a ties were at bitter variance. In spite of New Yorker is capable of thoroughly recthe stagnation of business, and although tifying. Take, for instance, the passages many families, the loyal as well as the last quoted. Without dwelling on Kelmany families, the loyal as well as the last quoted. Without dwelling on Eelliberal, had fled when the change occurred, king's comparatively venial ignorance that yet great prosperity manifestly existed. At MacGowan's Pass is on New York Island, the helm of municipal affairs now stood at the northern extremity of the Central royalists only, consisting of one mayor, Park, we think he should have known that seven aldermen, and as many members the Negro Plot of 1741 was, like the Popish from the people. The city was divided Plot in England in 1678, a panic rather into seven wards. Most of the male citizens than a reality. The only burning conwere impressed as militia, and provided nected with it was that of the thirteen with arms for the defence of the town, wretched blacks who were in this manner Willingly would the Germans have taken savagely put to death where Pearl (then up their winter-quarters in this great, rich, and every way agreeable place, but Howe ham.* The "Province House," so called, assigned to a portion of them another station." Pp. 103-104, vol. i.

Things were another look in the season of 1782-3, just before the cessation of hostilities:

"On York, Staten, and Long Islands, hard work on the fortifications was kept steadily up during the winter, for another attack was expected here from the Americans and French. When the weather ties and mistakes in spelling, though laughwas too cold for digging, fascines and other able and too frequent: Wallaboud for things were got ready. Each German regiment gave daily 150, or even 200 men to the labor."

of Body-Guards and Prince Carl's regiment marched to MacGowan's Pass, where the newly-built barracks for these troops had New turned up. On every hill is a redoubt. given to the world: No other trees than fruit trees are to be seen upon it, and even these are no longer burned at the time, and this fire as well as others laid spared. The beautiful groves and walks to the Negroes. -ED. H. M.

We have already expressed our desire "Many churches served as prisons for that this work may be translated. We also trust that it may be well edited. It is full Queen) street intersects the present Chatthe building referred to by our author as in ruins, was accidentally consumed at midnight, Dec. 17, 1773. The family of Governor Tryon, who occupied it as his official residence, escaped with difficulty, his daughter leaping from the second story window, and her maid, who was afraid to follow her, losing her life. No great critical stress is to be laid on his mere peculiari-Wallabout; Heights of Guiana for Heights of Gowanus; Woodberrey; Vallay-Forge; New-Wark; Terrytown; Verglants-Point "On the 8th of January, the regiment for Verplanck's Point; and many others. Who, we should like to know, was the "treacherous Oberst John," or Colonel John, of whom we find the following tale, just been finished. Here, too, intrenching quite new to us, in Eelking's account of the went on without cessation. The greatest battle of Long Island? Probably a Jones, activity, however, was shown in and around whose honesty would, it seems, have been York. 'This little island'—says improved if Timothy Titcomb's letters to Dinklage's diary—'is being completely that numerous family had been in his days grenadier took him prisoner, and magnani- old. mously granted him his life, telling him to go to the battalion in the rear, for the grenadier was a flanker. The colonel wanted cunningly to murder his captor from behind, and stealthily drew a pistol, but only wounded the arm of the grenadier, whereat the latter regaled him with three or four bayonet thrusts." Pp. 40-1, vol. i.

* But the church and buildings in the fort were

But this writer has been betrayed into more serious inaccuracies. Not content with one great fire at New York in the autumn of 1776, the same conflagration which we have already mentioned, he treats us to another, Nov. 20, in which, as he asserts, Trinity church was destroyed. This is altogether imaginary and surprisingly confused. Trinity church was burned, with ordinary type could not be read. much of the lower part of the city, on the phenomena are described with some degree night of Sept. 20-21; and the patriots on the other side of the Hudson, at Paulus Hook, now Jersey City, are said to have of obscurity occurred at Quebec about raised a loud hurra as its steeple sank into four in the afternoon, and during its confollowing strange version of the occur-

"A portion of the exasperated populace had assembled on the hill of St. Paul's church, and contemplated with canniballike mirth and rough jests the destructive lightning, thunder, and rain, accompanied progress of the mighty flames. A wild as on the 9th. The morning of October shout of joy accompanied the fall of the 16th was perfectly calm, and there was tower of that fine old English house of thick fog. Towards nine o'clock a light God." P. 56, vol. i.

"Paulskirche" and "Paulus Hook" are here very curiously confounded. Our old St. Paul's still stands as it stood before the then seen rapidly advancing from the Revolution; and its spire, added, we think, north-east, and in half an hour print could since that period, but in the graceful English taste of Wren, Gibbs, and their school, ten minutes. At twelve, a second period really shames the two hideous abortions in of obscurity took place; then a third, and white stone and brown, which deform the a fourth, and fifth, at intervals: at halfupper part of the Fifth avenue.

This is not the only error of fact we have detected in the work. But we have done with censure. The book is a good book, valuable as well as entertaining, and, when carefully translated, revised, and annocan public to contain exact as well as ani- the Library and Historical Society of Quebec.

"Colonel John, of the rebels, is dead. A mated pictures of the men and things of

THE DARK DAYS AND EARTHQUAKES IN CANADA.

In the year 1785, several so called "dark days" occurred in Canada, and excited much apprehension among the ignorant and speculation among the learned. Lower Canada only was peopled by civilized man at that time, so that we have no account of the "dark days" in Upper Canada.

It is recorded in the Quebec Gazette of October 20th, 1785, that on Sunday, October 16th, 1785, it was so dark soon after ten in the morning that printing from of minuteness by Chief Justice Sewell.

"On October 9th, 1785, a short period the flames. Our friend Eelking gives the tinuance the sky in the north-east quarter of the heavens exhibited a luminous appearance upon the line of the horizon of a yellow tinge. On the 15th there was a repetition of the same phenomena at a little earlier hour, with violent gusts of wind, air from the north-east sprang up, which increased rapidly. The fog by ten o'clock was entirely dissipated; black clouds were not be read. The darkness lasted for about past four it was dark as midnight.'

> Four distinct accounts of similar phenomena are recorded by Chief Justice Sewell* as occurring on July 3rd, 1814. One from the pen of an officer of the Royal Engi- of the St. Lawrence. The third account neers, supposed to be Captain Payne, taken states that on July 2nd, when off Cape from Tulloch's Philosophical Magazine, Chat, for three days previously some ashes describes the appearances at the Bay of and smoke had been observed, but on the Seven Islands, above Anticosti, on July second no symptoms of burnt wood were 2nd and 3rd. A second describes what seen; but at 2.30 P.M. of that day the sun occurred on the 2nd at Cape Chat, from was obscured, and a total darkness set in, observations made by some officers who which continued until about sunset. were on board the transport "Sir William Heathcott," which lay the whole of the were as follows: "July, 1814—Sunday day at anchor in the river St. Lawrence at A most extraordinary day. In the mornthat point. The third contains some addi-ing dark thick weather, and fog of a deep tional observations respecting the appear-yellow color, which increased in density ances on July 2nd, made on that same day and color until four o'clock P.M., at which in another ship, which also lay off Cape hour the cabin was entirely dark, and we Chat. And the last relates to the pheno-dined by candle light; the binnacle also mena which were observed by the Chief was lighted shortly after." Justice himself upon the banks of Newfoundland.

<sup>* &</sup>quot;A Few Notes on the Dark Days of Canada." tated, will be acknowledged by the Ameri- By the Honorable Chief Justice Sewell, President of

of Seven Islands, the clouds appeared to occurred, show that the northerly wind be coming rapidly from the northward; which blew on July 2nd carried clouds of the atmosphere was thick and hazy, and at ashes, sand, smoke, and vapor across the night the darkness excessive. P.M. a sort of dust or ashes commenced of Seven Islands, to Cape Chat, and then falling, and continued during the night; by the westerly wind which set in on the towards the morning the whole atmosphere night of July 2nd across the Gulf of St. appeared red and fiery to a wonderful Lawrence and the island of Newfoundland degree, and the moon, then at the full, not to the great banks, and on July 3rd envevisible; the appearance through the cabin loped the vessel in which the Chief Justice windows and crystal lights singular in the was sailing in the same obscurity in which extreme, as if surrounded by a mass of the other ships off the Canada coast were fire; the sea sparkling much, and in a man-shrouded on the preceding day. ner not usual in these latitudes. On the ing.

quantity which had fallen, "appeared as if those of burnt wood."

collected on deck appeared to be those of exceeding certainly 300 miles in length, than the ashes of a tobacco pipe."

The wind blew gently from the north shore forest trees are few in number, stunted

The Chief Justice's own observations

The relative positions of the different observers at the time when the phenomena On July 3rd, twenty miles from the Bay described in the preceding paragraphs About 9 river St. Lawrence, in a line from the Bay

Chief Justice Sewell attributes these following day the sea was found to be phenomena to volcanic action rather than covered with ashes, the wind having died to an extensive conflagration. He says: away to a dead calm early in the morn- "As to the conflagration of a forest, the facts of which we are in possession do not A bucket of water taken up appeared as appear to warrant a belief that such can be black as writing ink; the ashes, from the the cause. It seems impossible to suppose that the conflagration of a forest could have produced a mass of smoke so dense On July 4th the ashes were still observed and so extensive as to overspread, as it did to be falling in small quantity. "The ashes in October, 1785, the surface of a territory burnt wood, but darker and more heavy and probably 200 miles in breadth, and producing at its utmost longitudinal extre-The narrative of the officers who were mity, and at mid-day, the obscurity of the on board the transport "Sir William darkest night. And as the whole of the Heathcott" states that on July 2nd, 1814, cause of this obscurity proceeded appathere was a heavy fall of ashes and sand. rently from the Labrador country, where improbable."

The Chief Justice inclines to the view volcano in the Labrador Peninsula, and he draws attention to the coincidence in the narratives of the different observers quoted, and those which are mentioned by Charlevoix in his description of the earthquake in 1663: "A Tadoussac," says Charheures"—tom, i. p. 367; also on page 336, embrasement universel."

prevail.

In his journal of a voyage in the country effect was noticed on Bersamites River, and themselves in darkness. the Indians dare not venture on them in their canoes.

He also relates that the earthquake had such a powerful effect upon an Indian conjurer named Ouiskoupi, that he renounced his craft and gave up his medicines to the missionary, who burnt them.*

Lieutenant Ingall, who explored the country between the St. Maurice and the Saguenay in 1828, states that the opinion very generally prevails, borne out by tradition, that an active volcano is somewhere in existence among the mountains southeast of the Saguenay, but, he adds, it wants the confirmation of ocular proof, for

In October 1785 the obscurity extended of the Papinachois, a Montagnais tribe on so as to comprehend on one side Frede-Lake Manicouagan, in 1664, Henry Nouvel, rickton, New Brunswick, and on the other a Jesuit missionary, states that on May 11 Montreal. A ship, the Adamant, was on he arrived at a river which the Indians the morning of Oct. 16th off the end of the called Kouakueou, and saw the effect of island of Anticosti. There it was then the earthquake on the rivers, the water clear weather; but towards the west the which flowed in them being quite yellow, ship's company saw a heavy black cloud, and preserving this color until they min- and by twelve on the same day had sailed gled with the St. Lawrence. The same into it, and very shortly afterwards found

> In 1828 Captain F. H. Baddely, R. E., was engaged by the Canadian government in exploring the Saguenay country, and in his Report, which was published at the time, he states that Malbay or Murray Bay, on the St. Lawrence, 90 miles below Quebec, has long been remarkable for the frequency of earthquakes.

> Shocks are most frequent in January or February; they occur about nine or ten times a year. "It is not," says Captain Baddely, "perhaps generally known that in size, and spread in isolated patches over not one of the Indians who traverse those a general surface of rock, it is the more regions in search of game has ever seen the slightest appearance of fire issuing from the earth, nor did Lieutenant Ingall hear of that the phenomena of the "Dark Days of any scorize or vitrified rock having been Canada" are to be attributed to an active discovered in the country.* Without doubt the coast between Cape Tourmente and Malbay is frequently troubled with shocks of earthquakes, but whether these shocks are occasioned by the working of some neighboring volcano is a matter of mere speculation. Nor does the appearlevoix, "Il pleut de la cendre pendant six ance of the land bear evidence of there having ever existed a volcano to the south he adds, "Une poussière qui s'éleva fut of the River Saguenay, as from the wellprise pour une fumée et fit craindre un known fertility of decomposed lava we should find a very different soil from that Tadoussac was situated at the mouth of hitherto discovered. If a volcano is at the the Saguenay River. The Chief Justice present period in a state of active operaalso states that among the Indian tribes on tion, I should be much more inclined to the north shore of the St. Lawrence a suppose it seated among the unexplored traditional belief of the existence of a vol-|mountains of Labrador, to the north-east cano in the Labrador country is said to of the Saguenay or the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

* Remarks on the Country lying between the Rivers St. Maurice and Saguenay, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence. By Lieutenant Ingall, 15th Regiment. Transactions of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Quebec, 1830. Vol. II.

* Relation des Jesuites.

there exists highly respectable evidence of spectacle was produced. a volcanic eruption having happened some sphere was in flames and agitated, one's face where in the rear of St. Paul's Bay, not far suffered from the heat, the weather was from Murray Bay. No one, we think, will very calm, the eruption continued the feel disposed to doubt the fact after perusing whole night with flames. the following account of it, with which, through the politeness of Messrs. Gagnon when, by the passage between the mounand Chaperon, we have been furnished. It tains, you see a cloud, or smoke, quiet or is the former gentleman who writes:

"In the place of a journal, which happens to be lost, receive the following:-

" Twesday, December 6, 1791.—At St. Paul's Bay, and at other neighbouring places, at about a quarter after seven, a severe earthquake was felt; the whole night was disturbed by small ones repeated at intervals, and by a sudden shaking running towards the east. The shocks were felt for forty-one days, from two (shocks) to five a visited Canada since its discovery by Euroshocks were fully one-third weaker than is highly probable that this enumeration those of the 3rd; the others were only falls far short of the actual occurrences of small ones, or rumbling noises, the weather this phenomenon. into a flame. The temperature at a quarter tively that it is an active volcano. The after seven in the evening was 11° above name is suggestive, although it is probable zero by the thermometer of resumming the feature of the feature of the heat had risen to 21° (plus 79½ of Fahrenheit). Two mountains near my country would have been known to them.

Lake Manicouagan was visited by a series of the feature of the country would have been known to them. valley between them, so that you may see Jesuit missionary in 1664, but although he beyond them. It is by this valley or pas- mentions the earthquakes, he does not mensage that I saw a continual eruption, mixed tion the fire mountain. with smoke and flame, which appeared very plain on the horizon, at other times peninsula of Labrador no other combustistruggling among themselves, as if too ble material besides the stunted trees, there oppressed in their issue. I have remarked would be good ground for attributing the several times that this eruption is always followed by shocks of earthquake the same agency than that of burning vegetable matday, and when it fails a dark and yellowish ter; but when we reflect that the country day follows. When the earthquake arises is almost everywhere covered with a thick you can predict that it is going to be so coat of lichens and mosses where these much the nearer as this agitated smoke have not been burnt, and that they are even struggles to get out. Some persons to better adapted, when dry, to burn with whom I had shown these preparations of extraordinary rapidity, and afford during the earthquake, warned me in their turn that in a moment the earth would shake. And the effect confirms it. Finally, on this 1860. By J. W. Dawson, LL.D., F.G.S. night of the 26th, 27th, a most beautiful

The whole atmo-The certain approach of the earthquake is known, agitated, and on the left and right the horizon is perfectly clear."

"A fall of ashes covering the snow in 1791 was also within the recollection of many of the inhabitants of St. Paul's Bay.

The list of earthquakes on the next page which have occurred in Canada is from the Catalogue prepared by Mr. Mallet for the British Association.*

The number of earthquakes which have day. On Monday, December 5th, the peans has been at least twenty-nine, but it Respecting the fire being always gloomy. Before the night of mountain of the Nasquapees north of Lake the 26th, 27th, I had not yet remarked any | Manicouagan, about 200 miles from the eruption or thick smoke, at times curling coast, too little is known to assert posizero by the thermometer of Reaumur (plus that, from the long intercourse between

Assuming that there existed in the great "Dark Days of Canada" to some other than forest trees, it will be apparent that in 1861 is still covered with this charcoal the precise element for producing the phe- and ashes, where sand forms the subnomena of smoke and ashes existed in the stratum: from the rocks they have been Labrador Peninsula to a remarkable degree. Dry caribou moss burns with wonderful flats they form still a black cake. The rapidity, as we found to our cost; it also occurrence of sulphur in the ashes, as emits dense volumes of smoke, and leaves described by the writer in the Quebec behind a great quantity of ash and char- Gazette of October 27th, 1785, is problecoal. There is no reason to suppose that matical. the table-land of the Labrador Peninsula After having witnessed the combustion was covered with forests centuries ago, for of caribou moss on a large scale, and the the missionary before mentioned, Henri appearance of the burnt country on the Nouvel, states that an Oumamiois chief borders of the great table-land of Labrador, told him that in the country north of Lake I am inclined to the opinion that the "Dark Manicouagan the trees were very small, Days of Canada" were the result of a vast and there was no birch bark to make conflagration in the interior of the Labra-

* Quoted in Notes on the Earthquake of October, 1 Notes on the Earthquake of October, 1860.

their combustion a greater cloud of smoke | near the table-land through which I passed washed away by rains, but on the sandy canoes. The whole of the burnt country dor Peninsula, and that the materials which

Year,	Month.						Remarks.
1663	February 5 .				•		Very violent.
1665	" 24				_		Tadoussac and Murray Bay, violent.
u	October 15			-			Violent.
1672	March and Apri	]*	•	•
1732
1744				_			Quebec.
1755				-			Unusual rise and fall of the water of Lake Ontario.
1791	December			-
1796	February .			-	i
1816				-		-	A severe shock at Montreal.
"	" 16		:	-	•	•	A second shock, less violent.
1818	October 11						Felt near Quebec.
1819	August 15	-	•	•	•		At St. Andrews.
u	November 10	-	•		•		At Montreal, slight, followed by an awful storm with rain-
		•	•	•	•	•	impregnated with matter like soot.
1821	February	_		_			At Quebec, a slight shock.
1823	May 30		·	•	-	·	On shore of Lake Erie.
1828		•	·	•	•	•	Q2 00010 01 20120 20101
1831	July 14		•	•	•	•	At Murray Bay, Beauport, &c. Walls and chimneys thrown
	· -,	•	•	•	•	•	down at the former place.
1833	March and April		_	_	_		Severe shocks at Murray Bay.
1840	September 10		·	•	·	•	At Hamilton.
1841			•	•	•	•	Said to have been felt at Quebec.
1842		9	:	•	•	•	Montreal, Three Rivers, &c.
1844	66 4			•	•	•	Montreal.
1847	46 46		•	•	•	•	######################################
1856	May 1 .						At Ottawa and its vicinity.
1857		•	•	•	•	•	In the Upper Province.
1858	January 15		•	•	•	•	At Niagara.
"	May 10	•	•	•	•	:	At Richmond, slight.
1859			•	•	•	•	At Metis (Lower St. Lawrence).
1860	October 17	•	•	•	•	•	Very violent at the River Ouelle, and other places in the
2000		•	•	•	•	•	Lower St. Lawrence; chimneys were thrown down, and
	•						walls damaged.
1861	July 12			_			Violent at Ottawa, throwing down chimneys.
1001			:	٠	٠	٠.,	Violent at Owawa, shrowing down chimneys.

* This earthquake was observed by Père François de Crepieul, in the country north of Tadoussac, and is recorded by him in a letter dated June 2, 1672. The Père says that it was the continuation of the terrible earthquake of 1662, "which has not since ceased in this quarter of the north, although it is felt but little and at intervals."—Relation de la Nouvelle France en l'Année 1672.

lichens and mosses which grow in such rich time, and the testimony of Monsieur Gagand extraordinary luxuriance and beauty in non, is quite sufficient to turn attention to that desolate country. The astonishing the probability of such an occurrence speed with which fire runs through the having taken place in recent times and the moss has been described by several writers, possibility of its renewal. and there is no valid reason why a fire should not stretch from Hudson's Bay to the Gulf of St. Lawrence in a few days, as far as the combustible nature of the fuel is concerned; but its progress is arrested by the presence of lakes, many and broad, and the swamps by which many of them are terminated. A broad sheet of flame stretching for many miles across is at once divided by a lake, and as these lakes often occur one after another for many miles, the Gentlemen, fires are broken and become local in their effects, except in certain cases when the of the city with which you have been direction of the wind changes in such a manner as to distribute them more wildly. with the sensibility and gratitude which A fire in the Labrador Peninsula, where such distinguished honors have a claim to. the trees are few and far between, very much resembles a fire in the prairies; but owing to the extraordinary dryness of the language than I am master of to convey caribou moss it spreads with much greater rapidity. It would be impossible to escape terms. from an approaching sheet of flame in Labrador by speed. The only plan is to scrape the moss from a few square yards, which is done with the utmost ease, as it not possess the confidence and esteem of my adheres to the rock or soil very loosely, and then to lie down upon the bare earth. met, the approbation, and obtained the The smoke arising from a fire made by this affectionate regard of the State of New material is very penetrating. The air is York (where difficulties were numerous filled with fine dust arising from the ashes; and on sandy plains, where the lichens and the effect of divine wisdom, which had dismosses are deep, and other varieties besides posed the minds of the people, harassed charcoal that remains behind covers the barrassments of my situation, whilst with Couriers des Bois, the fur traders, or the citizens than to any merit of mine. officers of the Hudson's Bay Company, The reflection of these things now, after would have recorded the phenomena or the many hours of anxious solicitude which earthquakes which have visited the region plexities.

assisted most in feeding the fires were the of the Lower St. Lawrence from time to

LETTER OF GENERAL WASHINGTON, ACCEPTING THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

To the Honble. the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York.

I received your address, and the freedom pleased to present me in a golden Box, The flattering expression of both stamps value on the acts; and calls for stronger my sense of the obligation in adequate

To have had the good fortune, amidst the vicissitudes of the long and arduous contest, " never to have known a moment when I did country"—and that my conduct should have and complicated), may be ascribed more to the caribou lichens exist in abundance, the on all sides, to make advances for the emsoil with a uniform mantle of black. If a fortitude and patience they sustained the volcanic eruption had taken place since the loss of their capital, and a valuable part of time when Canada was discovered, it is their territory—and to the liberal sentiprobable that the early missionaries, the ments and great exertion of her virtuous

The reflection of these things now, after learnt the fact from Indians. Still it must all of us have had, is as pleasing as our be acknowledged that the term "fire embarrassments at the moment we encounmountains," common among the Nasquatered them were distressing, and must pee Indians, taken in connection with the console us for past sufferings and per-

I pray that Heaven may bestow its may soon be without a trace. That a well west from the farm of James Patten. regulated and beneficial commerce may enrich your citizens-and that your State of the farm of the late John R. Caldwell. (at present the seat of empire) may set After the army was disbanded, a num-such examples of wisdom and liberality as ber of families took possession of the ing wish and the primary object of all my remain. The material of their construction desires.

G. Washington.

Hotes and Queries.

NOTES.

THE TEMPLE, THE HASBROUCK HOUSE, ETC.—The building called the "Temple," the low, long stone house which is still in which Washington read to his officers standing near "the square." Mrs. Washthe address in answer to the "Newburgh ington remained at the Hasbrouck House Letter" (see Historical Magazine, vol. vii more than a year, it is said. I was so inpage 351), was built upon the ridge east of the Cranberry Meadow, south of Snake Hill, a short distance back of Newburgh. York acquired its present title to the property. When Mrs. Washington left the The land on which it stood was owned by perty. When Mrs. Washington left the Jabez Atwood, and now by the heirs of house, at the close of the war, she presented David Moore. palisades split from oak logs, and was brought from Mount Vernon. It is very about thirty-five feet square, one story plain and simple, has quite a high back and high, and had a high, square roof. The low seat, and was painted green. It has floor was close to the ground. It remained passed to the fourth generation, and is now in good condition for several years after owned by Mrs. William R. Eager, of Great the close of the war, and was occupied as Bend. a dwelling by a poor family. There are no traces of the building left, and have not his officers on the green in front of this old been for more than fifty years. At the house at the close of the war. The buildtime it was built the army lay in three ing was thoroughly repaired at the expense divisions (though the first and third might of the State when it purchased it. The properly be called but one) in the imme-interior is substantially as it was at the diate vicinity as follows:

of what is now called "the square," and on and deposited in the rooms. Some of the the land owned by the father of Isaac most valuable of them were presented by Hamilton, Esq., of Albany.

The Second Division (which was the choicest blessings on your city. That the main force) was encamped on the east and devastations of war, in which you found it, west of the Cranberry Meadow, and south-

The Third Division on the east portion shall have a tendency to strengthen and barrack which had been erected by these give permanency to the Union at home, divisions, and occupied them until they and credit and respectability to it abroad, became unfit by reason of decay for further The accomplishment whereof is a remain-use. No portion of these buildings now was the same as that of the Temple.

> At the time the divisions were so encamped, General and Mrs. Washington stayed at the stone house of the Hasbrouck family, in the south part of the village of Newburgh. The room occupied by them was in the north-east corner of the house. It is said that Col. Pickering died in the north-east room, but I have never been able to trace the tradition satisfactorily. Hamilton, Lafavette, and Burr were staying there also. Gen. Knox had his quarters at the time in It was constructed of to Mrs. Hasbrouck her chair, which she had

Washington took final leave of many of close of the Revolution. Many valuable The First Division on the upland, west revolutionary relics have been presented Enoch Carter, Esq., of Newburgh. One of the silver spurs of Major Andre, a lock of the hair of Washington, and many other rare curiosities adorn the walls and shelves. The gun of Harvey Birch (the American Spy, who gave the English cow-boys so much trouble) was there at one time.

15

JOHN M. EAGER.

N. Y.

Indian DEED FOR CANARISE, LONG Island.—The following translation, made by me, from the Dutch records on file in the Clerk's office in Flatland, Kings Co., of the Indian purchase of Canarise, and of the amount paid for the Nicolls and Lovelace patents, I send to you for publication, if deemed of sufficient importance.

T. G. BERGEN.

On this 23rd day of April, 1665, was agreed as follows, to wit: Wametappack, Sachem of Canaryssen, and Rammieracy, Minneguahum, Camenuck, Panwangum, and Attewaram, lawful owners of Canarysen and the appendages thereto appertaining, have agreed and sold to the inhabitants of the town of Amesfoort a parcel of land lying on Long Island, by and in the vicinity of the village of Amesfoort, beginning by the west side of "Muskyttehool," at a certain marked tree; thence stretching to where the end of the Flats come by the two trees situated on the north side of said Flats to a certain marked tree; from thence to the Fresh Kill meadows, stopping at the path from the Great Flatts to the Fresh Kill meadows, and stretching in the Flats, with all meadows, kills, and creeks therein contained; and that for the sum of one hundred fathoms wampum, one coat, one pair stockings, four adz's, two cans of brandy, and one half barrel of beer, with condition that the purchasers, once for always, a fence shall set at Canarysen for the protection of the Indian cultivation, which fence shall thereafter by the Indians be maintained, and the land which becomes inclosed in fence shall, by the Indian owners above-mentioned, all their lives, be used, to wit, by Wametappack, the Sachem, with his two brothers. All done without fraud or deceit.

The 6th day of April, old style. This is the mark of Wame x tappack, Sachem. This is the mark of  $\times$  Minnequahem. This is the mark of X Attewaram. This is the mark of  $\times$  Oramysv. This is the mark of x Rammyeraen. This is the mark of × Pauwangum. This is the mark of X Kameneck. This is the mark of X Waŭaclyck. This done by me, the constable, as witness.

MINNE JOHANNES, 1665. On the date of the 13 April, the purchase of the Indians, the first payment in wampum. 600* One coat comes to 60 One pair of stockings 6 One pair shoes. 16 Four adz's 16 Two cans brandy 8 wheat."

One half barrel beer "Paid for the patent of Richard Nickelson to Matys Nickel, one hundred schepel

"Paid for the patent of Franszoos Loflys to Matys Nickelson, twenty schepel wheat."

Southern Currency.—The following advertisement, from a North Carolina paper, is curious as a proof of the worthlessness of the money there, and the longheaded prudence of the Friends:

NEW GARDEN BOARDING SCHOOL.—The 53d session of New Garden Boarding School opened the 16th day of 11th month instant, and will continue 20 weeks. Board and washing will be furnished by the month for 133 pounds of flour, 25 pounds of pork, and 21 bushels of corn, or the equivalent in money.

The tuition, per session of 20 weeks, may be paid by 250 pounds of flour, 35 pounds of pork, and 4 bushels of corn, or the equivalent in money.

The school will be under the charge of Nereus Mendenhall as principal teacher, and Jonathan E. Cox and wife, Superintendents.

11th month 30, 1863.

* Probably guilders (40c). + Schepels are equal to bushels.

CARONDELET.—VIDE POCHE.—Caronde-| New houses of brick, and "ivory" streets, let, in Missouri, was formerly called, from its povetry, VIDE POCHE (Empty Pocket), and these lines commemorate its origin:

VIDE POCHE.

In seventeen hundred and sixty-seven Delor de Tragette, a man of renown (To his name all honor and praise be given), Laid out the foundation of Vide Poche town; And, tho' ninety odd years have passed away, Vide Poche stands there at this very day.

Near the river's brink, 'neath a young elm tree, The Frenchman erected his cabin small, That the dancing waters his eye might see, As they swept the base of the white bluff tall; And could hear the song of the voyageur By the echoes repeated far and near.

And a few friends went with the good Tragette, And built their snug cabins hard by his own, Made of rough-hewn logs that on end were set, With roofs that ran up to a sharpened cone; While hazel bushes, mud, gravel, and straw Stopped the cracks secure from the winter's blow.

They planted their corn in the month of May, Their gardens with gumbo were green in the spring; They caught the cat-fish that wallowing lay

At the river's bottom, with horse-hair string; And the huge bullfrog that croaked in the pond Made a dish of which they were very fond. When the autumn came they gathered their crops,

And Lent being over they had a dance; And tradition says that those Vide Poche hops Were merry as any e'er seen in France; For a King and Queen were managers then, And a Vide Poche boy was the prince of men.

But now times have changed, and the gay Tragette Has passed from the earth with all his gay friends: Their grand-children only can now be met, But the elm tree still in majesty bends Like a mourner drooping o'er friends loved well; Could it speak, what a tale that elm could tell!

The cabins are gone of these early days, The fields are barren, the gardens in weeds; The bullfrogs no more from the green pond gaze, The mud-cat secure in the water feeds; The yellow Des Peres, in its hoarse debouche, Sings a wild, sad dirge for the old Vide Poche.

The bluff which the French boys so loved to climb Has been cut away for the iron steed; The river, that bristled with snags sublime, Is lashed by the steamer that flies with speed; And the railroad car, with conductors smart, Has taken the place of the old French cart.

Are seen where once were the cabins and lanes; And one of the finest of country seats Is Monti Pice with its Gothic vanes; The dry dock is there by the river's side,

And steamers by scores to the shore are tied. 'Tis Vide Poche no more, but Carondelet, With its city council, its Marshal and Mayor; How would it astonish good old Tragette,

Could he come to life and once more be there; For the "empty pocket" is filling fast, And ancient Vide Poche has itself surpassed!

DIALECTS OF THE MUTSUN LANGUAGE OF California.—The late Mr. Turner called attention to this language in the Magazine some years since; and since Ethnology met so severe a loss by his death, Arroyo's Grammar and Vocabulary have been published. The language was, for a Californian one, wide-spread, and it may be well to preserve in the Magazine the following vocabulary of the Indians at the Mission of Santa Cruz, a Mutsun dialect. It was prepared in September, 1856, by Padré Juan Comelias, for A. S. Taylor, Esq., and given in his Indianology papers in the California Farmer.

The words are evidently to be pronounced as Spanish.

ENGLISH.	INDIAN.	ENGLISH.	INDIAN.
God	Guilac	avelones or wicked spirit	uten	ear-shells	tupsesh
man	chares	white	losemin
woman	quitchguema	black	murtusmi n boy	alashu	red	patiamin
girl	mujash	blue	murium
infant, child	alashu	y ello w	lachcamin '
father	apnan	green	neru
mother	anan	great, big	oo-tres husband	maco	small, little	niuma wife	haunan	strong	tuise son	innish	old	juhoc·nish
daughter	ca	young	cotocma
brother	ternan	good	ursheshmi n
sister	utec	bad	hutesmin
head	uri	handsome	amshosmin
hair	tapor	ugly	ectes
face	chamus	live, life	ash-ho-udra forehead	tima	dead, death	semoshti
ear	echo	cold	tarshi
eye	hin	warm, hot	cai nose	us	I	can mouth	ueper	thou	uai a tongue	lasa	he	neppe
tooth	sit	we	maxent
beard	ayes	you	aiba .

	INDIAN.	E
neck	harcos	th
arm	y su	th
hand	spalmish	all
Indian shoes	sĥoloc	m
bread	missoy	w
pipe, calumet		ne
tobacco	macher	to
sky, heaven	chara	ye
sun	ishmen	to moon	char	ye
fingers	rarash	no
nails	tur
		98 body	uara	W
belly	ramaina	no
leg	coro	80
feet	hatash	OI
toes	rorash	tv
bone	chaie	th
grasshopper	urua	fo
condor or vult		fì
whale	chime	si.
heart	mini	80
blood	payan	ei
town, village	puebla	ni
chief	uit-tres	te friend	onient	el
house, hut	rua	tv
kettle	amamsha	th
arrow	chemo	fo
bow	liti
knife		fif
	chippi	81
star	usi	8 e
day	tujish	ei
light	charco	ni
night	muruch	tv
darkness	heuep	th
morning	munsha	fo
evening	we-ac-say	fif
spring	etuenpire	si:
summer	elau -	hı
autumn	puty	ea
winter	asir	dr
wind	taris	ru
lightning	uilep	đε
thunder	chura	go
rain	amani	Sit
snow	wacani	sle
hail	yopoc	8p
fire	yuelec	8e
crow	sharac
bear		lo
	ores	ki
turkey-buzza		W
	Bi .	ยล
	ucani	wi
	pire	elk
	calay	de
	rumay	mı
	hoicol	fly
	ruum	ea
hills, sierra	satos	mi
mountain ]	huya	fea
	epeol	wi
	-

NGLISH. INDIAN. is neppe at hemit nappi any, much yasir 'no atu amatica ear -day naja esterdav uican o-morrow munsa eie ec-ka ast yachmu zest. arras orth tamarte outh ramay ne impech wo uthin iree caphan catuash ur mishur ve x saguen tupuytuc even ight usatis neu-ku ine I-esh 'n leven imbeshwacaüsh welve uthenüsh nirteen capan-üsh urteen catush üsh teen mishur-ush xteen saquen üsh tupuy-tac-üsh eventeen ighteen natis-tish neteen ni-koo-ish wenty uthin-i-uesh nirty cappan-iuesh rty catuash-uiesh fty mishar-iuesh saquen-iuesh xtv undred tappan Rt. amay rink uit uricay ın chitte ance hui-coo shane ng leep echen eak aiua hiri ri A 70 hasan ill nimi alk chaumespi ۱ŧ aues ild-cat toroma tibu toch er ud-tortoise aunishmin mumura gle nuppi ūsketo cashup ather lipos uima ngs

ENGLISH. INDIAN. stone, rock e-ni tree luspin leaf tapash grass QUAV herb guay oak arue pine-tree gireni flesh, meat ria gupi beaver wolf umu covote mayan dog hichas fox yurig squirrel (ground) ejh rabbit wiren hare cheves bird winac goose duck patch ере molmol pigeon Cal, quail ясяя hawk cacrui sea-muscles sharo fish helai

ENGLISH. INDIAN. wild oats tapoc acorns rapac salmon hurac name racat lime บลทเ affection nunco sit taurait stand corhonmi come uate earthquake ymi eclipse nanup name racat morter (to pound acorns etc.)semhoshmin sardines tupur tule or bullrushes haa-le cloud risha puhay fog humming-bird umanu chenati, or blackbird sucrin serpent, or snake mumana culebra, or rattlesnake hinchirua

The rancherias of Indians near this Mission, all within eight or ten miles of Santa Cruz, among which this vocabulary was spoken, were: Aulintac, the rancheria proper to the Mission; Chalumu, one mile north-west of the Mission; Hottrochtac, two miles north-west of the Mission; Wallanmi; Sio Cotchinin; Shoremee; Onbi; Choromi; Turami; Payanmin; Shiuguermi; Hauzaurni.

HISTORICAL REMINISCENCE OF BUFFALO.—The patient research of our townsman, L. K. Haddock, Esq., has brought to light many historical events connected with the early settlement of the country bordering on the lakes. The commerce then and now compared shows the giant strides that have been made in the onward march of progress, and the incidents given in the following communication will be of general local interest:

Mr. Editor—At your request I copy from my note-book some items respecting the now "Great West." I have corresponded with many of our historical celebrities with a view to make this narrative more complete, but have gained no additional facts. It is possible that the descendants of the persons named may have papers or letters which will give us seat of learning-Schenectady. valuable information. tion of Evan's Essays, or Mante's history billiards. Is advised to make butter and of the late war?

I find mention made of the Gladwin Chippewa, Capt. Robinson, Lady Charlotte, and the Beaver being on Lake Erie in Sterling & Porteus, merchants of Detroit, sent down the lake on board the Charlotte, in September, fifty packs of fur.

The Beaver was a new vessel, belonging to Commodore Grant. She was lost in May, near Sandusky, with £3,000 of furs, and 17 men.

It is quite probable that Lewis Gage, who was appointed Ensign 35th Regt., 20th February, 1766, when, and ever since he had been in command of the lakes, was Captain of the Beaver, and was lost with her.

This year Campbell, Phyn & Ellice, of Schenectady, with Sterling & Porteus, of Detroit, built the Angelica, of 45 tons. J. & A. Stewart, of New York, furnished the rigging. Richard Wright, of Wood Bridge, near New York City, was the Wages £120 per annum. She was a very successful vessel, and Grant & Robinson were very angry, and tried to purchase Campbell's interest, which was one-sixth. Upon Lake Ontario was the Charity, conveying stores to Edward Pollard, sutler, at Niagara, and flour for the est old Scotchman James Porteus exclaim: use of the garrison, which was ground by "Jilles Funda." Amongst the supplies ordered from New York was a hat from Jewes, the Comstock of New York, two firkins of butter, and three pounds of green tea. James Munier, Postmaster at Albany.

In 1772, the Charity, on Lake Ontario, to pay her crew. The freight on sheep Rumor will have him entangled in the across Lake Ontario was 7 shillings. Mr. meshes of a net set by the beautiful Miss Pollard, sutler, at Niagara, is making Thereasea Barth. money, and sends Nancy to New York, John Askin is l which she "likes very well," and Masters Ned and Bob to that, then as now, famous mission in the 60th Regiment at Macki-

T. De I presume Gen. Couagne, interpreter at the Fort, sends Amherst's and Bradstreet's, and Henry his son to the same place. "He is a very White's papers are still extant. Can any decent lad." Mr. Pollard consoles himself of your readers oblige me with an inspect for the absence of his children by playing cheese if the expense of keeping cows is not too great. Writes to New England for a Yankee laborer. Is not able to get newspapers—the Express was not then in existence, I think. Major Ethrington is in command at Niagara. "He is an old soldier, and the depth of his understanding past finding out."

Pfister and Stedman have come to some accommodation. The latter having the carrying trade around the Falls. Duffin is to engage the men and Stedman is to keep tavern. At Fort Erie, Rutherford is in command. Norman McLeod, Commissary.

General Gage has given permission to build a store-house at Fort Erie.

Two of the King's vessels are to remain at Fort Erie till the 10th regiment goes up. Binnerman and Graves command these. The sloop Betsy is sailed by Captain Friend. This is her third year on Lake

At Detroit are James Porteus, formerly from Crieff, Perth Co., Scotland; James Sterling, Gordon, and McComb, Hugh Boyle, Lieuts. George McDougal and John Hay, Abbott, and Edgar.

John Thompson, of New York, sends a Negro to Detroit to be sold on his account, Upon his arrival methinks I hear the hon-

> "We start to think that hapless race Must shape our good or ill; That laws of changeless justice bind Oppressor with oppressed; And, close as sin and suffering joined, We march to Fate abreast."

Alexander Grant winters at Detroit; he John Leighton, master, did not earn enough has usually spent his winters in New York.

John Askin is located at Mackinaw.

Mr. Norbury, a Russian, holding a com-

Henry.—Buffalo Express.

THE LAST WILD BUFFALO IN OHIO.-In the last century this animal ranged extensively over the southern half of the territory, now embraced in the State of Ohio. Two were killed in the forks of Symmes Creek, near the south-eastern corner of Jackson Co., in the year 1800, and were the last ever discovered within these limits. Up to that period extensive fields of the wild cane or gigantic reed were rather pretty name for girls. Its origin common in the valleys of the Great and would not easily be suspected. A clergy-Little Miamia rivers, and the paroquett man from France had a child brought to and swallow-tailed hawk were then common birds. All of them have long since disappeared from these localities.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 8, 1864.

Poughkeepsie.—In a volume of Dutch records, entitled "Notarial Paperz, 1677-1695," preserved in the office of the Clerk of Albany County, is to be found a deed of people finding Rose de Lima too long, gift under date of 5th May, 1683, of which dropped Rose, and ran Delima together. the following is an extract: - * * " Een seeckere hooglantsche Wilt (genaemt Massany) De welcke bekent midts deesen uyt cen Vrye gift gegeeven to hebben Een DEEMED CAPTIVE, condensed from Hist. Bouwery aen Pieter Lassingh (Lassen), Ende Een Bouwery den Jan Smeedes Jonge glasemaeker En Een Val aen Strant om een Moolen op te setten,-de Val is genaemt Pooghkepesingh,—ende het Landt is genaemt Minnissingh, geleegen aende Oost Wal van de Rivier" (Hudson); * * which may be translated as follows:

* * A certain Highland Indian (named Massany), who, by these (present), acknowledges that he has given as a free gift, a bouwery to Peter Lassingh (or Lassen), T. Green (N.D.), 1772. and a bouwery to John Smeedes Jonge, glass macker (glazier);—and a fall on the shore to set a mill upon; the fall is named Pooghkepesingh; and the land is named Minnissingh, lying on the east bank of the River (Hudson).

This seems to be the original conveyance from the native proprietor of the plot of ground now occupied by the city of Poughkeepsie.

This fact may be familiar to the local naw, goes to Lake Superior with A antiquaries of the place, but to most of the readers of the Magazine, doubtless, it is new. The noisy water-fall may appropriately be called Pooghkeepesingh, but surely the beautiful word Minnissingh should not have been lost; it should have been retained as the name of the city.

SCHENBOTADY, June 4, 1864.

CURIOUS ORIGIN OF A CHRISTIAN NAME. -In Canada, Delima is a common and him to baptize, and was requested to christen it by this name. "This is not a fit name," was his reply. "You should give her the name of some saint." "But, M. le Curé, it is a saint's name." "No, there is no such saint in the calendar." "Why, M. le Curé, don't you know Ste. Rose de Lima?" He certainly did, and found that

THE AMERICAN EDITIONS OF THE RE-Mag., vol. vii. p. 382-4, with additions and corrections.

1. (Copies in library of Mass. Hist. Soc., Am. Antiq. Soc., etc.) Boston, 1707.

2. "The second edition." Boston: T. Fleet, for Samuel Phillips.

3. Spoken of by G, but not seen or traced.

4. Edited by T. Prince (not seen). Boston, 1758. 5. "The fourth edition." New London:

6. "The fifth edition." Boston: John

Boyle, 1774. 7. "The fifth edition." New London:

T. Green (N.D.), 1780. 8. "The fourth edition." Greenfield:

T. Dickman, 1793. 9. "The sixth edition." Boston: Samuel Hall, 1795. 10. "The sixth edition." Greenfield: T. Dickman, 1800.

11. New Haven: W. W. Morse, 1802.

12. Brookfield: Hori Brown, 1811.

13. Greenfield: C. J. J. Ingersoll, 1837.

14. Northampton: 1853.

one or more editions were printed in Philadelphia or New York before the year 1800, but we have not seen them.

A pamphlet with the following title belongs to the same family as the Redeemed

Captive:

"A Sermon preached at Mansfield (Conn.), August 4th, 1741, at a time set apart for Prayer for the Revival of Religion: and in behalf of Mrs. EUNICE (the Daughter of the Reverend Mr. John Williams), who was there on a visit from Canada, where she has been in a long captivity. By Solomon Williams, A.M., Pastor of the First Church in Lebanon."

Boston: Printed by S. Kneeland and

T. Green, 1742.

It appears from the sermon that Eunice Williams, her Indian husband, and two which drew together "such a numerous audience," and the aim was (Eunice being a Catholic) "to find some way for her deliverance from the snares and thick-set stratagems of the Devil, and make her a history of the country. monument of Glorious and Almighty Grace."

But tradition says that Eunice would not be converted, but preferred to return to (in the language of the preacher) "the barshe had lived for thirty-eight years; a people bred up in Popish superstitions, blindness and bigotry."

н. о.

Borrowing Names of Places-In-TERESTING LETTER FROM DOCTOR O'CAL-LAGHAN.—At a late meeting of the Onondaga Historical Association, the following interesting letter by Dr. O'Callaghan was read:

ALBANY, Nov. 19, 1868. DEAR SIR—I received only late last evening your kind invitation to attend the first meeting of the Onondaga Historical Society, which is to take place this evening, at Historical Hall, Syracuse.

I beg to congratulate you, as I do most sincerely, on the event; and I have no doubt of the future prosperity of your Society and We have some reason to suppose that of its success in rescuing from oblivion much that will prove valuable both to the local and general historian. Already New York, Buffalo, Brooklyn, Kingston, and Ulster county are engaged in the good work, and the county of Westchester is, as I am informed, about to organize a similar society to yours. Livingston county, too. has, I am told, its Historical Society. Through the labors of these several associations, public opinion will be so enlightened, and public taste so directed as to relieve our maps and geographies, in time, I hope, from many of the out-of-place names which have been imposed on our cities and towns, when a false hankering after European and classical nomenclature distorted and vitiated rules that ought properly to have been observed at the time.

Our mountains, our hills, our lakes, our children were present on the occasion valleys, and our streams are purely and exclusively American. God gave them in all their sublimity and beauty to America. It seems to me that they ought to be distinguished by names identified with the Europe borrows not names for her classic lands from America. Why then go to Italy, Greece, or elsewhere for names to designate the hunting grounds and homes of the Iroquois of New York, or to disbarous and heathen people among whom tinguish the spot where, as Mr. Street beautifully expresses it, the pioneer felled the forest and let in the first ray of sunlight on the soil?

Your labors will avail much in correcting the false taste here indicated.

It would afford me great pleasure to attend your meeting, but want of leisure and pressure of duties which cannot be neglected, must plead my excuse.

With best wishes for your success and kind regards to each member of your society,

I remain, Dear Sir, Yours very respectfully, E. B. O'CALLAGHAN.

R. F. Trowbridge, Esq., Rec. Sec., On. Hist. Soc., Syracuse, N. Y.

THE STATE OF NEW YORK .- Surveyor-General De Witt to Governor Clinton .-[Land Papers, Sec.'s Office, Alb., vol. l., p. 79.]

'ALBANY, 15th April, 1791. SIR—Almost every day the New England People make application to me for Lands, in the 20 Townships—some of them with Money in their pockets raised for the purpose of purchasing. I can neither get rid of their Questions or give them satisfactory answers. I am obliged to tell them that these lands will be shortly advertised for sale, but that the mode and terms are left by Law to the discretion of the Commissioners of the Land Office. Many of them will settle immediately and run the risque of purchasing afterwards. Numbers of them who have gone thither with the express view of making pitches and prepare places to which to remove their families, are exceedingly anxious to have the opportunity of buying. I think it will be the interest of the State to give them two or three years time for the payment of a part of the purchase money.

I am, Sir, your Excy.'s Most obedt. Servant,

M. DE WITT.

Governor Clinton.

The 20 townships above-mentioned are principally in the present counties of Madison and Chenango. The words in italic are so marked in the original.—E. B. o'c.]

Syracuse.—This is the most ancient white settlement west of Albany. It dates morters, and the whole noisy Hellish train as far back as 1656, in which year a number of Frenchmen planted a colony on the the voice of a friend whose attachment to margin of Lake Onondaga, whose salt you deserves some share in your affection. springs had been discovered in 1654. The I realy Believe I possess it, my good friend, site of this colony is, we understand, a spot and notwithstanding your silence, I am of remarkable prettiness; and what is par-sure you feel for me in every transaction of ticularly interesting is the fact that the this most difficult command. spring mentioned in the French account of the settlement, still flows from the side of This campaign I was trembling for them as the hill upon which the missionaries erect-in the Beginning. ed their chapel and the soldiers their little suit Well."

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

IMMIGRATION FROM NEW ENGLAND TO monument over this spring, in commemoration of the discovery of the Salt Springs and the founding of the first European settlement in Central New York. familiar with the enterprise and public spirit of the citizens of Syracuse have no doubt that an undertaking so laudable will be worthily carried out.

E. B. 0'C.

RESOLVED WALDRON.—In the paragraph in the last number of the Historical Magazine on this person the words Strong Creek ought to have been printed "Stony Creek."

JOHN BROWN'S TRACT.—This famous summer resort for sportsmen and tourists lies partly in Lewis, but mostly in Herkimer County. It is a wild, mountainous region, interspersed, however, with lakes and deep valleys. When first laid out under the directions of Simon De Witt. Surveyor-General, it was divided into eight townships, which were made in a manner, by their names, representatives of all the virtues required by the inhabitants of that region to realize a living there; for they were called Unanimity, Frugality, Perseverance, Sobriety, Regularity, Enterprise, Economy, and Industry.

LETTER OF LAFAYETTE TO GEN. KNOX IN 1781.—The original of the following letter is in the hands of W. F. Bacon, Esq., Theological Seminary, Bangor, Maine:

FORKS OF YORK RIVER, August 18, 1781. MY DEAR SIR-In spite of the 24r's, the of your siege artillery, I want you to hear last campaign I was sighing for . . . .

There was no difference between a skirfort. It is known at this day as the "Je-mish and a Battle-a Battle and a total defeat, we were so lucky as to escape an It is now in contemplation to erect a action and keep ourselves clear of that occupy his lordship's Hd. quarters. You'venient to return. had accounts of the two skirmishes. I! My most respectfull and affectionate could not help growing jealous, and began Adieu. to think of a visit to your Batteries, But soon found there was in this quarter work enough for me, great deal to much indeed for my youth and the means that I have.

Lord Cornwallis Having not succeeding in land journeyings, has undertaken a water titled "Lettres Canadiennes" is the followvoyage. I thought first the man was going ing description of Quebec in 1701: to New York, then to Pottomack, or Balmy dear friend our conduct may have points. met with your approbation. I wish both from esteem and friendship.

a cavelry to collect levies, to arm and as theless much difficulty in ascending. The semble militia, to replenish our few con-upper town is situated at an extraordinary tinentals,—to have a part of them in re- height. diness to Reinforce General Green, and am nuievers . p alarming than his superiority of forces. I in front and behind, with a terrace of ever had a great opinion of him, our papers eighty feet overlooking the lower town call him a Mad Man. But was any ad- and the river below, whence you can devantage taken of him when he commanded scry all that you desire to see. in person? To speak plain English, I am devilish afraid of him.

Major Cush Having gone to the Northward, we are in want of an artillery field Montreal, sixty leagues above Quebec.

. . . that was gallopping officer. Had Ctn. Lamb been only around us. Then we had our turn, and Major, I should have asked for him. I for many, many mile had the pleasure to wish Ctn. Stephens might make it con-thought all was over, and owing to your compliments to Mrs. Knox. I am so imsiege of New York, I anticipated great prudent as to take the liberty to address a deal of ease and happiness. Indeed, I kiss to Lucy and a paternal one to my son.

Yours for ever,

LAFAYETTE.

General Knox.

QUEBEC IN 1701.-In a manuscript en-

The curiosity of learning and knowing, timore, But on a sudden he entered York so common to all mankind, made me ex-River, and is at York and Gloster out of amine Kebec closely on my arrival. This our reach, refreshing his troops and town is situated 2000 leagues from France. meditating mischief. York is on high It is divided into the upper and lower meditating mischief. York is on high It is divided into the upper and lower ground, surrounded with creeks and town. In the latter reside the merchants marshes available by one high a . . . . and those who trade by sea. The houses this to my surprise he does not fortify. are all built quite comfortably of a black Gloster is a neck of land projecting into stone as fine and hard as marble. The the River, and very useful to the defeat of roadstead is defended by a large platform shipping, these my lord is fortifying. Ports- in the middle, which is level with the water, mouth is not evacuated, so that he is so that hostile vessels could not be at divided in three points, two of which I anchor without being badly handled as confess are the same thing. But should a well by the cannon of this platform as by naval superiority come great advantages those of a fort which commands the city might be obtained in this quarter. I wish and harbor, on one of the most precipitous

From the lower to the upper town there is a road which winds around imperceptibly At the present I am trying to conjure up for carts and waggons, which have never-

The house of the viceroy or governorwaiting at that fork of York River to general is in the upper town in the most oppose either way His lordships ma-prominent point. It is one hundred and twenty feet long, and two stories high, Lord Cornwallis abilities are to me more with several pavilions which form additions

The governor-general who now resides in this castle is called M. C. Chevalier de Caillieres, formerly governor of the city of both by the French and the Indians, who 8vo. 16 pp.; of the visits in 1798, Mr. equally regard him as the common father Hardie published an account that I have of all the inhabitants of Canada. To him not seen; of those in 1799 and 1803, I we are indebted for all the fortifications of know no accounts published at the time; the country, which have been erected by of that of 1805, there is "An Account of the his care. All persons of distinction also Malignant Fever which prevailed in the reside in the upper town. There is a city of New York, during the Autumn of bishop and canons whose chapter is com-plete. There is also a fine seminary and Southwick and Hardcastle, 1805, 8vo. several churches, among which that of the 196 pp.; of the last great visit there is Jesuits and that of the Recollects are the "An Account of the Yellow Fever which most modern in the country. The cloister year 1822, to which is prefixed a brief of these good fathers is lighted on all sides sketch of the different pestilential diseases with stained glass windows bearing the with which this city was afflicted in the arms of several benefactors of the house. years 1798, 1799, 1803, and 1805," &c., by The intendant's office alone is badly situated James Hardie. on a low spot near the little river.

The city, upper and lower, is situated between two considerable mountains, one in 1803 and 1805, contain accounts for those higher than the other. One is called Cap years, but I do not know that they were au Diamants, because an extraordinary printed separately. quantity is found on the rocks, which are not surpassed in beauty by real diamonds, appeared during these visitations, or after and only lack hardness. The other mountain is called Saut au Matelot, so termed, prevalence of the Yellow Fever in New because during the first times of the esta- York," by Dr. Valentine Seamen; "Oriblishment of the French in this colony, a gin of the Pestilential Fever," by Dr. sailor who went too near the brink went E. Smith; "Manley's Dissertation on the down in spite of himself. Around this last | Yellow Fever," etc. mountain a little river runs by the inten-

dant's.—L'Abeille.

Account of the Epidemical Fever which late-ordine di grado cavalleresco.' ly prevailed in the city of New York," &c., Epidemic Fever which prevailed in the translated from the Italian "Cavaliere city of New York during part of the Summer and Fall of 1795," by Richard Bayley. ing French, "Chevalier de la milice

This gentleman is respected and beloved New York: T. and J. Swords, 1796, This last faces the castle, and is the occurred in the city of New York in the New York: Samuel Marks, 1822, 12mo., 120 pp.

The reports of Dr. Miller to the governor

"SIR CHRISTOPHER GARDINER, KNIGHT OF THE GOLDEN MELICE.—Hon, Robert C. Winthrop, in his remarks at a meeting ACCOUNTS OF THE YELLOW FEVER IN of the Massachusetts Historical Society, in NEW YORK.—The city of New York was 1858, was, I believe, the first to suggest several times visited by this dreadful that the "melice," which has puzzled so scourge, which had become habitual at many readers of Winthrop's Journal, and New Orleans till a beast removed the given occasion to much fanciful specula-beastly things which engendered it. Of tion, was nothing more than the Italian the first visit, in Aug., Sept., and Oct., milizia, or French milice, applicable, in 1791, there is a dissertation by Dr. J. S. either language, to any order of knight-Addom; of that of 1793, I know no special hood. Thus, the vocab. della crusca, with account; of that of 1795, there is "A brief other significations of milizia, gives "per

Mr. Winthrop does not, however, appear by M. L. Davis. New York; 1795, 8vo. to have been aware that the title assumed 66 pp.; and also, "An Account of the by this English adventurer was literally

dorée," the proper designation of a Papal order names him "Auratæ militiæ equitem, afloat and ashore:" ac Aulæ Lateranensis et Palatii Apostolici comitem," etc., with permission to bear get affoat a number of privateers which "torquem aureum, et ensem, et aurata should prey upon our commerce. calcaria (Bonanni, Catalogo delli Ord. Mexico had been a maritime people, this Equest. e Milit., 16). This honor was would have been her true policy. A few conferred by the Pope in person (or some-fast-sailing vessels, distributed in different times by a nuncio, or prelate of the highest seas, and officered and manned by bold Papal court), "on official persons, learned fellows in the pursuit of plunder, might men, artists, and other persons who had have inflicted incalculable injury upon us. rendered service to the State, or whom the This system of predatory warfare, more Holy Father selected for such distinction, than any other, equalizes the strength of and even upon foreigners. Neither rank nations on the water. Fleets and heavynor station, but simply the profession of armed ships are of no avail against the the Roman Catholick Religion, is required lighter heels and more erratic wanderings as a qualification to receive it" (Carlisle's of this description of force. But Mexico Orders of Knighthood, p. 292). Anciently had no materials whereon to operate. To this ranked first among the Papal orders render privateering available to her, under of merit, and Knights of the Golden Militia the laws of nations, it was necessary that took precedence of Knights of Malta. But at least a majority of the officers and crew even in Sir Christopher's time, the suspi- of each cruiser should be citizens; not cion that the honor was to be obtained for citizens made ad hoc, in fraud of the law, money had somewhat depreciated its but bona fide citizens; and any vessel value; and now the rights and privileges of which might have attempted to cruise the knights are merely nominal. Some under a letter of marque and reprisal, withtwenty years ago the Abbé Glaire was created "Chevalier de la Melice dorée" come, from that moment, a pirate. As created "Chevalier de la Melice dorée" come, from that moment, a pirate. As by Gregory XVI., in recognition of his Mexico had never possessed any marine, services to the Church, in the compilation of the "Encyclopédie Catholique."

order or its source was known to Gov. Win-by our cruisers, she found it impossible to throp and his fellow-magistrates, which was fulfil this condition, except to a very limited well for Sir Christopher's interests, perhaps. extent. President Salas, in order to over-So patent evidence of his being a favorite come the difficulty, endeavored, contrary son of Rome would hardly have been regard- to the good faith which should exist among ed as a title of honor by the good people of nations, even when at war, and in violation the Bay, or induce them to judge the of the plainest principles of common sense, English knight more leniently in the mat- to manufacture citizens for the occasion.

ters whereof he was accused.

J. H. T.

HARTFORD, Conn.

order in the United States at present; names of any adventurers that might offer, among others, the Rev. Charles Constan irrespective of those great principles so well tine Pise, of Brooklyn, well known as a understood and practised upon by all civilpoet and polished writer,]

SEMMES ON PRIVATEERING.—The famous order formerly in high repute, and which captain of the Alabama, whose career has is more popularly known as "Knights of been so destructive to our shipping and the Golden Spur" (Cavalieri dello Sperone may prove so expensive to England, thus d'oro). The diploma of a knight of this discourses of privateering in his "Service

"General Salas made strenuous efforts to military or commercial, worth the name, and as what little she had at the commence-It is not probable that the name of the ment of the war had been taken from her For this purpose he issued blank certificates of naturalization to the Mexican consuls at Havana and other places, with directions There are, we think, knights of this to these officers to fill them up with the ized nations, in a procedure of such mo-pirate. . . . . There is a growing disposition among civilized nations to put the age of 14; was one of the founders of an end to this disreputable mode of war-fare under any circumstances. It had its origin in remote and comparatively bar-by-fare the fare the fare that the state of Casanas de Sestis Maria, born at Barcelona in 1656, entered the order at the age of 14; was one of the founders of the College of Queretaro; missionary in Campeachy, Texas, and New Mexico; killed origin in remote and comparatively bar-by-fare Casanas de Sestis Maria, born at Barcelona in 1656, entered the order at the age of 14; was one of the founders of the College of Queretaro; missionary in Campeachy, Texas, and New Mexico; killed origin in remote and comparatively bar-by-fare Casanas de Sestis Maria, born at Barcelona in 1656, entered the order at the age of 14; was one of the founders of the College of Queretaro; missionary in Campeachy, Texas, and New Mexico; killed origin in remote and comparatively bar-by-fare and the sestis and the college of Queretaro; missionary in Campeachy, Texas, and New Mexico; killed origin in remote and comparatively bar-by-fare and the college of Queretaro; missionary in Campeachy, Texas, and New Mexico; killed origin in remote and comparatively bar-by-fare and have them under proper control. Bonds there November 17, 1752. and penalties, forfeiture of vessel, etc., are entirely powerless to restrain the passion of cupidity and revenge when once fairly or all nations—the shortness of their cruises, any discipline can be established or main-dealing with a slave. tained among them. In short, they are little better than licensed pirates; and it behoves all civilized nations, and especially Hartford to Quebec, Professor Silliman nations who, like ourselves, are extensively engaged in foreign commerce, to suppress the practice altogether."

EARLY SPANISH MISSIONARIES IN TEXAS. -I find, in a curious account, mention made French; and his horse (an iron grey) was of the following Texas missionaries: Fa-one of that small but hardy breed which, ther José del Rio, 52 years on the mission, chiefly in Texas and Sonora; F. Cayetano state, are extremely stout and courageous, Aponte y Lis (a native of Pontevedra, and carry the heavy calash and three men came to America in 1730, died May 25, 1791, aged 93), ten years in Texas; F. draw our chaises and two grown per-Esteban de Salazar, a native of Cascajares, sons." a missionary in Texas and Sonora, died August 6, 1797, aged 77; Father Juan vanced in age, is one of the most respectSaenz de Gumiel, a native of Mendavia, able citizens of Quebec. He has fully reeight years in Texas, twice Guardian of alized the good prognostics of the worthy the College of Queretaro, died March 11, professor, has been at the head of a large 1807, aged 83; Father Antonio Perera livery stable for many years, and is still died at Queretaro, April 16, 1698; Father one of the proprietors of the winter stage Antonio Margil died August 6, 1726; Falline between Quebec and Montreal, on ther Felipe Guillen, a native of Piles in the the north shore, a concern which is not,

Every foreigner who kingdom of Valencia, came to America in might have undertaken to prey upon our 1770, two years in Texas, killed by the Incommerce would have been deemed to be, dians in Sonora, April 27, 1778; Father and would have been treated, as a Francis Casañas de Jesus Maria, born at barous ages, and has for its object rather Father José Guadalupe Ramirez de Prado, the plunder of the bandit than honorable born at the mission de las Palmas in the warfare. The cruisers being private vessels, Sierra Gorda, near Mexico, 27 years in fitted out for speculation, and officered and Texas, died at Queretaro, August 19, 1777. manned generally by unscrupulous and un-aged 72, having been 55 years in the order; principled men, it is impossibe for the Father Juan Salvador de Amaya, sent to government which commissions them to Texas about 1728, remained 24 years; died

SLAVERY IN NEW YORK.—It is somearoused. From the nature of the materials what curious to find slavery recognised as of which the crews of these vessels are existing in New York, in the ordinances composed—the adventurous and desperate revised in 1845, and in force till 1859, yet such is the fact; and a fine of $25 imposed and the demoralizing pursuit in which they upon any pawn-broker, dealer in secondare engaged, it is next to impossible that hand articles, or keeper of a junk shop,

> MICHEL GAUVIN.—In his tour from says :-

> "Our driver (to the Falls of Montmorency) was Michel Gauvin, a very intelligent and obliging young man, a French Canadian, who spoke both English and being in this country left in their natural apparently with more ease than our horses of the railroad on the north shore.

P. C.

QUERIES.

Brothers-German—Capt. John Campbell petitions for a grant of land for his "brothers-german," Archibald and Alexander Campbell. I do not find the word in Webster's Dictionary. Is it synonymous with step-brother? o'c.

PATER VAER.—A suit was brought in the court at New Amsterdam in 1646 by Pater Vaer for the possession of a negro wench he had purchased from one John · Wilcox. The judgment of the court was that Wilcox should satisfy the Swedish Governor and Pater Vaer. In what sense is Pater used here, and who was he? o'c.

WEBSTER AND SMITH'S JOURNAL OF THE VOYAGE OF THE HANKEY .- In 1796 or thereabout, Noah Webster and Dr. E. H. Smith published at New York a journal of the voyage of the ship Hankey from Bulam to Grenada. Where can a copy be found?

Horseheads.—This is the name of a new town, erected in Chemung county in Mag. explain its origin?

THARIOLIN.—The last Huron of pure blood at the mission of Lorette, near Quebec, bore the name of Thariolin. portrait was painted about 1840 by Plamondon. Can any reader inform us where it is preserved?

Barbastro's Account of Sonora.-The Franciscan Father, Francis Antonio kept by Dr. Cowdry, Surgeon of the U.S. Barbastro, who was one of the first Franciscans in Sonora after the expulsion of the Jesuits, and who died June 22, 1800, at Aconchi, among the Opatas, left a history of Sonora. Does it still exist?

KILLICK-KILLOCK.—In the Ordinances of the last-named year.

however, so flourishing since the opening the City of New York (ed. 1845, p. 342, ed. 1859, p. 330), I find this word in this phrase: No person shall cast any anchor, grappling or killick (ed. 1859, killock) into or near any of the docks, &c. What does it mean, and what is its origin?

> HENRY FRANCISCO.—In his interesting tour from Hartford to Quebec (New Haven, 1820), Professor Silliman has a chapter under the title the "Old Man of the age of Louis XIV."

> When did Henry Francisco, the person referred to, die? Where, and in what manner?

When Professor Silliman saw him on the Salem road, two miles from Whitehall, he was said to be 134 years of age, and said he was born in France, in a place which he pronounced something like Essex.

Was Francisco (which is not a French name) his real name? Was it not rather a nick-name from his being French?

In that case, what was his real name, and where and when was he really born?

INTRODUCTION OF THE HONEY BEE .-When and by whom was the first colony of honey bees introduced into North America?

They evidently were cultivated in New Jersey as early as the year 1683 (vide 1854. Can any of the readers of the Hist. Hist. Mag., vol. vi., page 268); and, according to Peter Kalm, in 1748, they had become wild in Pennsylvania, but had not then extended their flights westward beyond the Blue Ridge, which is the eastern His range of the Alleghanies.—Vid. Kalm's Travels, vol. i., page 226. ĸ.

CLEVELAND, O., January 8, 1864.

Doctor Cowdry's Journal.—A diary frigate Philadelphia during the captivity and enslavement of her officers and crew by the Tripolitans, from October 21st, 1803, to June 3d, 1805, was published in a series of numbers in the American Mercury, at Hartford. Ct., in the autumn of more permanent form, and has it been lished at Newark in 1826, by Benjamin preserved?

ĸ.

CLEVELAND, O., January 8th, 1864.

AUTHORS OF WHIM WHAMS .- In 1828, a collection of sketches in prose and poetry was published under the following title: "Whim Whams. By Four of Us."

> So prolyficke is our penne Ye'll think therre be a score of us; But, on ye wordes of gentilmenne, Therre be only Four of Us.

We'll make ye smyle, or make ye sighe, Thenne, what can ye want more of us? Ye can't doe better than to buye This littell Boke, by Four of Us.

Madrigals of Ancient Mynstrelsie.— Boston: Published by S. G. Goodrich, 1828. 18mo. pp. 204. I would like to ascertain the names of the authors or author of this volume.

About the same time that this book appeared, a volume of about the same size, and, if I recollect aright, of a similar character, was published by Bowles and Dearborn, of Boston, under the title of "Ps and Qs." This latter work is said, in the Book of the Lockes, p. 114, to have been the joint production of Charles H. Locke, Joseph H. Buckingham, Edwin Buckingham, and Siles P. Holbrook. All of these gentlemen, except the second, are now dead, I think.

Boston.

FILE OF THE NORTHERN WHIG.—Can any of your correspondents inform me whether a file of the "Northern Whig," or any other paper published in Hudson, N. Y., during the year 1814, is in existence, and if so, where can it be found? The knowledge of this is of great importance to show from what book he makes his query? the querist; and he would be much oblig- There is no place in Ohio having any such ed for any communication throwing light name, but the context may show where it upon this question. W. L. S.

THE WONDERFUL HISTORY OF THE a bibliographical account of the first edi-plication of the name, but wrong as to the

Was it subsequently republished in a tion of this little work? I have one pub-Olds, and have seen a later one printed at Brooklyn, but desire an exact description of the first edition or account.

REPLIES.

CURIOUS HEXAMETERS (vol. v. p. 188). The translation seems to be by supplying est in some places and quod in one. What was to be is what is; what was not to be, is what is to be; to be, what is not to be; what is, is not to be what shall be.

PECK ON UNIVERSALISM (vol. vii. p. 380).—We cannot give X. Y. Z. any information concerning the author, but the title of his work is as follows:

"A Short Poem containing a Descant on the Universal Plan," etc. Second edition. Keene, N. H. Printed by John Prentiss, 1802.

Also, third edition: Andover, N. H.: Printed by E. Chase, 1820.

Also, Boston. Printed for Nathl. Coverley, 1818.

It is intended as a satire on the doctrine of Universal Salvation, and the following extract will give an idea of the style of the author:

- "Huzzah! brave boys—loud be our joys, Your sins shall be forgiven O skip and sing, our God and King Will bring us all to heaven.
  - O charming news to live in sin, And die to reign with Paul; 'Tis so, indeed, for Jesus bled To save the devil and all."

B. S.

Kentaienton (vii. p. 380).—Will P.

BUTTERNUTS (vii. 122, 197.)—The expla-Morristown Ghost.—Can any one give nation on page 122 is correct as to the ap-reason. been preserved at the South to a much that feeling may sometimes enter into it. greater extent than at the North, and hence The term denotes power, trustiness, and the source of supply for clothing. bark of the black walnut tree, but more ous and efficient, it will be said: "He's a generally the hulls of the nuts, are used for hoss"—"he's all hoss." It enters also into coloring brown; the butternut is not the common phrase of the Mississippi Boatmuch used; for making a yellow color the bark of the hickory is used.

In 1822, when it was still a common thing for farmers and country laborers to go down to New Orleans in flat-boats with their own crops, or on a trading voyage, it was easy to tell from what State the boatmen came, by the color of their linsey. Ohio was blue and white; Kentucky, blue mixed with black and white, and twilled; Indiana was yellow; Illinois and Missouri were not so much known.

When the Northern soldiers saw the brown color of the Confederate dress, they supposed that it was butternut, and so called them.

URBANA, Ohio, Jan. 25, 1864.

ber, 1831, I was at Baltimore, as a member his voyage of circumnavigation. from Cincinnati, he told me this: That the were at once taken to gratify so laudable a first time he ever went to New York, and curiosity. In Colonial America there was the Eastern cities (I think he said Philadel- quite as much anxiety to learn the details phia), he was sitting alone in his room at of the great voyage as in the mother counthe Hotel; a man entered his room and said, try, and we might venture to say even that is the way my father always spelled it, qualified should be employed to draw up and I follow him." "By God, I almost the account. Dr. John Hawkesworth was knew that I was wrong. I was sure that it then enjoying considerable literary reputa-ought to have an e in it, but I have got it tion; from making watches he turned his wrong." This was Joseph Hamilton Da- attention to study, and soon acquired an viess; this was the beginning of an acquaint- extensive reputation by the "Adventurer," ance between them which continued during and Archbishop Herring had conferred on the life of that eccentric genius. J. H. J. URBANA, Ohio, Jan. 1864.

"OLD Hoss" (vii. p. 98).—J. F. J. the word horse. The pronunciation was from the well-kept journal of Captain Cook, very common at the South, and was and Hoss," which may have been applied to Banks, F.R.S. Washington, but not to him peculiarly. It

Household manufactures have is not exactly a term of endearment, though The something more. Of a man who is vigormen in old time: " half horse, half alligator."

URBANA, Ohio, Jan. 28, 1864.

Retrospectibe.

LITERARY AND ANTIQUARIAN.

PATRONS OF LITERARY ENTERPRISES IN NEW YORK, ETC., ABOUT ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.—The return of Captain James Cook from his first famous voyage of discovery, in 1771, caused as great a stir among the curious as almost any event "Jo Daviess" (viii. p. 38).—In Decem-since the return of Sir Francis Drake from of the Clay Convention, and sitting with whole world was impatient to learn the Col. Samuel W. Davies, who was a delegate events of the great expedition, and means "You spell your name Davies?" "Yes, more. It was very important that a man him the degree of Doctor of Laws. He was applied to to write the history of the voyage, and he undertook it for the snug sum of six thousand pounds. We think it asks if this word is really a corruption of was a snug sum, because he had every aid with the help of the papers of the learned is still preserved in the epithet "Old Joseph Banks, afterwards Sir Joseph this paper to consider; but our impression of Stockbridge; Mr. James Havens, of is, that it did not come fully up to what Shelter Island; Capt. John Freebody, of was expected; and that after a few years Rhode Island; John Livingston, Esq., the it found but few readers. However, it Rev. T. B. Chandler, D.D., Mr. Okey was full and minute, and that was what Hoogland, of Bordenton; Mr. Benjamin was at first desired. Therefore, no sooner had a copy of Dr. Hawkesworth's two of Physick in New London; Dr. John ponderous quartos reached the hands of Sparhawk, of Philadelphia; Lindley Murthe well-known publisher, James Rivington, ray, Esq., the Rev. John Ogilvie, D.D., than he made preparations for reissuing Capt. Alexander Grant, commanding his the work in New York. Mr. Rivington Majesty's vessels on the great Lakes; John at once issued his proposals to print the Tabor Kemp, Esq., his Majesty's Attorney work by subscription, in two moderate General for the Province of New York; now before us, as evidence that he carried ty's 10th Regiment; Dr. James Montout his intention. There is further evidence that Mr. Rivington was pretty well McLean, at Niagara; Mr. Ephraim Van patronized in the undertaking, for his list Veghton, of Albany; Mr. Alexander of patrons' names, published immediately after the title-page, occupies seventeen pages. This brings us to the main object Elisas [Elias?] Boudinot, Esq., of New about one hundred years ago.

How well Dr. Hawkesworth executed

the list is of great historical interest, as Col. Barnard, commanding the Royal indeed are the names on all the seventeen Regiment of Welch Fusileers; Mr. Thomas pages; but to an old resident of New York, Udall, of Islip; Nicholas Gouverneur, Esq., those at the commencement of the list must at Mount Pleasant, New Jersey; Hector hundred and fifty-six names on the four have as good claim for notice as these. pages, a few of which follow:—" The Rev. Those will, doubtless, at some time receive Myles Cooper, LL.D., President of King's due attention. College; Capt. Anthony Rutgers, Isaac Ogden, Esq., of New-Ark; the Honourable Names at Philadelphia and its Vicinities," Charles Apthorpe, Esq., Mr. Richard occupying two pages. Then "Names at Deane, Capt. John Montresor, Mr. Peter Keteltas, Capt. Cornelius Haight, Mr. fifty-seven. This list looks much like one Theophilact Bache, Mr. Samuel Verplank, made up at random in N. C. a few years Mr. Nicholas Hoffman, Mr. Jacobus Van past. Then comes a long list of four pages Zandt, Rev. Charles Inglis, Dr. Mitchell, "from Kingston, in Jamaica." Then a of his Majesty's Hospital; James Delancy, short list "from Westmoreland, in Savan-Esq., Mr. Bernard Romans, Mr. John nah Le Mar, in Jamaica." Next a list "at Andrew Johnston, of Perth Amboy; Mr. Antigua," of about thirty. A small list of HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

his task does not come within the scope of William Smith, printer; Mr. John Serjeant, sized octavos. A copy of his edition is Ensign John Blennerhassett, of his Majesof this paper, which was to say something York; Jacob Le Roy, Esq., John Foxcroft, upon the patronage of literary enterprises Esq., his Majesty's Post Master General; Col. Cleveland, commanding his Majesty's The imprint of Rivington's edition is Royal Artillery in North America; Abrasimply "New York: Printed by James ham Ogden, Esq., of Morristown; the Rivington, 1774." The first four pages of Hon. William Axtell, Esq., Mr. Vivian subscribers' names are taken up with those Davenport, Mr. Abraham Beekman, the "living in the city and vicinities of New Right Hon. the Earl of Sterling, Dr. York, and in New Jersey." This part of Ogden, of Long Island; Mr. Henry Cuyler, be peculiarly so. Some one might do good St. John, Esq., of Orange County; Richard service by preparing notices of them for Washington, Esq." These are all we have the Historical Magazine. There are one space for. Of course many passed over five from Pensacola. Then a list "in Bos-House of Assembly." its Vicinities." It would, doubtless, gratify "Benjamin Franklin, Esq." many if we could give the list entire, but In this connection we will inquire what names, the first of which is "Honours-try containing a list of its patrons? ble John Adams, Esq." We see, also, Mr. Lewis Deblois, Tristram Dalton, Esq., of Newbury Port; William Tudor, Esq., Captain Jabez Hatch, Mr. William Burbeck, Col. John Erving, Col. Phips, Cambridge; William Witmore, Esq., Salem; Rev. Aaron Whitney, Northfield; Josiah Quincy, Esq., Braintree; Rev. Zabdiel Adams, Lunenburg; Hon. James Humphreys, Esq., Weymouth; Mr. Nathaniel Waterman.

We next have "List of Subscribers'

Among the Connecticut subscribers we notice the names of Silas Deane, Esq., of Weathersfield; Christopher Leffingwell, months (2,289, of which 206 were bound books)

Waterman, of Wallingford.

"At Quebec" there was a goodly number of patrons, as also "in the Great Nine Partners." On the seventeenth and last page of the subscribers is a list "at Dominica," among which are some well-known surnames, as Tench, Tyson, Bernard, Cameron, Fowle, and Wentworth. The "Rev. Mr. Zubly lived then in Savannah, Ga. He subscribed for 'six sets.'" "Mr. John Anderson, Printer, New York," and "Mr. Thomas Updike Fosdick," close the Hat. It may be difficult for readers in general to locate the "Great Nine Partners," as modern Gazetteers do not mention such a place. It was in the Province of New York, adjacent to Connecticut, extending to the Hudson river, in which were afterwards the towns of Amenia, Clinton, Stanford, and Washington.

Nothing has been said about the subscribers in several places. It may be well to remark that the list of Philadelphians is quite respectable, and would probably considerably out-number the present list of subscribers to the Historical Magazine. The first name is that of "His Excellency" William Franklin, Esq., Governour of New Jersey." The next is "the Honourable James Hamilton, Esq.," then "Joseph Gal-warded for the Society's collections, two origilowny, Kaq., Speaker of the Honourable nal letters of Andrew Jackson; in one of which we can only say it consists of forty-two is the earliest work published in this coun-

Oddly enough we ton, in the Province of Massachusetts, and! find among the "Kingston, Jamaica" names,

Societies and their Proceedings.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY .- January 19. 1864, the regular monthly meeting was held, the President, W. L. Newberry, E.q., in the

The additions to the Library for the past two End., of Norwich; and the Rev. Simon included extensive publications from Rev. Joseph Allen, D.D., of Massachusetts, from Mr. Consul Eastman, of Bristol, England, in behalf of mem-bers of the Society of Friends, in Great Britain, embracing comprehensive serials and pamphlets of religion, benevolence, and reform; and numerous other sources.

To the cabinet, among others, were contributed a piece of canvass, believed to be a relic of the disastrous expedition of Sir John Franklin, brought by Mr. R. Kennicott, from a scientific tour in the extreme North. Mr. J. A. McAlister obligingly presented a copy of the print entitled "Congressional Pugilists," Philadelphia, 1798. Mr. Consul Eastman forwarded specimens of sea-weeds from "Bristol Channel," and a beautiful piece of carved wood from the "Screen" separating the choir and the chancel of the parish church in Wrington, Somerset, England, where Hannah More worshipped—believed to be 500 years old.

Files of the "Deseret News," vol. 2 to 12th inclusive, bound, were received from Great Salt Lake City; also the Mormon Bible, first edition.

Palmyra, 1830.

The correspondence for two months (49 letters received, and 128 written) was submitted.
Mr. A. J. Hill, U. S. A., announced his intended publication of an exclusively "aboriginal" map of Minnesota, designating mounds, Indian villages, trails, &c., with a complete restoration (as far as possible) of aboriginal names of localities.

the writer freely expressed (in 1845) his impressions of a late President of the United States.

A letter was read asking aid to an intended history of the "Kankakee Valley," in Illinois. Hon. H. S. Baird, of Green Bay, presented to the Society manuscript copies of two papers prepared by him, one on the Settlement of Green Bay, the other on the North American Indians.

A monograph on the "Siege and Capture of Island No. 10," prepared by Mr. G. P. Upton, an eye-witness, was obligingly presented by that gentleman. It gives a complete view of the principal operations resulting in the reduction of that formidable post.

The Hon. J. B. French, of Lowell, Mass., forwarded the annual report for 1863, of the monthly and yearly rain-fall at Laconia, at the outlet of Lake Winnipiseogee, N. H., also at Lake Village, four miles south, on the sime stream. The yearly aggregate was at the former 52.35 inches; at the latter, 48.31 inches. (Blodgett gives the mean annual rain-fall at Chicago, at 30 inches.)

The Treasurer's report for the last year submitted, exhibited a total expenditure for the year of $1,363.94, leaving a balance in hand of $172.61. Outstanding indebtedness would probably be met by the balance in the treasury and the collection of unreceived dues.

The Society's "Investment Fund," recently commenced, now amounts to $1,800.

George F. Rumsey, Esq., was elected Trea-

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.—Boston, Mass., January 7.—The annual meeting of this Society was held on Thursday, and was very well attended. Several donations were received, and the annual reports of the officers were presented. The Treasurer's report showed a balance of money to the credit of the Society, and the Curator stated the number of coins and medals to be about one thousand, among which are several rare pieces. A committee was appointed to present a list of officers for the present year; they reported the former board for re-election, which was the pleasure of the Society. The officers are therefore as follows: President-Dr. ing the same period have been increased $2500, Winslow Lewis. Vice-President and Curator-Jeremiah Colburn. Treasurer-Henry Davenport. Secretary-Wm. S. Appleton.

Mr. Seavey exhibited a small parcel of very choice and valuable American coins. Among known; a half-dime of 1802, one of five, the whole number believed to exist at present, or rather known to collectors to exist, and a New York copper of 1787, with the head of George Clinton, which is by far the finest of the half-dozen known. The collection also contained other rare varieties of New York coppers, unusually perfect specimens of early dimes, and rare patterns prepared at the U.S. Mint, but never adopted for the coinage. Mr. Seavey also show-ed the two half-eagles by the acquisition of which he had completed his series of the issues of gold of the United States. Other gentlemen exhibited coins of less value and interest. The meeting was an unusually pleasant and successful one.

DORCHESTER ANTIQUARIAN AND HISTORICAL Society.—Dorchester, Jan. 22.—At the twentysecond annual meeting of this Society, on Friday, officers were elected as follows:

President—Edmund P. Tileston. Curators-Edmund J. Baker, Charles M. S. Churchill, Samuel Blake. Corresponding Secretary—Ebenezer Clapp. Librarian-Edward Holden. Assistant Librarian-Samuel Blake. Chronologist-Nathaniel W. Tileston. In the increase of the library and cabinet and in finances, the Society was shown to be in good condition.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIE-TY.—Boston, Jan. 6.—The annual meeting was held at three o'clock this afternoon, at the Society's rooms, No. 13 Bromfield-street, President Lewis in the chair.

The report of the Corresponding Secretary showed that since the last meeting letters accepting membership had been received from Charles O. Whitmore, of Boston, D. P. Corey, of Malden, Augustus Thorndike Perkins, of Boston, as resident members; and Hon. Wm. M. Wilson, of Greenville, Ohio, Buckingham Smith, of New York, as corresponding members.

The report of the Librarian showed that since the last annual meeting there had been received 327 volumes, 1192 pamphlets, and 44 manuscripts, maps, and charts.

The report of the Treasurer showed that during the past year the ordinary receipts have paid the ordinary expenses, leaving the Society entirely free from debt, and a balance in the treasury of $45.25. The permanent funds durall of which has been or may properly be placed in the hands of trustees, and the income thereof only annually expended.

The Committee on Lectures and Essays reported that there had been fourteen papers read them were a silver dollar of 1794, the finest before the Society at its monthly meetings durmounted . . . . that was gallopping officer. Had Ctn. Lamb been only around us. Then we had our turn, and Major, I should have asked for him. occupy his lordship's Hd. quarters. You venient to return. had accounts of the two skirmishes. I could not help growing jealous, and began Adieu. to think of a visit to your Batteries, But soon found there was in this quarter work enough for me, great deal to much indeed for my youth and the means that I have.

Lord Cornwallis Having not succeeding voyage. I thought first the man was going ing description of Quebec in 1701: to New York, then to Pottomack, or Balmarshes available by one high a. my dear friend our conduct may have points. met with your approbation. I wish both from esteem and friendship.

semble militia, to replenish our few continentals,—to have a part of them in re-height. diness to Reinforce General Green, and am waiting at that fork of York River to general is in the upper town in the most oppose either way His lordships ma-prominent point. It is one hundred and nuievers. p call him a Mad Man. But was any ad- and the river below, whence you can devantage taken of him when he commanded scry all that you desire to see. in person? To speak plain English, I am devilish afraid of him.

ward, we are in want of an artillery field Montreal, sixty leagues above Quebec.

for many, many mile had the pleasure to wish Ctn. Stephens might make it con-

My most respectfull and affectionate thought all was over, and owing to your compliments to Mrs. Knox. I am so imsiege of New York, I anticipated great prudent as to take the liberty to address a deal of ease and happiness. Indeed, I kiss to Lucy and a paternal one to my son.

> Yours for ever, LAFAYETTE.

General Knox.

QUEBEC IN 1701.—In a manuscript enin land journeyings, has undertaken a water titled "Lettres Canadiennes" is the follow-timore, But on a sudden he entered York so common to all mankind, made me ex-River, and is at York and Gloster out of amine Kebec closely on my arrival. This our reach, refreshing his troops and town is situated 2000 leagues from France. meditating mischief. York is on high It is divided into the upper and lower ground, surrounded with creeks and town. In the latter reside the merchants . and those who trade by sea. The houses this to my surprise he does not fortify, are all built quite comfortably of a black Gloster is a neck of land projecting into stone as fine and hard as marble. The the River, and very useful to the defeat of roadstead is defended by a large platform shipping, these my lord is fortifying. Ports- in the middle, which is level with the water, mouth is not evacuated, so that he is so that hostile vessels could not be at divided in three points, two of which I anchor without being badly handled as confess are the same thing. But should a well by the cannon of this platform as by naval superiority come great advantages those of a fort which commands the city might be obtained in this quarter. I wish and harbor, on one of the most precipitous

From the lower to the upper town there is a road which winds around imperceptibly At the present I am trying to conjure up for carts and waggons, which have nevera cavelry to collect levies, to arm and as-theless much difficulty in ascending. The upper town is situated at an extraordinary

The house of the viceroy or governortwenty feet long, and two stories high, Lord Cornwallis abilities are to me more with several pavilions which form additions alarming than his superiority of forces. I in front and behind, with a terrace of ever had a great opinion of him, our papers eighty feet overlooking the lower town

The governor-general who now resides in this castle is called M. C. Chevalier de Major Cush Having gone to the North-Caillieres, formerly governor of the city of both by the French and the Indians, who 8vo. 16 pp.; of the visits in 1798, Mr. equally regard him as the common father Hardie published an account that I have of all the inhabitants of Canada. To him not seen; of those in 1799 and 1803, I we are indebted for all the fortifications of know no accounts published at the time; the country, which have been erected by of that of 1805, there is "An Account of the his care. All persons of distinction also Malignant Fever which prevailed in the reside in the upper town. There is a city of New York, during the Autumn of bishop and canons whose chapter is com- 1805." By James Hardie. New York: plete. There is also a fine seminary and Southwick and Hardcastle, 1805, 8vo. several churches, among which that of the 196 pp.; of the last great visit there is Jesuits and that of the Recollects are the "An Account of the Yellow Fever which most modern in the country. The cloister year 1822, to which is prefixed a brief of these good fathers is lighted on all sides sketch of the different pestilential diseases with stained glass windows bearing the with which this city was afflicted in the arms of several benefactors of the house. years 1798, 1799, 1803, and 1805," &c., by The intendant's office alone is badly situated James Hardie. on a low spot near the little river.

The city, upper and lower, is situated between two considerable mountains, one in 1803 and 1805, contain accounts for those higher than the other. One is called Cap years, but I do not know that they were au Diamants, because an extraordinary printed separately. quantity is found on the rocks, which are not surpassed in beauty by real diamonds, appeared during these visitations, or after and only lack hardness. The other mounthem, as "Inquiry into the cause of the tain is called Saut au Matelot, so termed, prevalence of the Yellow Fever in New because during the first times of the esta- York," by Dr. Valentine Seamen; "Oriblishment of the French in this colony, a gin of the Pestilential Fever," by Dr. sailor who went too near the brink went E. Smith; "Manley's Dissertation on the down in spite of himself. Around this last | Yellow Fever," etc. mountain a little river runs by the inten-

dant's.-L'Abeille.

Account of the Epidemical Fever which late- ordine di grado cavalleresco." ly prevailed in the city of New York," &c., 66 pp.; and also, "An Account of the Epidemic Fever which prevailed in the city of New York during part of the Summer and Fall of 1795," by Richard Bayley. ing French, "Chevalier de la milica

This gentleman is respected and beloved New York: T. and J. Swords, 1796, This last faces the castle, and is the occurred in the city of New York in the New York: Samuel Marks, 1822, 12mo., 120 pp.

The reports of Dr. Miller to the governor

Many medical treatises on the fever

"SIR CHRISTOPHER GARDINER, KNIGHT OF THE GOLDEN MELICE.—Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, in his remarks at a meeting ACCOUNTS OF THE YELLOW FEVER IN of the Massachusetts Historical Society, in NEW YORK.—The city of New York was 1858, was, I believe, the first to suggest several times visited by this dreadful that the "melice," which has puzzled so scourge, which had become habitual at many readers of Winthrop's Journal, and New Orleans till a beast removed the given occasion to much fanciful specula-beastly things which engendered it. Of tion, was nothing more than the Italian the first visit, in Aug., Sept., and Oct., milizia, or French milice, applicable, in 1791, there is a dissertation by Dr. J. S. either language, to any order of knight-Addom; of that of 1793, I know no special hood. Thus, the vocab. della crusca, with account; of that of 1795, there is "A brief other significations of milizia, gives "per

Mr. Winthrop does not, however, appear by M. L. Davis. New York; 1795, 8vo. to have been aware that the title assumed side at each meeting, and the Secretary to keep a brief record of its proceedings, with a list of members present, and preserve the papers read for the archives of the Society. The regular business to commence at 8 o'clock, and consist in the reading of papers, by appointment at a previous meeting, or voluntary written communications, by any member, of which notice shall have been given at the last previous meeting, and in such discussions as may be elicited by such paper or communications. There is also to be, at each meeting, some subject, appropriate to the objects of the Society, named for consideration and discussion by the Club, at its next meeting -religious or political topics being expressly excluded. Every member is desired and expected to attend all the meetings, and any member may invite to any of the meetings a non-resident friend. The report of the committee was adopted, and on motion of O. G. Steele, the first meeting of the Club was appointed to be held at the residence of M. Fillmore, on Monday evening, Nov. 16.

At the request of Mr. Fillmore, Lewis F. Allen consented to prepare a paper to be read at the first meeting of the Club, on the Rise and Fall of the Great Lakes. Mr. Fillmore suggested as a subject for discussion incidental thereto -" Did those Lakes ever empty their waters into the Mississippi; and what are the evidences as to such fact? The President mentioned that Peter Force, at Washington, had a very large and important collection of papers and documents relative to the history of public events and national affairs, which, not being in a fire-proof depository, are liable at any time to be destroyed, and the destruction of which would be a public loss, wholly irreparable. He thought it would be proper for the Historical Societies of the country to unite in a petition to Congress, that this collection be purchased by the Government, if Mr. Force could be induced to thus dispose of it.

On motion of L. F. Allen, the President of this Society was requested to address a letter to Mr. Force on the subject, and report his reply, when received.

The President made some remarks on the importance of obtaining additional subscriptions from fifty members, for a term of five years, to ensure adequate funds for the objects of the Society. On a resolution, introduced by Mr. Fillmore, the subject was referred to a committee of three, to report at the next monthly meeting. The President nameu as such and Dennis Dr. Jas. P. White, G. G. Steele, and Dennis referred the subject as to the time when the the Press of Buffalo from 1835 to 1863." The annual dues of members shall commence, reported that the payment of the initiation fee should be deemed sufficient for the calendar year in which the member is elected, and his dues should therefore not commence until the January next succeeding such election; and when a member is elected after the 1st of October, his initiation fee shall be in full for the next calendar year.

On motion of L. F. Allen, Mr. Fillmore, Geo. W. Clinton, and Jno. B. Skinner were constituted a committee to procure the Annual Address to be delivered before the Society on the second Tuesday in January next, as required by the Constitution.

December.—At the meeting for December, M. Fillmore, President, in the Chair, and Guy H. Salisbury, Secretary, the following were among the proceedings had:

Mr. Salisbury, as Corresponding Secretary.

made a written report.

There have been recent applications made to the Secretary for copies of the Constitution and By-laws of this Society, from the cities of Schenectady, Oswego, and Cleveland, at which places it is contemplated to organize similar institutions.

It is a fact now scarcely known, that as early as 1844, an Historical Society was initiated in this city, by a few spirited young men, who had weekly meetings, and kept the Society alive for a year and a half. Alexander J. Sheldon, who was the first President of the "Red Jacket Historical Society," as it was styled, has deposited with the Buffalo Historical Society the record book of this earlier institution, containing its Constitution and By-laws, the names of its members, the proceedings had at its meetings presenting matters of much interest. Among the names of its members, who are yet living and residing here, are—A. J. Sheldon, Wm. H. Walk-er, Edward Bristol, DeWitt C. Weed, Wm. C. Sweet, Chas. R. Walker, Geo. Truscott, Jas. G. Dudley, Robert Williams, Wm. T. Wardwell, Bronson C. Rumsey, Henry Bristol, Dexter P. Rumsey, Franklin Williams, Stephen D. Caldwell, George B. Webster, Everard Palmer. committee was appointed by the "Red Jackets" to write up a history of Buffalo, but no progress was reported.

The first of the weekly meetings of the Historical Club, for the present season, was held at the residence of the President, Mr. Fillmore, on the 17th of November, at which Lewis F. Allen read a paper on the "Rise and Fall of the Great Lakes." The second meeting was at O. G. Steele's, November 23d, when a paper was read N. K. Hall, from the committee to which was by C. F. S. Thomas, entitled "Reminiscences of third meeting was at Thomas C. Welch's, November 30th, when Guy H. Salisbury read a paper on the "Early History of the Press of Erie County."

The President reported that he had addressed a letter to Peter Force, Esq., of Washington, in reference to a sale of his Historical Collection to the Government, but had received no answer.

The President also reported that Rev. Dr. Hosmer had kindly consented to deliver the Annual Address before the Society, on the 12th of January next.

N. K. Hall, from the committee to whom it had been referred to consider what measures should be taken to obtain a Local History of each town in the county, submitted a report, recommending that suitable efforts be made to procure the organization of such Societies. The report was accompanied by the draft of a circular, to be signed by the President and Corresponding Secretary, which the committee suggest be sent to a number of the prominent citizens of each town in the county, with copies of the Constitution and By-laws of the Society. The report and circular were adopted.

The President suggested that the map made by the late Judge Augustus Porter, of the "Phelps and Gorham Purchase," should be procured for the Society, and, on motion of L. F. Allen, the President was requested to address Hon. A. S. Porter, of Niagara Falls, for the purpose of obtaining such of the papers, etc., of Judge Porter as may be properly preserved by this Society.

On motion of L. F. Allen, Judge Clinton was requested to endeavor to procure for this Society the stone intended by Major Noah, in 1825, as the corner-stone of his proposed city of "Ararat," on Grand Island.

The President thought that Mr. Allen should write a history of the stone, and matters connected, for the Society; and, on motion of Judge Clinton, Mr. A. was requested to prepare such a paper.

On motion of L. F. Allen, the Treasurer and Corresponding Secretary were appointed a committee to make arrangements for the delivery of the Annual Address, and the election of officers, on the 12th of January next.

LONG ISLAND HISTORICAL SOCIETY. - Brooklyn, January 7, 1864.—At a regular meeting of the Society held at its rooms, the Rev. Dr. West The Librarian, Dr. H. R. Stiles, presided. announced the receipt of 79 works, and a por- Society, for a manuscript history of that institutrait of Gen. Meade. The paper of the evening tion from its commencement, and to Miss Eva was an interesting one on "President Monroe, Owen for the beautiful manner in which the his Administration and Doctrine," by Rev. manuscript is presented.

Joshua Leavitt, D.D. The officers of the Society are, President—James Carson Brevoort. First Vice-President—John Greenwood. Second Vice-President-Charles E. West. Foreign Corre-Frestdering Secretary—Henry C. Murphy. Home Corresponding Secretary—John Winslow. Recording Secretary—A. Cook Hull. Treasurer—Charles Congdon. Librarian—Henry R. Stiles.

NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—New York, January 5.—The annual business meeting of the Society was held in its building on Second Avenue. As usual, the reports were made by the different officers and by the Executive Committee. The treasurer's report showed receipts during the year to the amount of $13,600. The Society is thus seen to be in a highly flourishing condition, the number of resident members, who pay the annual fee of five dollars, and life members, being 1800; of correspondent and honorary members there are 3803 more.

During the year 1400 books and pamphlets were added to the library.

The annual election then took place, and the following officers were chosen:

President-Frederic De Peyster. First Vice-President—Thomas De Witt, D.D. Second Vice-President—Benjamin R. Winthrop. Foreign Corresponding Secretary—George Bancroft, LL.D. Domestic Corresponding Secretary—Samuel Osgood, D.D. Recording Secretary-Andrew Warner. Treasurer-Benj. H. Field. Librarian-George H. Moore.

RHODE ISLAND.

RHODE ISLAND HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the Rhode Island Historical Society was held at the Cabinet, the President in the chair.

The reports of the Cabinet Keepers of the Northern and Southern Districts were presented, read, and placed on file.

A letter relative to the exhumation of Indian bones on the line of the Newport Railroad was read and ordered to be placed on file.

The annual report of the Treasurer was presented and ordered to be placed on file.

Upon motion of the Rev. Mr. Stone, the thanks of the Society were presented to J. Wingste Thornton, of Boston, for a donation of original manuscripts relative to the privateer Yankee; also, to the Second Employment officers for the ensuing year: President—Albert G. Green. First Vice-President-Samuel G. Arnold. Second Vice-President-George A. Brayton. Secretary-Sidney S. Rider. Treasurer-Welcome A. Greene. Cabinet Keeper and Librarian for the Northern District-Edwin M. Stone. Cabinet Keeper and Librarian for the Southern District—Benj. B. Howland. Committee on the Nomination of Members-E. M. Stone, Wm. Gammell, J. A. How-Audit Committee-Amherst Wm. H. Helme. Committee on Buildings and Grounds-Albert G. Green, S. W. Lothrop, John A. Howland. Committee on Lectures-Sidney S. Rider, Thos. A. Doyle, R. P. Everett.

Hotes on Books.

Sketch of Education in Upper and Lower Canada, 1864. By J. George Hodgins, LL.B., F.R.G.S.

A very valuable sketch; comprises much in a small space. Of recent matters it furnishes many valuable tables and statements well worthy the examination of those interested in the history of education here. In Canada religious schools have been maintained, and have answered well. Late revelations in New York, and more extensive suppressions, seem to show that we have excluded Christianity to introduce paganism.

On page 12 we find the following: "The Franciscans had a good many elementary schools for boys before the conquest." What is the authority for this?

Rhode Island in the Rebellion. By Edwin W Stone, of the First Regiment Rhode Island Light Artillery. Providence: G. H. Whitney, 1864. 120, 398.

WERE we to be critical, we should object to this title for the sake of the State, for we believe that Rhode Island had no part or lot in the Rebellion, and has, as Mr. Stone shows, given the said Rebellion pretty hard knocks for so small a state.

The work is mainly a series of letters, from December, 1861, to the summer of 1863, comprising a full account of the operations of the Army of the Potomac, and especially of the which is extremely well written, embraces a on the Hessians, and to The British 2 succinct history of the services of Rhode Magazine for an article on Earthquakes.

The following named gentlemen were elected Island down to the period when the letters commence.

> The whole work is most creditable, written with grace and spirit, and, to all appearances, as impartial as it is dignified. It is one of the most interesting personal narratives of the war, and reflects great credit on Mr. Stone.

The value of the work is enhanced by an

The appendix contains an abridged history of all the R. I. regiments, prepared with great care.

The Annals of Iowa; a Quarterly Publication, by the State Historical Society at Iowa City. No. V. January, 1864. Davenport.

This periodical opens its second year, still continuing, however, the first volume. It contains a sketch of Colonel D. J. Wilson, 6th Iowa Cavalry, and of Brig.-Gen. B. S. Roberts, a hero of two wars; a continuation of the history of Scott County; a portrait and sketch of Hon. Hiram Price; and many other interesting articles. We are happy to see that Iowa is sustaining this creditable record of its history.

Miscellany.

THE house of Dr. J. S. M. Ramsey, at Mecklenburg, near Knoxville, Tenn., was destroyed by fire recently, and with it the only collection of materials from which a complete history of Tennessee, from its earliest settlement, could be written. Dr. Ramsey made the collection with great care.

MR. CHARLES S. FELLOWS, of Bangor, Maine, is preparing a Genealogy and Biography of the Fellows family, and invites correspondence from all who bear the names of Fellows, Fellowes, or Felloe, and especially copies of family records, monumental inscriptions, etc.

A HISTORICAL SOCIETY has been formed at Yankton, in Dakota Territory, under the name of the Dakota Historical Society. We hope to receive its charter and issues to announce to our readers.

WE were recently surprised to find an article from our columns translated into a periodical printed at Rome, The Chronicles of the Franciscan Missions.

WE are indebted to the new and superior Rhode Island regiments. The introduction, literary paper, The Round Tuble, for the article which is extremely well written, embraces a on the Hessians, and to The British American

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

MARCH, 1864.

No. 3.

General Bepartment.

LONG ISLAND.

BY W. ALFRED JONES, A. M., Librarian of Columbia College.

Read before the Long Island Historical Society, November 5, 1868.

to attempt an historical sketch, much less a detailed account, of Long Island, topolimits of a lecture,—as a full consideration your kindness, and confess a desire to conof any one of the numerous topics of this nect our name, again, with the home of paper would exhaust the time and patience our fathers. of the most complaisant audience. Anything like copiousness of detail or thorough- has never been overrated. Next to the ness of treatment is, consequently, quite city of New York, it is the oldest portion out of the question. Our utmost endeavor of the State that had been visited and will be to aim at presenting a very brief, settled by Dutch and English. Previous to very rapid, and yet tolerably comprehenthe Revolution, Long Island constituted sive, sketch of the notabilia, men and the oldest and most important part of the things, of Long Island,—a portion of the colony. A century ago the population of Empire State far too little known, except Long Island (says Prime) was more than to native Long-Islanders, residents of long that of the city of New York, and more standing, or those who, from business con-than one-third that of the province. At nections, social ties, or pleasure excursions, the commencement of this century, Long have become somewhat acquainted with her Island was still a most important part of varied resources and manifold attractions.

It is, moreover, with no affectation of modesty, that we undertake this task (a antiquary, the humorist, the sportsman, labor of love though it be), when we reflect on our avowed incompetence, compared with certain gentlemen here present, who, from birth, ampler information, and the HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

perhaps, to be at the pains to condense within a sketch, what might be so much more attractively amplified into a volume we beg the forbearance, and deprecate in advance the criticism, of any student, historical or antiquarian, who might complain of the very superficial and discursive nature of this essay.

Though a native New-Yorker, yet, as It may seem almost an act of presumption the descendant of Long-Islanders, we take a special pride and interest in the Island. and all that relates to it. On this ground, graphical and statistical, within the ordinary too, we seem to feel a certain claim on

> The historical importance of Long Island the State.

> To the student of political history, the the invalid, and the traveller for pleasure, Long Island holds out many and various attractions.

Her history, colonial and revolutionary; nature of their researches, are far better the Indian tribes (her original proprietors); fitted to treat this subject, and yet whose the settlement of her towns; their quaint avorable suffrages we should be most anx-nomenclature; her old churches and houses; ious to gain. Since no one has, however, the manorial grants of the Suffolk and thought it expedient to present such a mere Queens County patentees; the quaint Engsummary as we propose to give—unwilling, lish reminiscences of the east end, and the nurtures—are all topics of interest.

The celebrated men, too, who first drew signal success. breath in this favored region, and those being recorded.

We shall attempt, concisely enough, to century. is intended to bear the same relation to period. it as a preface to the volume of history.

thirteen tribes of native Indians were (more negro than Indian) of the once hull died; the Bowne house at Flushing consequence between the Indians and the Revolution. white inhabitants occurred in 1653, at Fort Neck (the seat of the Floyd Jones family). the famous Captain John Underhill being the victor.

The colonial history of Long Island to the period of the Revolution is occupied (in its earlier records) with Indian difficulties; afterwards with civil protests of the Dutch against the Duke of York's government; with party politics and local disputes. On the establishment of the English colonial dominion on Long Island, the Duke's laws (which tradition declares to have been drawn up by no less a personage than Lord Chancellor Clarendon, the great historian) were promulgated for the government of the province, and became the The Dutch had preestablished code. viously governed the western end for nearly half a century.

During the era of the Revolutionthroughout almost the entire war—the Island was held by the British. It contained but not as they should be. A brief yet many patriotic citizens, however, who secretly gave "material aid" to their fellow- narrative remains to be written. Thomp-

picturesque relics of the Dutch, in the and on its soil at least one important action western; the romantic hardships of the was fought—the Battle of Long Island, at whale fishery, and the bold race of men it Gowanus—from which the masterly retreat to New York was conducted with such

The principal towns on Long Island who in later life retired here to enjoy a were settled almost contemporaneously by calm and happy old age, are worthy of the Dutch and English, at either end of the Island, about the middle of the seventeenth Southold was the first town touch upon all these points,—for we can settled on Long Island—1649. Memorials do little more,—and we must again declare of the original colonists are to be found in that the present paper is but introductory the very few old houses and churches still to the historical course that will follow, and remaining—antiquarian relics of that early

The principal of these (so far as we can On the arrival of the European colonists, learn) are the Cortelyou house at Gowanus —the headquarters of Lord Stirling at the found in possession of the Island. At pre-Battle of Long Island; the old stone house sent a mere handful of half-breeds remain at New Utrecht, in which General Woodpowerful and predominant Montauks, and the Young's place at Southold; the old but a meagre remnant of the Shinnecock stone cottage at Ravenswood; and the tribe, settled on a Government reservation Fort Neck mansion, built by Judge Thomas at Shinnecock. The only skirmish of any Jones, the loyalist, just previous to the

> In Flatbush and in Brooklyn were standing, at the commencement of the present century, and even later, houses of equal or greater antiquity, not to omit the old brick house built by Major Thomas Jones, at Massapequa, 1696, and removed 1835,the property, at that time, of Hon. David S. Jones. At South Hampton and at East Hampton several very old houses are yet standing.

> A few quite ancient houses of worship are still to be found. The Presbyterian meeting-house at East Hampton; the Caroline Church at Setauket (the oldest Episcopal church on Long Island); and the Quaker meeting-house at Flushing-the oldest house of worship on Long Island, built 1690—are the principal.

The Long Island Historical Library is still limited. Its history and antiquities have, to be sure, been explored and discussed, compiled and commented upon, comprehensive, a classical but yet familiar, countrymen, in nearly its whole extent; son's volumes contain the material for a history, and disclose the sources for further Cobbett's Year on Long Island, as might research; but they do not present history be expected, is fresh and racy in point of in the high and strict sense. They include style and sarcasm; most readable for agrian ample store of facts, not philosophically cultural remarks and general observations digested, nor yet skilfully arranged. The on character and manners. He saw comcompiler, as the historian always modestly calls himself, transferred too many documents and records, valuable as evidence, at Hyde Park, the seat of the Ludlows, or illustrative of the text, but burdensome this book was written, 1817, as well as his to the reader. He is, perhaps, too, in his biographical sketches, which form a sort of Long Island family history (by far the most interesting portion of his work to all and a genuine humorist, has left capital interested in the details), too much of a Long Island sketches-local, sporting, and genealogist, and not enough of a biogra- familiar. His biographer, the late Wm. pher. With these obvious defects (and Henry Herbert, the accomplished scholar, notwithstanding other defects of style and litterateur, and sportsman, has left, in Notes manner), full of matter as it undoubtedly is, and the work of an honorable man and Complete Angler, some pleasant references zealous inquirer, it is thus far the bestthe accredited history of Long Island.

Wood's History of the Settlement of the Towns of Long Island, and Furman's Notes on Brooklyn, both of which tracts preceded it, are truly valuable sketches, careful in it also presents the fruit of antiquarian research and clear in style. Dr. Strong's research. This work is replete with im-History of Flatbush, Mr. Riker's History of Newtown, Judge Benson's Memoranda, and occasional historical sermons, afford useful material for local history.

Island is to be found in Denton's Descrip-ling MSS, for the future historian, if indeed tion of New York, of which Long Island that classical scholar and loving chronicler was then the part best known and most of the past does not himself perform a compactly peopled, after the Island of duty to which he is fully competent—that Manhattan itself. It has been reprinted of condensing his vivid facts and historical by Gowans, the well known bibliopole of illustrations, running through three or New York City, with interesting notes by four compact historical chapters, into a Judge Furman. It is a quaint and curious succinct narrative. description of the city and the Island, very literal and very bald as to style, written in flight, we believe, off Montauk—a species a vein of remarkable naiveté. The author of spirit-of-the-cape episode—and with her of this pamphlet of twenty pages, published we conclude the list of literary and in 1670, was the son of the first clergyman historical illustrations of Long Island. of Hempstead, who came to this country in 1644. curiosity.

Dr. Dwight, in his journal (a little prolix, yet generally sensible, and valuable as inclination to enter. a faithful picture of manners at the beginpleasant descriptions of places and customs. view of a most interesting country.

paratively little of the Island; chiefly the neighborhood of North Hempstead, where, English Grammar, the most popular work of its class ever published.

The late Wm. P. Hawes, a lively writer on Fishing to the American reprint of the to Long Island, as well as in his larger works on fishing, shooting, and the horse.

The Rev. Mr. Prime's compilation is chiefly important as an outline of the ecclesiastical history of Long Island, though it also presents the fruit of antiquarian portant facts, and is drawn up with accuracy in a compact form.

Mr. Onderdonk's valuable book of cut tings, the "Incidents of the Revolution on The earliest printed account of Long Long Island," may be regarded as interest-

Mrs. Sigourney has essayed a poetical From time to time, newspaper correspon-It is a literary and historical dents send a letter up to town from their summer retreats, but into this extensive class of literature we want both time and thirds of Long Island, the county of so-because they preserved much of the primicalled "pine barrens" (1) and sand, yet tive habits of the original settlers; yet if abounding in rich "necks" on both sides statistics are to be credited, more of her of the Island, and teeming trout streams. population can read and write than that of It is the county of the great patents of the any other county in the State. The very Nicolls, the Smiths, the Gardiners, the first academy in the State-Clinton Acade-Floyds, the Lawrences, the Thompsons, the my—was established at East Hampton Lloyds, and other leading families—estates 1784-7, and since the commencement of equal in extent almost to some of the the century she has had her fair proportion great old North River manorial grants; of schools and academies. as, for instance, the Nicoll patent of originally nearly a hundred square miles; She has another just boast—that of nally nearly a hundred square miles; producing the handsomest women of the Richard Smith's patent of 30,000 acres; State. On this point it would be invidious Fisher's Island; Gardiner's Island; Shelter to discriminate; but, from personal obsertional obsertions and the same of the same Long Island—Ronkonkoma Pond and Mon- are equally beautiful, they cannot be more tauk Point. Ronkonkoma is a lake three amiable or intelligent. miles in circumference, with the peculiarity refused to eat the fish of Ronkonkoma, there by the Great Spirit, like the enchanted lake of the Arabian Nights.

A topographical sketch of the Island ning of this century—1804), gives some will present a general picture—a bird's-eye

who hold its pasturing privileges as stock, and buy and sell it in shares.

Island, especially in its extreme eastern the use of gas as a means of illumination, portion. frequent visits, of from weeks' to months' materially decreased. duration, some years since. More old persons, we believe, are to be found there than curred by the vigorous race of men nurin any county in the State—even if a fatal tured in this manly pursuit, we are forcibly case of tetanus (3) and of chorea does oc-reminded of Burke's vivid description of casionally occur. Suffolk, in 1846, could show one in forty whale fishery as literally applicable to that of her population over seventy years of of Long Island, with which in spirit, and, age. The father, we believe, of General in a less degree, in extent, it is identical. Halleck, died lately, a centenarian.

Suffolk County occupies nearly two-that her people were a benighted race,

Island; Lloyd's Neck—the county contain-vation, I can honestly declare that, if the ing the two greatest natural curiosities of wives and daughters of Kings and Queens

We cannot leave Suffolk without a few of a sand beach, although an inland lake remarks on the whale fishery, forming its itself the very Omphale of Long Island. most characteristic feature. Whaling, from For a long while it was supposed to be the earliest period of her annals, has been unfathomable, because no plummet had one of the chief sources of wealth to the sounded its depths—(in this respect similar hardy islanders; and a bold, manly occupato Success Pond and other sheets of water) tion for the inhabitants of the eastern end -claimed in part by four towns, Smith-lof the Island in particular. From some of town, Setauket, Islip, and Patchogue. Ac- the towns on the north side, and early cording to Judge Furman, the Indians settlements on the shore of the South Bay (on a smaller scale), vessels have been from regarding them as superior beings, placed time to time dispatched; but Sag Harbor may be properly recognised as the headquarters of the whaling enterprise of Long Montauk, a vast common, as well as a Island,—a port, too, ranking (after New bold promontory, with its shining light, Bedford and one or two other places), in has its 9000 acres, owned by a company, former days, as one of the most important whaling stations in the country. For this hazardous business the Hamptons furnished Suffolk has the healthiest air (2) on Long both officers and men. Of late years, since We speak from experience of the whale fishery and oil trade have

In contemplating the venturous toils in-According to Prime, the hardy pioneers of the New England After many, and dangerous, and profitable It was an old slander against Suffolk, voyages, the daring navigator, and no less daring fisher, returns to his native place with its quaint old houses and their dimiwith a moderate independence, revives in nutive windows, their immense chimneys middle life the vouthful occupations of the and massive timbers, its wide street, and farmer, and settles down into the domestic wind-mill, and meeting-house. These are character of a pater-familias. Originally a farmer's boy, a third of his life perhaps spent at sea, he never loses a certain amphibious character readily noticed in his dress and demeanor, his walk and talk, habits and feelings. A more kindly, intelligent, frank race of men cannot be found anywhere than the better portion (and Hoppogues, Greenland, Mount Misery, that a prominent majority) of the sea-faring Old Man's, Rum Point (Greenwich)—the men of Suffolk County. but clear-headed, ingenious, industrious, description of a fête—Commock, Buckram, and upright, they make excellent neighbors, true friends, and valuable citizens. Their mode of life is eminently republican, almost universal social equality existing in stead, North Sea, Speonk, Moriches, Mastheir towns, based upon a pretty uniform tic, Crab Meadow, Cow Neck, Cow Bay, equality of pecuniary condition and intel- Musquito (Glen) Cove, Plandome, Dosoris, lectual acquirement. The whale fishery is Bating Hollow, Quoque, Wading River, the most democratic of employments; Hashmonmock, Flanders, Upper Aqueevery man has his proportional share of bogue or High Hockabock. Most of these profits, and a few voyages raise the com- are in Suffolk. A few scripture names petent sailor and skilful hunter of the seas occur in Queens and Suffolk; e. g. Jerusafrom the condition of an ordinary seaman lem, Jericho, Babylon, Bethpage, Mount to the post of captain. It is a pleasing Sinai. sight of a Sunday to remark, at meeting, are whitened by the frosts of many winters, as their honest faces are embrowned Hempstead, Islip, Gravesend, for example. by the salt air and a tropical sun. As we ways heave; a pail is always a bucket; the Amersfort (Flatlands), New Utrecht, reins are lines; they go east or west, Gowanus. The English settled but one instead of up or down a street; they head town in Kings—Gravesend. In Queens, or steer north or south, whether on foot or the Dutch also settled Vlissengen (Flushlive near the sea, to have plenty of sea-went no further east than Oyster Bay. room and space about them—to go a-fishing and breathe their native air.

find most of this race. J. Howard Payne, of the aspect of Holland, and a great deal the dramatist, whose immortal song is as of her thrift and quiet industry; while East many years ago, an admirable description the air of an old English village. In fact, of East Hampton in one of the magazines. except in New England, there are few or towns more than two centuries old, with something of Old England, and a great deal more of New England, in them.

The names of places are often queer and outlandish, sometimes significant, but often selected without any apparent good reason; e. g. Hardscrabble (now Farmingdale), Simple-hearted scene of Dr. Valentine's richly farcical Wolver Hollow, Canoe Place, Good Ground, Bedlam, Drowned Meadow, Fire Place, and Fire Island; Scuttle-hole, Wam-

The English settlements were chiefly in the number of truly respectable, sometimes Suffolk and Queens during the civil war patriarchal, men, whose venerable locks and the Protectorate, as the names of places show—Hampton, Huntington,

The Dutch settlements were almost have said, they make good farmers, but wholly in Kings, adjacent to the city of never lose their nautical ideas. Thus, in New Amsterdam, as names of places there ordinary speech, they never throw, but al-|evince-Breuklyn, Midwout (Flatbush), in a vehicle, as if on water; they love to ing), in 1645, and Rusdorp (Jamaica), but

The national characteristics are still preserved, in some respects, and to this The Hamptons are the towns where you day the towns of Kings retain something cosmopolitan as the English tongue, wrote, Hampton, in particular, has a good deal of South Hampton is in much the same style, no places in our country resembling the date (of which we read in the English in a great measure, racing and racers. classics of the eighteenth century—neat and comfortable, pretty and picturesque), Ravenswood to Flushing, famous for its save, in a comparatively slight degree, gardens and schools (the nurseries of some of the oldest villages on Long Island, education), especially at and in the neighwhere time and cultivation, the presence borhood of Astoria, and also at Newtown of gentry and the possession of wealth, (celebrated for its orchards), and Jamaica, have done a good deal to refine the face of in the interior, is thickly set with delightthe country as well as the manners of the ful country places and rural retreats, in people.

talized by the classic description of Irving; day in town. Hempstead Plains; and the Great South forming a common for the town. It is she is uncommonly rich in this particular. twelve miles long, by five or six in width. established here, by Gov. Nicolls, 1665 grows very fine grass, that makes exceed-members to society. and once a year the best horses on the bathing, comes Rockaway, which old-fashioned English villages of a past trotters now appear to have superseded,

The shore of the East River, from some instances of retired merchants and The distinguishing features of Queens professional men, but, in most cases, of County are the strait at Hell Gate, immor- active business men engaged during the

The north side of the Island, especially Bay,—the last entrenched behind a great at Oyster Bay and Cold Spring, and bar or beach, nearly 100 miles long, a indeed throughout its whole length, is natural breakwater and sure barrier against certainly superior in natural beauty and the fury of the Ocean, forming a bay five picturesque scenery; but the south side miles wide; while the second, a species of has the advantage of fine roads, being prairie and heath combined, includes some remarkably level, and is far richer in all 25,000 acres of uncultivated ground, with kinds of game, fish, and fowl. Dr. DeKay's out a tree growing naturally upon it, List of the Birds of Long Island shows that

The highest ground on Long Island is Long previous to the Revolution, in early Harbor Hill, 319 feet above the sea, at colonial times, a race-course, called after Hempstead Harbor, now Roslyn—a romanthe celebrated (English) Newmarket, was tic spot, the Summer abode of Bryant, P. Godwin, and Mrs. Kirkland. At the same nearly two centuries ago. It is thus de- place was the first paper-mill in the State, scribed by Denton: "Towards the middle erected and managed by a member of the of Long Island lyeth a plain sixteen miles Onderdonk family, which has given two long by four broad, upon which plain bishops to the church and many worthy On both sides, ing good hay, and is very good pasture for the sound (her Mediterranean) and the sheep and other cattel; where you shall Ocean, the Island is rich in watering find neither stick nor stone to hinder the places; and after Newport, and superior to horses nor to endanger them or their races; all of the New Jersey resorts for salt Island are brought hither, and the swiftest followed in an inferior degree by Coney rewarded with a silver cup—two being Island, Bath, and a number of other p aces, annually procured for that purpose." to the very land's-end of the Island, Hence the origin of racing on Long Island at Montauk. As a fashionable resort, —a favorite sport, especially at the Union Rockaway, of course, stands at the head of Course, within the memory of most of us the list, and is very accessible to the rendered classic by the historical contests denizens of the city; but old Ocean is to between Eclipse and Henry; and, still be seen in his more primitive aspects, with later, between Boston and Fashion,—the none of the artificial accompaniments of North always victorious. The last great great hotels or brilliant society, with a race was between Fashion and Blue Dick, ruder beach and a rougher surf, at the a most exciting scene, which we had Hamptons and Montauk, and along the the pleasure of witnessing. Trotting and less visited shores of Suffolk County.

Kings County, in its rural portion, are among the most respectable of the retains a good deal of the old Dutch many respectable old Long Island families. character of the early settlers (Gravesend being the only English settlement). Flat-birthplace or favorite retreat of gentlemen bush is the chief village—a quiet, clean, most comfortable-looking place, with its sion or in the political world, among whom pleasant houses, and gardens, and farms. Erasmus Hall, established contemporaneously with East Hampton Academy, bears witness to its Belgic origin, immortalized by President Duer in his interesting St. Nicholas Address, 1848.

Coney Island is supposed to have been the first landing-place of Hudson and his men, 1609.

Forts Hamilton and La Fayette are most respectable fortifications, and important to the safety of New York City.

Brooklyn deserves a lecture, or a volume, rather, to herself, in place of a paragraph York. This is said with no idea of disre-distinguished legal family of the State,spect to her; as, though a dependency on including, in four generations of able New York, much of the city of Brooklyn lawyers, two judges of the Supreme Court is very far superior to very much of the of the colony; and, since the Revolution, city of New York;—with her numerous the two Samuel Joneses, father and son, at places of religious worship, some of them different epochs the patriarchs of the New of very considerable architectural pretensions; with her many fine streets of elegant, and, in very many instances, magnificent, private residences; her noble City Hall such, and whose name and fame are grateand Navy Yard, with its admirable dry-dock, and, crowning feature of all, with her beautiful Greenwood Cemetery, a peerless place of public sepulture.

Brooklyn are gone. Duflon's Military Garden and Parmentier's Botanical Garden gotten. Perhaps no part of the State can were great places of resort in my boyhood, pride herself with more justice on her able but have made way for the city improve- lawyers, of whom we have mentioned only ments.

Long Island may justly boast of the eminent jurists and statesmen she has produced, and equally of the distinguished advocates who have, by residence, natural-Sackett, than whom we have never known ized themselves, as it were—become purer or more honorable characters. They adopted citizens of her insular republic.

commonly reported the first lawyer settled accomplished gentlemen, filled with all the upon Long Island, at Jamaica, 1702. His virtues of the manly character; devoted to grave is to be seen in the burial-ground of duty and to each other in life, and not the Episcopal church. His descendants separated in death—a rare example of

Jamaica appears to have been either the

of the first rank, either in the legal profesmay be mentioned Benjamin Kissam, Egbert Benson, Rufus King, Melancthon Smith; Genet, the French minister sent from the Republic by the Directory, 1793. Newtown claims the well known legal Riker family; Flushing, the able Cadwallader D. Colden (whose father, Governor Cadwallader Colden, had an elegant country seat at Spring Hill, near Flushing; as had Francis Lewis, the Signer, at Whitestone). DeWitt Clinton, too, enjoyed his rural leisure, at one period of his life, at his pleasant place at Maspeth, in the town of Newtown. South Oyster Bay has -the rival or rather the suburb of New given birth to perhaps the oldest and most York bar; and a younger brother of the latter, a worthy and generous compeer of the best, well known to many of you as fully cherished in the history of his native county. The celebrated Judge Radcliff was a resident of Brooklyn; and the eminent advocate, Elisha W. King, neither a We believe all of the antiquities of native nor a resident, yet a descendant, of a Long Island family, should not be forthose of the first class. To this brief catalogue should, in justice, be added the names of two of the worthiest of the sons of Long Island, the admirable brothers were able and intelligent lawyers, high-Samuel Clowes, an Englishman, is principled and kindly men, liberal and

As connected, too, with the old and Old Dominion. Mr. Wickham took a Virrespectable families of Onderdonk, Titus, ginian's and a Long-Islander's pride in the Kissam, and Tredwell; and united, by the horse, and he had a heavy stake in the ties of birth, and long residence, and Eclipse and Henry race. Boston, the partial affection; by political bias and progreatest Southern racer since Henry, was fessional pursuits, their names should never bred by Mr. Wickham. be omitted in a list of those of whom this community ought to be proud.

Suffolk, too, has produced her liberal proportion of able lawyers and statesmen. Mr. Stephen Sayre, a native of Southamp-vertence, and by no means from design. ton—in 1773, Sheriff of London—an John Randolph, of Roanoke, to John of Long Island.

brotherly love and of genuine goodness. Leigh, one of the political worthies of the Well known and popular names of an inferior professional grade might be added; we have enumerated only the foremost. and of these none now living. If we have Is it necessary to do more than recapitu- omitted any name or names at all equal to late the names of Wm. Floyd, the Signer; the foregoing, it is wholly through inad-

The faculty is as well, if not as numeelegant gentleman and sincere patriot; rously, represented. There was the cele-Judge Conckling; Chancellor Sandford; brated Dr. Mitchill, immortalized by Hal-Silvanus Miller; Tappan Reeve, of whom leck, whom the late Dr. Francis, and equally Dr. Beecher remarked, in his funeral competent judges among his contempo-sermon, "I have never known a man who raries, were never tired of praising for his loved so many, and was by so many learning, his simplicity of character, his beloved;" and John Wickham? We benevolence, and his eccentricities; of must pause, in this rapid enumeration, at whom Cobbett wrote, "A man more full this last name, better known at the South, of knowledge and less conscious of it, I perhaps, than in his own county. Mr. never saw in my life;" the able Wright Wickham, of Southold, went, early in life, Post; Valentine Seaman, father of the to Virginia, where he became endenizened, great doctors of the past generation, of and made for himself a most enviable legal whom we find mention in a foot-note of and social reputation. He is best known Ferriar's Illustrations of Sterne, to the in legal, or rather political history, for his effect that "the practice of whipping in defence of Aaron Burr in the celebrated medicine was revived by Dr. Seaman in trial for treason, and in which he had the North America, who applied a horse-whip elegant, classic Wirt opposed to him. to a patient who had taken an overdose of John Randolph, that acute judge of men, opium. The method succeeded." Valenhas left his weighty testimony to the worth tine Mott—one of his pupils—the peer of and merits of our great Long-Islander. In Liston, and Cooper, and Dupuytren, and his will, dated January 1, 1832, he be-confessedly the first surgeon of his age queaths "to John Wickham, Esq., my best and country; Dr. Moore, of Newtown; friend, without making any professions of John Jones, one of the founders of the friendship to me, and the best and wisest Mew York Hospital, and of the medical man I ever knew, except Mr. Macon, my faculty of Columbia (King's) College, mare Flora and my stallion Gascoine, to "ever to be remembered," to quote the gether with two old-fashioned silver tank-language of Dr. Francis, "as the physician ards, unengraved; and I desire that he of Franklin and the surgeon of Washingwill have his arms engraved upon them, ton," the ablest operator and professional and at the bottom these words: 'From writer of his day. These were all natives Dr. Kissam, and Dr. Wickham, Esq., a token of the respect and Ogden, who is said to have been the first gratitude which he never ceased to feel practitioner of his day, who introduced for his unparalleled kindness, courtesy, the use of mercury as a specific, became and services." One of Mr. Wickham's residents of Jamaica. Dr. DcKay, more daughters married Mr. Benj. Watkins particularly eminent as a man of science lightful village of Oyster Bay.

The Episcopal church has at different times stationed some of her ablest sons on Long Island. Four, among the very foremost of our bishops, had parochial charges the gallant sailor and true man; in the here at different times—Seabury, Benj. lamented Gen. Woodhull (of Mastic); and Moore, Hobart, and B. T. Onderdonk. the spirited Col. Benj. Birdsall (of Hemp-Bishop Moore and Bishop Onderdonk (of stead); Col. Tallmadge (of Setauket); New York) were natives.

honored name have had charges on Long Brewster, revolutionary heroes, are not to Samuel Seabury, father of the be forgotten. bishop, was rector of St. George's, Hempstead, and after him succeeded in the same of them natives, others residents, of Long parish Rev. Lambert Moore, then Mr. Island. Mount, the first comic painter of afterwards Bishop) Hobart. At Jamaica, Bishop (then, too, Mr.) Seabury was settled herd, the portrait painter, natives of Sefor twenty years. of Wakefield and Parson Adams stamp, Mount; Rogers, the celebrated miniature the most eminent divines of the Episcopal the self-taught mechanical genius, was a George's Church, Astoria. Four gene-Riverhead), author of the well known rations of clergymen, all able, and two theory of the earth. We recollect the paralleled.

nations have made Long Island the favorite always had her fair share of litterateurs scene of their religious labors.

tautological), in his peregrinations, is said resident members of the legal profession. to have travelled 10,000 miles and to have delivered 1,000 discourses. George Fox, the rural patriarch of Quaker-some of the smaller States of the Union. ism (Penn was the courtier of the society), On this score alone she might claim to bevisited Long Island and preached under come an independent State and a distinct the noble old trees at Flushing, near the diocese, to have her own governor and her Bowne House, where he lodged. Whit-own bishop. But would it be wise to field, one of the two great Methodist separate herself from the parent State (if, leaders, also made an ecclesiastical tour, indeed, such a course could be allowed), 1764, at the east end of the Island. Tradi-to forego the glory of remaining a most tions abound in Suffolk, especially in the important portion of the Empire State, most eastern towns, of the quaint peculiar- and, instead, to set up a political indepenities of the early Presbyterian clergy, a dency of her own? As the son, the grandson, vigorous race of intellectual, humorous, and the great grandson of Long-Islanders, and most devoted pastors. The old Dutch whose first American ancestor was among and traveller, located himself near the de-Church in Kings, too, has her peculiar history.

In the naval and military glories of the country Long Island may claim to participate: in Commodore Truxton (of Jamaica), General Ebenezer Stevens (of Astoria), Four successive generations of the first Capt. Norton (of Brookhaven), and Capt.

Art, too, can point to her votaries, some the United States, and his brother Shep-His son, the Rev. tauket; and a new name, Davis, of Port Charles Seabury, a clergyman of the Vicar | Jefferson, rapidly becoming the peer of was missionary at Setauket (the Caroline painter, of Bridge-Hampton. Hackett, the Church) for many years; and his son excellent comedian, is, we believe, a native again, the Rev. Dr. Seabury, of New York, of Jamaica; and Dr. Valentine, the adcertainly the ablest polemic, and one of mirable comic lecturer and mimic. Byram, church, was rector, for a year, of St. native of Southampton; and Symmes (of pre-eminently so, are not readily to be name of but one brilliant instance of native authorship among the dead-Robert C. Celebrated preachers of various denomi-Sands, the scholar and wit. Brooklyn has and a highly cultivated society, most of Elias Hicks, a native of Jericho, the which belongs properly to New York City, Unitarian Quaker (if the phrase be not or to New England, or to the native and

The population of Long Island is equal In 1672, to that of some of our largest cities, or the early English patentees of Queens County, I say, for myself, distinctly, it! would not.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

The future of Long Island appears to us (so far as we may cast its horoscope) to sidered as a part of the metropolis; the rural portion of Kings might fitly be formed with both counties, much the case), and the readers of the Historical Magazine: leaving the rest of her soil, with much that merely glance at as a speculation; fervently games. With regard to his reading, we trusting that no such consummation may ever happen, but that Long Island will hereafter be known as the richest jewel in are generally called) in a pamphlet by Winslow C. the crown of the Empire State, and that her sons and daughters may, while indulging in a most laudable local pride, not only never forget, but boast with proud satisfaction, that they are loyal citizens of the Empire State of New York.

GENERAL AND MRS. WASHINGTON.

In the year 1853, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania published its first and only volume of "Collections." In it were a resolve itself into becoming the garden, letter from Miss H Morris, the daughter the orchard, and the farm of New York of the distinguished financier of the City. Assuming Brooklyn (though the Revolution, to Mr. John F. Watson in relation to General Washington, the informalation), with her dependencies, to be con- tion being derived from her mother, and some notes by Mr. Watson of conversations with Mrs. Morris, upon the same into gardens, kitchen and floral; while subject. As a very small edition of this Queens might be in part devoted to both volume was printed, the following extracts gardens and orchards (as is even at present, from these papers will be new to most of

"In his temper he was usually mild and is excellent in the soil of Suffolk, for purely slow to anger, but when he was roused. agricultural purposes, and farming on a which was seldom, those who had been the large scale. Or, admitting secession (which cause of it would take good care never to we are as unwilling to countenance in this give like cause again. He was amiable instance as in the disruption of our glo- and easy of access, though rather reserved. rious Union) Long Island may virtually not very conversible, sometimes playful, become an insular State with far better but never jocular; his deportment was reason than some of the Southern States, always dignified, but not austere; always -Delaware, for instance. From geographi, friendly, gentlemanly, and respectful to cal position, her internal resources, her his intimates and family; and was a kind varied products, the possession of a capital master and a consistent one to his servants. city worthy of the name, she might derive He did not pay much attention to children. a strong ground for separation. Interest | yet he was fond of ladies' society. He was and good feeling would still ally her not fond of music, nor did he play or sing, strongly to New York, and the divorce although he occasionally, but seldom, might be but partial. This, however, we danced; he never played cards or any

(2) It might be added, too, that Suffolk County lies wholly within that very small portion of the earth's surface described by Baron Humboldt (in his "Cosmos," I think) as being emphatically the healthiest region in the world.

Note.—The writer of the present paper is indebted to Mr. J. W. Carrington, who kindly read it in his absence, to the Long Island Historical Society; and from whose admirable elocution much of its immediate success was derived, for the following judicious remarks:

<sup>(1)</sup> These so-called "barrens," by the way, are being rapidly developed, year by year, into thrifty, promising farms

The "Bushy Oak Plains (not Scrub Oak, as they Watson, among the State Agricultural Transactions for 1859—are shown to be anything but "barrens," They would fit out many a baron with a most noble cannot say, only that he passed a great part of his time in his study. Of his reli-deep impression made upon her mind by gious character we know nothing, except seeing General Washington make a public that he was regular in his attendance on entry into Philadelphia, after the surrender divine worship on the Sabbath, and we of Yorktown. As the procession entered never knew him to express any opinion High Street, the General stopped before regarding the different sects. He belonged the door and saluted. His manner on to the Episcopal Church.

<sup>(3)</sup> It is but just to Suffolk County to say, here, that one of her own physicians has robbed her of this terror. Under the treatment discovered and introduced by Dr. Benjamin D. Carpenter, of Cutchogue, tetanus is of scarcely more consequence than a severe attack of toothache. Practising in a circuit of twenty-five miles in diameter, he assures me that in sixteen years' residence he has only averaged one case a year; and of cases that were his own, he has not lost one.

back, also of fine horses, of which he had was peculiarly elegant; his horse was a favourite. He never engaged in athletic entirely white and very superior; he paid exercises. No man was more attentive to his professional duties, and no man more had his hoofs blacked before riding prompt to determine and pursue the abroad. proper course. Whatever time or leisure he had was principally spent in his study."

neat in his dress, which during his presi-they all expressed high admiration of his dentship usually consisted of black velvet, dignity and demeanor. As they expressed with silk stockings, and shoes. His form a great desire to be in his company and was very commanding and remarkably hear him converse, they were invited that dignified, particularly on horseback; he evening to take supper with him. On that was indeed a complete horseman, and on occasion he was remarkably polite and his entrance into Philadelphia after the affable to them. They one and all said surrender of Yorktown was acknowledged they should never forget the satisfaction by the British officers present on that occa-they felt and the honor they deemed done sion, to be the finest and most heroic to themselves, thereby. looking man they had ever beheld. His teeth were bad, but he had a fine complex-like the General and had often been told ion. He laughed but seldom; he never so. On said occasions he used to affect to made use of any exclamations or oaths; he deem it a disparagement, but to Mrs. did not indulge in anecdote and never Morris he had said 'to be indeed like such a spoke of himself.

life, and when on his farm dressed very plain but neat.

and drinking; he was an early riser, and consequently went early to bed. He at one time resided in my father's family more than two months, and there never the above, namely in January, 1807. was a person who gave less trouble.

"Mrs. Morris told J. F. Watson of the that occasion was remarkably elegant and "He was very fond of riding on horse dignified. His manner of sitting on horse great attention to his horse and always

"Some British officers of high rank had previously solicited a place at Mrs. Morris's "He was particular and remarkably house to get a view of the General, and "One of the officers was remarkably man was indeed a distinguished honor.' "He was extremely fond of a farmer's General Washington was very polite to this officer.

"They all particularly spoke of his "He was a moderate liver both in eating marked elegance as a graceful horseman, saying that he and his horse moved as but one.

"Mrs. Morris died soon after relating

"When he was a young man, he was "He never felt or indulged any bitter-seen at the Philadelphia Coffee House by ness against the English, and bore the old Rees Meredith, a considerable merchant, reproaches of our own prints with the most who, being pleased with his appearance, perfect equanimity. He was very graceful asked him home with him (without any in his address and courteous to his guests. | introduction or knowledge of his character). "He always spoke of his mother with There he gave him a venison dinner. marked respect and affection. Mrs. Washington remembered and told this in Washington, though not possessing much later life, and when in Philadelphia insense, was a perfect lady and remarkably quired for the family, and in consequence well educated for her situation. of that incident, sought out his son whom she had formed the minds of her children with great care, and expressed her great trouble to find adequate schools, and said she sent her son George forty miles to the most of the portraits are since made. It best she could get. She lived in a one was done in 1775. Stuart executed two. story cottage and declined to live at and called his first a complete failure. His Mount Vernon.

(Told me by Dr. Griffith.) States

punctual. appointed to meet him precisely at eleven then is very thick. Gen. Washington o'clock on set days. On such occasions weighed at West Point, in 1782, two and after the time; then he would bustle, grew, I believe, still heavier and more corand drawing out his watch exclaim it had pulent. deceived him. This occurred a number of times when the General effectually pre-General Hamilton and saying : 'Sir, you must provide yourself a new watch, or I a new secretary.' I had this from Col. Pickering, who was present.

"On an occasion of one of these meetings, the General was likely to be detained by the shoeblack beyond the exact time. The secretaries, in proceeding to the spoke of it and followed the example. appointed room, had to pass a small chamber where the General's boots were to hearing of Mrs. Logan, how very deeply have been placed. When Col. Pickering entered he found the General holding the feelings when he first saw the severe stric-servant and belaboring him with his tures on his administration in Freneau's boots. Col. Pickering hurried on, and no paper. remarks were made.

and always went into the stable to see his in 1778, some of the Pennsylvania Germans horses, of which he was very careful. On made a Paddy, and displayed it on St. horses, which had come home late, had not the Irish in camp. had their legs rubbed down, the mud being large bodies under arms, swearing for venstill on them. The General was seen by geance against the New England troops one who told me, to seize his German there, saying they had got up the insult. coachman and to fisty-cuff him in the yard with a good drubbing! I have understood none of the officers could appear them. At he was passionate.

"Houdon's bust of Washington at the * This house has been pulled down within the last close of the war, when his face was full few years. (Note, in 1864.)

he made the Treasurer of the United and without a wrinkle, was the best likeness that ever was exhibited, and no artist "Mrs. Deborah Logan has seen General will ever err that will copy it, especially as Washington's mother at Fredericksburg a military character. (W. Rush.) Houdon's when she was eighty-five; she had the bust is invaluable for the truth of its prostateliness and dignity of her son, and was portions. He was an artist celebrated for familiar too. She told Mrs. Logan that the fidelity and natural character of his busts. (Rembrandt Peale.)

"Stuart's portrait is heavily exaggerated (Peale), although it is the one from which second one is unfinished. Stuart used to "General Washington was extremely say that Washington was the broadest His cabinet councils were between the eyes of any man. His nose General Hamilton was usually the latest hundred and nine pounds. In later life he

"Mrs. Washington, in the time of the war, boarded in the present ordinary-lookvented it, by rising and looking firmly on ing small three-story house at the northwest corner of Arch and Front street. The wives of many tradesmen would now disdain to live in the same. It is now a grocery store.*

> "Gen. Washington was the first person of distinction among us who left off hand ruffles. Then Gen. Dickinson and others

> "The Secretary of State told, in the Gen. Washington was wounded in his

"Col. McLane told me that when Wash-"He was accustomed to rise at daylight, ington and his army lay at Valley Forge, one such occasion he found that the coach- Patrick's day to the great indignation of They assembled in The affair threatened a very serious issue; this time Washington, having ascertained least one rod from the shore. All the the entire innocence of the New England troops were so astonished and rejoiced that troops, rode up to the Irish and kindly and they gave three cheers." feelingly argued with them; and then, as if highly incensed against the perpetrators, requested the Irish to show the offenders and he would see them punished. They could not designate any one. Well, said THE ADAMS AND CUNNINGHAM COR-Washington, with great promptness, I too am a lover of St. Patrick's-day, and must settle the affair by making the army keep the day. He therefore ordered extra drink to every man of his command, and thus all made merry and were good friends.

"After the surrender of York Town, while the Continental troops were preparing to receive the British, who were to march forth from the garrison and deliver up their arms, the Commander-in-Chief was heard to say, addressing himself to the division of the army to which he was attached, 'My brave fellows, let no sensation of satisfaction for the triumphs you have gained induce you to insult your fallen enemy; let no shouting, no clamourous huzzaing increase their mortification. It is sufficient satisfaction for us that we witness their humiliation. Posterity will huzza for

"Washington possessed great muscular strength of arm, and it was of unusual length. When young, he threw a stone across the Rappahannock, and at the Natural Bridge he threw a stone higher than any person has since. An instance of his strength in this way occurred at the Palisades up the North River, in 1789.* General Washington being at that post on a temporary call with his staff, saw the officers attempting to throw stones from the high bluff (which, to the eye, seemed almost perpendicular) into the river below, but none were able to effect it. Washington alighted from his charger and, seeking for a stone to his liking, took two or three quick steps, and giving it a jerk (called the 'Douglass cast' among the Virginians), he lodged it in the sounding water at

* So in Mr. Watson's MS. Was not 1779 meant?

RESPONDENCE.

AN ILLUSTRATIVE DOCUMENT.

A Copy of the Original in my possession.

PORTLAND, Feb. 64.

DEAR SIR, My son Wm. informs me that he has a large number of Letters from the honble. John Adams. Should these letters be made public he thinks it would blast his, Adams' character and be advantageous to the public. Wm sayeth he has had a conference with your Honour The Honble Messrs Cabot & Lowell &c and that the project is approved. That you write him that you have a packett directed to him of so much consequence that you dare not trust it by the mail. Are you sure they would be safe in his hands? I understand Mr. Adams' letters were confidential. The public good is dear to me. I cannot approve treachery, that your steps may be directed by unerring wisdom is my sincere wish If you have not sent on this packett for the want of a safe conveyance Mr Haskell the bearer of this will take charge of what you may think proper to commit to his care. I will be answerable for his fidelity. My Mrs Cunningham and her daughter Lois are not very well all the rest of our respective famileys are in good health hope that you and your connections enjoy the same blessing. If your good Daughter is a florist and will be so obliging as to send me a few of her curious flower seeds it will be esteemed a favor. Expect to go to Boston early in the Summer with the dear partner of my Joyes and sorrows when we intend to do ourselves the pleasure of making you a visit. In the mean time I am with much esteem your friend and humble servt-

WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM LUNFNBURG March 19th 1810

GENERAL RICHARD BUTLER'S JOURNAL OF THE SIEGE OF YORKTOWN.

RICHARD BUTLER was a native of Ireland, but came with his father to Pennsylvania prior to 1760.

We have not ascertained when he first joined the American army, but Lee, in his memoirs of the war, etc., in his biographical sketch of General Morgan, says: "In the spring of 1777, a select rifle corps was formed, out of others in the army, commanded by Colonel Morgan, seconded by Lieut. Col. Richard Butler of Pennsylvania, and Major Morris of New Jersey, two they were assigned."

been in the army prior to "the spring of of Butler for his commander, and the deep 1777," and he must have displayed con- and sincere reverence which the virtues of siderable enterprise and ability to have that commander had inspired. entitled himself to the distinction thus conferred upon him.

In this rifle corps he served during the campaign which was closed by the surrender of Burgoyne.

Col. Lee, in his account of a gallant action in which Col. Butler was engaged on the 26th June, 1781, used the following from Col. Gammel to the Marquis, passed language: "The American General (La Fayette) detached Lieutenant-Colonel Butler, of the Pennsylvania line, the renowned second and rival of Morgan, at Saratoga." At that time (1781) Butler was a full Colonel, having been promoted to the command of the 9th Pennsylvania Regiment, in Dec. 1777, soon after the surrender of Burgoyne.

ill-fated expedition against the Indians, the militia collecting.

4th November, 1791.

as an introduction to the extract from his below Surry church.—Found very good highly interesting, giving as it does an river a league wide from this—is a very account of the first landing of the French troops in Virginia, of which Col. Butler and About 5 o'clock, P. M., myself and Col. Col. Sewart happened to be the witnesses. Stewart went down to the Isle of Wight

The account of the arrival of Washington, of the cordial reception given to him by both the American troops in Virginia and the French army, the delightful compliment paid to him by the French band of music, all form pleasant passages in the

The passage, however, in which Colonel Butler expresses his warm and ardent affection for Washington, and his honest indignation against the base conspirators who endeavored to destroy him, always excites in our bosom a thrilling sensation of pleasure.

Those expressions of feeling were writofficers of high talents and specially quali- ten in his private Journal, kept for his fied for the enterprising service to which own satisfaction, never intended for publication.—They therefore afford the best From this it appears that Butler had evidence of the honest and ardent affection

> Colonel Butler was in Wayne's Brigade, and Steuben's division, and had encamped the evening previous to the date of the beginning of our extract at Cabin Point.

"September 1 st.—This morning an express, us at sunrise, with certain accounts of the arrival of Count de Grasse, with Maj. Gen. Marquis de St. Simon, and a fleet of 28 sail of the line and 4 frigates, being in the bay of Chesapeake, with 7000 troops, ready to act in conjunction with the Ame-Marched at 9 o'clock for rican army. Surry Court House, 12 miles, arrived at 3 o'clock, P. M.—Encamped on good In 1791, General Butler was second in ground, and had very good springs on our command under General St. Clair in his right, left, and front. Met a number of Went from Surry and fell in the unfortunate action of the Court House to reconnoitre Cobham Point, and to see if any of the French ships had We give this brief notice of his services got up, having heard of five appearing ground and fine water. This is directly The extract which we give will be found opposite to Jamestown and Island—the

to Col. Burril's, where we were overjoyed ship, and 4 frigates at anchor;—also, 3 prize vessels, taken on their way to this coast. We had, also, the additional pleasure of seeing 40 large boats, with near 4000 troops, coming up the bay; these they left in Hampton Roads. Col. Stewart two first American officers that received them, and took the Marquis de St. Simon and all his officers by the hand as they landed at Col. Burril's on the beach. The General and some of the officers went to for the City of Williamsburgh, where we Mr. Burril's house to rest, but returned to halted to cover the general officers while their troops about 8 o'clock, P. M., having expressed much pleasure at seeing us. We then set off for camp, and arrived at Gen. Wayne's quarters at 12 o'clock with these pleasing accounts, all of which was immediately communicated to the officers. whose joy was great and their happiness expressed by every mark of joy and pleasure.

Sept. 2d.—The troops marched for Cobham Point, 6 miles, where we encamped; mentioned; all was done in the most per-advantages and disadvantages of the posifect order and regularity. mortifying and surprising sight to two quis for the Green Spring. It being likely British flag-ships that lay at this place; to rain, had the Pennsylvania troops posted who never heard the least whisper of this in the College, which shelters them very great event until the troops and vessels well. The Marquis ordered me to call up were among them. Butler and Stewart, with a few other offi- to refresh and join their battalions; these cers went across, and were very politely arrived about 11 o'clock, P.M., under Maj. received by Maj. Gen. de St. Simon and Reed. his officers. We requested boats for the mutual compliments passed, we re-crossed. all but Gen. Wayne, who went by appointment to meet the Marquis de Lafavette, and was very unfortunately shot in the thigh by a sentry just as he arrived there: the wound is not dangerous, but is very mortifying to this good officer and the troops he commands, who love him, and wish his presence on the field on all occasions.

Sept. 3d.—The boats attended very to see the Experiment, a French 40 gun punctually, both for us and the militia, who crossed from Swan's Point, at the same time, the Pennsylvania troops crossed from Cobham Point. The troops crossed with great ease in the boats, but the want of proper crafts, and some neglect in the were from on board the grand fleet which few there was, not being brought down in time, Col. Gaskins, of Virginia, and his and myself were fortunate in being the troops were left to cross and guard the baggage. The troops moved to Green Spring for shelter, it being very wet. stormy weather.

Sept. 4th.—Marched at 3 o'clock, A.M., they looked for a post; but a good dinner being got by Colonel Finney and other inhabitants, the Generals and part of the field officers dined together at Col. Finney's. and other squads went into other houses; the afternoon was spent in so much happiness that it was too late to examine the ground much, therefore the French General said from what he had seen he would take the position on my recommendation, and about 1 o'clock saw, with pleasure, the and that General Du Portail and one of his boats come up and land on James Island, engineers would attend me to-morrow, in covered by the three prize vessels above order that they might be informed of the This was a tion, and then he rode off with the Mar-Gen. Wayne, Cols. the light infantry from the lines, in order

Sept. 5th.—I went out to examine the crossing of our troops, which were given ground; began at Mr. Powell's on the left; with the greatest cheerfulness, and after found the creek on which is the capitol landing impassable, except in one place just below the birdge, and this place very difficult; another branch secures the left and rear, leaving only one pass for many miles. this pass is at a mill two miles from the mouth, the other branch leads near the college, and secures the whole front, by a ravine which forms a creek at Mr. Powell's. The right flank and front is secured by the College creek, which heads at that building also, and runs into the James river; on tire very precipitately, and leave behind this creek is the College landing, and on some bloody cloaks and other furniture the other which runs into the York river is which they dropped in the flight. the capitol landing; this is a very remarkable and strong pass, there being not more placed in such a manner as to make an than half a mile of hard ground between opposition that would have convinced the two creeks, which may be guarded by a few good works against an attack in front, either from or to the city. About 11 o'clock the two Engineers of the French army and Gen. Du Portail arrived, went down below the city about two miles, found good camping ground but no water, went then to Mr. Powell's and examined all the ground which I had fixed on for an encampment, which pass but near the road; at this spot I the Engineers liked well, and approved of placed the militia battalion, commanded as military and well chosen. Dined at Mrs. by Col. Randolph, and some rifle men of Vobes', where a number of militia gentle-|Col. Lewis' at a breach of the James river, men and others dined also. Col. Steward where a road from Harrod's mill to Burril's and self paid for the French officers, after ferry comes in; having thus secured all dinner examined the ground about the these posts, I went with Major Hamilton mill on the Jamestown road and parted.

and to see if the baggage was over, found this spot is on a point of land formed by the French had taken the company's team the York river and Burril's mill-creek, horses which I recovered and sent on with provisions, the Pennsylvanian troops were ordered to Burril's mill, three miles below Williamsburgh, this is a remarkable strong pass, took post here and served the troops with provisions and liquor.

Sept. 7th.—A party of dragoons were sent down towards the half way house to reconnoitre, Capt. Herd, who commands the party was informed of a body of horse and foot, supposed to be 1500 in number, having passed up the road toward Harrod's mill, he sent a small party across the country to ascertain this fact, pushed for the forks of the road at the church near Mr. Burril's mill, lest the enemy should push a party in his front, which they really attempted and which he and his party narrowly were ordered two miles up the river to escaped, having met them at the very spot, he pushed and gained the pass, and retired a redoubt; they have four other redoubts before the horse to the sentrys of the ad- on the land side, and two on the water vanced picket, which allowed him and his side, one of which has twenty-four eighteen party to pass by and fired on the enemy pounders and four twelve pounders on it who had previously ordered them to sur-complete at the old flag staff. Had two or render, the enemy then pushed on to the three fifty gun ships been passed up, on the pickets, who had lain perdue and gave arrival of the French fleet, it would have them a full platoon, which made them re- so far accelerated our approaches and

I had the troops formed, and artillery them of their folly had they attempted crossing the pass, or even to take possession of the side they were on, but they presently withdrew. I then went to reconoitre the country; I found one of the most advantageous posts, the head of Burril's mill-creek, and some draughts that fall into the James river, which are impossible to and one Mr. Burril to Burril's point, where Sept. 6th.—I went to visit Gen. Wayne I had a good view of the shipping at York; which is impassable (except at one place) all the way to the mill. Several sailors having deserted from the ships, I obtained an account of their naval force which I sent to the Marquis de la Fayette, viz:-

Name of ship.	No. of G	uns.	Pou	ndere
Charon,	44		. 18	and	12
Guadaloupe,	32		. 12		9
Old Foway,	24		. 9		6
Bonnetta, sloop of wa	ar, 16			•	6
Brig Defiance, with		carronad	es 18
"Spitfire,		46	12
Sloop Formidable, .	. 10	"	12
" Rambler, '.	. 10	"	4		•
" Susannah, .		"	4
" Tarleton, .	. 10	"	4	•
Tarieton, .	. 10		4	•

Four of the above named small vessels cover a working party who were building secured the river carriage of provisions, flour or meal, and the beef supplied is &c., that matters would have been rendered very bad, in short there is yet no exertions very easy and all their shipping would made to supply the troops who have been have fallen, also, these very heavy guns supplied with only three days' bread out with which they have covered the river, of seven, and not the least likelihood of and will thereby impede the passage. being better supplied. There are several small vessels in the Sept. 12th.—Severa Pamunkey or York river, which I advised the river; no account from the fleet. This the General to have fitted out and manned day Governor Nelson sent Mr. Nichols to in order to protect the provision boats; give me an order to retain a mill, and to which could then come within seven miles impress corn carriages, boats, or any thing of us very safely, but whether the torpidity of this sleepy state, or whether he sent off Lieutenant Collier with a party thought it difficult to get it done, was the for this purpose. cause of this advice not being adopted, I don't know; however, it was neglected and der-in-Chief having arrived at his own seat the carriage of the river lost, and the whole at last. He has not been within his own being in a manner starving, and there still appears no more industry or endeavor to supply the troops, and collect a magazine 1775, all which time he has been a most of provisions than if the enemy was in faithful patriot and servant of his country, Europe, and no army of our own in the from the citizen he was a counsellor, then country.

Sept. 8th.—Received orders to march for Williamsburgh to join the allied army; arrived at our ground at 11 o'clock, had some difficulty in getting our baggage as statesman has appeared in all his actions. we had to let the allied army have our Some malign shafts have been shot at him wagons to bring on their whole train and by a small insignificant tribe whose falsely camp, therefore had to lay in bough huts, and ill directed arrows always reverted to on very dusty ground, for this day and their own bow and wounded themselves. night; the French army, the Pennsylvania appearance in passing through the city.

Sept. 9th.—Obtained our pitched our camp. Lay by without any Baron Steuben and our good friend Gen. accounts of the enemy stirring on the Wayne, whose wound and gout still coneighth, the British fleet passed Cape tinue ill. About 3 o'clock an express ar-Henry and came into the bay, and were rived, announcing the approach of our gallantly engaged by the French, who great and good Commander-in-Chief, Gen. drove them to sea, and pursued them, but Washington, and the Count de Rochamleaving six ships of the line for the security beau, the commander of the allied armies

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

Sept. 12th.—Several cannon heard down to facilitate the collecting of provisions;

Sept. 13th.—An account of the Commandoor for seven years, indeed not since he was first a member of Congress in the year a General, and in reality the Father of the people, he has nobly shared in all their misfortunes, shewing the utmost fortitude and regularity of conduct; indeed the able

Sept. 14th.—The Marquis Lafayette still and light-troops made a very elegant continues ill of the ague. Yesterday the Marquis de St. Simon, and a number of baggage, his officers, paid a visit to our line, and the of the bay. The Baron de Steuben arrived of France, now joining. At 4, P. M., the in camp with his suite. Aug. 11th.—Accounts by a Frigate approached the camp, on which the two that the French were left in full pursuit of armies turned out on their battalion pathe British, who were flying before them, rades;—his Excellency and the Count De and that in about six hours sailing they Rochambeau, with their suites, attended must come up with eighteen sail of victuby the Marquis de Lafayette, Maj. Gen. allers which the British intend for Lord and commander of the American, and Cornwallis' relief and support, which they Maj. Gen. Marquis de St. Simon, comhad abandoned in their flight. Still no mander of the allied army (lately arrived),

Maj. Gen. Marquis de Lafayette, com the Experiment of 40 guns. mander of the army in Virginia; Maj. Sept. 16th.—His Excellency Gen. Wash-Gen. Marquis de St. Simon, commander of ington, Counts de Rochambeau, de Chasofficer of distinction in the French Guards, harmony and retired. and one of the aids of Rochambeau); nais, and many other Cols. and Lt. Cols., o'clock. and other officers of the allied army. To add to the happiness of the event and ing to orders, and took post three quarters evening, an elegant band of music played of a mile from the town of York, and in an introductive part of a French Opera, open view of the enemy, on our approach signifying the happiness of the family, Lord Cornwallis at the head of his Dragoons when blessed with the presence of their turned out to reconnoitre us, some riflemen father, and their great dependance upon and two pieces of artillery moved towards him. About 10 o'clock the company rose them, and with a few shots made them up, and after mutual congratulations and scatter and move off into their works. the greatest expression of joy, they sepa- | The General reconnoitred them and ordered count of the arrival of his and Count de army have the left fronting the British Barras' fleet, from Rhode Island, with the right—the Americans the right faceing French troops on board, and heavy artil-the British left. The British General seems lery and large mortars, also of the capture determined to stand a siege having preof the famous Iris Frigate, and the Rich-pared in the best manner possible.

mond frigate, which with the Romulus of 29th.—Small scattering fire both from and all their suites, visited the allied army |44 guns, are sent to Baltimore, and head first, and then the American army, and of Elk, to bring down all our troops and were saluted according to custom; these apparatus for a siege; the storm seems to ceremonies finished, the whole of the of thicken fast about Lord Cornwallis, whose ficers of the French army attended at the people desert fast, which is a certain symp-Marquis de St. Simon's quarters and were tom of despondency in all armies. This introduced to the Illustrious Hero. The day, his Excellency, the Commander-infield officers of the American army all Chief, dined with the Marquis de Lafayette, attended to bid him and the other Generals also Marquis de St. Simon, Baron de welcome. These ceremonies over, an Steuben, Count de Rochambeau, Dumas, elegant supper was served up, and the foll and Desandroins, a number of American lowing great personages and officers supped and French officers of distinction, and together in the utmost harmony and hap-passed the afternoon in the greatest happiness, viz: His Excellency, the Count de piness and harmony. Several officers of Rochambeau, commander of allied army; the Navy, among whom is the captain of the allied army in Virginia; Maj. Gen. tellux, and a great number of Generals and Baron de Steuben, Inspector General of other officers dined with Baron de Steuthe American army; Count Dumas (an ben; we spent the afternoon in great

Sept. 17 to 27.—Has been spent in de-Count de Damas, another of his aids; barking the troops and trains from the -, aid to Marquis de St. Simon; shipping the whole being arrived, the Brig. Gen. Hand, Adj't Gen. of the Ame-troops having taken their proper stations rican army; Cols. Butler and Stewart, of and every thing arranged, and the Com-Pennsylvania; Col. Trumbull, His Excelmander in-chief and principal officers relency's secretary; Col. Cobb, one of his turned from on board the Ville de Paris aids; Lt. Col. Smith, another of his aids, where the Generals have been fixing a plan with a number of other officers; also Col. of co-operation with the Admiral, orders -, commanding the Regiment Gati-issued for the whole army to move at 5

Sept. 28th.—The Army marched accordthe heavy artillery which landed at Har-Sept. 15th.—An officer arrived from rod's landing below Burril's ferry to be Count de Grasse's fleet, with certain acmoved up as fast as possible. The French

the artillery and small arms, the principal artillery hard to get up; not one piece of officers reconnoitering and fixing a position. This night, the enemy abandoned their cover very plainly that we are young camp and out-works with precipitation, the advanced redoubts entire, which shows termined to benefit ourselves by experience; the want of a fixed resolution.

30th.—The American and Allied army took possession of the abandoned redoubts sun-rise; four men of the picket belonging to in proper military form. The engineer began to lay out work for the artillery, &c., and every thing goes on with spirit; 1,200 men for fatigue, forming fascines, fian Tarleton, with a body of troops, went &c. The enemy very busy all day at to Gloster yesterday; after killing all his the works around the town. This morning Col. Scammel was unfortunately wounded and taken prisoner when recon-noitering too close to the enemy.

firing between the patrols and pickets; two works were traced out and carried on with great vigor. The enemy began to cannonade at daybreak, and also a few shells, which did no damage till evening, when two men were killed on the works; these happened not to be men on business, but night.

Oct. 2d.—The fire of the enemy more severe this morning about 10 o'clock, A.M.; they brought up two 18 pounders in addi-noiter on the York river side, the enemy tion to what they brought yesterday. They very busy forming new works. Two deset. Gloster post not strong, I think by the brought a very heavy cannonade all night. size of the camp, 1,000 men; their works not regular, they have one good water bat- our part increases fast, and things go on well, tery, on the York side; I observed a good to-day about 4 o'clock P.M., Corporal Orwork close by the bank with four embra- gan, a brave and honest soldier, was unforsures, the ground very good for approaches; tunately killed by a cannon shot; a great cannon as yet fired at them; indeed, I dissoldiers in a siege; however, we are deone virtue we possess, that is perseverance.

Oct. 3d.—The enemy ceased firing at Capt. Ray's company were killed by a cannon shot of the enemy in the night. About 10 o'clock began to fire single shot. The rufpoor horses and mounting men on the officers' horses, (who Lord Cornwallis ordered to part with them) pushed out to forage. but fell in with the Duke de Lauzun and Oct. 1st.—Last night a good deal of his legion, who treated them very roughly, and obliged them to retire to their lurking places with the loss of above fifty killed, wounded and taken. Tarleton himself was rode down by his own men, whose hurry caused them to be very impolite to their commander.

The loss of the Duke was few, not more idle spectators. General Wayne's brigade than six men killed and wounded, with 3 were ordered as the covering party; this officers wounded. Tarleton had one Captain evening marched to our ground at sunset, killed, and several officers wounded. Two the Maryland 4th Regiment as picket in of the Reg't Deux Ponts deserted to the advance. They kept up a fire of three enemy, also one Jersey and one Maryland pieces of cannon at half hour periods all soldier! The Pennsylvania troops for fatigue who finished the redoubts.

October 4th.-Very little firing all day. Wayne and Colonel Butler went to reconfired severely all day, the shot expended serters from the enemy, who report that amounted to 351 between sun-rise and sun-Cornwallis' army is very sickly to the Wayne's brigade ordered to camp amount of 2000 men in the hospital, and for convenience, but still the covering party that the troops had scarce ground to live till sun-set. The fire of the enemy con-upon, their shipping in a very naked state tinued all night. About 10 o'clock, P.M., and their cavalry very scarce of forage. a heavy firing of the ships in the bay. I 2000 French marines landed on Gloster reconnoitered the post at Gloster and the side from Count de Grasse at 9 o'clock shipping, which I compute at 10 sail, the P.M., a smart firing of small arms, which

October 5th.—Cannonading all morning, in general our works go on slow, the heavy deal of firing through the night. Pennsylvania and Maryland Militia for gabion and 12 pounders, two 10 inch mortars, making to-morrow. Confirmation of Gen- and two 8 inch howitzers, both which bateral Green's success came to the Com-teries were made ready to open at the mander-in-Chief.

other troops went to gabion making; inch mortars, and six 8 inch howitzers, was finished a great number and carried them forwarded, with small batteries on the to the right near the York river, 400 right and left of this grand centre battery. paces from the enemy. The first parallel The enemy seem embarrassed, confused, and other works being laid out by the En- and indeterminate; their fire seems feeble gineer; a body of troops ordered under to what might be expected, their works, Generals Lincoln, Wayne and Clinton, to too, are not formed on any regular plan, break ground and form works, the materials but thrown up in a hurry occasionally, and being got ready and brought previously to although we have not as yet fired one shot cannonade all night, it began on the left of tious as if the heaviest fire was kept up. the allied army, who lost some men killed 9th.—Relieved by Major General Linand one officer and several men wounded; coln's division. This day, at 3 o'clock, their intention was to possess the enemy's P. M., the batteries of Lamb and the Maradvanced redoubt on the York river, but quis de St. Simon opened with great one of the dragoons having deserted the elegance, and were quickly followed. The enemy discovered the intention, which Commander-in-chief paid the allies the caused the enemy to keep up an (almost) compliment of firing first. The shot and incessant fire that way through the night; shells flew incessantly through the night, the allied army finding the enemy too well dismounted the guns of the enemy, and apprized, contented themselves with going destroyed many of their embrasures. on with their work. The American part 10th.—Another grand battery in centre of the army on duty made great progress of the line of contravallation, consistin forming lines and batteries without the ing of four 32 pounders, four 24 pounloss of a man.

than an experimental movement.

same instant.—A very fine battery of October 6th.—Pennsylvania and some twelve 32, 24, and 18 pounders, six 10 the spot. The enemy kept up a severe from a piece of artillery, they are as caus of a man. ders, and four 18 pounders, six 8 and 10 October 7th.—The whole continued at inch mortars, with two 8 inch howitzers. work, notwithstanding the enemies fire Opened at dawn of day, and played incesthrough the whole day and night. About santly, and destroyed houses, works, and day light, a very sharp fire of small arms everything before it. About 12 o'clock, commenced, succeeded by artillery, they Secretary Nelson came out with a flag, go on well, and our loss as yet very trifling, and informed the Commander-in-chief that indeed the siege appears to be no more Lord Cornwallis and the chief officers were burrowed in the ground, and that Oct. 8th, 1781.—The division of Steuben our shot and shells did great execution; for the trenches to-day. This is composed he also says Majors Cochran and Gordon, of the Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsyl- of the British army, arrived from New vania troops. The enemy continued to York in a whale-boat, who brought accannonade, mounted at 12 o'clock. The counts that Admiral Digby had actually enemy kept hard at work, and fired incessantly on our fatigue parties, who really resolved to relieve the garrison by an wrought hard, and completed one large attack on the French fleet, and sending in battery on our extreme right, on the bank a reinforcement which Sir Henry Clinton of the river, on which three 29 pounders, had embarked. He adds that Tarleton three 18 pounders, two 10 inch mortars, and Simcoe have killed above 1000 horses, and two 8 inch howitzers were mounted, and that they were both unwell and in-The Marquis de St. Simon had a battery active; that Duke de Lauzun kept them completed on the extreme left, of eight 18 entirely in, and very frequently alarmed them; that the town was quite cut to on the river side, and the enemy's extreme pieces with works of different kinds. About left, and the Baron de Viomesnil the re-12 o'clock some of our shot took effect among, and sunk several of their shipping, which set them to work to scuttle and sink several more. Our fire was kept up with unremitting fury all day: -after dark the dispositions military, the redoubts the shell made a very beautiful, though at were both carried in ten minutes, with the same time dreadful appearance. About trifling loss on all sides. The British offi-9 o'clock, P. M., a fire broke out among cers taken are Major and Capt. Campbell, the shipping—three were burned, among and—* which was the Charon, of 40 guns. The sailors got them towed towards the Gloster shore, in doing which two others took fire, so that the total loss is five burnt.

11th.—The chief part of their ships taken over towards Gloster, out of the range of our shot and shells which annoyed them much—the chief of the remainder sunk, or hauled close in shore, the garrison was very faint to what might have been kept up and much fatigued. This night expected, from the consequence they were Colonel Richard Butler had the command of to them, in keeping us at a distance. of 600 men, and opened about 700 paces After these were carried, an alarm was of the second parallel within about 250 spread around the British line in order yards of their works; in many places this to ascertain what weight of fire they was done so secretly that the enemy did not know of it till day; when they commenced a very heavy fire, though they did the besiegers power to proportion their but little harm.

12th.—A constant fire of shot and shells from both parties, many men killed and shells.

13th.—Several deserters out of town, whole of the army on duty or fatigue, making saucissons, fascines, stakes, gabions, consumption, several men killed and wounded.

14th.—Steuben's division for the trenches, mounted early, in order to relieve surprised at our facility and execution. the light-infantry. At sunset the infantry, under the Marquis de Lafayette, and a Pennsylvania Battalions relieved part of part of the Regiment Deux Ponts and the the fatigue. The batteries were laid out French Grenadiers, under de Viomesnil, early, and the materials brought to the moved out at 7 o'clock, P. M., made an spots assigned. The enemy sent out an attack on two of the enemy's redoubts improper flag, which was detained till the that had prevented us running our second Marquis de la Fayette sent one in to Lord doubt on a line with this, more to the enemy's right, 300 paces. The two attacks commenced almost at the instant, and were conducted with spirit and bravery,

The prisoners were secured, and immediately the second parallel was completed from these redoubts to the place where Col. Richard Butler left off on account of these redoubts, which if left in their possession, would have impeded the progress of the siege, which rendered them of more importance to both parties. The British defence could produce, which proved very faint, this is a measure highly proper, as it puts attack in case of storm, and should be guarded against by the besieged, and the greatest care taken never to expose their wounded on our side, and deserters say strength unnecessarily. Again daylight we made great havor in town with our the second parallel was closed and the lines of communication formed, which, from the immensity of the work must have surprised who say the enemy are in confusion the the enemy, as it advanced us 700 yards in some places, and put us within 250 yards of their works generally. The allies are a and palisades, to make good the daily fine, steady, persevering people, and our confidence in each other seems mutual. Batteries are laying out—and the materials collecting so fast, that the enemy must be 15th.—Col. Butler and part of the two parallel. The Marquis de Lafayette, with Cornwallis, to inform him of the improhis detachment, attacked the small redoubt priety of his conduct in sending a flag and firing at the same time; his Lordship sent my brave boys, and skin the ban aid to our flag to assure us he was sorry This was heard by Count De Noailles, he had given an unintended offence, and who had the command of a covering party, requested he would point out the place for which he ordered to advance, and was the reception of flags in future. On the guided by the Huzza of the British. He return of the respective flags hostilities ordered grenadiers to "charge bayonet and commenced very warmly. General Wash-rush on," which they did with great spirit ington, Count de Rochambeau, Gen. Chas-crying " Vive Le Roy," and to use the telux and many other general officers, British phrase skivered eight of the Guards visited the lines. Capt. de La Touche, of and Infantry, and took twelve prisoners, the Hermione frigate, and several officers and drove them quite off. The British of the Navy, came up to visit the lines, and spiked Savage's three guns with the points seemed highly pleased at our approaches, of bayonets, but our smiths and artillery which really appear very judicious.

in general orders to the Marquis De Vio-|rity with the same pieces. Our loss was late attack; it is observed that very little All the enemy's cavalry and about 1,000 lines are close. foot compose this garrison. Steuben's militia.

great success, which silenced the chief of capitulation for the ports of York and the enemy's batteries; many of their men Gloster, with the troops and shipping. were killed, and the whole of the garrison Gen. Washington sent no answer to the thrown into confusion. About 12 o'clock first request. About 4 o'clock, P. M., at night, Maj. Abercrombie, of the British, with a party of the Light Infantry and four hours. Guards, made a sally, and passing between cessation should take place for two hours. two small redoubts that were unfinished, Reasonable proposals were made, and only and where (by the parties being moved in some small alterations, necessary for the another post to work,) the line was weak, satisfaction and accommodation of parties, got possession of the trench; thence they therefore no more work or firing. pushed rapidly to a French battery, and having killed four or five: Thence to the we therefore remained unrelieved in the halted. They then discovered a battery for any service requisite. Two Commiscommanded by Capt. Savage, of the Americans and challenged, What troops? The the British army, to draw up the capituanswer was French—on which the order of lation in form, these were His Excellency men soon cleared all the guns, and in six The Commander-in-Chief returned thanks hours chastised the enemy for their tememesnil, the Marquis De La Fayette, and all very trifling, though the British really the officers and troops concerned in the executed the sortie with secrecy and spirit.

16th.—This day employed in cleaning blood of the enemy was spilt, although the the trenches, filling up the banquettes, and national prejudice is so great. The enemy completing our batteries with the different have an amazing number of sick in town, kinds of artillery, and using those briskly and are obliged to send their wounded to that had been placed yesterday. We lost Gloster, where Col. Dundas commands, a few men by small shells and shot, as our

17th.-Major General de Steuben's dividivision were relieved by General Lin-sion mounted the trenches at 12 o'clock; coln's about 1 o'clock, P.M. The ene- at 10 o'clock, A. M., Lord Cornwallis sent my's shells have wounded several of the out a flag, requesting a suspension of hostilities for 24 hours, and that two Commis-The batteries were opened and fired with sioners shall be appointed, to agree on a another flag, requesting a cessation for four hours. The General agreed that a 18th.—The troops in the trenches being spiked the guns and drove out the people, entitled to the honor of closing the siege, covert way or communication leading from trenches. This day the whole army were the first to the second parallel, where they ordered to hold themselves in readiness the British Commandant was "Push on, Lieutenant General the Chevalier de Chastellux and Col. Laurens for America, and missaries were up to take account of the -* for the British.

troops, were ordered to take possession of practised by the British; they don't appear one of the enemy's works, and the Mar-to have an idea of honor in any of their quis Laval, with 100 Grenadiers of France, actions. They have completely plundered to take possession of another. This being every thing in their power, and do not pay a day of negotiation, every thing appeared the least regard to any treaty. I also find to be in suspense. After the troops were the greatest of abuses committed by perready to march, they were ordered to sons who pass into the town, and instead remain on their arms.

British commissioners returned to York, stores are kept shut, which answers an they not having completed the capitulation, excellent purpose for all speculations by and the truce continued till 9 o'clock this the rascals who take advantage of such About 11 o'clock, A. M., all times. settled, the capitulation was signed, and the two parties under the Marquis Laval good weather during the whole siege. We and Col. Butler reduced to 100 each, to be had but one wet night, that of the 15th. commanded by a Major, who marched im- The army in good spirits, and seem ready mediately, and took possession of the for any other service. works at 12 o'clock; then the two armies were drawn up opposite to each other, on of war was held at Head Quarters. The the road leading from York to the country, sloop of war Bonnetta fell down the river, and at 2 P. M., the British army marched with her iniquitous cargo of deserters, out, to the great satisfaction of the whole stolen negroes, and public stores that the American army and all spectators. Their British officers had secreted, in violation number as follows:—1 Lt. Gen., 1 Br. Gen., of treaty and in breach of honor. Lord 2 Cols., 8 Lt. Cols., 11 Majors, 52 Capts., Cornwallis visited the General officers in 89 Lts., 36 Ens., 2 Chaplains, 12 Adjs., return for their visits. Col. Tarlton was 10 Qr. Masters, 10 Surgeons, 22 Mates, dismounted by a man from the country, 295 Sergeants, 121 Drummers and Fifers; Rank and File fit for duty 3293, Sick present, 90 Sergeants, 44 Drummers and Fifers; lecting and taking account of stores of Rank and File 1741—total 5821—70 pieces all kinds. brass Ordnance, (this is the post of York

20th.—Two divisions of the British army were ordered to march under the care of the militia, for Staunton and Winchester, very busy in embarking their stores. Eight All this day spent in collecting public fine frigates, and one 40 gun ship in the 21st.—Gen. Choiseul went to the post vessels sunk during the siege. of Gloster, and disarmed and dismounted the garrison, both horse and foot, agree-noon embarked for France, viz:-Count ably to the capitulation. This day the Laval, Viscount Wm. Deux Ponts (brother British and German troops marched for to Count Bernard Deux Ponts, who comtheir destination. The Commissaries still mands the elegant regiment Deux Ponts), busy collecting the stores of all kinds.

22d.—The French Frigates and Com-

* A blank in the original.

Marine Department; the stores still col-Col. Butler, with 200 of the American lecting. I observe the greatest villainy of the army being benefitted by any sale 19th.—About 11 o'clock last night, the of goods or privilege to purchase, the

We have been particularly happy in 23d.—Fine weather. This day a Council whose horse he had stolen some time ago. The American Commissioners are still col-

24th.—Still fine weather. This day went into town with General Wayne. Observed great irregularity in collecting public stores. The French artillery conductors harbor. Their intention is to weigh the

The following noblemen are this afterand Captain Montesquieu, with their attendants, on board the Hermione frigate, with duplicates of the surrender of the army under Lord Cornwallis.

25th.—The Count de Rochambeau visit; which continued in force until a constitued Gloster. The stores still collecting by tion was formed, September 15, 1818." the Commissioners, and the British and Now, considering that Connecticut was country people stealing. The merchants not first settled at Windsor; that it was and suttlers of the British army are this not settled before 1635, though the Dutch day met with the Quarter Masters, to de had built a fort at Hardford, and Plyvise some plan to dispose of the property mouth a trading-house at Windsor, two to the officers of the army.

Hotes and Querics.

NOTES.

Advertiser (St. John's, N.B.), January 20, 1789.)

Pro Bono Publico or Charles Loosley is no dead, (Laus Deo) is not dead, as reported, but lives at Grinross Neck, in the royal pilation. Its editor was largely indebted county of Queen's, in a good stately look- to Colonel Hickey's Constitution of the ing house, rather unfinished but comfortable. By him the hungry can get the best food, the athirst, good drink, and the weary, beds; and for their horses, warm stables, oats and English hay, at moderate prices, as usual.

Pro Bono Publico also informs all those gentlemen who are indebted to him (for the fourth and last time) that unless they discharge their arrears in fourteen days from the date hereof, he will be under the disagreeable necessity of putting them without discrimination in a common cage or go in one himself.

FACTS WHICH ARE NOT FACTS.—The Evening Journal Almanac for 1864, a very useful and convenient manual of political information, has the following compend of State history, which seems worth transferring to the pages of the Hist. Magazine :-

"CONNECTICUT was settled at Windsor, in 1633, by English Puritans from Massachusetts, and continued under the jurisdic- ing the verse to Claudian, and that Mr. tion of that province until April 23, 1662, Sumner, in a scholarly review, shows when a separate charter was granted, that the verse was written by Mons. Turyears earlier, but no "puritans from Massachusetts" were at either place; that Connecticut did not continue more than one year under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts; that Massachusetts was not a "province;" and that the Connecticut charter of 1662 gave way to the present constitution when the latter was adopted by the electors in October, and not when it was framed by a convention in September, SINGULAR ADVERTISEMENT.—(From the Royal Gazette and the New Brunswick doubted whether other six lines can be found, even in a "book of reference," embodying so many new facts as do these.

It is true that the Almanac is not entitled to the exclusive credit of the com-United States,—a standard authority,for two most important items; to wit, that Connecticut was "embraced under the charters of Massachusetts; and continued under the same jurisdiction until April 23, 1662, when a separate charter was granted" (p. 399; 3d edition).

Where an author gives two or three octavos to the history of a State, an occasional error of fact or date is excusable; but when such a history is condensed, for ready reference, into a half a dozen lines, it seems unnecessary that these should contain, year after year, half a dozen misstatements.

"THE CELEBRATED LATIN LINE ON FRANKLIN" (vii. 354).—The H. M. for Nov., 1863, has a note that Mr. Sumner has settled the authorship of the celebrated Latin verse, written under the picture of Franklin:-

"Eripuit cœlo fulmen sceptrumque tyrannis." That Lord Brougham had erred in ascribthe Anti-Lucretius of Cardinal Melchior de employed on surveying duty around the Polignac.

The authorship of that line was settled more than ten years ago. The whole matter may be found in the English Notes and Queries, 7th Feb., 1852 (v. 140), just as Mr. Sumner gives, and the detail there given had been copied into American newspapers.

J. H. J.

URBANO, OHIO, Jan. 25, '64.

THE PRICE OF SUBSTITUTES IN THE OLDEN TIME.—The copy of a document in my possession.

H. W. B.

PORTLAND, Feb., '64.

WALTHAM June the 10th 1748

Then Received of Josiah Brown the sum of Forty Pound old tenor as his sum for going in to his Majesties service to the Eastward frontiers to be improved in hiring a man to go in his room.

> Received Pr me SAMUEL LIVERMORE Capt.

REMINISCENCES OF BURR'S LATER DAYS. -Among the recollections of the wife of ingly egotistical, was not always willingly a navy officer we find the following:-

invalid, which he had been for some years previous, and as near as one who knows rooms and implore them to come and sit little of his pecuniary resources but all the and converse with him. He indignantly surroundings of his situation at that time reproached many of his friends for their can judge, this spot was selected as being neglect of him, often naming them, and healthful, contiguous to the city of New would become impatient beyond control York, near his then acting guardian, and when his usual ride was omitted. at the same time within the limits of his apparently small means. The hotel where formed that the event could not be very Aaron Burr spent his last summer, and in distant, he requested of his attendants that which he died, still stands, beautifully when the time for his dissolution drew situated on the borders of the "Kill van so near that none could mistake it, a Kull," about eight miles from the city of courier should be sent to a certain street New York. It is a frame building, two and number in New York city, and there and a-half stories high, with large upper summon a little girl to his bedside. But and lower piazzas and spacious rooms, and the messenger sent was too late; the child, though since degenerated, it was at that a girl of twelve years, arrived just after his time accommodating summer boarders spirit had taken its departure for another from the city. It was plainly but com- world, and the child returned as she came, fortably furnished; and during the sum- without a revelation or why or for what purmer of 1836 accommodated several fa-pose she had been summoned. And thus end-got, and he finds its model in a verse of milies of Government officers who were island. I am thus particular, because by those less faithful or less familiar, it has been described as not more than a shanty. The Port Richmond Hotel at that time had as its proprietors the son-in-law and daughter of the former representative in Congress from Richmond County. During the summer of which I write, Matthew L. Davis (and his chère amie) was also a boarder at the hotel, and as afterwards developed, was employed to write the Biography of Aaron Burr, which was doubtless a faithful political history, without detailing his domestic life. His age was eighty years, and he was a petulant old man, who had outlived the sunshine and buoyancy of his nature, and ! was jealously sensitive to a slight or neglect, and evidently unhappy from remorse or present discomforts of mind. This he constantly evidenced to his only attendant, a female nurse, to such a degree that again and again she protested that she could endure such impatience and profanity no longer.

I well remember Burr especially coveted society, which, as he had become exceedgranted him; he would lie on his bed, Aaron Burr came to Staten Island an with his door open, and call those who might be passing to or from their opposite

Just previous to his death, and when in-

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

ed the life of this brilliant but unprincipled personage who, for thirty years, has served Orange, in this State, probably contained as a melancholy illustration of talents and the first canal made in America. Lieut. education uninfluenced by moral or re-Governor Colden, of Coldenham, in that ligious considerations.

PLYMOUTH ANNIVERSARY DISCOURSES. delivered at Plymouth, and designating such as have been printed (before 1820), in or about 1728, and continued to reside may be found in the Appendix to Daniel upon it until 1760, at which time he was 1820.

FORT STEVENS.—In the summer of 1851 west of the late residence of Albert C. Whittemore, now of Havana in this state, digging, a number of human bones were found. It was at first supposed that the removed to New York. place might have been the family burial ground of some previous owner of the land. Upon subsequent inquiry, I ascertained from Henry Blackwell, a native of the village and always a resident there, that standing and in good repair, on the north the few soldiers who died at Fort Stevens side of the Newburgh and Cochecton (the ruins of which still remain at the point turnpike, and about five miles east of of land close to Hurl Gate) during its occupancy, were buried where these bones were discovered. the remains and buried them at the foot of It contained (and yet does) valuable a small tree about sixty feet west of Mr. deposits of peat fully ripe to be used as Whittemore's west line, and about forty feet from the shore of what is called Pot Cove (East River). The spot is about twenty-five feet N. E. from the original place of interment.

JOHN M, EAGER.

NEW YORK CITY.

breach of promise case occurred in New that of his tenants. Portions of this work Amsterdam, in which the man, being are still visible upon the meadow, now one defendant, excused his refusal on the of the best and most valuable portions of ground that the plaintiff was able "to kill grazing land in that county. Why Colden any man who happens to know her, as she should have incurred the expense and hath a white lung" (vermits un witte longh heeft). The parties were, as Dr. O'Calla ment of an inferior species of fuel, when his ghan states, both French.

AN EARLY CANAL.—The County of county, had the honor of constructing it and putting it into practical operation. At what precise time it was built I have -A list of the Anniversary Discourses, been unable, as yet, to discover, but Colden located his patent to Coldenham Manor Webster's Discourse, delivered Dec. 22nd, appointed Lieut. Governor, and removed to New York City. The canal was built in the interval between his location and removal. He could not, in all probability, (perhaps 1852), in grading a lot of land in have taken a hint for its construction from Astoria, Long Island, a slight elevation the similar work of the Duke of Bridgewas dug down. The lot is the one next water, who built the canal of ten miles (about) from his coal measures in Worsley to Manchester, for the Act of Parliament and belonged to Josiah Blackwell. While in his favor was not passed until 1759, which was only a year before Colden

The reason and circumstances of the construction of this early and rude work were these: Before Colden's Patent and near his residence (a large stone house still Mongomery) there was a streak of bog meadow, stretching for about a mile and The workmen collected a half, and running south from the house. fuel. The peat was discovered upon the drainage of the meadow, and Colden (always practical) converted the main ditch into a canal by widening and deepening it beyond the necessities of mere drainage, and placed upon it boats, and with horse power transported the peat to that point of the canal nearest to his residence, whence STRANGE SUPERSTITION.—In 1656 a it was taken for his own family use and large patent was amply wooded with timber, can only be conjectured. He evidently had his reason for this, as he had for all his other prominent acts. public services, at least, show him to have been an eminently practical man.

JOHN M. EAGER.

NEW YORK CITY.

PROCLAMATION OF GEN. LEE'S FATHER AGAINST REBELS.—Enclosed herewith I send you an exact copy of a Proclamation issued by Gen. H. Lee at Elizabethtown in this (Allegheny) county, in 1794, towards the close of the "Whiskey Insurrection." It is not uninteresting to contrast the men and events of that day with those of the Then, as now, a Virginian Lee Commander-in-Chief of an army; then for the purpose of upholding the Government and its laws, although but a particular law was resisted. Now, a Lee heads the chief army of the rebels, seeking to destroy the Government itself. Again, we have an excise on whiskey, but it is cheerfully submitted to; and none the less, that the money so raised will aid in suppressing the present gigantic insurrection.

Yours &c. Wm. N. Darlington. PITTSBURG, Feb. 15, 1844.

By HENRY LEE, Esq., Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia, Maj. General therein and Commander in Chief of the Militia Army in the service of the United States.

Proclamation.

By virtue of the powers and authority in me vested, by the President of the United States, and in obedience to his of the United States, or be in any wise benign intentions, therewith communicated I do, by this my Proclamation, declare and make known to all concerned, that a full, free, and entire pardon (excepting and providing as hereafter mentioned) is hereby granted to all persons resident within the counties of Washington, Allegheny, Westmoreland, and Fayette, in the state of Pennsylvania, and in the county of Ohio, in the state of Virginia, guilty of Treason, or misprision of Treason against the United States, or otherwise directly or indirectly engaged in the wicked and unhappy tumults and disturbances lately existing in those counties; excepting nevertheless from the benefit and effect of this pardon all persons charged with the commission of offences against the United States, and now actually in custody or held by recognizance to appear and answer for such offences at any judicial court or courts; excepting also all persons avoiding fair trial by abandonment of their homes; and excepting moreover the following persons, the atrocity of whose conduct renders it proper to mark by name for the purpose of subjecting them with all possible certainty, to the regular course of judicial proceedings, and whom all officers, civil and military, are required to endeavor to apprehend, or cause to be apprehended and brought to justice, to wit: Benjamin Parkinson, Arthur Gardner, John Holcroft, Daniel Hamilton, Tho. Lapsley, William Miller, Edward Cook, Edward Wright, Richard Holcroft, David Bradford, John Mitchell, Alexander Fulton, Thomas Spiers, William Bradford, Geo. Parker, William Hanna, Edward Magner Jr., Thomas Hughes, David Lock, Ebenezer Gallagher, Peter Lyle, John Shields, William Hay, William M'Elhenny, Tho. Patton, Stephenson Jack, Patrick Jack, and Andrew Hilands, of the state of Pennsylvania, and William Sutherland, Robert Stephensou, William M'Kinley, John Moore, and John McCormick, of Ohio county in the State of Virginia.

Provided, that no person who shall hereafter wilfully obstruct or attempt to obstruct the execution of any of the laws aiding or abett ng therein, shall be entitled to any benefit or advantage of the pardon herein before granted: and provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to the remission or mitigation of any forfeiture of any penalty, incurred by reason of infractions of, or obstructions to, the laws of the United States for collecting a revenue upon distilled spirits and stills.

Given under my hand, at Head Quarters

November, 1794.

HENRY LEE. By order of the Commander in Chief, G. K. TAYLOR, Aid-de-Camp.

QUERIES.

Woollen Snow.—Cotton Mather, in his Christian Philosopher, published in London, 1721, says, in the course of his Essay on Snow:

We read of Heaven giving Snow like Wool. I have known it give a Snow of Wool. In a Town of New-England, called Fairfield, in a bitter snowy night, there fell a quantity of Snow, which covered a large frozen Pond, but of such a woollen consistence, that it can be called nothing but Wool. I have a quantity of it, that has been these many years lying by me.

What explanation shall we give of the above? B. F. D.

THE DUKE'S LAWS.—When and where did the idea originate that Clarendon drew up these laws? properly the author?

A CONFEDERACY.—In a discourse delivered by the late Rev. Dudley A. Tyng at the "Church of the Covenant," Philadelphia, July 5, 1857, the Southern States are spoken of as a "Confederacy."

- Is this the first instance of the Slave holding States being called "A Confederacy?"

PHILADELPHIA, Feb., 1864.

COSART AND HOOGHLAND FAMILIES .-Elizabeth Hooghland was married in the Dutch Church, New York, Sept. 16, 1730, to Dr. Joris (or George) Cosart, perhaps the same person who was made a freeman of the city in 1745. Tradition states, however, that he left an only child, Jane, and was lost at sea about 1733 while proceeding to Europe in order to settle some in 1803, had been a Methodist preacher. estate. What is known of this Cosart or Cazourt family?

Jacob Janeway, of New York, bears date work on Methodism? Mr. Kewley was, in Elizabethtown, this twenty-ninth day of June 26, 1738; she was mother of George and William Janeway.

Mrs. Janeway and Mrs. Cosart (whose second husband was probably a Fisher or Vischer) were sisters; were they daughters of Joris and Caterin Hoglandt of Staten Island?

THE FATHER OF ENGLISH LEXICOGRA-PHY.—Richard Fraunces, a preaching or black friar, was the author of the first English and Latin Dictionary, according to William Herbert, published in 1499, in which are many old English words, nowhere else explained. It is very desirable to have some information of this author and of his great folio volume.

SHAWMUT.

AUTOGRAPHS.—A AUTHENTICITY OF writer in the London Notes and Queries sneeringly called upon Canon Dalton to prove the authenticity of an autograph letter of S. Teresa which the Canon mentioned as belonging to him. It opens a new field of discussion, and it will be well Was not "scissors" more for some of our collectors to draw up rules for testing autographs.

> Indian Burial Places.—The readers of the Historical Magazine will confer a favor by transmitting to me any information they may have—either traditional or otherwise—as to the location of Indian Burial Places in the States of New York and New Jersey. A large amount of information not yet preserved in a permanent form may then be gathered, which, in a few years, may not be attainable, or if so, but unsatisfactorily.

JOHN M. EAGER, New York City.

KEWLEY ON METHODISM.—The Rev. E. Allen, in his list of Episcopal clergymen in Maryland, says that the Rev. John Kewley, prior to his ordination by Bishop Claggett Can any reader of the H. M. tell when he became a Methodist clergyman, and where Sarah Hooghland's marriage bond with he preached? What was the title of his pastor of St. George's Church, New York. Printed for purchasers, 1814."

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.—What foundation is there for the statement that Mr. John Quincy Adams was the author of the doggerel verses respecting Mr. Jefferson which appeared during Mr. Jefferson's presidency. Some of them are too broad for quotation here, but whoever has read them will remember the two lines:

> "And let the mountain all of salt, Be christened Monticello."

and these also:

"And if we cannot alter things, By — we'll change their names, sir."

They appeared before Mr. Adams left the Federal for the Republican party.

J. H. C. PHILADELPHIA.

THE RIGHT OF NEW YORK TO THE Hampshire Grants.—Some twelve or more pamphlets were published upon this controversy between the years 1760 and 1784-They were by John Henry Lydius of Albany, James Duane, Jonas Fay, Ethan Allen, Stephen Bradley, and others.

Six of these are referred to as in the N. Y. State Library. (Doc. H. N. Y., vol. iv.; p. 1026.) Where can the others be is presented the curious.

found?

New England Society.—Has a list been compiled and printed of the Sermons and Orations delivered before the New England Society of New York?

REPLIES.

though Mr. Allen omits the fact, for a time laughter, and no small degree of surprise-

The Librarian of the Society has in his private collection the same work, doubtless of the first edition. He met this, "The Morristown Ghost," in 1807. It vanished until 1826, when it again appeared to him, unexpectedly, in the garret of a deserted building in the centre of Newark. was secured, and has remained in his custody ever since, except when for a short time it was permitted to visit Morris County. There, in its old garb, it seemed a great stranger. It is imperfect; the two last leaves, or four of its 28 pages, are missing. The title is "An Account of the Beginning, Transactions and Discovery of Ransford Rogers, who seduced many by pretended Hobgoblins and Apparitions, and thereby extorted Money from their Pockets. In every Purchaser-1792." David Young's revision, published in 1826, was given to the world because, as he says, "the very inaccurate and apparently headlong manner in which it was executed, rendered a revision highly necessary." He, "however, very scrupulously followed the sense of the original." That the style of the anonymous writer of the "Account" may be seen, a clause or two from the first paragraph of his "Preface"

the County of Morris, and State of New Jersey, in the year 1788. Printed for

"I am convinced that it is impossible for one person to please all mankind, for there is such a variety of opinions predominant, that no one system or pamphlet will meet with universal approbation; but it appears to me requisite, that something of this kind should appear in public—and, as I have been solicited by numbers to attempt a brief narration, with particulars relating facts concerning many occurrences that THE WONDERFUL HISTORY OF THE happened in the county of Morris, and Morristown Ghost. (Vol. viii.; p. 79.)— State of New Jersey, in the year 1788.— An aged gentleman recently presented the As I am convinced that many erroneous New Jersey Historical Society a 12mo. ideas have been propagated, therefore the pamphlet of 24 pages, entitled "The Mor- generality of people are destitute of real ristown Ghost; or Yankee Trick. Being facts.—I am sensible that it is natural for a True, Interesting and Strange Narrative. men to censure each other with burlesque, This circumstance has excited considerable and say they had not sagacity," &c. "I shall therefore be as brief as possible, as it is my intention to eradicate many capri- derful History," says: "Very probably it cious notions from the minds of many, who was written by one who had some concern have imbibed witchcraft and the phenomina in the transactions; perhaps by Rogers of hobgoblins."

ly to enlighten the minds of the simple, witches, apparitions and hobgoblins which do not exist. And as this relation proceeds from one that wishes happiness to all mankind, and the author, although unknown, hopes that no one person or persons will be offended at the relation of facts, when there are no names mentioned, providing they had an active part with the anticipating fire-club.

This Pamphlet is chiefly intended for the perusal of the good Economists in Morris County. Gentlemen, yours in amity, PHILANTHROPIST."

The aged gentleman first mentioned. gives us, as related by his father, a native of Morristown, these facts concerning Rogers. He had got up an evening exhibition of his school in the old red court-house, which stood formerly on the north side of head was sometimes applied to persons to the Green in Morristown, with a pillory near its front. A temporary stage, with a curtain, was erected in the courtroom for the exhibitions. During the performance the audience, from some cause, became noisy, which displeased Rogers, who appeared before the curtain and told the company that he had read in the Book of Revelations that on one occasion there was silence in heaven for the space of half an hour; and he thought the audience there they were both meant to be offensive. assembled might be quiet for at least as long a time. In a written invitation, sent to the Rev. John Joline, of Mendham, to attend the above-mentioned, or some other exhibition of his school, he several times introduced the Latin phrase, "Ego scribo," and in such way as to render the whole ludicrous.

Mr. Young, in his preface to the "Wonhimself, who must have been better ac-In concluding his work the writer expresses himself thus:—"It is not from nalevolence or any antipathy against any person or place, that induced me to write the above mentioned transactions, but pure-acknowledged his faults, and confessed that or collections has a second time apprehended; when he acknowledged his faults, and confessed that for his conduct and the designations has a second to the simple that for his conduct and the designations has a second time apprehended; when he acknowledged his faults, and confessed that for his conduct and the declarations he and free them from the imaginary fear of had made in the prosecution of his schemes, he deserved punishment." Ego scribo, I think Rogers did not write it.

> GREENBACKS (xii. 122).—The United States Treasury notes are so called, and the name is thus derived. When the State Bank of Ohio was created (1845), their new circulation had an ornamental device printed on the back in red, a mark so distinctive from all other circulation in the West, that they got the name of Redbacks. When the Treasury notes appeared with the ornamental back in green, they readily took the name of Greenbacks.

> > J. H. J.

COPPERHEADS (vii. 122, 166).—The origin of this name will perhaps remain in doubt. The Copperhead Snake is reputed the most venomous of our serpents. And before this war commenced the name of Copperdenote their bitterness and virulence. In the same way it applied to Secessionists of the most determined cast. Next it was applied by the Government party to their party opponents, and it is now coming into common use by them as equivalent to Democrat. Of course, it will grow into use, and be adopted by the party to which it is applied, as the names Democrat and Locofoco have been previously, and at first

Societies and their Proceedings.

MAINE HISTORICAL SOCIETY .- Augusta, Jan. 27, 1864.—This Society held a meeting at the time and place thus indicated, for the purpose of receiving and reading communications. the regretted absence of the President, the Hon. William Willis of Portland, the chair was taken by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Burgess of Gardiner, who made an address, alluding to the members deceased during the past year, namely, Messrs. Goodenow, Vose, and Tappan, the last of whom, in his clerical relations, had long been identified with the religious history of the State, and a constant attendant on the meetings of the Society.

The Secretary presented a collection of do-cuments, copied from the archives of Massachusetts, relative to the history of the eastern part of Maine in the war of the Revolution, in connexion with Col. Jonathan Eddy, Col. J. Allan, and the Indians of New Brunswick and Several of these papers were Nova Scotia. read. He also presented a letter from Frederic Kidder, Esq., of Boston, presenting copies of three Indian Treaties, one of which was read, offering 600 Indians as soldiers to be under Gen. Washington. The Hon. Jos. Williamson, of Belfast, presented a neatly executed copy of the Journal of Rev. Joseph Baxter, of Medfield, Mass., who accompanied Gov. Shute in his voyage to Georgetown to make a treaty with the Eastern Indians in 1717. He also read a paper on "Slavery in Maine," which was followed by remarks from the Hon. Mr. Bourne, of Kennebunk, on its prevalence and cessation in the county of York.

The Rev. Mr. Cushman of Warren read a paper on "The Clam-Shell Deposits" on the coast of Maine, in illustration of the marvellous deposit of Oyster-Shells at Damariscotta. This was followed by a discussion, in which several of the members took part. Judge Williamson also presented a paper on "The Northmen on the Kennebec," founded on certain ante-Anglican appearances of occupation, and dwellings with bricks, near Gardiner, whose origin was unknown to the first English settlers. The Vice-President read a paper on "Vital Statistics," communicated by the President, containing much important matter, and urging legislative action to secure a full and accurate registry of at Fort William Henry, on Lake George, in 1756. It is well preserved, and bears on it an engraved sketch of the Fort, and a part of the Lake, made at the time; perhaps the only sketch of the Fort now in existence.

The Hon. E. E. Bourne read a paper in "Vindication of the Commemoration of the Colony at the mouth of the Kennebec, under George Popham." This paper was prepared with special reference to a speech, with notes, by J. Wingate Thornton, Esq., of Boston; after which, on motion by the Hon. J. W. Bradbury, of

Augusta, it was

Resolved. That the thanks of the Society be tendered to the Hon. E. E. Bourne, for his successful vindication of the commemoration of the Popham Colony from the unwarrantable attacks of Wm. Thornton. On motion of the same, the thanks of the Society were presented to the other gentlemen who had presented papers. The members of the Society and other invited guests shared, between the afternoon and evening sessions, the plentiful and elegant hospitality of the Recording Secretary, the Hon. Wm. Bradbury.

MASSACHUSETTS.

MASSACHUSETTS HISTORICAL SOCIETY .- Boston. Feb. 11.—A stated monthly meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society was held yesterday at their rooms, the President, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, in the chair. After the transaction of the usual business, the President paid a tribute to the memory of the late Frederick Tudor. We copy the closing portion of the eulogy:

As a cultivator of fruits and flowers, and trees too, at Nahant, he not only placed himself in the front rank of horticulturists, but he gave a signal instance of how much could be done by ingenuity, perseverance, and skill, in overcoming the most formidable obstacles of soil and climate, and obtaining a victory over nature herself.

It has been said that New England is a region of rocks and ice. Mr. Tudor seemed willing to accept it as such, and to be resolved that rocks and ice should be the main ministers to his own fortune, and through him to the health and happiness of others.

I may not omit to add that while New England was his chosen and constant home, he was a man of enlarged and earnest patriotism. Taking pride in his father's Revolutionary services, and births, deaths, and diseases terminating in death. inheriting his place in the Society of the Cincin-A letter was read from the Hon. W. P. Haines, nati, he stood fast to the Stars and Stripes and of Biddeford, giving to the Society the Powder to the Union cause, of which they are the honor-Horn of Michael B. Goldthwait, which was used ed emblem, in adversity as well as in prosperity; and nowhere has our National banner been more executed in a very neat hand, the letters like those frequently or more eagerly displayed, on every in Hahn's Hebrew Bible; the next is an elegant fit occasion during the past three years, than Arabic Koran in beautiful handwriting, with an from the windows of his beautiful residence in introduction in illuminated letters; and the last Bacon street. He was of a spirit to have borne is a handsome copy of the Prayers of St. Nerses, it bravely to the battle-field, had an occasion octube Patriarch of the Armenians, ed. 1837, a polycurred before age had impaired the vigor of his arm.

heroism in other parts of the world as well as in our own. It is an interesting fact that when the tidings came to us from the far East of the noble endurance and brilliant achievements of the lamented Havelock, Mr. Tudor, without calling any one to his counsel, or allowing any one to share the cost, caused a magnificent sword to be made at Springfield, and prepared it with a suitable inscription, to be presented to that great Christian hero. It was unhappily too late to reach him before his death.

It only remains for me to offer in behalf of the Standing Committee the customary resolution:

Resolved, That the Massachusetts Historical Society have learned with deep regret, the death of their valued associate, Frederick Tudor, Esq., and that the President be directed to name one of our members to prepare a memoir of him for our proceedings.

The resolution was unanimously adopted. Hon. Emory Washburne read an elaborate paper on villanage and slavery in England, which was followed by an interesting discussion on this subject, in which Horace Gray, Jr., Esq., Hon. James Savage, and Hon. G. T. Davis took part. The Society then adjourned.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SO-CIETY. -Boston, Feb. 3.-A stated meeting was held this afternoon, the President, Dr. Lewis, in the chair.

The Corresponding Secretary read a letter from James B. Richardson, of Boston, accepting resident membership.

A letter from the widow of Hon. Henry Cushman, of Bernardston, to the Recording Secretary, was read, and was referred to a committee of three, with full power, to act in relation to the donation under the will of Mr. Cushman, and Wm. B. Towne, John W. Dean, and Frederic Kidder were appointed on that committee.

The Librarian reported the following donations: number of volumes, 25; pamphlets, 40; of manuscripts, 100. He also called the attenof the Book of Esther, written on a parchment Mr. Whitehead, the Corresponding Secretary roll and inclosed in a gilt case; it contains 20 submitted the correspondence since the last pages without points, chapter, or verse, and is meeting.

glot volume in 24 languages. The two first Nor did he fail to observe and to honor true were purchased at Damascus in Syria, the last at the Island of St. Lazare, by Mr. Appleton in his travels in 1854-5.

On motion of Frederick Kidder, it was voted that the thanks of the Society be tendered to our members Thomas Waterman and William Appleton, for their donations, viz.: about fifty volumes of the Boston Transcript and Daily Advertiser from the former, and from the latter the treasures already described.

The Historiographer read an interesting account of Charles Moses Endicott, a corresponding member of the Society, who deceased at Northampton, Dec. 15, 1863, aged 70 years and 9 days.

Rev. Dr. Hoppin, of Cambridge, read a carefully prepared paper on the Court of the Star Chamber, touching upon the following topics:

1. Its name. 2, The persons who composed it.

3. Its functions. 4. Its high antiquity. 5. Lord Bacon's and Lord Coke's encomiums upon it. 6. Its late abuses and abolishment. 7. The modern mythical conceptions of the Star Chamber.

Rev. Martin Moore, of Boston, read a biographical account of Rev. William Cogswell, D.D., the editor of the first volume of the Society's publication, who died at Gilmanton, N. H., April 18, 1850, aged 62. Copies of both papers were requested for the use of the Society.

A new by-law, creating a standing committee on heraldry, was adopted, and the following gentlemen were appointed as the committee: William Henry Whitmore, of Boston, Abner C. Goodell, jr., of Salem, Rev. William S. Bartlet. of Chelsea, and Augustus Thorndike Perkins. and William Sumner Appleton, of Boston

NEW JERSEY.

NEW JERSEY HISTORICAL SOCIETY .- Trenton, January 21, 1864.—The New Jersey Historical Society, in accordance with its By-Laws, held its annual meeting to-day in this city, the Rev. John Hall, D.D., of Trenton—one of the Executive Committee-and subsequently the Hon. tion of the Society to the following donations of Richard S. Field, one of the Vice-Presidents, William Appleton: an old Hebrew manuscript presiding. After the reading of the minutes, of donations received. Many of these donations were of great historical value and interest.

The Treasurer, Mr. Alofsen, reported the receipts and expenditures of the past year, showing are willing that its library and other historical a balance in the Treasury of $463.44, of which treasures should become useless, and their pre-$27.62 belonged to the Library Fund. value of the Society's publications on hand was estimated at $969.11, and its real estate at institution established for the public good, and, $3,500, making its total property, independent so far, eminently successful in perfecting the of cash, to amount to $4,469.11.

Society during the past year. It had prosecuted its mission, like most useful instrumentalitoo frequently the case with unobtrusive merit, had failed to secure its fair meed of reward. The results attained, however, were sufficiently valuable to testify to its onward progress, encouraging its friends and giving assurance of continued and increasing service to the State. The only publication during the year had been one number of the Society's "Proceedings." No additions had been made to the Library excepting by donations, which had amounted to 110 bound volumes and 262 pamphlets. The Library now contains 3,098 bound volumes and 5,276 pamphlets, but there was a large amount of unarranged matter. Attention was drawn to the small number of members who had contributed to the funds in the course of the year, and the propriety of revising the roll suggested. No action had yet been taken in accordance with the request of the Society at the last meeting relating to measures for the construction of a fire-proof building, and the Committee closed their report with an appropriate allusion to the death of Miss Rutherfurd of Eastridge. near Newark, who had always proved so warm and liberal a friend to the Society.

The Committee on Publications reported the readiness for publication of another number of the Society's "Proceedings," and also of "The Town Records of Newark," which would form the sixth volume of the Society's "Collections." As the proceedings of the Society constitute its chief means for the dissemination of a correct knowledge of New Jersey History, the members were urged to interest themselves in increasing their sale.

Mr. Rutherfurd submitted the report of the Committee on the Library, stating the progress made in binding and arranging, and urging additional subscriptions to the Library fund. In adopted: accordance with the directions of the Society a

Mr. Congar, the Librarian, reported a long list circular appeal had been issued to the members on the subject with little success. The Committee said: "It is not to be supposed that the members of the Society, or the public generally, servation endangered through their neglect to provide proper accommodations for them. As an purposes of its organization, it can rightly claim Rev. Mr. Hammell presented the report of the from the patriotic citizens of the State, whether Executive Committee of the progress of the actually connected with it by membership or not, such countenance and support as will ensure the perpetuity of its usefulness." Particular ties, quietly, not intruding itself upon public reference was made to the continued generosity notice nor claiming any undue consideration of Mr. S. Alofsen, of Jersey City, the Treasurer, from those for whom it is laboring, and as is in supplying the library with a copy of every valuable publication referring to the Rebellion, 350 different publications having been already received.

> Several new members were elected and other nominations received.

The Chair announced the following Standing

Committees for 1864:

On Publications-Richard S. Field, William A. Whitehead, Henry W. Green, Samuel H. Pennington, M.D., and Rev. John Hall, DD. On Statistics—Joseph P. Bradley, F. Wolcott Jackson, Rev. Samuel M. Hammill, Lyndon A. Smith, M.D., and C. C. Haven. On Nominations -David A. Hayes, Peter S. Duryee, and Rev. R. K. Rodgers, D.D. On the Library—Walter Rutherfurd, Peter S. Duryee, John P. Jackson, Isaac P. Trimble, M.D., with the Treasurer and officers residing in Newark.

A Committee appointed to nominate officers for the ensuing year reported the following,

who were duly elected:

President—Joseph C. Hornblower, LL.D., Vice Presidents—Hon. James Parker, Hon. Richard S. Field, Hon. Henry W. Green. Corresponding Secretary-Wm. A. Whitehead, New-Recording Secretary—David A. Hayes, Newark. Librarian—Samuel H. Congar, Newark. Treasurer—Solomon Alofsen, Jersey City. Executive Committee—Samuel H. Pennington, M.D., Rev. Henry B. Sherman, Hon. Charles S. Olden, Rev. R. K. Rodgers, D.D., N. Norris Halsted, Esq., Rev. John Hall, D.D., C. C. Haven, Esq., Rev. Samuel M. Hammell, and Lyndon A. Smith, M.D.

Mr. Walter Rutherfurd, referring to the suggestion contained in the letter from John R. Brodhead, Esq., of New York, which had been read, offered the following resolution, which was

Resolved, That the Historical Society of New

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 16 Jersey, believing that the name and fame of the first discoverer of the shores of the State could not be more appropriately perpetuated, would express its earnest desire that the Fort, now being constructed at Sandy Hook by the United States, be named Fort Hudson.

Resolved. That the Corresponding Secretary communicate the above resolution to the Hon. Secretary of War, and to the Senators and Representatives of New Jersey in Congress.

Mr. Peter S. Duryee, in view of the derelietion of so many, nominally members of the Society, which had been referred to by the Executive Committee, offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Secretaries and Treasurer be a committee to revise the roll of members, and adopt such means as they may think proper to ascertain who are now connected with the Society.

The Society then listened with much interest to sundry "Passages in the History of Ocean County," by Edwin Salter, Esq., which in the absence of Mr. Salter was read by the Corresponding Secretary, who stated that the passages read were but a small part of the materials collected and transmitted to the Society by Mr. Salter, evincing an interest in our history and an extent of laborious research eminently worthy of imitation. On motion of Mr. Hayes the thanks of the Society were directed to be conveyed to Mr. Salter for his valuable contribution to the history of the State.

The Society then adjourned to meet in Newark on the third Thursday of May next.

NEW YORK.

ALBANY INSTITUTE. - Albany, January 26, 1864. At a regular meeting of the Albany Institute, held Tuesday evening;

In the absence of the President, George W. Carpenter, Esq., in the chair.

The following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year: John V. L. Pruyn, President. Andrew E.

Brown, Treasurer.

First Department.—Richard V. DeWitt, President. John Paterson, Cor. Sec. Jacob S. Mosher, Rec. Sec. George W. Hough, Librarian. Second Department.—Stephen Van Rensselaer, President. Peter Gansevoort, Vice-President. S. Oakley Vanderpoel, Rec. Sec. Joel Munsell, Cor. Sec. Charles B. Redfield, Treasurer. Third Department.—Alexander S. Johnson, President, its Constitution and By-laws, will be sent by John N. Campbell, Vice-President. Jacob I. mail. Werner, Cor. Sec.

Chas. H. Anthony, Amos Dean, Andrew E. Brown.

A very able and interesting paper was read by Dr. Franklin B. Hough, on the "Battle of Cedar Mountain," being an extract from his forthcoming work, "The History of Duryee's Brigade," now in preparation.

BUFFALO HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Buffalo, January.—At the meeting for January, M. Fillmore, President, in the Chair, and Guy H. Salisbury, Secretary, the following were among the proceedings had:

Being the Annual Meeting of the Society, an election of officers was held for the ensuing year.

as has been previously published.

The Annual Report of O. G. Steele, Treasurer, was submitted, showing a total of receipts $797.17, and of expenditures, $681.08. The Secretary not having completed the Annual Report of the Board of Managers to the Society, was allowed further time to prepare it.

O. G. Steele, from the Committee for procuring from fifty members, a subscription of $100 each, payable in five yearly instalmenta, for the purpose of securing additional means for carrying out the objects of the Society, reported that the list was full-having been signed by fifty-one gentlemen.

The Treasurer also reported that he had received cash donations, for the same object, of $50 from F. H. Root, and $20 from Sidney Shepard.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Fillmore, and adopted, that such of the above subscribers who elect to pay $50 of their subscription in advance, so as to comply with the requirements of the Constitution, be constituted Life Memberssubject to the payment of the balance of their subscriptions. The terms of the resolution have been published.

The President submitted a draft for Certificate of Membership in the Society, and was authorized to procure the same to be engraved and printed.

Guy H. Salisbury submitted his monthly report as Corresponding Secretary and Librarian, in which were mentioned the following matters:

Judge Hall, from the Committee on procuring Local Histories of the several towns in the County, has furnished a list of about sixty names of persons, in most of the towns, to whom the printed circular of the Committee, and also the general circular of the Society, with a copy of

But few deaths in the families of old residents Curators.—James Hall, Howard Townsend, were noted for the preceding month. They were-Dec. 24, Walter Joy, aged 53; Dec. 30, at Lancaster, Erie Co., Truman Luce, aged 76; Jan. 8, Sarah Brooks, aged 25, daughter of the late Wells Brooks.

The weekly meetings of the Historical Society Club have been held as follows. Dec. 14th, C. F. S. Thomas', when a paper was read by Chas. D. Norton, on "The Old Ferry, at the Black Rock;" Dec. 21st, at O. H. Marshall's, a paper being read by Geo. V. Brown, late U. S. Consul at Tangier, Morocco, entitled, "Diplomatic Controversy, occasioned by the visit of an American Vessel from Lake Erie to the Shores of Spain and Morocco;" Dec. 28th, at N. K. Hall's, where a paper was read by E. S. Prosser, relative to the enlargement of the locks in the Erie Canal; Jan. 4th, at Charles D. Norton's, at which the paper of the evening was read by E. P. Dorr, being a history of our Lake Commerce.

The list of donations reported by the Secretary, will appear on Monday.

The President stated that he had written to Hon. Augustus S. Porter, of Niagara Falls, as directed at the last meeting, with the view of procuring a map made by the late Judge Augustus Porter, of the "Phelps and Gorham Purchase," and also such of his papers, etc., as could be obtained. A reply had been received from Mr. Porter, which was read, and in which he says, that he had not yet been able to find such a map among his father's papers, but should he succeed, on further research, would transmit it to the Society. He adds, that the principal historical incidents in the life of Judge Porter were embodied in a manuscript communication furnished by him in 1848, to the Young Men's Association of this city—a portion of which was published by O. Turner, in his History of the Holland Purchase, prefaced by a brief biographical sketch meeting of the New York Historical Society, at which action was taken on a proposition that the Government continue the publication of the "American Archives," heretofore compiled by Peter Force, 9 vols. of which have been published, and the work then suspended when Mr. Marcy was Secretary of State. On his motion, Congress on the subject.

his motion, a committee of three had been then and Wm. A. Bird. Mr. Steele had therefore written some appropriate resolutions, which he submitted, and which were adopted.

Some remarks were made by L. F. Allen, on the previous decease of three other members of the Society—Silas Sawin, Edward S. Warren, and James G. Hoyt—and Judge Clinton offered a resolution in respect to those gentlemen, which was adopted.

On motion of N. K. Hall, a committee of two was directed to be appointed, to report as to what Standing Committees are needed, and what should be their duties. N. K. Hall and Chas. D. Norton were named by the president as such At a subsequent meeting of the committee. Board of Managers, committees on respective departments of the Society were constituted, as recommended in a report from Messrs. Hall and Norton, and the President appointed said committees as follows:

Finance-Millard Fillmore (Chairman ex-officio, as President), Jas. P. White, Chas. D. Norton. Library-Guy H. Salisbury, Geo. R. Babcock, Geo. W. Hosmer. Papers and Property—G. W. Clintofi, O. H. Marshall, H. W. Rogers. Donations, Subscriptions, and Collections—O. G. Steele, L. F. Allen, Wm. Dorsheimer. Publications—Walter Clarke, N. K. Hall, G. H. Salisham bury. Membership-H. W. Rogers, C. D. Norton, Wm. Dorsheimer.

On motion of N. K. Hall, the matter of rooms to be occupied by the Society, with fitting up and furnishing the same, was referred to the Committee on Papers and Property.

The Annual Address before the Society was delivered at Americau Hall, on the evening of Jan. 13th, by Rev. Dr. Hosmer, being entitled "The Physiognomy of Buffalo."

The following gentlemen were elected Corresponding Members: Hon Horace U. Soper, of O. H. Marshall said he was present at the last Batavia; Ex-Lieut. Gov. Simon Brown, of Concord, Mass.

NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—New York; February 2.—The regular monthly meeting of this society was held at the Society's Hall, on Second avenue, and notwithstanding the unpromising state of the weather a large audience the Board of Managers were requested to take was in attendance. Frederick De Peyster, Preinto consideration the propriety of memorializing sident, in the chair. On the recommendation of the Executive Committee the society determined At a meeting of the Historical Society, held to commemorate by suitable acts and proceed-Jan. 4th, O. G. Steele had remarked, that some ings the two hundredth anniversary of the Con-action should be taken in regard to the recent quest of New Netherland in 1664. The paper of death of Walter Joy, one of the members. On the evening was read by Wm. J. Hoppin on "The Existing Portraits of Ancient Historical informally appointed to prepare resolutions ex- | Personages," and was a beautiful production, full pressive of the sense of the Society, which of learning and eloquence. It was received with committee were O. G. Steele, Rev. Dr. Chester, great enthusiasm by the society. A suggestion for a suitable memorial to John Howard Payne, ble, with much decision, as a too personal conpresented at the last meeting, was renewed by Dr. Gardner, whose proposition on the subject was referred to the Executive Committee. The proceedings throughout were exceedingly interesting.

March 1.—The meeting of the Historical Society was well attended, President De Peyster in the chair. The remains of the old statue of Pitt, erected in Wall street, in 1770, recently a part of Mr. Riley's Museum, in West Broadway, were presented to the Society by Mr. Simon F. Mackie. Mrs. Spooner, widow of S. Spooner, esq., has given to the Society the plates of Mr. Spooner's two works, the Dictionary and the Anecdotes of Painters and Sculptors. The Commissioners of Charities and Corrections presented to the Society, a very neat obelisk about a foot high, richly mounted, made of the stone of the balcony of the Federal Hall, Wall street, from which General Washington delivered his Inaugural, April, 30, 1789. President De Peyster made some interesting statements concerning the inauguration of Washington.

Mr. George Folsom moved a vote of thanks to the Commissioners, which was seconded by the Rev. Dr. Osgood, and by Dr. Wilson, a Chief of the Iroquois, who expressed the sentiments of veneration the Iroquois entertained for the memory of Washington.

Mr. Folsom made a motion that a committee be appointed to wait upon the delegates of the Six Nations who are daily expected here on their way to Washington. The motion was adopted, and Mr. Folsom, George Bancroft, and Dr. Osgood were appointed the Committee.

A. B. Hayes, esq., gave to the Society a portrait, by John Wesley Jarvis, of the Rev. John Stanford, D.D., a Baptist clergyman of usefulness and repute in the city in the early part of the century, and Mr. Gulian C. Verplanck gave some pleasant reminiscences of both Mr. Jarvis and Mr. Stanford. On motion of Mr. Thompson, a committee of three was appointed to consider and report whether measures can be taken to respond to the desire of Mr. Bryan, that the Bryan Gallery of Christian Art may be permanently placed in charge of the Society. Rev. A. C. Coxe offered resolutions in favor of a National Society of literary men, to maintain the purity of the English language, and a high standard of scholarship, to represent the common interest of American scholars, and to communicate with scholars abroad. The subject was referred to a committee of five, to consider and report. Mr. McCurdy moved for a committee to consider Mr. Jay's letter to Mr. Dawson, on the new edition of The Federalist; but, after a debate of some little warmth, the subject was laid on the ta-troversy for the official action of the Society.

PENNSYLVANIA.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA. — Philadelphia, Feb. 8, 1864.—The annual meeting of this Society was held at the Athenæum Building. On motion of Dr. B. H. Coates, Col. Jas. Ross Snowden was called to the chair.

The Trustees of the Publication Fund presented their annual report, from which it appears that the subscriptions on 31st December, 1863, amounted to $15,835. Owing to domestic affliction, our fellow-member, Mr. William C. Reichel, has been unable to complete the History of Bethlehem and the Moravian Settlements in north-eastern Penn.; a reprint of the first volume of the Society's collections has therefore been commenced.

Samuel Hazard, Esq., having, on account of the infirmities of advanced age, declined a reelection as Librarian, resolutions were passed expressive of the high appreciation of his services and regard for him on his retirement.

The monthly report of the Librarian was read. Among the valuable donations received, was a water-color fac simile of the original tombstone over the grave of William Bradford, Printer, erected in Trinity church-yard, New York. On motion of H. G. Jones, Esq., resolutions of thanks to Mr. Abraham Hosier, the donor, were then adopted.

Rev. Dr. Brainerd offered a resolution of thanks to Miss R. L. Bodley, of Cincinnati, for gift of a photograph and fac simile letter of Johanna Maria Heckewelder, of Bethlehem, Penn., known in history as the first white child born within the limits of the present State of Ohio.

The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year:

President—Hon. Joseph R. Ingersoll. Vice-Presidents—J. Francis Fisher, George Chambers, of Chambersburg; Benjamin H. Coates, M.D., J. William Wallace.

Treasurer—Charles M. Morris.

Recording Secretary—Samuel L. Smedley. Šecretary — Horatio Corresponding Librarian—Samuel L. Taylor.

Library Committee-John A. McAllister, Richard L. Nicholson.

Publication Committee—Rev. Daniel Washburne.

Finance Committee—Edward A. Souder. After the election, a discussion arose among the members relative to the erection of a new hall for the use of the Society, when it was determined to place the matter in the hands of a committee.

The Society then adjourned.

VERMONT.

VERMONT HISTORICAL SOCIETY. - Brandon. January 28.—The ninth special meeting of the Vermont Historical Society was held at Brandon, the Hon. Hiland Hall, President, in the chair. The Hon. E. N. Briggs, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, welcomed the Society in a brief speech, which was responded to by the Hon. Hiland Hall, President of the Society.

Henry Hall, Esq., of Rutand, then read a paper entitled "Indian Foot-Prints."

George Grenville Benedict, Esq., of Burlington, read a paper entitled, "The Battle of Gettys-burg and the part Vermonters took therein."

The Rev. Samuel R. Hall, of Brownington, then read a memoir of the late Rev. Walter Chapin, formerly of Woodstock.

A paper was read by Albert D. Hager, Esq., entitled, "Ancient Mining on the Shore of Lake Superior."

After the reading of a letter of apology from Hon. David A. Smalley assigning severe sickness as a cause for his not being able to pronounce an address on the life and services of the late Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois,

Edward J. Phelps, Esq., of Burlington, read a commemorative sketch of the life and character of the Hon. Charles Linsley, of Middlebury.

The Rev. Daniel Tomkins Taylor, of Castleton, then read an original Poem entitled, "The Vermont Volunteer.

A number of persons were admitted to resident membership.

On motion, a committee, consisting of Messrs. Edward J. Phelps, of Burlington, Henry Hall, of Rutland, and George F. Houghton, St. Albans, was appointed to revise the papers left for the Society by the late Hon. Charles Linsley, and present them at the next meeting of the Society at St. Johnsbury, in June, 1864.

The Hon. Stephen Royce, of East Berkshire, was urgently requested to prepare a paper embracing his Reminiscences of the Bench and Bar of Vermont.

Hon. Isaac F. Redfield, of Boston, was requested to prepare and read before the Society, his Reminiscences of the Bench and Bar of Vermont.

Prof. William H. Parker, of Middlebury, to M.D., of Brandon.

prepare a memoir of the late Hon. James Meacham.

Hon. Asa Owen Aldis, of St. Albans, to prepare a biography of the Hon. Samuel S. Phelps.

Rev. John B. Perry, of Swanton, to prepare a biographical sketch of the late ex-Governor Horace Eaton.

On motion, Rev. Pliny H. White, of Coventry, was requested to prepare biographical notices of the historians of Vermont. The Rev. Pliny H. White was formally invited to complete his Bibliography of Vermont, by adding thereto a complete list of the newspapers printed in Vermont. Mr. White, being present, accepted the invitation, conditioned that each member of the Society render such aid as may be in his power, to render the list as complete as possible.

The Rev. John B. Perry, of Swanton, then read a paper, "On the Geological Formation of Lake Champlain.'

A paper on "June Trainings in Vermont" was then read by Luther L. Dutcher, Esq., of St. Albans, after which the Society took a recess until two o'clock р.м.

Many valuable donations were made, for which the thanks of the Society were, on motion, returned.

John McKesson, Esq., of New York City, through L. L. Dutcher, Esq., presented to the Society a parchment deed, dated in 1773, of lands owned by the proprietors of Middlesex, Washington County, Vt., and described in said deed of partition as belonging to Middlesex, Albany County, in the Province of New York.

Rev. Francis W. Smith, of St. Albans, presented a volume, entitled, "Trinity Church (N. Y.) Pamphlets."

A manuscript, being the original of two law lectures, by the Hon. Nathaniel Chipman, Prof. of Jurisprudence in Middlebury College from 1816 to 1843, was presented by Mrs. Charles Linsley, of Middlebury.

A complete set of the "Brandon Monitor" Newspaper, and a Pamphlet containing a fac simile of the original Declaration of Independence in the handwriting of Thomas Jefferson, with biographical sketches of all the Signers, were presented by D. L. Milliken, Brandon, Editor of the " Vermont Record."

Mr. J. Holcomb, of Brandon, presented, through the editor of the "Vermont Record," five volumes of the "Voice of Freedom" newspaper, commencing in June, 1843. Through the same source, Rev. Bernice D. Ames, of East Greenwich, R.I., presented a volume containing a memoir of the late Hon. Anderson G. Dana,

A biographical notice of the Rev. George B. Manser, D.D., one of the corporators named in the charter of the Vermont Historical Society, and its first Secretary, was then read by George F. Houghton, Esq., of St. Albans.

This was followed by the reading of a biographical sketch of the late Hon. Zimri Howe, of Castleton, by Henry Clark, Esq., of Poult-

The exercises concluded by the reading of a commemorative notice of the late Rev. Stephen Olin, D.D., LL.D., by the Rev. Andrew Witherspoon, D.D., of Brandon.

The Hon. William M. Pingry, of Perkinsville, resolved, that the Hon. Norman Williams, of Woodstock, was requested to prepare a biographical sketch of the late Hon. Titus Hutchinson; and that the Hon. Carlos Coolidge be invited to prepare a biographical sketch of the late Hon. Jonathan H. Hubbare, of Windsor,

Dr. John L. Chandler, of St. Albans, was invited to prepare a paper comprising his Reminiscences of the most noted of the pioneer Surgeons and Physicians of Vermont.

The Hon. Jacob Collamer was requested to prepare and read before this Society a memoir of the Hon. Charles K. Williams, of Rutland.

The President then announced that the next special meeting of the Society would be held at St. Johnsbury, in the month of June, 1864. After remarks from the President of the Society, in which he alluded to the efforts made by the Committee of Arrangements and by the people of Brandon, to render this special meeting attractive aud successful, and to the hospitality of the citizens of Brandon, which was bountifully as well as gracefully dispensed, the Society adjourned,-having, in the character of the exercises and in the number of persons in attendance upon them from far and near, given renewed proofs of increasing activity and usefulness.

Notes on Books.

Harper's Pictorial History of the Great Rebellion. No. 6.

This number, illustrated with a fine colored map of the States embraced in the original field of operations, and several very fine engravings on wood, begins properly the history of the war, Mexico and ran across to our lines, which he an introductory portion, written with a dignity, tysburg, which he saw. Disposed to see all in breadth, and judgment which were an earnest of the great value of the work so well introduced. In the present number there is no departure from the high character assumed. The work is in every point of view creditable, and far superior to any other that we have seen.

The Manufacture of Iron in Buffalo. A paper read by invitation before The Buffalo Historical Society, January 25, 1864. By John Wilkeson, Esq. Buffalo, 1864.

A valuable and readable sketch of the important iron manufacture that has grown up in Buffalo. It contains much information on iron generally that will repay perusal.

The United States Service Magazine, Vol. I. No. I. January, 1864. C. B. Richardson, New York.

This Magazine, appealing directly to the Army and Navy, enters on its career with every promise of success. In appearance it is certainly the prince of the American Magazines, being very well printed on fine paper. On testing the contents we cannot certainly be less pleased. The editor, Prof. Henry Coppée, formerly an officer in the U.S. Army and a graduate of West Point, brings to his task not only a thorough knowledge of the military profession, but the literary skill and ability which have won him such a high rank in the world of letters.

This number has a Word of Greeting, an article on Chattanooga, with a map; the Northern and Western Lakes; a few Facts about Artillery; a Modern Fable; a fine poem on the Burial at Gettysburg; a paper by Gen. Barnard on the Use of Iron in Fortification; one by Ch. G. Leland on War Songs; an article on Greek Fire, which will dispel some illusions; Modern War; Later Rambles over the Field of Gettysburg, by Dr. Jacobs, etc., etc.

Three Months in the Southern States, April-June, 1863. By Lieut. Col. Fremantle, Cold-stream Guards. New York, John Bradburn (M. Doolady's Successor). 1864. 12mo. 309 pp.

A NEAT and readable volume, which the publisher has done well to issue. We hope the author is not an average specimen of English officers of his rank; his hatred of the American government is natural and to be expected; his exultation at finding Americans filled with similar feelings equally so. He entered Texas from the previous numbers having been devoted to reached in Pennsylvania after the battle of Getthe South with favor, his account is an admiring open war, and where their contentions paralysed sketch; yet much of value is given.

Notice sur les Plantes de Michaux et sur son voyage au Canada et à la Baie d'Hudson, d'après son Journal manuscrit et autres documents inédits par l'Abbé Ovide Brunet. Quebec. 8vo, pp. 44.

This valuable tract will prove a treat to our botanists, as the range of plants is not entirely confined to Canada, and the life belongs as well to American as Canadian biography.

Miscellany.

PARTON'S LIFE AND TIMES OF FRANKLIN .-- Mr. Parton, we understand, contrary to his original intention, has concluded to publish his work on the Life and Times of Benjamin Franklin, without waiting for the return of peace. It is now in press, and will appear about the first of June. It is remarkable that the great masses of material for a complete biography of Franklin should never before have been used for the production of such a work. The reason is, probably, that the fragments of autobiography left by Franklin stood in the way, no recent writer being willing either to discard or continue them. Mr. Parton, we are informed, overcomes this difficulty by using the autobiography as material only, and is thus enabled to incorporate into his narrative all the interesting information respecting Franklin's early life which modern research has brought to light. The public career of Franklin, particularly his services during the Revolutionary war, both as a member of Congress and as envoy to France, are related in the new work with a fulness of detail never before attempted. Among the important acquisitions of the author, is a perfect copy of the pamphlet written by Franklin in his nineteenth year, when he was a journeyman printer in London, which gave him at the time considerably celebrity, but which was long supposed to be lost. This will be given entire in an appendix. One of the engravings is a portrait of that infant son of Franklin whose untimely death he mourned for forty years. There will be in these volumes a great deal of matter of immediate interest, bearing directly on the events now occurring; for it is well known that the spirit of Secession began to manifest were those of Pope Leo X., Luther, Henry VIII.,

the alliance between France and America. Nothing but the wisdom, the patience, and the indomitable good humor of Franklin prevented the Southern hot-heads from giving mortal offence to the French government. The new biography will form two volumes, crown-octavo, of about 650 pages each. It will be published by the Mason Brothers of this city.

Among the Many Curious Relics brought forward at a recent Sanitary Fair is a chip from the Beech Tree Forks, of Licking, showing the tomahawk marks of Daniel Boone, which was the corner tree and starting point for his claim to lands in Kentucky. The yearly growth of wood having covered this tomahawk mark, it was necessary, in settling the numerous law-suits in Kentucky, to produce the mark made by Boone. This was done by carefully scaling off the yearly growth, until the mark appeared corresponding with the year he made it, and the chip being in Court, and the tree proved from which it was taken, Boone's claim was established.

DEATH OF A RESERVE ANTIQUARIAN.—Mr. Joel Blakeslee, of Colebrook, Ashtabula Co., O., a venerable antiquarian and respected citizen, died Nov. 27th, aged 76 years. Mr. Blakeslee emigrated from Avon, N. Y., to Ohio, in 1819, and was the first settler of Colebrook, his family occupying a house which consisted of four wide boards for a floor, and five for a shelter from the weather. The nearest settlement was three miles, to which they went by marked trees. Hardships and privations were the lot of the Blakeslee pioneers, many of them unusually severe. Mr. B. in due time became locally famous as an Antiquarian, and gathered up the relics of the past, and the incidents connected with the early history of every township of Ashtabula county. All the Indian curiosities and history of his section of the Lake region were carefully collected and preserved, and his contributions to the press and the Historical Society at Jefferson were valuable and interesting. They will be more and more prized as generation succeeds generation.

One of the attractions of the late Fair at Cincinnati, was a selection of letters from the extraordinary collection of Lewis J. Cost, Esq., of St. Louis, whose contributions from his American treasures have often enriched our columns. Among the most remarkable there exhibited,_ itself as early as 1778, in Paris, where the North-ern and Southern servants of Congress were at borough, Wellington, Napoleon, Murat, Ney.

among the military heroes; and a host of American worthies, Gov. Stuyvesant, Roger Williams, Gen. Oglethorpe, Washington, Franklin, Boone,

THE LEXINGTON MONUMENT.—The heirs of the late Wm. H. Carey, of Brooklyn, N. Y. (formerly of Boston), have purchased Belfrey Hill, in Lexington, containing about two acres, and having in the centre a rock rising up 40 feet. The price paid was $3000. The lot has been Monument Association, as a site for their new held a meeting and voted unanimously to accept the patriotic gift. Resolutions and a vote of thanks were unanimously passed, and a copy sent to the donors.

This is a noble beginning. It is hoped that other persons will give their aid towards erecting a National Monument in commemoration of the great event of the 19th of April, 1775. It will require two years to execute the work of the "Minute Man,"-a bronze statue of about sixteen feet in height. It is to be hoped that sufficient aid will be given the Association soon, so that work will go on and have the corner stone ready to be laid and dedicated to Liberty and Union again by the old soldiers, when they return from the war. The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company have subscribed $1000, to be paid when the corner stone is laid.

Any person wishing to contribute money for the patriotic object of erecting this Na ional Monument, can leave it with Mr. C. O Whitmore, when they will receive a diploma executed on a s'eel plate in the highest style of art, on which is the autograph of the President, Hon. Edward Everett, also the other officers of the Association, a design of the new monument and a the five dollars paid for it. Every American should have a copy placed in his house, to be handed down to future generations, informing them where American liberty had its birth.

Mr. Robert Wright, 102 Great Russell st., W. C., London, solicits copies of autograph letters of Gen. Wolfe for a new and complete life of valuable information of this subject, that they of the great commander.

HON. SAMUEL F. CARY of College Hill, Ohio, resides in this city. is preparing a complete history or record of the BALTIMORE, Feb. 22, 1864.

descendants of John Cary who landed at Plymouth in the Mayflower.

Kosciusko.--Marianna Lugomirska, said to be a descendant of the Polish patriot Thaddeus Kosciusko, has published in Germany a new historical romance, compiled from original letters and documents preserved amongst the family papers of the Polish hero.

THE VETERAN NEWSPAPER OF THE UNITED presented by the said heirs to the Lexington STATES.—The oldest newspaper in the United States is the "New Hampshire Gazette," pubmonument. The rock is but a few rods distant lished at Portsmouth, N. H. This paper comfrom the old monument. The directors recently pleted the one hundred and seventh year of its pleted the one hundred and seventh year of its publication on the 1st of October. This paper commenced its career in 1756, and consequently is the oldest newspaper in America.

> Vol. I. MAINE HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS, is now in the printer's hand for republication. The demand has exhausted the first edition, and the Publishing Committee are taking advantage of this opportunity to enrich the work by the addition of about sixty pages, to be furnished out of the valuable stores of its Editor, the Hon. William Willis, President of the Society.

HISTORY OF PORTLAND.—This valuable production, of which the first portion is contained in Vol. I. of the Collections of the Maine Historical Society, is soon to be issued in a new and attractive form, at the request of the Society. The author, the Hon. Wm. Willis, of Portland, will make additions to its pages, and intends to continue the narrative down to the present time. the Treasurer, in Liberty square, Boston; also His resources for this purpose are abundant; those who wish to become members of the Asso- and his ability to draw upon these has been fully ciation can do so by paying $5 to Mr. Whitmore, tested in the many historical and biographical sketches in which he has preserved the facts of the past.

HISTORY OF THE PENNSYLVANIA PAPER MONEY AND OF THE CONTINENTAL EMISSIONS.—Mr. Frank battle scene in Lexington, April 19, 1775, the M. Etting is compiling historical sketches of the whole making a beautiful parlor picture worth Paper Money of Pennsylvania and of the Continental Emissions. I understand that he has been engaged in this subject for several years, and has collected many original MSS., especially in regard to the Pennsylvania issue. As a person interested in the subject, and anxious to aid Mr. Etting, permit me to suggest to your numerous readers, many of whom may be possessed would contribute to accurate history by communicating with Mr. Etting, who, at present,

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

APRIL, 1864.

[No. 4.

General Bepartment.

LETTERS OF GEN. JOSEPH REED TO GEN. IRVINE.

I send you for publication a few letters from the then Executive of Pennsylvania, Gen. Joseph Reed, to Gen. Irvine, apposite to the present times, inasmuch as they relate, for the most part, to the difficulties experienced in recruiting the armies of the Revolution; the more creditable to those who did enlist, and, amid the discouragements that surrounded them, battled through the war, without the sordid incentives now so necessary to the recruitment of our present Merit as an Officer is not questioned, it is armies. Think of the State of Pennsylvania with a war on her hands, and only $3000 in the Treasury! Respectfully,

W. A. IRVINE.

PHILAD., Nov. 16th, 1778.

DEAR SIR

Tho I am very much engaged in other Business I cannot let Gen. Armstrong go to Carlisle without acquainting you of the Steps I have taken upon your Claim. On my Return from Camp I made due Inquiry & found that Gen. Hand had been promoted in the Manner then suggested viz. upon the Nomination of North Carolina. Dear Sir Being satisfied of this in making Report to Congress & recommending General Of- which I shall now endeavour to discharge ficers in the Name of the Committee I with one; An Indisposition of some Days stated the several Facts which the Dele- & Moving to a new House having kept me gates of North Carolina admitted were from Business. truly stated, but declared they could not Answer from Col. Nicola on the subject of consent to receive Gen. Hand as their the Invalids in which if he is not mistaken Officer.—I then stated Col. Magaw & your in Facts he seems to account for his Proself as standing next in order of rank. cedure better than I expected. That Col. Magaw being a Prisoner, if a The Reduction of Stony Point has every HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

Brigadier was indispensably necessary at present as Gen. Washington intimates you stood intitled, but in this case Col. Magaws Right should be saved either by Agreement between yourselves or by express Reservation, as it would be a great Injustice that a good Officer should lose his Right by the mere Fortune of War. The Generosity of your own Mind I am sure will lead you to approve this Rule of my Conduct.—Thus the Matter stands—Carolina says she will not have Gen<sup>1</sup>. Hand— Pennsylvania should say & I trust will, that having nominated him she must be bound by her Nomination or the Rights of others will be invaded. Gen. Hand's a Question more affecting to the States of Carolina & Pennsylvania, than a personal Question.

I have not now the Honour of a Seat in Congress but as far as lays in my Power shall convey the Sentimts I have expressed to those who succeed me & hope they will have their due Weight.

I am with much Esteem, Sir Your most obed. & very Hbble Serv.

Jos. REED.

PHILAD., Aug. 8, 1779.

I am indebted to you for two Favours I send you inclosed an Credit on our Arms as I think will have the Regiment. than what is wanted. We have therefore ticulars. been for some Time preparing Exports to a Place not very distant, and mean to take every Precaution for Safety, the Returns to be intirely in such Articles as are wanted However in this View we for the Army. have hitherto confined ourselves to the Officers, it having been understood that the Congress would take care of the men. DEAR SIR This should be well understood now, & is at Camp you will do well to consult him my answering. fully upon the Subject.

The Mode in which half pay was given was settled by Congress, and as there are Expense which Avarrice & private Racomparatively few who may get civil Of-pacity throws on the States in order to fices so lucrative, as to make it unneces-procure the Necessaries for the Army will sary, I wish it was clear of that Restriction, require some Attention & Care on their & if a Law is brought in to establish it I Part, & especially in the filling up Vacanwill recommend to such Members of Assly cies in the present State of the Privates I as I have any Influence with to lay aside cannot think there is any Necessity of the Restriction; but this will only affect introducing new Officers which must be the half Pay given by the State as we can the Case if every Vacancy is filled as soon only give our Vote in Congress, as one of as it happens. I would wish the General thirteen, for an Alteration of the other.

effectual one, if no Parties existed in the niences themselves—the fewer Officers we State, & all would concur to enforce the have the better we can afford to do for duty: But while each seeks to strengthen them provided there is sufficient to do the itself by the Malcontents of the other Duty. And I would especially recommend Party there will be an Imbecillity in every Caution in this Respect with Respect to Measure which runs counter to the Feelings any Persons not belonging to the State. and Interests of a considerable Number. The Benefits of the Pennsylvania Line

Particular of Time, Manner, & Circum-|Term of Service should be a compleat stance to recommend it & reflects such | Year if not more from the Time of joining lasting Effects. I am rejoiced our Officers I wish I had more Leisure to lay my had so great a Share in it, as it reflects Sentiments before the publick on the Duty Honour upon the State. Had the medi- & propriety of providing for the Officers tated Design on the other Point taken & Soldiers-it is the only Subject on Effect the Consequences would have been which I trouble the News Papers, & the decisive for the Campaign—We are well same Causes for not answering your Letsatisfied here. You ask me what may be ter have operated to prevent my prose-depended on as to Cloathing, & I will cuting it—added to this, that the News answer you freely, depending that you Papers have been very much engrossed by will only disclose it when you know it may the Party writers. I shall resume it as be done with Propriety-As to getting it soon as my Health will admit. I congratuin this Place it is impracticable, either the late you upon the favourable Accounts Merchants have it not, or it is put out of from the West Indies-Grenada undoubt-Sight. My own Opinion is, that there is edly taken, and Byron defeated are great more in town than appears, but much less Events, we wait impatiently for the par-

> My best Wishes attend you & am Dear Sir, with much Esteem Your most obed & very Hbble serv

> > Jos. REED.

PHILAD., Nov. 18, 1779.

I am indebted to you for several Favours as Gen. Wilkinson the new Clothier Gen. which my long Indisposition has prevented I shall write to Major Moore in answer to his Letter.

The very heavy, I may say the enormous, & Field Officers would rather discourage Your Mode of recruiting would be an it as otherwise they may feel the Inconve-But I should chuse in this Case that the may draw Persons from other States or the State nor politick as to themselves, as Congress extending it to the Life of every at a future Day the Difficulty of rewarding Officer, but also the Cloathing & Stores such a Number will be given as a Reason during the Service—providing also for the against rewarding any.

tho not so complete as I intended I believe their Wants & Circumstances-In Addiif you can be permitted to retain it you tion to which they have also voted each will find yourselves in as comfortable a State as any other Line, & I imagine more so as following Quantities of Land free of Taxes no Pains has been spared to procure Plenty & of the best Quality.

As Officers have a good deal of Leisure & sometimes want Amusement I have sent you a Pamphlet of which I beg your Acceptance & am with much Esteem

> Your obed & verv Hbble serv

Jos. Reed.

PHILAD., April 11, 1780.

SIR

The various Recommendations of Officers for Promotion will very naturally call for some Answer & Notice. They would probably have long before this Time been forwarded from this Board to the Contiwould be made this Spring from the Offi-Regiments. respectable Point of View, & have thereothers rather than overstrain ourselves by unequal Exertions. For this Reason & because the exhausted State of our Treasury does not admit of the Expence we have not attempted Recruiting. For your Satisfaction & that of the Officers I also enclose you the Resolution of Congress which put a Period to our farther Proceeding in the Appointments of Officers. Whenever this Obstacle is removed or Congress direct the Mode we shall chearfully go forward in the Business.

I have now the Satisfaction of informing you that the House of Assembly at their last Sessions taking into farther Consideration the meritorious Services of the Troops belon ug to this State not only foreign Parts, but it is not prudent as to confirmed by a Law the half Pay given by Widow and Children of any Officer dying The Cloathing goes off next Week, & in Service by an Annuity proportioned to Officer at the Expiration of Service the

A Major General2000	Acres
A Brigadier1500	Do.
A Colonel1000	Do.
A Lieutenant Colonel. 750	Do.
A Surgeon 600	Do.
A Major 600	Do.
A Captain 500	Do.
A Lieutenant , 400
An Ensign 300
A Surgeon's Mate 300

And as an Encouragement to the noncommissioned Officers & Soldiers they have been voted

Α	Serjeant	250 Acres
$\mathbf{A}$	Private	200

nental Board of War if it had not been These unsollicited & kind Marks of Attenintimated to us that some Propositions tion & Respect I am sure cannot fail of making suitable Impressions on brave & cers for an Incorporation of the weak generous Minds. As I feel a very sincere When compared with other Pleasure in executing these Plans & Mea-States we find our Quota is in a very sures formed for the Comfort & Satisfaction of the Army I am also happy in communifore thought it our Duty to stimulate cating them, & request as a Peice of Justice to the Assembly you would make known to the Officers & Soldiers what has been done for them on this Occasion.

> I also enclose you a Resolution of Congress on the Subject of your Pay, which I hope will be a pleasing Information as it shews a general Attention to the Interests & Comfort of the Army—of which it is in every Respect very deserving.

> As soon as the Laws are printed I will forward you the Act for the Supply & honourable Reward of the Pennsylvania Troops & am with much Regard & Esteem

> > Sir

Your most obed<sup>t</sup> & very Hbble serv.

Jos. REED.

PHILAD., April 14, 1780.

SIR

I wrote you on the 11th Inst. giving you a short Sketch of the Provision lately made for the Army-since which I received your Favour of the 8th Inst. I am sorry the Surgeons & Mates after receiving Cloathing & other Supplies from the State should thus in a Body tender their Resignation, it looks like extorting rather than requesting. Happily in this Case their Interests were consulted & attended to before this Step was taken otherwise it might possibly have injured their Claim. Generous Minds should be careful how they impose Force or what has the Appearance of it, as there is a certain Pride in human Nature that recoils at Compulsion.—I now inclose you the Act of Assembly confirming the Provision for the Army-Besides which as I mentioned in a former Letter the House voted 2000 Acres of Land to every Major General & so in Proportion to inferiour Officers—Surgeons & their Mates included.

I agree with you in wishing some permanent & general Plan could be fallen upon that would give Satisfaction & save us from adopting the Line of temporary Expedients.

If the Surgeons & Mates should still persist in their Resignation it will be more proper to make it to Congress than to us for the we have the Appointment when they receive their Commissions they become the Officers of the United States .-Perhaps from the Changes making in the Hospital Department Congress could supply their Places, but I confess I am at a loss to see why the Gentlemen are dissatisfied with the State because their Views were disappointed by a Vote in Congress. I am with much Esteem Sir

> Your obed & very Hbble Serv Jos. Rerd.

> > PHILAD., May 10th, 1780.

DEAR SIR

Your favour of the twenty fifth of April day and in the present state of our affairs when frugality is so indispensibly necessary. Whatever may be the customs of European armies it certainly rests in our own opinion whether such an appointment shall be derogatory to the Character of an officer. One thing I am very sure of, that if the person who is to undertake it is not supported and respected by the officers, his office will be a very difficult if not an impracticable one. If the thing is not too far gone I should be glad you would confer with the Baron Steuben thereon, and endeavour to divert him from a measure which appears to us attended with many inconveniences without any real advantages to ballance it. If I had time I would write myself, but I have no objection to your using my name and opinion.

Mr. Swaine's conduct is by no means pleasing to us but if you have the Resolve of Congress of the twenty third day of March 1779, you will find that the nominated by us he is an officer of Congress and removable only by the Commander in Chief. It will be therefore quite acceptable to us if his conduct could be taken up in its proper place and Justice done both him and the publick. We have frequently intimated to him our desire that he should reside at Camp but it has not had the desired effect.

We had flattered ourselves that desertions had nearly ceased and thought ourselves warranted in our opinion by the estimate of stores lately sent us in which our Troops computed at 640 Officers and 3200 non Commissioned Officers and privates. The Justices of the Supreme Court having gone upon the Circuits we have recommended to them in the strongest manner the putting a stop to the interference of the Justices in the case of discharging soldiers. I am clearly of opinion that the Justices of the Supreme Court only upon a habeas corpus, have a right to determine the expiration of service and would advise that the Officers in such case should decently and respectfully decline last and the second Instant came duly and their authority. General Lacey will write safely to hand. We are sorry that a point to you on the subject, and we have taken of punctilio with respect to the State particular notice of Mr. Scott of York Agent should be taken up at this time of Town. I do not know how we can check the supernumerary officers, but if we can or £3000 State Money in it at any Time-have little comparative effect.

in the present state of our publick affairs can expect no Men. Your Observations as to money I see no prospect of recruiting on the Taxes of Cumberland are very just. the number of Men Baron Steuben calls Fair & punctual Payment of Taxes must for. We must therefore concur in some | not be considered among the good Qualiplan for levelling the regiments, I am | ties of your County-tho in Whiggism & sensible it is an unpleasant business, but Bravery I think it may vie with any the all powerful Law of necessity admits County in the State or even in America. of no alternative. I am told that at this I wish our Friends there were more senstage of the business the taxes are found sible of the Importance of this Duty but too burthensome, at least relaxation is you must remember that it has been an called for which shows they have been old Complaint-Time & Experience will improvidently required or very injudiciously | we hope improve & amend it. withheld. I am very glad you are like to bring your affair to an issue I think it is him before the Council containing some quite time it should be settled and your Observations on the Neglect & Omission rank determined and have no doubt Justice of sending the Laws into the Country & will be done. to prepare a quantity of linnen overalls by Classes. As the sending the Laws has and a supply of shirts which will be for been for some Time past considered a Duty warded as soon as they are got ready. of the Council the Members considered the Pray inform me with respect to hats; if sending the Letter to them as a gentle you can do without them till the fall Animadversion on the Board but which in cloathes it would be best. I am with this Instance does not happen to be well much regard Sir

Your most obedient and very humble servant

Jos. Reed President.

P. S. Since writing the above your Favour of Mr. Little is come to hand.

PHILAD., March 20, 1781.

Sir

I have duly received your Favour re-Necessities of the Army at West Point, Use. Fort Pitt &c. have reduced our Treasury to the lowest Ebb-so that I can with Turn. War declared by England against Truth assure you we have not now nor the Dutch - We have no News from Che-stop the Justices their Certificates will You must be sensible what a heavy & necessary Demand must also attend re-I must acknowledge my good Sir, that cruiting. If the Bounties are not paid we

Gen<sup>1</sup>. Wayne laid a Letter from you to Colonel Farmer has orders particularly the late Law for calling Men founded. The Law in Question was sent by Express to the Commissioners of all the Counties above two Months ago-We find on Inquiry that he set out on the 3d Jan. taking with him also Instructions of the most particular Kind so as to establish a general Regularity & Uniformity in the The Express is not here to Execution. ascertain with judicial Precision the actual Delivery of the Law & Papers to the Commissioners of Cumberland, but as it specting the Affairs at Carlisle, which was seasonably delivered in every other appeared of so much Importance that I Part of the State we presume that County thought proper to communicate it to the was not neglected & that you have not Assembly. I am sorry to inform you that been properly informed on this Occasion, it is in our power to give very little Relief. which I have been the more sorry for as The Advances made to the Officers & the Letter has been communicated pretty Soldiers, the Purchase of Cloathing now generally & is wrote in a Language of in Hand—the Supply of this City & the Complaint rather adapted for confidential various Ports in the Country-with the & private Correspondence than for publick Affairs in Europe have taken a surprizing have we had for 2 Months past above 2 sapeak where the French & British Fleet now are, but we are in momentary Expectation of great Events.

I am with much Esteem Sir Your obed & very Hbble serv Jos, REED.

P. S. There is at present no Law in Force enabling the Council to issue Orders to impress—all the Powers of that Nature being vested in the Commissioner under the Law which creates the Office.

PHILAD., June 1, 1780.

DEAR SIR

I am to acknowledge several of your Favours & especially the last informing of the unhappy State of the Army. I communicated it in Confidence to the General Assembly, who in Addition to the other Measures which we had pursued & the beneficial Effects of which we hope you have by this Time experienced have passed a Law authorizing Persons to seize all Cattle & Provisions, this Law we shall execute with Spirit immediately & I hope in a very few Days you will see that a different Spirit reigns here than in those States who perhaps being more remote are not touched equally with a Sense of the Necessity of immediate Exertions—We have also passed a Law for draughting Recruits for the Army which in this City and the 3 adjoining Counties will produce 600 Men.

Farmer is busily engaged making Shirts & Overalls—& Mr. Lyttle in forwarding the Stores which are purchased for your Refreshment & Comfort. It will do great Honour to our State if we can keep our Troops uncontaminated on so trying an Occasion with the Spirit of Discontent—for which after all we must acknowledge there is too much Reason.

The Arrangement of the Officers in Consequence of Vacancy & Promotion has been laid before the Board of War & no Difficulty arises in making out the Commissions but in the 3<sup>d</sup> & 4th Regiment. It is said Mr. Marshal cannot take Capt. Ruly's Place untill the Proceedings are had to dismiss the latter agreeable to the inclosed Resolution of Congress—the other Appointments in Consequence of Mr. Marshal's Promotion will of course be postponed.—The same Difficulty in Case of Ensign Peter Smith or rather Lieutenant King. It is also queried how Mr. Onial was dismissed from the Surgeoncy of the 10th Reg<sup>t</sup>, you will please to have this explained or I fear his Appointment will also be delayed.

As to the 4th Regimt—The Rank of Messrs. Beecher & Steddiford must be settled before any Commissions can issue, and as the Gentlemen who have been Prisoners have some Reason in my Opinion to complain I flatter myself due Consideration will be had to the Justice of their Cases on the present Occasion.—We have received a Remonstrance from the other Officers but as it is a Rule with us not to interfere in these Questions we hope the matter will be settled at Camp, until which nothing can be done here.

Col. Butler is anxious for the Confirmation of some Ensigns appointed by Gen<sup>1</sup>. Sullivan but as the General had no Authority to make such an Appointment we cannot violate a Rule of Congress as well as our own Determination or the Appointment of any new Officers but in the Mode which the Resolution of Congress directs viz—special Recommendation of the Commander in Chief to which we shall pay proper Attention. You will easily see that if done in one Case every other Colonel will expect it and as the Right of Appointment is in the State we cannot waive it. I mention this because it has been observed that Colonels admit young Fellows to do Duty & then ground a Claim for a Commission on their having served some Time which makes us mere Cyphers & is a Deviation from the Letter & Spirit of the Rule of Congress. If it was known that the Council did not think themselves at all bound by this Circumstance it would save us the painful Necessity of declining to confirm their Appointments.—I am in haste dear Sir

> Your obed Hbble Serv Jos. REED.

If Gen<sup>1</sup>. St. Clare is at Camp please to communicate this Letter to him.

DEAR SIR

I shall be glad to meet the Officers of the Pennsylvania Line collectively next Monday at 12 o'clock at the City Tayern. & shall be much obliged to you to acquaint them with my Wishes.

As I do not know the Quarters of the Field Officers now in Town must also request you to convey my Compliments to them & request the Favour of their Company to dine with me on Wednesday next, 3 o'clock. I mean the Officers of the Six Regiments as I shall have Opportunities to see the other Gentlemen—but the Officers who continue will probably leave Town in a little Time. You will also oblige me with your own Company at the same Time. I am Sir

Your obed & very Hbble Serv

Jos. REED.

MARKET STREET Jan. 27, 1781.

PHILAD., July 19, 1780.

DEAR SIR

I duly received your Favour of the 12th Inst.—& of this I cannot say I am disappointed in the Result of the Board of General Officers yet I wish they had seen their Way in proceeding to a Determination, because that of Congress will be tedious & probably intermingled with political Sentiments which do not pervade the Camp.

I have shewn your Letter to one of our Delegates who seems generally to be of Sentiment with you. However I have a doubt in one Point and that is, whether the Reference does not come more properly from the General to Congress than from the State. In that Case the matter would be taken up more free from Prejudice, than I am sure it would be if urged by our Delegates-& the less the Prejudice the better Prospect of your succeeding fully & Your Proposition of putting quickly. Gen<sup>1</sup>. Hand on the general Scale, seems most likely to take if properly managed, & I am of Opinion it will end there as North Carolina has already her full Share of Brigadiers. My Advice therefore would of the Board of Officers with their Difficulties & press Congress to a Determination, least he should be embarrassed in disposing the Commands.

Mr. Searle has sailed for Europe a Week ago partly on private Business & partly to procure the necessary Supplies of Cloathing &c. which cannot be done here—if he arrives safe & succeeds in his errand I trust the Pennsylvania Line will make an Appearance not only superiour to any in America but equal to any Thing in Europe -we have carried our Orders down to a Sleeve Button with every Thing answerable both for Officers & Men.—I wrote to Gen. St. Clair a few Days ago requesting that Lieut's. Bigham & Benne might be sent down to confront a Capt. Gardener whom we have in Custody for insulting them while searching for Deserters. We are resolved to make an Example of him if the Facts appear as we presume they will from the Report made formerly by these Gentlemen.

We are sorry to find some Gentlemen express themselves so indiscreetly in Camp & write to their Friends here in the same Style with Respect to the new Recruits. We have gone on Gen. Washington's Opinion on draughting preferably to voluntary Inlistment. Draughts you know must be for short Duration & with good Management many may be entered for the War. But this is not all, we attempted voluntary Inlistment for the War last Spring without any Success-but not discouraged & willing to please all we have now began again—I advanced this Morning 10 half Johannes & I dare say many others will do the like to try what can be donesome Gentlemen took it up about 3 Weeks ago got a Subscription but went no farther. You may depend upon it there are no Men in America more anxious to fill up the Line-but Pennsylvania you must be sensible is composed of such a Mixture of People & we have so much Opposition that a Man might as reasonably expect the Fruits of our Climate to grow in another as to expect that the same Efforts could succeed in one State as another. Indeed be to get the General to state the Result | I must declare it as my Opinion that the Strength of an Army does not consist in its Numbers—Appointments comfortable Cloathing Equipments of various Kinds are as necessary as Men & a well appointed Army is equal to double its Numbers destitute of the Necessaries & Conveniencies of Military Life. And in this Respect Envy & Ill Nature must do us Justice & we depend especially on our Officers whose Comfort & Honour is deservedly dear to us to support ours agt Reproach. I am Dear Sir, with real Esteem

> Your most obed. Hbble Serv

Jos. Reed.

P. S. Gen. Armstrong came to Congress some Time ago.

WAR OFFICE, March 27, 1781.

Sir

Col. Forrest has arrived here with an account of the Ill Temper of the Artificers at Carlisle for Want of Pay & Cloathing & it seems the same Spirit persists among them as to their Discharges which took Possession of the Pennsilvania Line. Since the Precedent has taken Place with respect to Discharges we do not see that any Difference of Treatment can be held up & therefore we think those enlisted for three Years or during the War Brigadier General IRVINE must be discharged at the Expiration of the three Years. But it seems they will not take their Discharges unless they are themselves. Want of Pay than the Soldiers. It appears to us totally out of the Power of Resol tions in their own account they ought to that purpose assure him, and them, that be satisfied. If we could get Guards from the Regiment of Continental Troops to secure the Stores the Artificers might be discharged & sent about their Business. But as probably this Expedient would be creating another Evil considering these Troops are under the same Predicament we have thought it best to state the Matter to you that you might fall on some Measures for securing the Stores and having the three Years Men discharged & sent from the Post. Probably some of the citizens might be prevailed on to take the Guard of the Stores till the Men who have evidenced a Disposition to seize them should be gone. But we leave the Matter to your Discretion & if you find Difficulties too great for the Attempt you will inform us as the Matter should not be began unless there is a Certainty of its being carried thro'. If it is possible to furnish Money it shall be done so far as a Months Pay; but at present we see no Prospect of it. It is really lamentable that the Public should be in this Situation but it is not in our Power to remedy it.

We are Sir

with much Esteem Your very obed Servants RICHARD PETERS By order

IN COUNCIL, PHILADELPHIA, June 18th, 1781.

WHEREAS Brigadier General Irvine has paid & we are informed they have thrown represented to this Council, that a number out Threats to sieze the Stores and pay of spirited well affected Inhabitants of the Their Pay is certainly due Counties west of the Susquehanna, have them yet they have less Reason to com-signified their intentions of equipping plain than the Troops in the Field as they themselves to act as Light Horsemen and have been paid within six Months. What Volunteers, to be in readiness to repel any they should receive would the farther dis-Incursion of the Enemy in this State, and able the Public from paying the Troops in case of necessity to march to the relief and as these Men have all Trades it should and assistance of our neighbouring States, seem that they could better support the now invaded by the Enemy and in great

Resolved, That this Board do highly Congress to pay the Artificers at this Time approve the spirit manifested on this occa-& therefore if those entitled to them were sion, and also of General Irvines intention discharged & permitted thereby to be at to form said Volunteers, and take charge Liberty to follow their several Occupa- of them in the proposed service, and do for they shall receive all proper and necessary encouragement from this Board. Extract from the Minutes T. J. MATLACK Secy

Brigadier General IRVINE.

IN COUNCIL PHILADELPHIA July 28rd, 1781

Sir I duly received your letter of the sixteenth Instant, and have laid it before the Council. As you was in Town at the time of the Change of our system of supplies, it is hardly necessary to inform you, that M. Morris undertook to procure for this State, the articles required by Congress, which of course included the support of all Continentals in the State, this commenced on the twentieth Instant by agreement with M. Morris, who then conceived himself in a condition to assume it. M! Morris afterwards objected to the number of posts in the Country, and made it a point to confine his Contracts to certain enumerated places, which did not include Lebanon, Hanover, or Yellow Springs, the latter he has since taken up. But with respect to the others there is a real difficulty as all the moneys designed for these purposes were taken out of our hands, and transferred to M! Morris, so that we apprehend it will be necessary, if M. Morris cannot be induced to extend his contracts (which we do not expect) to move the several parties down to those places where contracts are made, viz' York and Lancaster. And as the prisoners are to be five miles from York, and the unconditional prisoners, closely confined in Lancaster, we hope this may be done, as it will be a great relief to us in the business, having no money, and little credit, and if you concur in opinion with us, we request you will give the necessary orders as General S' Clair is not here. Your observation. that recruits must have provision and quarters immediately on inlisting, is very just, but we apprehend this would be more properly done by granting assistance at two shillings per day, until they reached the rendezvous which in the case of the rifle Corps to be raised, we have fixed -- as

MIST, MAG. VOL. VIII.

The number of class sent vou inclosed. recruits got in Philadelphia by our last account was thirty three, of whom I am sorry to inform you sixteen had deserted. We had earnestly requested they might be sent off as soon as they amounted to five. or six, but some delay happened, and privateers sailing in the mean time it is probable many of them are gone. We have not had regular accounts from the Country but we fear the harvest will make the business more tedious and difficult than we could have expected. York and Cumberland, have been generally slow upon these It has been observed and I occasions. believe with justice, that those Counties who suffered least by the Enemy have been most backward in furnishing their proportions of publick duty of every kind, and your remark, that the people are as secure as if there was no War in the Country, is applicable to more parts of the State, than you have under your Eye. I send you General Waynes letter to me on the affair of the sixth Instant, which came to us at first, in very alarming colours, but rather seems to do us honour at present,tho our loss is to be regretted when we see what difficulty there is in getting Men, and training them. By our accounts from Europe the prospect of possessing all the Southern States, and reducing Maryland and Pennsylvania this Campaign, will protract, if not frustrate all negotiations this summer. General Washington is at Kingsbridge or its neighborhood, but his operations are so slow that I suspect he is waiting for something, perhaps the fleet of the Count d'Grass this would give us some spirits and afford a favourable prospect of breaking up that important Post.

I am sir with much respect Your obedient and very humble servant Jos. REED Presid' Brigadier General Invine

In Council Philadelphia August 29th, 1781 Sir

I received your favour of the ninth Instant per M' Blaine, who returned before I had time to prepare an answer. The per Copy of the recruiting Instructions movements of the British army, having relieved us from apprehensions for the prisoners we have in concert with General S' Clair, been endeavouring to arrange and equip the Troops now in the State, which we compute at five hundred. Captain Zeigler has accordingly received very sufficient supplies for that number, consisting of shirts, shoes, overalls, hats and hunting shirts; blue cloth not being procurable at any rate or price. I have also the satisfaction to inform you that Captain Mason from Amsterdam acquaints us, that M' Searle has succeeded in that part of his mission which relates to military stores, that he was shipping them early in the summer, on board a ship of most reputable force so that they may be hourly expected. Captain Mason having been taken and his papers destroyed, we have no particulars but are much flattered by the prospects he gives us. As soon as I received your letter due inquiry was made with respect to the supply of the post at York, and it appears that Colonel Blaine and his brother had taken that contract; that the Brother had expected Instructions and Money from Philad which not receiving, he came down here, but his brother and M. Morris were all at Camp. However I endeavoured to hurry him back as fast as possible and hope that by this time the matter is in a more favourable train.

You have judged very properly with respect to the nature of M' Morris's engagements on account of the State. But should any like embarrassment arise, or any deficiency of provisions be apprehended, it will undoubtedly be proper to address him, either in the first instance or thro' the medium of the Board of War.

There seems at present a prospect of a considerable part of our Army going to the Southward, General Washington has ordered all the Recruits thither; which is a pleasing circumstance as the division of the Line is very inconvenient on many accounts.

I am sir with much esteem,
Your obedient and very humble servant
Jos. REED

President

To Brigadier General Invine.

PHILADELPHIA September 21st, 1781

In the present situation of affairs I should be happy in being assisted with your good Judgment and advice, in forming such arrangements as may be most effectual, for drawing forth the strength and resources of the State in the most effectual manner, and concerting a previous general Plan for this purpose, and defending this City

I shall therefore, beg the favour of your Company in Market street at one.. oClock to meet a few other Gentlemen proper to be consulted on such an occasion.

I am Sir with much esteem
Your most obedient and very humble servant
Jos. Rand
President

To General Invine

THE WASHINGTONS OF ENGLAND.

According to Surtees' History of the County Durham, the chief ancestor of the Washington family in England resided at Washington, a ville in the Bishopric of Durham. Bolden Buke, written 1180 (27 H. II.) informs us that Willielmus de Hertburn held the Manor of Wassyngton or Wessington of the L. Bishop of Durham in capite, in exchange for the vill of Hertburn, rendering four pounds and doing service, therefore, in the great chace of the lord bishop, with two greyhounds, and also paying one mark to the palatine aid, when such tax should be raised. Towards the middle of the thirteenth century the resident family, as was customary, had assumed the name of the manor, which was situated a few miles from the mouth of the river Wear, near Hilton Castle; and we read of one William de Wessynton living in this vicinity as early as 1274 (3 Ed. I.). About the year 1328 (2 Ed. III.) Wanter de Wessyngton, on giving his daughter Isabel in marriage to Marmaduke Basset, granted unto the latter the Manor of Ossinton in Co. Durham.

Sir William de Wessyngton, Knight, was in active service during the Scotch wars of King Edward III., and took pri-singdon, living in 1409 near New Castle, soner with his own hands in battle a Mon-had free warren on the lands of the Bisl op sieur-Robert de Colvill of the Manor of of Durham. In the retinue of the Duke Oxenham. An order, issued Dec. 8, 1346 of Gloucester, at the battle of Agincourt, (20 Ed. III.) desires Wm. de Weshynton to in 1415, was John Wissington, and a bring his Scotch prisoner, Alexander de follower of Sir John West at the same Haliburton, to the Tower, and Thomas time was named John Wassyngton; while Grey received similar orders respecting the Prior of Durham, elected 5th Nov., his prisoners David Graham and John de 1416, was another John de Wessyngton, a ... Haliburton. The Scotch hostages being person of much learning, who, dying in released by an order of Aug. 16, 1357, 1446, was buried in the Cathedral.

Monsieur de Wessyngton appears at the In Bishop Langley's time, 1406-37, the time to have been the custodian of Patrick, son and heir of Lord David of Graham. An inquisition post-mortem, held in the twenty-second year of the pontificate of gent, two bars gules, and in chief three cocks Bishop Hatfield, informs us that the good of the second." Yet we elsewhere learn Knight, Sir William Wessington, died in that before 1400 the direct male line expired the year 1366, leaving a widow Katherine in a Sir Willfam de Washington, Knt., of and an heir bearing his own name, and Washington, whose only daughter Dionisia that at his death he held the manor and (or Eleanor) married Sir Wm Tempest. ville of Wessington by the same service Knt., of Studley-Royal, E. R. of York, who as has been above mentioned.

Cotemporary with Sir William was Thomas de Wessyngton, who married Isabella, youngest daughter of Jacobus de Useworth. Isabella's brother Richard died sine prole in 1362, and her sister Dionisia, wife of Cuthbert de Kendale, died soon after, whereupon she and her sister Alice, the eldest male line, younger branches of as coheiresses, came into possession of the the Washingtons are supposed to have manor of Little Usworth. Thomas de been still in existence, and from an early 37, being seized of a fourth part of the We have already seen one of the name vill of Great Usworth, parish of Wash-located in the north of Westmoreland ington. Co. Durham, and a moiety of the towards the close of the fourteenth century, manor of Little Usworth; his daughter but some of the family were resident in Christina married William de Chestre, the southern part of this country almost who at his death was found to be seized of one hundred and fifty years previous, one-half the last named manor de jure being thus cotemporary with the earliest uxoris. Usworth was in the immediate of the Durham stock. James Lawrence vicinity of the manor of Wassyngton.

Washington Estate had passed to the Blaykestons, of Blakiston, Coxhowe, etc.,—an old Durham family whose arms were "arwas M. P. for that county in 1401 (2 H. IV.). The Lady Tempest died Jan. 2, 1451, and her granddaughter, Dionisia Temple, married Sir Wm. Mallory, of Mobberley, Co. Chester, from which family the Washington estate passed to the Aislabies.

But notwithstanding the extinction of Wessyngton died in 1378 (1 R. II.) aged period the family were much scattered. (son of Sir Robert Lawrence, of Trafford, Edmundus de Wassyngton, with others Co. Lanc.) living 1252 (37 H. III.), married of the comitia of John, Duke of Lancaster Matilda the sole daughter and heiress of and King of Castile, received royal letters John Washington, and by his marriage of protection from Richard II., dated acquired the Manors of Washington and March 4, 1378, which were to remain in Sedgwick (or Seggeswick). His son and force till the next feast of St. Michael successor John Lawrence levied a fine of (Sept. 29). By inquis p. m. John de Washington and Sedgwick in 1283, and Washington held Milborn manor, in county was father of a second John, who pre-Westmoreland on the borders of Cumber-sented to the church of Washington in land, in 1397 (21 R. II.), Walter de Wis-1326, and died about 1360, leaving as Seggeswick, on the river Can, in Co. with the rectory of Sharpe and lands Westmoreland, was about six or seven called Threplondes in Co. Westmoreland. miles north of Warton, Lancashire, which while his son James, who died in 1580, in turn was situated near the influx of the aged 44, held in addition the Manor of Decker into the Kent Sands. At Warton, Adwickle-street, Co. York. A pedigree during the latter half of the fifteenth of this family, from the Heraldic Visitacentury, was living Robert Washington, tion of 1666, exists among the Harl. MSS. Gent (the son of John W.), and the of the British Museum, and it has been family arms, "argent, two bars gules and still further extended since that period; in chief three mullets of the second-"|from Richard Washington and his wife are to be found on the north side of the Jane Lunde* was descended, in the eighth door of the parish church. Robert Washington had children by each of his three caster, coroner of the W. R. of Yorkshire, marriages; his first wife being a Westfield; the second a daughter of Miles Whitting-bable the latter gentleman was a cousin, in ton, of Barwick (or Borwick juxta Warton the third or fourth degree, of Baron James manor), Co. Lanc., and the third Agnes, Washington who in 1844, at the age of 66, daughter of — Bateman of Hersham was the Royal Chamberlain of Bayaria. (or Heversham), near Cartonel-Fells, Co. The arms of this family are given the same Westmoreland. From this family, as is as those of the Lancashire stock, with a the last of the name remaining in the bend three swans," coloring not defined. original locality was the Rev. Thomas Besides the place called Washington, or of time, we find Richard de Washington Alfreton in Derbyshire, called on Camappointed March 2, 1273, to the Chantry den's maps of 1610 "Wessinton;" and or Chapel in the parish of Watton-at-lastly in Co. Sussex the parish of Wash-Stone, Co. Herts, where he died about ington. The latter place was known in 1322. In the same county, George Wash-the tenth century as Wasingatune, and ington, cap., was appointed Rector of herein, in 963, King Edgar granted certain Stapleford, May 4, 1504, and resigned in lands to the chief Athelwold; under the 1506; Thomas Washington, Clk., was appointed Oct. 24, 1556, as Rector of Widial, de Braose, and subsequently passed into and died in 1559; while Adam Wash-the possession of the Dukes of Norfolk. ington, E.q., a barrister of Lincoln's Inn, and of Beaches (parish of Brent-Pelham), on the borders of Essex, married Elizabeth Fiver in 1639, and bore the same arms as the Washingtons of Lancashire, as before given.

Robert de Washington, living 1349 (23 Ed. III.), married Margaret, daughter and heiress of Andrew Hawkyn, who owned lands at Preston, in Holderness, E. R. of York. This Robert may have been an ancestor of Richard Washington, who und r the reign of Edward VI. held the Ma: or of Armethorpe and lands at Hampall ington.

bis son and heir Sir Robert Lawrence. | (both near Dancaster), Co. York, together generation, Godfrey Washington of Donwho died in 1770 aged 60, and it is proalleged, was descended George Washing-crescent for difference, though it is said ton, President of the United States, while they earlier bore arms "billetée, on a

Besides the place called Washington, or Washington, Vicar of Warton, who died Wassinton, in Co. Durham, we have Wesabout the year 1823.

Washington, Co. Northamb., north-east of Again running backward in the course Heddon-on-the-Wall; Washington west of LJ.G.

THE COUNT REVILLA-GIGÉDO, VICE-ROY OF MEXICO.

FROM the time that Mexico, under the name of New Spain, became subject to Spanish rule, until the period of her Independence, in the year 1821, the Province which the gradual advancement of the was governed by a series of officials with population might require. But the admithe title of Vicerov. exceptions, these rulers were men remarkable principally for their indolence, inefficiency, and rapacity. We do not propose and fostered the Academy of Fine Arts to linger upon those who, with a little founded by his predecessor. Some of the brief power in their hands, turned it only to selfish purposes, leaving the people they professed to protect in a degraded and day were placed there in his time. miserable condition; but to point for a sentence of suppression was removed from moment to some of those whose glory, like the Gaceta, and it reappeared; the nationthe glory of the stars, will never wane, al Bank of San Carlos was established, a because they identified themselves and bubble which subsequently burst and their efforts with the great cause of huma-involved many in ruin. nity and human elevation.

* Lunde Washington was at one time manager of Mt. Vernon estate for his kinsman Gen. Geo. Wash-

racter, genius, and peculiar difficulties may in the year 1784. be better comprehended, and his labors better appreciated, a glance at his immelson of Don Matias, was one of the most diate predecessors, and the state of the distinguished Governors of the colony. country he governed, will be necessary.

fewer than five Viceroys had received the Marquis of Sonora, he was elevated to the staff of office. Galvez, was a brother of the celebrated father. minister and visitador, Don José de Gal-popular, he undertook various works of vez, but he was destitute of the ambition, public utility. He made or laid out several brilliant endowments, and capacities which causeways from the city of Mexico, paved marked the career of his distinguished many streets, began the system of streetrelative. General of Guatemala, through the influ-capital, embellished the vice-regal residence ence of Don José, he was promoted to the and commenced the towers of the cathe-Viceroyship of New Spain in the year dral. 1788, towards the close of the reign of labored earnestly to acquit himself well in Chapultepec and the construction of a occupied.

of almost sluggish tranquillity. Little an act of royal elemency which he had seemed to be required, and correspond-the presumption to perform, in pardoning ingly little was accomplished. The author-some criminals whom he had designedly ity of the Viceroys was established and met on their way to the scaffold, attracted respected, the period of turbulence among the attention of the suspicious court. Howthe royal officials had passed, the spirit of ever this may be, without any known cause, independence which was wont to animate this young man, gay, vigorous, and full the Aztec bosom slumbered, and the Vice of flattering expectations, yielded to the

With some noble nistration of Don Matías was not entirely without historic results; he began the work of paving the streets of the capital, best models in marble which adorn the collection of San Fernando at the present

The administration of Don Matías conti-As a luminary of the first magnitude nued but little more than a year; overstands the name of Don Juan Vicente powered with infirmities, he resigned his Guemes Pacheco Horcasitas y Aguayo, authority into the hands of the Royal Conde de Revilla-Gigédo. That his cha- Council, and died on the 3d of November

His successor Don Bernardo de Galvez, From the Captain-Generalship of Havana, Between the years 1783 and 1789 no through the influence of his uncle, the The first, Don Matías de office made vacant by the death of his Young, zealous, ambitious, and From the office of Captain-lighting, and, with a view to beautify his

But the most conspicuous measure of Carlos III., and though old and infirm, he his rule was the rebuilding of the palace of whatever pertained to the exalted post he fortress within it. The popularity of this cupied.

The colony at this period was in a state the young Viceroy lived, combined with roys had only to project improvements undermining power of a hidden malady,

. and descended swiftly to the grave, after having held his authority one year and five months. His exequies were solemnly performed in the Cathedral, and in the darkness of the night, amidst the lamentations of the people, military display and funeral music, giving to the pageant an augustness almost royal, his remains were deposited in the church of San Fernando.

The powers of government fell, as usual on the decease of the Viceroy, into the hands of the Real Audiencia. Shortly, however, news came that His Majesty of Spain had named Archbishop de Haro for the vacancy. He was a man of great learning and benevolence; his short government, however, was unmarked by any notable historic event. In a few months he resigned his authority to Señor Don Manuel Antonio Flores, Lieutenant-General of the Royal Armada, and Viceroy of Santa Fé de Bogotá. Old, in enfeebled health, and with few endowments for command, almost nothing can be said of his administration further than that he organized three military battalions, commenced the Botanical Garden, and paid some attention to the mining interests of the country. death of Carlo III., and his celebrated minister, Don José de Galvez, occurred during his government. Unfitted for the exalted position he had attained, both by his tastes and qualifications, in a little more than a year Flores sent his resignation to his royal master, and the thanks he gave the king for his acceptance of the resignation demonstrated that he sincerely renounced the office, and earnestly desired to retire to the more quiet enjoyments of domestic life. In October, 1789, a ship arrived at Vera Cruz, bringing his successor, the second Count Revilla-Gigédo. At Guadalupe, Flores, according to the royal order, delivered to him the staff of office, and soon set sail for Spain in the same vessel that had brought the new Viceroy.

With the departure of Señor Flores for his native land, all obstacles are removed to the introduction of the main subject of our sketch—Don Juan Vicente Güemes Pacheco Horcasitas y Aguayo, Conde de his vigilance and integrity was the consign-

This remarkable man came from an illustrious ancestry. His father was Viceroy of Mexico as early as 1749. In his childhood, his parents designated him for the quiet and comparative obscurity of cloistral life: but the activity and enthusiasm of his inclinations defeated this intention, and he embraced the more congenial profession of arms. He held a command at the siege which the Spaniards so obstinately maintained at Gibraltar in 1782, and acquitted himself with distinction in that desperate conflict. At the decease of his father he inherited his title, and was deservedly honored by his royal master with many dignities in Spain, and on the resignation of Flores, as we have seen, he was appointed Viceroy of Mexico.

His predecessors had made no considerable improvements in the general administration of the colony, as has been intimated, until a certain temporary vigor was infused into affairs by the arrival of the royal Commissioner (Visitador), Don José de Galvez, who came clothed with authority to adjust whatever might require adjustment. Active, ambitious, inventive, and restless, he directed his efforts to a class of creations, excisions, and reforms which should tend to exalt his own efficiency in the eyes of the Crown, and prove the incapacity and uselessness of the Viceroys. Don Manuel Flores had not the executive qualities necessary to sustain and perfect the improvements initiated by Don José. He might be a man of judgment, but he was not informed upon the affairs of the colony, was slow to comprehend the import of his office, and averse to burden himself with the thousand details with which it was necessary to have minute acquaintance. But whatever Don José might have done for the colony, it is certain that Revilla-Gigédo encountered defects, abuses, and disorders almost without number, which the broad comprehensiveness of his understanding seized, and the energy of his character corrected.

He assumed the government in October, 1789, and the first event which displayed Revilla Gigédo, 52d Viceroy of New Spain. ing to summary justice the perpetrators of certain notorious assassinations, which by nades, except the single one planted by their atrocity had thrown the kingdom the Viceroy Bucareli. The fountains were into consternation. A short experience large basins of mason-work, foul with seconvinced the new Viceroy that labor, in diment, the dust of the street, the contact every sense, could alone give order and form to the mass of disorder which had been mis-called government. A glance at the situation of the Province in 1789 will convey the best idea of the merit of this celebrated magistrate, whom neither limited time, social considerations, nor the constant and daring struggle with antiquated and deep-rooted prejudices, deterred from his career of progress.

The streets of the capital were without drains, sidewalks, or pavements. were the depositories, moreover, of all the tempting vessels gathered half naked impurities from the houses; and, in process of time, these filthy accumulations exhaled vapors extremely deleterious to the health of the population. The market stood opposite the palace, and was constructed with an open space in the centre. surrounded by wooden sheds in which provisions were exposed for sale, and the refuse thrown on one side, awaiting the good offices of swine, which fed at large in the city. The sheds afforded asylum at night for a promiscuous company of men and women, vagrants and drunkards. The correction? baths were open to all who paid the required fee; and no reference was had to the proprieties arising from the distinctions of sex. After nine o'clock it was dangerous to go out, since the streets were lighted only by an occasional lamp, hung by the owners at the doors of shops and houses, in obedience to a municipal regulation. This requisition even was either neglected altogether, cr lower classes went almost naked, their only clothing consisting of a sheet-like garment (which also performed the office of counterpane), and a palm hat. It was as customary to sell the clothing of the dead in public shops as it was to bury them in the which afforded guarantees to litigants or churches of small towns. These practices, superadded to the foul condition of the Revilla-Gigedo himself stood aghast before streets, produced many epidemics.

In the erection of edifices no regard with the hands of water-carriers; nor was the addition uncommon of that with which both hands and feet had been laved.

Another fertile source of public disorder and demoralization existed in the abundance of drinking establishments called pulquerias, where was sold the intoxicating beverage pulque, made from the juice of a species of aloes. Nearly all the squares contained a pulquería—an enormous hut or wigwam—and in the centre stood huge They jars of the fermented liquid. Around these leperos, beggars, prostitutes, and all the worst elements of the population; and here, amidst gambling, licentiousness, and drunken merriment, germinated plots for thefts, assassinations, and their attendant depravities.

> In fine, the condition of affairs, moral and physical, was quite bad enough to chill the courage of the most undaunted. Who but a man of unconquerable energy would have had the heroism to attack such a mass of disorder with any hope of its Great as were these evils, still greater existed in the judicial organization of the kingdom. There were tribunals and systems without end, nominally for the administration of justice, but they were really only so many systems of oppression. The Acordata alone exercised its tyrannical jurisdiction by means of twenty-five hundred subordinates, and imposed, without the light withdrawn at an early hour. The appeal, restraint, or molestation, the most opprobrious punishments—even death itself.

Neither was this multitude of judicial branches regulated by codes of laws or any other fixed rules; each had its peculiar formularies, and no organization existed determined the attributes of the Judges. systems so monstrous and so complicated.

The provision for education, also, was to was observed to harmony or regularity, the last degree worthless. No school for The city was destitute of public prome-primary gratuitous instruction had been established in the capital or any part of the ridiculous and inefficient discipline.

The roads of the kingdom were in such condition that the only available method of travel and transportation was on mule-The corporations of towns wasted their funds in sky-rockets, festivities, and regulations respecting the streets; to meaall sorts of useless expenditures. Officers and office-holders were in unison with all should be induced to clothe themselves; to this disorder. There were neither data the establishment of ordinances concerning nor ideas how to form statistics; books, entries, and judicial writings conformed tribunal of accounts, a place of pride and highly aristocratic, having its three ministers in large wigs and its army of accountants, was the most delinquent and worthless of any. It assumed great superiority, and the idlers at its head sometimes believed themselves above even the Vicerov him-remedy for these complicated evils would nor revolution has destroyed. require years of study or perplexed experi-Count de Revilla-Gigédo soon unmasked devised expedients to remove abuses in the origin of the difficulties, namely: the the moral administration, and cure some of indolence and avarice of most of the gov-its palpable evils,—though many of those ernors, whose only aim seemed to be the expedients, of the highest importance, were accumulation of a fortune to carry back to so hampered, benumbed, and opposed in Spain when the period of their control the Court of Spain that they were not expired.

The military organization was equally useless and incomplete. In the city and provincial militia, there was neither instruchad availed themselves.

With a firm and confident hand the Before the expulsion of the Count applied methods of reform to the Jesuits, in 1767, the care of the youth had shapeless mass, and truly entitled himself devolved upon them. Subsequently, the to a higher tribute of gratitude than the few schools that remained fell into the nation for which he labored has awarded hands of ignorant and cruel teachers, who him. Declining all the festivities usually nourished the hearts of the children with proffered to a Viceroy, he directed his absurd fictions, and brutalized them by attention to the condition of the fortresses and other provisions for defence; to the purification of the palace; to the removal of those unsightly old sheds that had served for markets, and the construction of others more decent and commodious; to sanitary sures by which the half-naked laboring class the public baths; the erection of edifices with some view to order; the paving and only to the caprices of the chiefs. The lighting of streets; provision for a nightwatch and police system; the extinguishment of fires; the suppression of the disorders of the pulquerias; the constructions of aqueducts and fountains, by which the health of the population was materially promoted. He further provided for the same object, by prohibiting the sale of the clothing of the dead, and stopping burials in churches. The cemeteries of Vera Cruz and Puebla resulted from this prohibition. He repaired public highways tion nor discipline. The coasts and frontiers and causeways, and established a Botanical were without custody; and the few small Garden at Chapultepec, which had been veteran bodies that existed were unworthy projected by one of his predecessors. He of confidence, since military rank was con-caused primary schools to be opened in most sidered salable and transferable—a kind of of the important towns; furnished the speculation of which several of the Viceroys Academy with professors in Architecture, Sculpture, Painting, &c.; wrought a general This is but an outline of the state of reform in the ordinances by which crafts things in New Spain when Revilla-Gigédo and trades were regulated; and, as by a entered upon his duties as chief officer of species of magic, gave life and animation the Province. To ordinary minds, the to useful establishments, which neither time

> Neither did the Viceroy restrict his The acute comprehension of the reforms to things merely material; he carried into effect. For all in which he did succeed, he had to struggle with the almost petrified with astonishment. Revillasluggishness of magistrates, inveterate pre- Gigédo then took his hat, and, with a sarjudices, and all the train of obstacles they donic smile, said to them: - "Gentlemen, bring, and to plunge, sword in hand, upon from eight to eleven I shall come to regulate the hoary vices he would extirpate; but this archive; meanwhile, there is no neceshis projects were so evidently good, and sity that you should fatigue yourselves. conformable to justice, that the Court could not withhold its sanction.

Mining, agriculture, and manufactures also received special attention from Revilla-Gigédo, and strong impulses were imparted to them through his wisdom and energy. With respect also to whatever facilitated communication, the purposes of the Viceroy were magnificent; but limited power, limited time, and limited means, together with fer of jewels which were her dowry. the obstructions interposed by paltry private These jewels she had intrusted to a geninterests or favoritism, defeated many of tleman, without exacting any receipt or his grandest schemes.

space of five years, the reforms we have fatigable industry was necessary. Revilla-Gigédo only allotted to himself three or which the municipal laws were heeded.

He was neat and elegant in his person, and a strict observer of etiquette. He ate only twice in the day; and, while he supported all the proprieties of a state table, never tasted anything from his own table, but received his food prepared and seasoned from the convent of the Capucins. It was box. "Take what your Excellency pleases." sent to him in a small trunk, locked, which had two keys—one kept by himself, the patch some important business, the Viceother by the Abbess.

this remarkable man. One or two may serve to illustrate more fully the striking features of his character.

had an aversion by reason of the pride and was then called from her place of concealindolence of its chiefs. It was ten o'clock, ment, and asked if that was the box she and not a soul was present. The Viceroy demanded. undertook to arrange a packet of papers, "It is the same, Senor," she answered, which were in the greatest confusion. "which I intrusted on deposit to this gen-When the employes entered, they were tleman." HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

You can sleep and breakfast, confident that the service of the king suffers no loss."

The following is related by Don Carlos Bustamente in his "Continuacion" of

Padre Cavo:

A certain widow stated to the Viceroy that her husband on his death-bed had been arrested for debt, and that she had taken care to place in safety a small cofequivalent. Urged by the necessities of In order to accomplish, in the short her widowhood, she had petitioned for her treasures, and he had not only denied that mentioned, and many others to which time he had received them, but had treated her does not allow us to refer, the most inde-as if she were mad. The fertile mind of the Viceroy soon suggested a method of redress. The following night he concealed four hours for sleep, retiring regularly at her in a place from which she was to sally nine in the evening and rising at one, to at a preconcerted signal. The recipient of pursue his labors, or to sally out that he the jewels was summoned, and in a friendly might personally observe the manner in manner was solicited to return them; but, as before, he denied all knowledge of the matter. The demand was politely renewed, with promises that his honor should be protected; still he persisted in the denial. In the course of conversation, the Viceroy inquired if he took snuff.

"Yes, Señor," he replied, offering his Affecting distraction and urgency to disroy left him, and calling a confidential Many curious anecdotes are related of assistant, sent him with the snuff-box to the wife of the depositorio, with directions to ask for the coffer of jewels which had certain marks such as had been described by On a certain occasion he went to the the lady. In a short time the messenger Tribunal of Accounts, an office for which he returned with the little trunk. The widow

The Viceroy gave him a glance of indignation.

"How have you dared to deceive me, a gentleman and a Viceroy, when I removed all difficulties out of the way in order to Five years later, May 2d, 1799, he died at cover your honor, and to satisfy this unfor- Madrid, universally lamented, as he was in tunate woman? understand I am not to be trifled with. have ordered a coach to convey you to the Castle."

In May, 1794, Revilla-Gigédo resigned his office* into the hands of Branciforte.

* One of the remarkable events which occurred during the government of Revilla-Gigédo, was the appearance of an Aurora Borealis of unusual splendor in the year 1789. A manuscript letter, written by his Secretary and signed by the Viceroy, giving an account of this phenomenon and the consternation it produced, has been preserved. We subjoin a translation from the original document :-

MOST EXCELLENT SENOR:

At 8 o'clock on the night of the 14th of November, an Aurora Borealis appeared in this city. The Indians of the country, who are greatly without instruction and are very faint-hearted, began to be terrified and to make such a tumult that the streets became thronged with people, who shricked and wailed, believing that fire was about to fall from heaventhat the city was about to be overwhelmed-or other similar absurdity which this or that fanatic invented and propagated, the excited people immediately believing it. The Ecclesiastics, who ought to have tranquillized the ignorant, undeceived them and drawn them away from their error, assisted in confirming them in it. They began to ring bells for the Supplicatory; they opened the churches, and even the Brotherhood of St. Augustin came forth carrying in procession St. Nicholas. Other priests began to preach, and all the town wandered about crazy, shricking, praying, and performing acts of contrition in the streets. The number of persons who went out to Guadalupe to commend themselves to the Virgin was very considerable; and though the phenomenon disappeared before ten o'clock, even as late as two in the morning many people were still roaming about with burning brands, and praying in the public ways.

Seeing that the inhabitants left their houses improtected, I determined that patrols should go the rounds to guard the property fear had caused the owners to forsake. I likewise sent a request to the Archbishop, that he would command the calling Supplications to cease, that the churches might be close d; on his own part taking the necessary steps to quiet the tumult and disorder, since, as it could at once be perceived, the cause deserved not the least dread or solicitude. I caused, moreover, that several officers should go through the streets in a manner the most fav orable to undeceive the people of their error and induce them to return to their houses.

who had been appointed his successor, and soon after embarked for Spain, where he became director of artillery, a military position of importance and responsibility. Henceforth you shall Mexico also, where the memory of his good deeds is never to be obliterated.

The celebrated "Instruccion," which he wrote for the benefit of Branciforte, is a memorial of the most important events that happened during his government. It is a national treasure which has been most jealously cared for, and remained unpublished until 1831. The attentive reader can glean from it the principles which guided the policy of the Cabinet at Madrid, in order to maintain the strong hand Spain had extended over Mexico; the source, amount, investment, etc., of the large sums with which this Province had enriched the Royal Treasury; it brings into near inspection the judicial system; acquaints us with the character of the population, the military organization, the condition of agriculture and the mining interests, home and foreign commerce, the state of arts and industry, and the policy of the Viceroyship, both general as regards the colony at large, and particular as regards the capital. It also records curious and acute observations, indicates reforms and projects, and embodies reflections which disclose the upright and magnanimous principles of the writer his deep desire for the prosperity of the nation he ruled, and furnishes to legislators suggestions well worthy their consideration.

It is to be regretted that so far as Branciforte is concerned, it was practically an effort expended in vain. He neither thought nor worked like his illustrious predecessor, though he contributed to give the last touch to the reputation of Revilla-Gigédo, by influencing the Council to accuse him. Envy seems to be indispensable in order to lift the splendor of great men, as the clouds of heaven are necessary, which, dispersed, cause the sun to shine with more clearness and brilliancy.

I give Your Excellency this account lest, perhaps, notice through another source might arrive, of such character as to cause anxiety.

Exmo. Señor, EL CONDE DE REVILLA-GIGÉDO. MEXICO, 80th Nov., 1789. EXMO. SEROR DON ANTONIO PORLIER.

Motes and Queries.

NOTES.

OLD PORTRAIT OF FRANKLIN.—Dr. Edward Vanderpool, 206 Fourth street, in this city, has in his possession a portrait of Dr. Franklin, painted at Tren-ing Post, May 12th, 1812. ton, N.J., a year or two before his death, by an English artist named Stibbs, which, heads" is used, with its present political with a very close likeness both in face meaning, by the journal quoted above or and attitude to the well known Cochin some of its contemporaries. But, whether Portrait, represents him with the marks this is so or not, it is quite evident from of much more advanced age than any the above extract that if the word did of the engraved likenesses. It is in oil not exist at that time, it was, at least, on canvas, stretched on board 5½ by 4½ sadly needed. inches in size, with powdered wig and a red coat, one hand over the other resting on a cane. The expression is smiling, but evidently senile. interesting relic, and its authenticity undoubted, the picture having been given by the artist's daughter to Dr. Vanderpool.

INTELLECTUAL CAPACITY OF NEGROES IN Boston.—Phillis Wheatley's was not the only instance in Boston, of the negro's capacity for intellectual improvement. A worthy Englishman, Richard Dalton, Esq., a great admirer of the Greek classics, because of the tenderness of his eyes, taught his negro boy, Cæsar, to read to him distinctly any Greek writer, without understanding the meaning or interpretation.—Douglass, ii. 345.

In the Boston Chronicle for September 21, 1769, is advertised:—"To be sold, a Likely Little negroe boy, who can speak the French language, and very fit for a Valet."

one of our current witticisms is not as new as may be generally supposed.

"Instead of that alacrity with which every man in the United States was to turn out, as a volunteer, to fight Great Britain, as triumphantly foretold by the administration prints, we hear of nothing but lamentations and dissatisfaction from every militia man who has been so fortunate as to draw a prize, as it is called, by which he becomes liable to be called on any moment to join the detachment of thirteen thousand men that make up the quota of this State."—New York Even-

I have a strong impression that "copper-

PHILLIPS AND DAVIS-A COINCIDENCE. -On the 8th of December, 1837, Wendell It is, however, a most Phillips, speaking in Faneuil Hall, Boston, in reply to one who vindicated the mob that murdered Elijah P. Lovejov, at Alton, the previous month, used the following language:-

"Sir, when I heard the gentleman lay down principles which place the murderers of Alton side by side with Otis, and Hancock, and Quincy, and Adams, I thought those pictured lips [pointing to the portraits in the hall would have broken into voice to rebuke the recreant American the slanderer of the dead."

Twenty years later, October 11th, 1858, Jefferson Davis spoke in Faneuil Hall, and used similar imagery. He said:

"If those voices, which breathed the first instincts into the Colony of Massachusetts, and into those colonies which formed the United States, to proclaim community, independence, and assert it against the powerful mother country; if those voices live here still, how must they feel who DRAW A PRIZE.—The following extract come here to preach treason to the constifrom an old newspaper may interest some tution, and assail the Union it ordained of your readers, as serving to show that and established? It would seem that their criminal hearts would fear that those voices, so long slumbering, would break their silence, that those forms which look down from these walls behind and around, would come forth, and that their sabres would once more be drawn from their scabbards, to drive from this sacred temple these fanatical men, who deserve it more than did the changers of money and those who sold $96. doves in the temple of the living God."

It is hardly credible that at the very time that Davis uttered these scorching words against those who lift up their hands against the Union and the Constitution, his "criminal heart" was meditating the treason that it has since perpetrated; but we have evidence that compels us to believe such to have been the case.

X. Y. Z.

REVOLUTIONARY PENSIONERS.—We have noticed with pleasure the unanimous passage in the House of Representatives, at roll of Massachusetts receiving pensions Washington, of a bill adding one hundred dollars per annum to the pensions of the little band of Revolutionary veterans who still survive, and whose lives, it is to be hoped, may be prolonged to witness the full triumph of those liberties which their valor helped to establish. It appears, by an official return, that the number now living received their pensions in respect of Revoof the heroes whose efforts in behalf of lutionary services. their country are still gratefully remembered, is but twelve. Of these the oldest has attained the age of 105 years, and the James Pomeroy, John T. Stone, James youngest is 94. The names and ages, with Daniels. If authorized by a vote of the amount of pension allowed under existing laws, are stated in a communication from the Pension Bureau, as follows :-

Amaziah Goodwin, born in Somersworth, N. H., Feb. 16, 1759; pension $38 33.

John Goodnow; born in Sudbury, Mass., Jan. 30, 1762; pension $36 67.

Adam Link, born in Washington Co., Pa.,—1762; pension -

Daniel Waldo, born in Windham, Conn., Sept. 10, 1762; pension $96.

Jonas Gates, born in Barre, Mass., --, 1763; pension $96.

Benjamin Miller, born in Springfield, (Died Sept. 1863.—ED. H. M.)

James Barham, born in Southampton Co., Va., May 18, 1764; pension $32 33.

William Hutchings, born in York, Me.,

, 1764; pension $21 66. John Pettingill, born in Windham, Conn., Nov. 30, 1766; pension $50.

Alexander Maroney, enlisted at Lake George, N. Y., born —, 1770; pension

Samuel Downing, served in the 2d N.H. regiment; pension $80.

Lemuel Cook, on the roll at Albany,

N. Y.; pension $100. With regard to the last three, it will be observed that full particulars are wanting. In the case of Maroney, the files state that he was "enlisted" by his father, being a minor. To all of the pensions here stated, it is now proposed to add $100 per annum.

There were at the date of the latest report in print seven pensioners on the State from the treasury of this Commonwealth, under resolves of the Legislature independently of the action of Congress. Of these Benjamin Smith, of Grafton, who receives the largest sum, viz. $150 per annum, is described as "a soldier of the Revolution," and we believe that some of the others

The names of the others are Martin Wheelock, Lyman Webster, Peter Jowder, Legislature similar to the movement in Congress which called forth the interesting facts above noted, respecting the United States pensioners, the Secretary of the Commonwealth would, perhaps, be able, by a search of the files, to furnish complete information on the subject.—Boston Advertiser.

DANIEL TAYLOR, THE SPY.—The physician who administered to Daniel Taylor (the British spy) the emetic on October 9, 1777, which brought up the silver ball in which was inclosed the short letter from Sir Mass., April 4, 1764; pension $24 54. Henry Clinton to Burgoyne, was Dr. Moses Higby, afterwards of Newburgh, in this State. He resided at the time near the old suggestion of Maj. Gen. Heath. Fall's house, at the Square in the town of £50,000, and weighed 170 tons. New Windsor, where General (afterwards it broke, Congress refused to pay the bill Governor) George Clinton had his head-for the iron-work upon it, until the quality quarters temporarily in the fall of 1777, of the iron was investigated. The investisubsequently to the defeat at Fort Mont-gation proved satisfactory). gomery. He died in Newburgh May 3, 1823, at the age of eighty, and had prac- when he reached Kingston (by way of the tised there and in New Windsor for nearly valley of the Wallkill, he discovered that sixty years. The letter inclosed in the the English vessels had ascended the river, ball was written on the previous day at landed troops, set fire to the village, and Fort Montgomery, and was intended to had just retired, leaving it still in flames. inform Burgoyne (then encamped near The spy was captured before Clinton start-Saratoga) that no colonial troops inter- ed from the Square. It is not known by vened their respective forces (which they what route the spy came from Fort Montgointended, if possible, to unite) except the mery on his intercepted way to Burgoyne, that the recent English success at the Fort searched and the ball was accidentally found would facilitate his contemplated operations in his hair, where it had been ingeniously both above and below Albany. Immediately after the storming of the Fort, Gen. had become scattered on the night of the them, together with such new recruits as he might obtain, to Esopus (now Kingston) to prevent the English from landing from their vessels at that place, which he had been advised by his brother Col. James Clinton (serving under him), they would do if the vessels could break the chain which was across the river near the Fort (this obstruction across the river from near St. Anthony's Nose to Fort Montgomery was, in fact, a chevaux de frize, and was arranged by Capt. Machen,* the Engineer of Fort Montgomery, with the assistance of Capt. Hazelwood, whose similar work across the Delaware River had been so effectual previously; it was 1860 feet long, and separated in a few hours, by reason of the tide, after its completion, but was soon after relaid in another position under the

He did not rally his men in time, but command of Gates, and expressed the hope and he refused to state it. His person was fastened, and probably before he started. Its form was oval, about the size of a bullet, George Clinton made his head-quarters at and consisted of two sections which were Mrs. Fall's house to collect his men, who firmly united by a screw in the centre. It was pure silver, for the probable reason that storming, in order that he might march if the bearer should be compelled, by any exigency, to swallow it for its and his safety, the metal might not affect him as lead, brass, or copper would. The shell of it was about the thickness of a common wafer; and compactly folded in it was the short letter to Burgoyne, written on thin silk paper. The letter contained but three sentences, and was forwarded by Gen. Clinton to the "Council of Safety," after the courtmartial of Taylor. When the ball was discovered, Taylor snatched it from the searching officer, and under pretence of throwing it away, swallowed it. This, however, was noticed. Clinton immediately sent for Dr. Higby, who, instantly upon his arrival, administered with much difficulty a powerful emetic. The ball was thrown up almost immediately; and Taylor picking it up, ran a short distance, was overtaken, and, upon being brought back, the ball could not be found, and he refused to state what he had done with it. Clinton promptly informed him that he believed he had again swallowed it, and that if it was not produced at once, he should instantly order him to be hung, and that he should be cut open to obtain it. He then produced it. Taylor was a major in the English service. lage, and buried under it. vileged by Clinton to write several letters macs in Nova Scotia. to relatives in England, which, after being read and found not to communicate any military information, were sent to Sir ticooks, though it appears that it was origi-Henry Clinton for further disposition.

* Capt. Machen came to America about 1766 as an officer in the English service, but soon resigned. He then opened the outlet to "Machen's Pond," now called Orange Lake, four miles west of Newburgh, and erected a small building in which he made copper coin for change, and, though it was illegal, yet he was not interfered with. The public regarded the coinage as a convenience which was not at that early day sufficiently supplied by the government.

His remains were never removed. He was an officer of equal rank with Andrè (each being a major), and both were selected as spies, and executed as such; and both intrusted with important duties, and sagunticook, Amoscoggin, and Amasaconte, for the same government, and by the same are all derived from the same roots, and officer (Sir Henry Clinton), yet Andre have essentially the same meaning. Amasawas exhumed by order of the British Go-conte was the name of the tribe at Farvernment, and his remains deposited with mington, and as the carrying place, by military honors in Westminster Abbey, means of numerous ponds, was very easy, while those of Taylor have been neglected it is probable that the intercourse between by his country to the present time. The the Indians on the Androscoggin and Sandy probable impossibility of identifying the Rivers was very intimate, and may thus particular spot of his burial may constitute have rendered them, in a certain sense, the reason why his bones were not removed nearly identical. at the time when Andrè's were. The grave of the latter was marked by a stone imme-between Lewiston Falls and the Kennebec diately after his execution, and a willow River. Their headquarters were at Brunsplanted by it, both of which remained wick, where they had a fort near the falls. there at the time of the removal to Eng-They also had a location at Little River grave, and the old apple-tree, no doubt, one. It was at the great carrying place had long since gone, and probably no one between the Eastern and Western tribes. then living or accessible could identify It was also the turning off place of the Inthe spot.

JOHN M. EAGER, New York.

Androscoggin, by N.T. True.—The tribes early as 1624-5, and another at the Little of New England were settled on the princi-River Falls, consequently they were the pal rivers. On the Connecticut were the first to be broken up as a tribe. Mohegans. Those on the sources of the Fresh Water Indians. On the Merrimac doubt, had corn fields in Durham, Bruns-

He was were the Pennacooks. On the Saco were taken by Clinton to Kingston with the the Sokokis, of whom the Pequakeys at troops, and was there tried before a Court-Fryeburg were a branch. On the Andros-Martial (of which Capt. John Woodward, coggin were the Anasagunticooks, of the father of Judge Woodward who was which tribe were the Rokomekos at Canton afterwards one of the Justices of the Su-preme Court of this State, was Judge Ad-Androscoggin. The Norridgewocks lived vocate), and was unanimously condemned on the Kennebec. The Penobscots, or as a spy, and was hung the next day from Tarratines, as they were often called, on an apple-tree on the outskirts of the vil- the Penobscot; the Wawenocks, on the St. He wore a George's, Sheepscot, and Pemaquid Rivers; citizen's dress at the time of his capture, the Passamaquoddies on the St. Croix; the was about forty years of age, and was pri- Marechites on the St. John, and the Mic-

The Indians on the Androscoggin are known under the general name of Anasagunnally confined to those residing above Lewiston Falls. At a late period it seemed to extend to the scattered remnants of Indians on the river, and at St. Francis in Canada.

It is a curious fact that the word Ana-

The Pejepscots occupied the territory No mark was put upon Taylor's Falls. Their position was a most important dians coming down the river to Macquait. Their position early brought them into contact with the whites. An English trader NAMES AND LOCATION OF TRIBES ON THE occupied their territory below the Falls as wick, and Topsham. Colonel Church, as late as 1690, found a barn of corn to a large amount at their fort in Brunswick. Still, they did not appear to have any fixed habitation at that time below Lewiston Falls, unless it might have been on Sabattis river.

They probably depended largely on fish-Connecticut river were called Micmacs or ing for their support, although they, no

It is doubtful if any tribe in New England had greater facilities for procuring food at all seasons of the year than the Peiepscots. At certain periods, salmon, sturgeon, and other fish swarmed the river at the Falls, where they could easily spear Their hunting grounds were near, corn could be raised or brought down the river, while in the severest weather, or time of scarcity, they could reach Macquait, a distance of three miles, where clams were abundant. Like the immense water power at Brunswick, still unimproved, it would seem as though the natives did not themselves appreciate the natural advantages around them, though they may have been originally a populous tribe.

The Rokomekos had their headquarters at Canton Point, and this may be considered the centre of the Indian population on the whole river. They were a semi-agri-cultural people. The broad intervales, to the extent of several hundred acres, were cleared and cultivated with corn. From what can be gleaned of their condition, it is probable that they were among the most populous of any tribe in Maine, previous to 1617, when they suffered from the plague which carried off so many Indians throughout New England.

No tribe of Indians was more dreaded by the whites than the Rokomekos. They would turn off from the river through the northern part of what is now Cumberland County, and pounce upon the settlers of the seaport towns, killing and taking captive the inhabitants, or coming down the river in a flotilla of canoes, prowl along the shores, or at a later period, through the influence of the French, they would ascend the river, go to Canada, join the French, and again descend to the sea-coast to annihilate, if possible, the English settlements. They embraced the Indians up and down the Androscoggin river, from Lewiston Falls to its source.

Our knowledge of the condition of the Indians about Rokomeko is very limited. They had cornfields near Rumford Falls and at Rumford Point.

It is not known whether there was a distinct tribe at Lewiston Falls. Some of the Pennacook Indians fled from their tribe in New Hampshire through fear of the Mohawks, and built a fort there about the year 1680, so that this place constituted a sort of garrison for the protection of their families while the men were away from home. The excellent facilities for fishing at the Falls must have always attracted the Indians to that place.

At Bethel, about two and a half miles above the village, there was undoubtedly a small tribe, possibly a branch of the Rokomekos, as they were said to have carried their dead to Rokomeko for burial. They had left the place long before the town was settled, as quite large trees had grown up in their corn-fields. About twenty cellars for the storage of corn, a dozen or more gun barrels, kettles, hoes, and other implements were found by the first settlers, indicating that they had left in a hurried manner.

CARTRIDGE PAPER IN 1778.—When the American army entered Philadelphia, in June, 1778, upon the evacuation of the English troops, there was a want of paper fitted for the construction of cartridges. It was advertised for, and but a small quan tity procured. An order was then issued demanding its instant production by all people in that city who had it. This pro duced but little, and most probably on account of its scarcity. A file of soldiers was then ordered to make search for it in every place where any was likely to be found. Among other places visited in July, 1778, was a garret in a house in which Benjamin Franklin had previously had his printing office. Here were discovered about twentyfive hundred copies of a sermon which the Rev. Gilbert Tenant had written (printed by Franklin) upon "Defensive War," to rouse the colonists during the French troubles. They were all taken and used as cases for musket cartridges, and at once sent to the army, and most of them were used at the battle of Monmouth. The requisites in cartridge paper were, of course, thinness, strength, pliability, and inflammability, and such paper was necessarily scarce then.

NEW YORK.

Indians in Orange County. — Oshasquemonus, the chief of the Minsies tribe (the word having become corrupted into "Minisink," see Eager's Hist. of Orange Co., p. 407, and Stone's Life of Brandt), was one of the signers to the deed of the large Minisink Patent. Besides him, eleven other chiefs signed, though all did not belong to the same tribe, but set up some hunting and other ancient rights to the land. He was a chief of the Wawayanda tribe, whose village was located as early (or rather as late) as 1704, upon the Otter Hill, near Campbell Hall, and near the point where the Beaver Dam empties into that stream. He was also one of the signers to what is known as the Wawayanda Patent. This last patent was intended by the chiefs to cover but sixty thousand acres, but, when subsequently surveyed, was discovered to contain nearly or quite one hundred and fifty; but as the grant was made by meter and bounds, and no particular number of acres was mentioned in it, it could not, by the decisions of the English Courts, be revoked, nor the quantity of land be diminished to the intention of the Indians. Its date was March 5, 1703, and though the English Governor, upon ascertaining the mistake, petitioned Queen Anne to reduce the quantity, yet nothing was heard from the petition—at least no-thing was done to that end. Among the other signers to this patent were Rapingonick (who died about 1730 at the Delaware Gap); Wawastawaw, Moghopuck (who subsequently lived on the flats now known as Haverstraw); Comelawaw, Nanawitt, Ariwimack (who was chief of the tribe then occupying the low grounds on the Wallkill, extending from near Goshen, down that stream to Shawangunks in Ulster County); Rumbout (a Minsies); Guliapaw (whose tribe had their village near Long Pond, one of the feeders of the Morris Canal). This village was within fifty rods of the north end of the pond, and in the vicinity many rude utensils, and arrowheads, and some stone axes, have been found. What is now known as Warwick Creek, was formerly called Wawayanda Creek, after an early tribe. At the early settlement of the lands along it (about 1742). there were some evidences of a fortified Indian village at the point where the Warwick falls into the Pochuck Creek. About 1811, a large number of Indian bones (supposed to be such from the earthen-ware found with them), were discovered between two large flat stones in the immediate vicinity of the confluence of the two streams. There were evidences of a village at the mouth of the Tinbrook when the Wileman Patent was granted in 1709. Also one on the west bank of the Wallkill, near where a part of the army, known as the Virginia Line, lay encamped in 1782. Another is known to have existed on the old Palatine Road, north of the village of Wardsbridge (now Montgomery), and near the site of the Lutheran church which the Germans erected who settled the Patent called Germantown, guaranteed in 1722. At Crist's Mill, near by, the remnant of a tribe is known to have lived as late as the old French war in 1755. The streams through Orange County abounded in otter and beaver in the early part of the last century, and this fact probably accounts for the large number of small tribes who have left proofs of their existence upon the banks of them. Some few years since an instrument of polished stone, evidently made to dress these animals, was discovered in the bed of the Beaver Dam near the old church at Neelytown. General John MacBride, of Hamptonburgh (still living), remembers to have seen the remains of a beaver dam upon the small stream which empties into the Otter Kill upon his farm. There was an Indian settlement within half a mile of this place in 1811. J. M. E.

have learned from him, and even an esprit de corps would, we should suppose, have prompted them to take measures that the birthday of Shakspeare should not pass unnoticed. But, as yet, all is still in that quarter. Perhaps it is as well. Should some of them attempt to commemorate him in song, the words which the object of their rhyme puts into the mouth of one of his characters might be applicable:

I had rather be a kitten, and cry-mew, Than one of these same metre ballad mongers! I had rather hear a brazen canstick turn'd, Or a dry wheel grate on an axletree; And that would set my teeth nothing on edge, Nothing so much as mincing poetry; 'Tis like the forced gait of a shuffling nag.

[First Part King Henry IV., Act. III. Sc. 1.]

THE ANNIVERSARY OF SHAKSPEARE'S DEATH.—We are glad to observe that the New England Historic Genealogical Society has voted to properly observe the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of Shakspeare. At a recent meeting, the details of the celebration were referred to the government of the Society. that occasion, one of the members spoke as follows:

Mr. President: With your permission, I intend to bring before this meeting a matter which I believe to be of interest to this Society. It is known to us all that the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of Shakspeare takes place on the twentythird day of April of the current year. is understood that appropriate notice of this event will be taken in England. But I have yet to learn that any measures have been inaugurated in this country for the celebration of that day. Should it be suffered to pass by without something being done by way of commemoration in this western world, the neglect cannot fail, in my opinion, to cause us disgrace.

England was, it is true, the birthplace of the greatest writer in our language, but he belongs to us as much as to the land of his nativity. There are probably fifty readers of him in the United States to one reader in Great Britain. I have been informed by a bookseller that he has frequently sold new copies of Shakspeare's works for one dollar and twenty-five cents each. Does any one suppose that this book has ever been on sale in England at five or six shillings sterling?

The question very naturally arises: "Whose business is it to provide for the celebration suggested?"

Boston has long claimed to be the Literary Emporium, the Athens of America. There are now, as there always have been, among us scientific and literary men, poets (perhaps), poetasters certainly, who in their own estimation and that of their friends are deserving of high honor. One would think that some of these would move in the matter. Veneration for the mighty dead, a deep appreciation of his matchless powers, gratitude for what they redound much to the credit of this Society,

If, then, those upon whom it might seem to be incumbent to do this will not move, I would suggest that this Society should do something. Our title indicates the objects of our labors to be History Both of these are so and Genealogy. closely connected with English antecedents that we cannot separate them if we would. English history is our history till within less than two hundred and fifty years; it is measurably our history till within less than a century; and even now we have no small sympathy in the public movements of our fatherland. Our genealogy, however much it has become spread out over this "boundless continent," finds its source on English territory. Shakspeare lived in an age when maritime discovery was active. One of his warmest friends and most munificent benefactors was that Earl of Southampton, whose name appears in one of the early patents of the region in which we dwell. The poet's works are marked by mention of places discovered in his time, and are illustrated by tales brought home by early American voyagers.

These facts, and others which might be named, seem to render it proper that this Society should celebrate in some way the three hundredth anniversary of his birth. And should it so happen that ours should be the only celebration of this event in America, or even in New England, it will posterity to read.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

On account of personal reasons, Mr. beg leave to suggest that a committee be raised, at this meeting, with full powers to celebration which has been spoken of.

LATIN ODE ON WASHINGTON.—The folers :

In Geo. Washington ducis supremi musers a SENATU, POPULOQUE AMERICANO DONATUM.

> Te vocat Boston, (ubi dux iniquus Obsidit cives miseros, et obstat, Urbe quo cedant minus;) excitatque Pristina virtus.

> Prospere cedat, bone, quod pararis. Occidunt cives, gladio petita Heu perit virgo misere! atque clamor Personat apres.

> Di boni dent nunc tibi quæ præcamur Sospitem ac reddant populo dolenti: Hostium turmas subito repellas Cæde furentes.

> Te manent plausus, favor et benignus Omnium quotquot tenet ora nostra Quo ruit seevus sanie profusus Indicus olim.

> > H. P. W.

PHILADELPHIA.

QUERIES.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN FENWICKE. -Where can I find a genealogical account of the descendants of John Fenwicke, the early Quaker settler in New Jersey?

RICHARD Cox.—A New Jersey Masonic Committee appointed to write a Masonic enlighten me? History of that State, report that Richard Cox was the first Provincial Grand Master of America. Where was Henry Price at has become of the arms of Jan Harberthat time?

Boston has recently come into possession benefactors of churches thus displaced. of an estate upon Cross street, near North and be a pleasant thing in our annals for street, upon which is a building that the tradition of the neighborhood says was at a time prior to the Revolution the Town President, I submit no motion, but would Jail. The walls, from their thickness and appearance, would seem to warrant the statement of its use. As the city authorimake the necessary arrangements for the ties are about to remove the building, it occurs to the writer that some of our citizens may know the facts in regard to it. and, if so, would be glad to examine the lowing from the Pennsylvania Magazine premises before the ancient edifice is taken of October, 1775, may interest your read-down. Can any antiquarian enlighten us in regard to this subject?

> A Political Lesson.—Can any of your readers give an explanation of the following political caricature? The plate is a well executed mezzotint, ten by thirteen inches, entitled "A Political Lesson." It represents a richly dressed old gentleman booted and spurred, just thrown from his horse, his head striking a broken milestone, on which is inscribed: "To Boston, VI. miles." His hat and wig are on the ground. Near the milestone is a fingerboard inscribed: "To Salem." The sky looks loving. Besides the table, the following is under the plate: J. Dixon, invenit et fecit. Published 7 Septr. 1774. Pr. 1s. 6d. Printed for John Bowles, at No. 13 in Cornhill.

> A Statue on the Battery, New York. -I recently heard an old resident assert, quite positively, that many years since there stood on the Battery an equestrian statue, in marble or bronze, of some public character. I can find no corroboration of this statement. I suppose it must be a mistake for the Pitt statue recently presented to the Historical Society. From the age of my informant, it could not be the old leaden affair of King George. Can any reader

THE ARMS OF HARBERDINCK. - What dinck, which used to be back of the pulpit in the North Dutch Church, New York? Prison Walls in Boston.—The city of It is a pity to see the mementos of old

REPLIES.

WHIM WHAMS.—(Vol. viii., p. 79.) A copy of this work, with the original contract for publishing it, in the handwriting of S. G. Goodrich (Peter Parley), and signed by him, Nov. 15, 1827, is in my possession. At that time the contents of the book had not been written, but before the ensuing Christmas, less than thirty days, the whole matter was handed to the publisher. The authors, who were members of a Literary Club, were James W. Miller, Oliver C. Wyman, Moses Whitney, Jr., and Henry J. Finn. All of these gentlemen, except the second named, are deceased. Of Mr. Miller, it is said that he has written some of the sweetest verses in the English language; the second named is well known as one of our best writers of satiric and humorous verse; the third was a well known contributor to our magazines and to the daily press; the last mamed—the lamented Finn—the inimitable actor and artist, was lost in the illfated steamer Lexington, January 13, 1840. The designs for the cover and the tail-piece, as well as the verses on the titlepage, and the 12, 19, 22, 27, 30, and 31 articles were written by him. The 16 and 37 were by Mr. Whitney. The 5, 7, 9, 15, 20, 29, 33, 34, 36, 39, 40, and 43, were by Mr. Miller; the remaining twenty-five articles were by Mr. Wyman. Soon after its issue here, a London firm re-published it, and it met with a ready sale.

Mr. Wyman edited "Poems and Sketches," by James W. Miller, with a notice of his life, in 1829.

Of the three writers above named, who are deceased, their companion can truly say:

"Green be the turf above them, Friends of my better days; None knew them but to love them, None named them but to praise,"

Boston, March, 1864.

THOMAS ODIORNE.—Is the following his only work?

The Progress of Refinement. A Poem in three Books, to which are added a Poem on Fame and Miscellanies. By Thomas Odiorne. Boston: Printed by Young & Etheridge, opposite to the entrance of the Branch Bank, State street, 1791.

Bosrow.

Societies and their Proceedings.

ILLINOIS.

Chicago Historical Society.—The monthly meeting was held March 15th, W. L. Newberry Esq., President, in the chair. The total collections for the past two months (including 135 bound books) were 1,053, from 106 contributions. They embraced the entire documentary publications of the Provincial Government of Canada, 1858–1863, with numerous publications from the United States and Great Britain.

The correspondence for the same time—ninetyone letters written, and forty received—was submitted. Letters accepting membership were read from Mr. Alpheus Todd, Librarian of the "Parliament Library," Quebec, Hon. Henry S. Baird of Wisconsin, and Mr. N. S. Cushing of Chicago.

A valuable paper was presented at the meeting from Prof. H. Bannister, of the "Garrett Biblical Institute," Illinois, being a translation from the German of J. G. Müller, executed by Prof. Bannister, of an essay on "The Idea of the Great Spirit among the Indians of North America," elaborately written, with comprehensive references to authorities.

Three papers were then read, obligingly prepared for the society by Hon. Henry S. Baird, an early and esteemed resident of Green Bay, Wisconsin.

J. C.

Their titles were as follows: 1. "The Early Commerce and Navigation on the Upper or Northwestern Lakes;" 2. "Indian Tribes, Chiefs and Treaties;" 3. "The Green Bay Fisheries—a Sketch."

The several papers called forth interesting remarks, especially from the President, who was requested to put in writing his personal recollections of the early commerce, settlement, and improvements of the Upper Lake region, for the benefit of the society. Forcible remarks were also made on the national importance of securing full, reliable, and detailed statistics and particu-industry whose products, it is believed, much they are invariably so found—though now mostly surpass any estimate now formed.

Bay proper"-exclusive of the large fishing es- hands, the clams having been gathered for food. tablishments situated on Lake Michigan, north and south of the entrance to Green Bay, also on read a paper contributed by Hon. Wm. Willis the Fox River above the Bay, and Winnebago of this city-Mr. W. not being present-on Lake, where large quantities are yearly taken statistics. and salted for export or consumed at home-at 30,000 to 35,000 barrels.

taken—he thus enumerates: 1. White Fish; Wm. Henry, on Lake George, during the old 2. Trout; 3. Herring; 4. Pickerel; 5. Black French and Indian war. The presentation of and White Bass, Catfish, Pike, Red-Horse, Suck-the relic to the society was made. ers, about equal. Other varieties taken are Sturgeon, Mullet, Muskanongee, with a great variety of "Pan-fish." The Trout abounds in the small streams on the west side of Green Bay.

Mr. Baird gave interesting details of the modes of taking fish adopted by the Indians, and at idea. the present day, noticing the general complaint against the use of "pound nets," as very destructive to the fish, many of which are caught and perish in the meshes of the nets, corrupting the surrounding water.

The recent decease of Dr. Franklin Scammon -a founder, late Treasurer, and a Resident Life Member of the society; also first Professor of Botany in the University of Chicago—was announced by the Secretary; who was followed by impressive remarks from E. B. McCagg, Esq. Mr. McCagg submitted resolutions expressive of the high and honorable esteem in which the deceased was held, which were unanimously adopted.

MAINE.

MAINE HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Augusta, March, 1864.—The Maine Historical Society held a meeting in the Court-House.

Judge Williamson, of Belfast, read a paper in the afternoon on Slavery in Maine, giving account of the kidnapping of Indians, and showing that in early times negro slaves were held in what is now the State of Maine, at Kittery and as far east as Pownalboro.

Rev. Mr. Ballard, of Brunswick, read a paper relating to Indian Treaties.

Rev. D. Cushman, of Warren, an interesting paper on the Clam Shell Deposits of the State, showing that, like the oyster shell deposits on localities, on southern declivities, on just such on every fit occasion during the past three years, lars of the "Fisheries of the Great Lakes"—an ment by the aborigines; and from the fact that killed out by sawdust deposits—he argued that Mr. Baird reports the annual catch "on Green these shell deposits were formed by human

In the evening Bishop Burgess, of Gardiner,

A letter was received from Hon. W. P. Haines, of Biddeford, accompanying an elaborately car-The catch—classified as to relative quantities ved powder-horn, the work of a soldier at Fort

> Judge Bourne, of Kennebunk, read a long, elaborate, and very able paper on the Popham Settlement, in reply to Thornton, of Boston, who has argued that a Popham colony was only a penal colony. Judge B. controverted this

MASSACHUSETTS.

MASSACHUSETTS HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Boston. Feb.—A stated monthly meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society was held at their rooms, the President, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, in the chair. After the transaction of the usual business, the President paid a tribute to the memory of the late Frederick Tudor. We copy the closing portion of the eulogy:

As a cultivator of fruits and flowers, and trees, too, at Nahant, he not only placed himself in the front rank of horticulturists, but he gave a signal instance of how much could be done by ingenuity, perseverance, and skill, in overcoming the most formidable obstacles of soil and climate, and obtaining a victory over nature herself.

It has been said that New England is a region of rocks and ice. Mr. Tudor seemed willing to accept it as such, and to be resolved that rocks and ice should be the main ministers to his own fortune, and through him to the health and happiness of others.

I may not omit to add that while New England was his chosen and constant home, he was a man of enlarged and earnest patriotism. Taking pride in his father's Revolutionary services, and inheriting his place in the society of the Cincinnati, he stood fast to the Stars and Stripes and to the Union cause, of which they are the honored emblem, in adversity as well as in prosperity; and nowhere has our National banner the Damariscotta, they are all found in pleasant been more frequently or more eagerly displayed spots as would naturally be selected for settle- than from the windows of his beautiful residence in Bacon street. He was of a spirit to have borne it bravely to the battle-field, had an occasion occurred before age had impaired the vigor of his arm.

Nor did he fail to observe and to honor true heroism in other parts of the world as well as in our own. It is an interesting fact, that when the tidings came to us from the far East of the noble endurance and brilliant achievements of the lamented Havelock, Mr. Tudor, without calling any one to his counsel, or allowing any one to share the cost, caused a magnificent sword to be made at Springfield, and prepared it with a suitable inscription to be presented to that great Christian hero. It was unhappily too late to reach him before his death.

It only remains for me to offer, in behalf of the Standing Committee, the customary resolution:

Resolved, That the Massachusetts Historical Society have learned with deep regret the death of their valued associate, Frederick Tudor, Esq., and that the President be directed to name one of our members to prepare a memoir of him for our proceedings.

The resolution was unanimously adopted. Hon. Emory Washburne read an elaborate paper on villenage and slavery in England, which was followed by an interesting discussion on this subject, in which Horace Gray, Jr., Esq., Hon. James Savage, and Hon. G. T. Davis took part. The Society then adjourned.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SO CIETY .- Boston, Wednesday, March 2 .- A stated meeting was held this afternoon at three o'clock, the President, Dr. Lewis, in the chair.

Rev. M. Bradlee, the corresponding secretary, reported letters accepting membership from the following persons:—Solomon Piper, E. B. Foster, Edward S. Rand, Rev. Lucius Eastman, William Whitwell, of Boston,-Henry B. Humphrey, of Thomaston, Me., and George H. Brown, of Groton, Mass., as resident members; and Alden J. Spooner, of Brooklyn, N. Y., as a corresponding member.

Mr. Sheppard, the librarian, reported that during the last month donations had been received of 101 volumes, 66 pamphlets, a portfolio of manuscripts from the estate of the late George Eddy Henshaw, and an invoice of 1790 of a Japan merchant, written in Dutch. Seventyfive of the above volumes were the gift of the librarian from his own library.

Mr. Trask, the historiographer, read a memoir of the late Andrew Henshaw Ward, author of the History of Shrewsbury, &c., a resident that the society celebrate, on the 23d of April member, who died at Newtonville, February next, the two hundredth anniversary of the birth 18, in his eightieth year.

classmate of Mr. Ward at Harvard College, offered the following resolution, which he prefaced by some remarks upon the character of his friend. He esteemed it the highest praise that could be bestowed upon a man to say that he had been a useful member of society. Mr. Ward he considered eminently such a man :-

Resolved, That in the recent and sudden death of Andrew H. Ward, Esq., of West Newton, we deplore the loss of a venerable and very early member of the society; and that as a benefactor, genealogist, and courteous gentleman, we shall long cherish the memory of this excellent man.

This resolution was unanimously adopted.

Prof. Calvin E. Stone, D.D., of Andover, read a paper in which he described the life and doctrines of the celebrated Jonathan Edwards. For more than an hour he held an unusually large audience in profound attention. The paper was an erudite, eloquent, and masterly productiona voice ex_cathedra.

He began with a fascinating picture of the angellike character of that young Christian of seventeen -Miss Pierpont, of New Haven, whom Edwards married; and proceeded to give a brief narrative of Mr. Edwards's life, and the extraordinary influence of his ministerial labours; perhaps a purer character has never adorned the history of New England. He then undertook the elaborate task of expounding his great work on the "Will." After giving some account of his very numerous writings, some of which have never been published, he gave an exposition of his theology and its over-shadowing influence in the early Divinity schools; then of Samuel Hopkins, his successor, whose famous creed for a term darkened the religious world; then of Joseph Bellamy, the successor of Hopkins, who took up the line of religious metaphysics and went on; and then of Nathaniel Emmons, one of the best and most devout of men, at the head of another system. The views of Dr. Timothy Dwight, of whose theology he spoke in exalted terms; of Dr. Leonard Woods, Dr. Lyman Beecher, and Dr. Nathaniel W. Taylor, all eminent divines and at the head of numerous partisans, were all set forth, and Prof. Stowe concluded after all, that these systems, and all other systems of divinity, were mere human inventions, and in their nature cannot rest on any immutable law; because they have been and always will be changing; leaving man's hope of salvation on the belief and practice of a few simple truths.

Rev. William S. Bartlet, of Chelsea, proposed 3, in his eightieth year.

John H. Shoppard, the librarian, who was a will be taken of this event; but he had yet to learn that any measures had been taken in this a paper on the Manufacture of Iron in Buffalo; country to celebrate it. Should it be suffered to February 1st, at S. S. Jewett's, when a paper pass by without notice in this western world, the neglect, he thought could not fail to cause us Boundary Survey between the United States disgrace; for Shakspeare belongs to us as much and the British Provinces. as to the land of his nativity, and he has a much larger number of readers in the United States than in England.

The matter was referred for action to the Board of Directors.

NEW YORK.

AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY.—New York. March 11.—This Society held a special meeting on Friday evening, for the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following gentlemen were elected, the election in each case being afterwards made unanimous:-

President-Frank H. Norton (Astor Library). Vice-President-Dr. Geo. H. Perine.

Recording Secretary—Jas. Oliver.

Corresponding Secretary-Francis A. Wood, 68 E. 17th st.

Treasurer-J. Hanna.

Curator and Librarian—Edward Groh.

The Society took up the request of the Committee of the Metropolitan Fair for a loan for exhibition, laid over from the last meeting. On motion, the Society resolved to send a portion of its collection of coins and medals as a loan to the Fair; and the President appointed Mesers. Hanna, E. Groh, Perine, and Wood a committee to carry the resolution into

A number of donations of coins, Confederate and other notes, etc., were made by various gentlemen, when the meeting adjourned.

This Society has now fully reorganized, and holds its regular meetings on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month, in the Ladies' Reading Room of the Society's Library.

Its collection of coins and medals comprises upwards of 1000 specimens, and it also possesses a library of about 150 volumes and pamphlets.

Any information in regard to coins or medals will be cheerfully afforded by the Society. through its Secretary, who will also receive applications for membership.

BUFFALO HISTORICAL SOCIETY—Buffalo, Feb. 1864.—The weekly club meetings of the Society have been held as follows: January 21st, at Rev. Dr. Chester's, when a paper was read by Laurentius G. Sellstedt, on the Life and Character had on the subject of a New Historical Hall. of the late Wm. J. Wilgus, as an artist; January The matter had been introduced at the late was read by Colonel William A. Bird, on the George R. Babcock said that a very important era in our lake commerce, was the placing of the first steamboat on the Upper Lakes—the Walk-in-the-Water. In view of the immense importance which the steambost interest has since attained, it seems surprising that persons yet in active business among us saw that first boat built. Henry Daw, of this city, was one of them, and he moved that Mr. Daw, at his convenience, collect the facts in regard to the building of that vessel, and her history up to the time of her shipwreck; which motion was carried.

Mr. Daw remarked that, when at Detroit recently, he saw at the rooms of the Historical Society there, a drawing of the Walk-in-the-Water, made by a young man who was a passenger on the boat at the time she was lost.

G. W. Clinton thought it was desirable for the Society to have a picture of that first steam-boat, and also one of the last of the great side-wheel steamers, the City of Buffalo.

H. W. Rogers desired to see likenesses of all the old citizens in the rooms of the Society—of the Mayors, Gen. Potter, Col. Blossom, B. D. Coe, etc. He said that Dr. Winne had a pencil portrait of the late John Root, and on his motion it was voted that application be made to Dr. Winne for it.

The following gentlemen were elected corresponding members:

Austin Flint, M.D., New York; Chas. A. Lee, M.D., Peekskill; E. M. Moore, M.D., Rochester; Wm. H. Bull, Bath, N. Y.; Henry R. Mygart, Oxford, N. Y.; J. Watts DePeyster, Tivoli, N. Y.; Frank H. Hamilton, M.D., New York. Also as honorary members: Rev. Samuel M. Fisher, D.D., Clinton, N. Y.; Hiland Hall, Bennington, Vt.

PENNSYLVANIA.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA.—Philadelphia, March, 1864.—The Society held its regular monthly meeting at their Hall in the Athenseum. An unusually large number of members were present, attracted as well by the interest now so frequently had in the proceedings, as by the anticipation that possibly some definite initiatory decision might be 25th, at M. P. Bush's, when John Wilkeson read annual meeting, where some gentlemen gave it. ciently large to erect a hall somewhat like that of the New York Historical Society at that moment

The following named gentlemen were appointed a committee to have general charge for the building of a hall for the Society:—Hon. Joseph R. Ingersoll, Hon. John M. Read, Joseph Harrison, Charles Macalestor, Joseph Patterson, John perhaps, of estimating, in their full truth and Jordan, J. Francis Fisher, J. William Wallace, Wm. Duane, Wm. Bucknell, J. Morris Waln, A. G. Cattell, A. G. Coffin, A. G. Fell, H. N. Broughton, and Colonel G. W. Childs.

Colonel Childs offered a resolution, providing for the appointment of a committee to procure was unanimously adopted.

A list of valuable historical contributions to the Society was read by the Secretary.

Mr. William Dewey, of Philadelphia, presented a curious manuscript formerly owned by Mr. Anthony Benezet, and apparently all in the both the events and the men of this day have handwriting of that well known and excellent their own type; a remarkable type also; one citizen of ancient Philadelphia. It was a book of the discipline of Friends, and went back to Among the queries which Friends A.D. 1719. directed to be made in 1747 are these:

"Are Friends careful to attend their meetings both on First-days and other days of the week? Do they refrain sleeping in meeting, or do they of popular institutions; a spirit of power strong accustom themselves to snuffing or chewing to-bacco in meeting? Are there any Friends that frequent music houses, or go to dancing or gaming? Do Friends observe the advice of former part of this, is true. meetings, not to encourage the importation of negroes, nor buy them after imported?"

Mr. H. G. Jones, the Corresponding Secretary, read the following letter from John William Wallace, Esq., lately elected a Vice-President:-No. 728 Spruce street, Feb. 22, 1864.—Sir:have received your communication of the 10th instant, informing me of my election as a Vice-President of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania for the year 1864-5.

I am obliged to the members of the Historical Society. Not having had at any time active relations to the body, I receive it as a mark of their good-will.

At no time, I think, of our national history, so much as now, have duties fallen on those persons who form the Historical Associations of the country. The great, immediate, and practical interests of the conflict going on about us are so absorbing that we are scarcely conscious of anything in the scene but a great, immediate, and practical issue. In some senses, it is well that we should see no more.

Yet in the moral interest of it all, in the dis-

as their opinion that a sum could be raised suffi- and occurrences of battle, which stand out as upon a foreground, it cannot be doubted that the events of the day which is passing over us are destined to form for succeeding ages a theme of inexhaustible and still deepening interest.

We are, I suppose, so much, ourselves, partakers in these events; we are so entirely of this age and of its type, that we are not capable, genuine character, either the events themselves, or the persons who appear to originate and give them definition. We see no great deal, perhaps, in either persons or events, which resembles the type of that heroism and of that statesmanship which history has thus far considered the Amethe photographs of recent battle-fields, which rican type, dignified and remarkable type, no doubt, and one which perhaps will never be reproduced; the type, I mean, of that day which achieved our Independence, and established our Constitution; the day of 1776 and 1787.

Yet it cannot be denied, I apprehend, that which, if it finds no exemplar in any previous age or in any other country, is probably not the less a genuine type in its relations to greatness. It is a type cast in the mould of a new and individual creation; the product of that indigenous and self-vital spirit which inhabits a vast country in its own strength.

Time alone, "in whose train Truth walks ever slow and late," can reveal how far the whole, or

In the meantime, sir, it seems to me that the Historical Society of Pennsylvania rightly enlarges its designs and labors. Not forgetting the ancient duties of the past, and continuing still to rescue from dumb forgetfulness the records of earlier days, it is of late, in some sort, "leaving the things that are behind," in order to preserve for future times our now present fame and records; records and a fame which, when this present shall have become the past, will thus stand forth genuine, undimmed, and honorable.

The Society, I believe, is now collecting, in justice to her children, whatever illustrates great passing events, and whatever conduces to the true appreciation of distinguished living character among them. Trophies of Gettysburg which are now gathered in its halls prove this. The zeal with which she has co-operated in establishing the State Cemetery on that battle-field is an evidence in the same direction. The proposition lately made, I understand, for the erection of a new Historical Hall and for placing the historical honor of the Commonwealth play of armies which it exhibits, in the scenes with greater external dignity before its peoidea.

Certainly, in a country like ours, where every thing which belongs to individual or family distinction is fugitive, where neither the greatest of our statesmen nor the most successful of our Generals can become the founder of a powerful and enduring house, it is the duty of our historical societies to collect and preserve the muniments of true greatness wheresoever exhibited ing are the officers elected for the year ensuthroughout the country. History, in her own time, will assume the pen and immortalize it for the nations.

Were the Historical Society of Pennsylvania less fortunate, sir, in its President, or were my fellow officers less able to discharge the duties in his rare and always regretted absence, I should hardly be willing to accept the post you offer me, when duties, such as those I speak of, attend its offices of trust. As it is, sir, I receive the mark of your kindness with thanks, and with the expectation of indulgence for my discharge of its labors.

I have the honor to be, with great truth, your obedient servant,

John William Wallace. Horatio Gates Jones, Esq., Corresponding Sccretary of the Historical Society of Pennsylva-

Mr. H. G. Jones, the Corresponding Secretary, exhibited an original unpublished letter of General Washington, in these words. The address, fortunately for the fame of the person to whom it had been directed, had been torn off:-

HEADQUARTERS, MOREISTOWN, 22d February, 1777.

Sir:—The cry of want of provisions comes to me from all quarters. General Maxwell writes word that his men are starving. General Johnson, of Maryland, yesterday, informed me that his people draw none. This difficulty, I understand, prevails also at Chatham. What, sir, is the meaning of this? And why were you so desirous of excluding others from this business, when you are unable to accomplish it yourself? Consider, I beseech you, the consequences of this neglect; and exert yourself to remedy the evil and complaints, which cannot be less fatal to the army than disagreeable to

Sir. your very humble servant, Go. WASHINGTON.

After the transaction of a few items of business of no public interest, the meeting adjourned.

RHODE ISLAND.

THE RHODE ISLAND NUMISMATIC ASSOCIATION.

ple, includes perhaps and illustrates the same ing the above name has been organized in the City of Providence by a few gentlemen interested in Numismatics.

In consideration that they are as yet upon the first round of the ladder, their prospects are very auspicious, and as the members all manifest deep interest in the cause, they hope to make an interesting and profitable association

The meetings are held monthly. The follow-

President—Robert B. Chambers; Vice-President—George J. Paine; Secretary—Desmond FitzGerald; Treasurer—Edward H. Robinson; Cubinet Keeper-Charles A. Cooper.

Miscellany.

As a step in bibliographical progress, may be noticed the first successful attempts at printing on vellum in this country. The earliest actual specimens executed were three copies of a rare Cromwellian tract, The Soldier's Pocket Bible—a little manual of Scripture texts, drawn up for the use of the Commonwealth Army, and reprinted by Mr. George Livermore, from one of the two known copies that are extant. It consists of three or four leaves only. The vellum copies were printed by Houghton, of Cambridge, at the well known Riverside press. More recently Prof. Allen, of the University of Pennsylvania, has caused two copies of his Life of Philidor to be printed on vellum, at the office of Sherman and Co., of Philadelphia. It forms a post octavo volume of some 200 pages, so is a considerable specimen of this elegant application of the typographic art. We have not heard how far these specimens have overcome the difficulties presented by the material; but both in England and France all attempts at producing an article like the delicate soft vellum of a rich c eam color, or ivory hue, employed by the Italian printers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, have failed, and the secret of its manufacture may be considered one of the lost arts. Even the bibliographical enterprise of Dr. Dibdin failed before the difficulties of a vellum impression of any of his works. He commenced to print a single copy of his Typographical Antiquities of England in this style, but abandoned the attempt when a few sheets had been executed, and the unique copy of this specimen, as far as it was proceeded with, is now in the -Providence, March 15th, 1864. A society bear- choice library of an amateur at Providence, R. I.

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

MAY, 1864.

[No. 6.

General Bepartment.

THE LATE WILLIAM JACKSON DAVIS. OF NEW YORK.

It is with no ordinary feelings of regret that we devote a small space in the present number to the late William Jackson Davis, a warm personal friend, a constant contributor to the magazine, and a historical scholar of unpretending and unambitious merit.

Although but little known as an author, and never claiming to be one, his rank as was very high. His knowledge, patiently acquired, minute, authentic, and impartial, was always at the service of other students.

In the HISTORICAL MAGAZINE he always took a deep interest, and his contributions to its columns, directly from his own researches and obtained from other sources, as in examining them he came upon suit-in 1857 "A Journal of the Expedition to able matter, were constant and always of Quebec in the year 1775, under the Comthe greatest value and importance; while in mand of Colonel Benedict Arnold, by the minor departments he was always ready to give, in Notes and Replies, guidance to the inquirer.

His special study was the history of the city of New York, as to which he was an authority. He had collected all the early published accounts and views of the city, its buildings and streets, as well as information and portraits of its prominent citizens; and Valentine's Manuals of the Common Council were enriched with many of the interesting views of early New York by the zeal and industry of our late friend.

The editor of that repository of New York city history says: "I have been in in accordance with his tastes, thus writes debted to him for many interesting picto- of him: "The most remarkable trait in the rial illustrations connected with our city, and he also contributed to the Manual annually compiled by me interesting articles, among others one on the Old State Prison, published in the Manual of 1853; articles on the King's Arms Tavern, Fraunce's Tavern, and the Old Bridewell, in that of 1854."

Some of these papers, with others by his friend Henry B. Dawson, Esq., were printed separately in a small volume entitled: "Reminiscences of New York and its Vicinity." New York. 1855.

The interesting matter which he collected regarding the Bridewell was also embodied a historical student and local antiquarian in a paper read before the New York Historical Society.

His active connection with that society was not his only historical labor. Davis was, we may say, the originator of the Bradford Club, having suggested the idea and the name, and in conjunction with some, if not all the present members, issued James Melvin, a Private in Captain Dearborn's Company," which he edited and prepared for the press; and also in 1858, the "Diary of Washington; from the first day of October, 1789, to the tenth day of March, 1790, from the Original Manuscript, now first printed," a volume edited by Benson J. Lossing, Esq.

The subsequent publications bear the name of the Bradford Club, and are well known.

The Hon. George Bancroft, to whom Mr. Davis for a considerable period acted as private secretary, a position completely character of our late friend, Mr. William Jackson Davis, was his sweetness of dispo- March, 1864. sition. Long a sufferer and slowly wasting away, he never murmured, he never was I have met, and his memory was very unusually retentive. His leading passion tion on New York, embracing all the variwas for books. He spent all the money that he could spare from the necessary subsistence of his family in purchasing rare the Brieden-Radt; the Colonial Docuand curious ones; and he was skilled in ments, Collections of the New York His-illustrating them. The company he liked torical Society and addresses bearing on best was that of book collectors. happiest hours were those which he passed in reading the details of by-gone years; and sometimes he would sit silent and alone in his room and find pleasure enough in just gazing at his own library, which now forms the chief part of what he has left for his Writing very little himself, his sympathies went out freely to every one of his acquaintance who was engaged in making sketches of old times, old fortifications, old mansions, or old traditions.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

New York Historical Society, and took chief of the allied army on the Continent, pride in its officers, its meetings, its papers, and in every effort of any and every one of its members."

Mr. Davis was born in Queens County, December 20, 1818. Losing his mother while an infant, he did not escape the consequences of a loss of maternal care, which in the words of Walpole, "both liked to no other, even the most affectionate, can govern, neither liked to be governed." replace. He grew up by no means strong, the battle of Minden, on the 1st of August, and was forced by his precarious health to 1759, when the Frenchinfantry reeled before abandon the business of engraving, to the British battalions, Sackville was at the which he first applied himself.

municipal government enabled him to in-orders to advance with the English and dulge his antiquarian taste, and he soon Hanoverian cavalry, which were separatbecame an impassioned student of the his-ed from the infantry by a wood. These tory of the great city.

He died in New York on the 26th day of

Mr. Davis's library, though comparatively small, was well chosen and confined almost peevish, he never was impatient. He was exclusively to a few historical departments. free from guile, and never harbored a harsh Besides several of the earlier works on thought, never uttered harsh words against America and histories of the French war, any one. His delicate, gentle nature loved it embraced all the important histories of to lean on others, and in his attachments the Revolution, Warren, Andrews, Ramsay, he was a most devoted friend. His know-Murray, Botta, the Memoirs of Lee, ledge of the special history of the city of Heath, Thatcher, Simcoe, Reidesel, Moody, New York and its environs, his minute Gano, Dring, Andross, Sherburne, Willet: acquaintance with their old buildings and biographies of all the prominent men in celebrated spots, exceeded that of any one the struggle; separate histories of the various states; and especially a fine collecous "Pictures of New York;" the early works of De Vries, Jogues, Vanderdonck, His New York history.

LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

"LORD GEORGE SACKVILLE, a younger son of the first, and father of the last Duke of Dorset, commenced his political career as Chief Secretary for Ireland, when his father was for the second time Viceroy, and afterwards attained high military rank. Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick, nephew of "He was a most faithful member of the Frederick the Great, was commander-indestined for the protection of Hanover; but the British troops of which it was partly composed were under the command of the high English aristocrat. Dissensions soon arose between him and the foreign prince, who was his superior officer; head of the Blues. At the critical moment of Employment in one of the offices of the confusion in the enemies' rank, he received orders he undoubtedly disobeyed. His being ambiguous and even contradictory, to justify his inactivity on the ground that while his enemies traced it to the effect of the movement of the cavalry was unnecespanic, or to the impulse of unwarrantable sary. "The glory of that day," said he, pique and wounded pride, He appeared "was reserved for the six brave (English) his victorious commander, who remarked in future ages, by a single attack put forty to the other officers present, "Look at that man! As much at his ease as if he had done wonders." The general order peculiarly inopportune, for while those six tion; it declared that if Lieutenant-General thousand three hundred and seventy-nine the Marquis of Granby had had the good men and officers, the Gazette does not fortune to have been at the head of the record a single casualty amongst the cavalry, his presence would have greatly British cavalry. According to Walpole, contributed to make the decision of the "Whatever were his deficiencies in the day more complete and more brilliant. day of battle, he has at least shown no Stung to the quick by this public rebuke, want of spirit either in pushing on his feeling that the indignation which pervaded trial, or during it. He had a formal mesthe camp had spread through the court sage that he must abide the event, whatand the country, he wrote for liberty to ever it should be; he accepted that issue, resign his command, and return to Eng-land to brave a storm of obloquy which, attacked judges, prosecutor, and evidence, after the recent fate of Byng, was far more Indeed, a man cannot be said to want terrible to a soldier than the worst perils spirit who could show so much in his of the battle-field.

marily dismissed from the colonelcy of his up to the charge than have gone to Whiteregiment, and struck-by the hand of hall to be worried as he was. One hour George the Second, who was deeply in- of such resolution at Minden would have censed, and resolved to make his degrada- established his character for ever." Gray tion more galling—from the list of generals. the poet, wrote at the time, "The old Having demanded a court-martial, a ques-Rundles who sat on Lordly Sackville, have tion arose whether a man who had ceased at last hammered out their message. He to be in the army was still subject to is declared disobedient and unfit for all military law, but the court assembled on military command. The unembarrassed the 29th of February, 1760, and was com-countenance, the looks of revenge, conposed of sixteen members, all general tempt, and superiority that he bestowed officers. The accusations were three in on his accusers, were the admiration of all. number. First, for refusing to advance You may think, perhaps, he intends to go with the cavalry and sustain the infantry abroad and hide his head—au contraire when engaged; second, after the cavalry all the world visits him on his condemnawere in motion, in needlessly halting them; tion." The court discharged their duty third, that he moved so slowly as not to with firmness, neither misled by his per-personal courage having been previously the court, he complained that he had been suspected, he had preserved, and was punished before trial; and, while he relied proud of exhibiting, the uniform he had on the ambiguity of the orders, it was but worn at Fontenoy, pierced by a musket too evident that they did not direct him to ball, which on that fatal day wounded him stand still. Forgetting that the moment in the breast. His disobedience at Minden of the enemies' signal discomfiture was his was attributed by his friends to the orders opportunity, he attempted in his defence after the battle, at dinner in the tent of regiments, who, it will scarcely be credited of the prince contained a direct imputa- infantry regiments suffered a loss of one circumstances. I think, without much hero-On his arrival he found himself sum-lism, I would sooner have led the cavalry reach the action in time to join in the suasive powers, nor irritated by his over-pursuit. Assuming a dictatorial tone to bearing pride; and it was said that seven shelter offences of such a nature."

arms at Minden, Sackville would inevitably take whatever distance he pleased. Being have shared the fate of Byng; but the placed at twenty short paces apart, Lord splendid successes of Wolfe in the conquest George called on the governor to fire, of Canada, following fast after that victory, had tranquillized popular feeling, and, as his lordship had brought him there, strange to say, on the accession of the new he must fire first. Neither of the shots sovereign, he found favor with George the took effect, but his opponent's second ball Third, by whom he was named for office broke Lord George's pistol, and one of the in 1765, but the other members of the splinters grazed his hand. The seconds new ministry refused to act with a man then interfered, and the governor afterwho had been so publicly disgraced. Hav-wards avowed that he had never met a ing, in 1770, acquired property under the man who behaved with more coolness or will of Lady Elizabeth Germain, who had courage. been a favorite correspondent of Swift, on condition that he should thenceforth bear dence for a time to a surmise, now conher name, we may well believe that he sidered palpably erroneous, that Lord eagerly seized on any occasion that afforded George Germain was the author of Junius. even a hope of retrieving his sullied repute. The hostility of that celebrated assailant It was a period "when corruption did, of character to the Marquis of Granby indeed, glitter in the van and maintain was accounted for by this theory, and his a standing army of mercenaries," and detestation of the Scotch was traced to Lord George, aspiring to be a patriot, the fact that ten of the members of the having expressed himself in parliament court-martial had been natives of Scotland. warmly on some popular question, Go-|"Time works wonders." The object of vernor Johnson replied that "he wondered much and merited obloquy in 1775 was the noble lord should interest himself so selected in the administration of Lord deeply in the honour of the country, when North for the high office of Secretary he had hitherto been so regardless of his of State for the Colonies. His policy as own." On a refusal to retract an insult a minister was destined to be as disastrous so publicly given, Lord George demanded as his military career had been disgraceful; an immediate meeting, and named the he was, in office, the determined foe of ring in Hyde Park; but as the challenged American independence, and he directed was then, as a member, attending a com-those measures which severed her transatmittee of the House of Commons, he hoped lantic provinces from Great Britain. Benthat a meeting within an hour would be jamin Franklin, in an early letter to Priestly, satisfactory. The subsequent incidents are thus predicted the consequences: "When characteristic of the taste for duelling then Lord Germain is at the head of affairs, it in fashion. The combatants would seem cannot be expected that anything like to have arranged all the preliminaries reason or moderation could be attended between themselves; the governor sug- to. Everything breathes rancour and des-of the members were in favor of capital message, Mr. Thomas Townsend, after-punishment. The promulgation of the sen-wards Lord Sydney, would answer for tence was followed by his name being them both; and as he had an open wound struck off the list of privy councillors; and in his arm, and his legs were very much the announcement of its confirmation de-swelled, he expressed a wish to use pistols clared it to be his majesty's pleasure "that -a request to which his opponent politely the sentence be given out in public orders, acceded. In hurrying to the appointed spot, that officers may be convinced that neither the governor met Sir James Lowther in Pichigh birth nor great employments shall cadilly, who accompanied him as his friend, and when on the ground, Lord George, If disaster had attended the English accosting his adversary, desired him to which the other refused, declaring that,

Some remarkable coincidences gave cregested that one second, the bearer of the peration, and nothing but absolute impotence will stop their proceedings. We, therefore, look on final separation from you as a certain and speedy event!"

On his resigning the seals in 1782, he was raised by royal favour to the peerage, by the title of Viscount Sackville: an elevation which revived all the bitter recollections of days gone by, and was thus denounced in a spirited satirical production of the period.

The Robe Patrician now shall cover all!
Disgrace no more degrade, or fear appal;
The guilt is lost, that once the conscious plain
Of Minden blushing saw through all her slain.
Such is the magic of this crimson vest,
When clasped with royal hands across the breast;
It mounts the coward to the hero's place,
Wipes from the recreant brow each foul disgrace;
Confounds, perverts all honours and degree,
And makes a hero e'en, Germain, of thee!
Know, haughty peer, the western world disdains
Such tools of office, and such feeble chains,
As hands like thine, or stronger hand of George,
Or heads or hands more wise and strong can forge.

The newly created peer on his introduction into the House of Lords was destined to endure perhaps the most galling of his many humiliations; he heard his ignominious sentence and its confirmation read aloud, and himself denounced as "the greatest criminal this country ever knew." He was accused not only of misconduct in the field, but of being the author of all the calamities of the recent war. It was moved that the admission of a man whose disgrace had been entered on the orderly book of every regiment, would be derogatory to the dignity of that assembly, and the House was earnestly invoked not to suffer him to enter it and contaminate the peerage. The obnoxious viscount defended himself with courage and calmness; the prerogative of the crown was recognised; but a protest recorded the sentiments of nine peers, and the object thus arraigned did not long survive the accumulated indignities to which he had been forced to submit.

THE LOUCHEUX AND ESQUIMAUX— LETTER OF REV. W. W. KIRKBY TO GEORGE GIBBS, ESQ.

DEAR SIR:

Hearing that you are desirous of obtaining information of any kind concerning the aborigines of the country, I venture to forward you a few observations on the manners and customs of the Esquimaux and Loucheux, made during a visit among them last summer. They are very broken and fragmentary, but they may perhaps furnish you with materials to work up in a better way. Should incidents, apparently trifling in themselves, be noticed, it will not be without design, for in savage life they often prove the truest indices to character, and help us to understand much that we might otherwise fail to comprehend.

I left here on the 29th of May in a small canoe, paddled by a couple of Chipewyan Indians belonging to my mission. followed the ice down the McKenzie, and on the 11th of June entered the frigid zone. Then, however, it was more like a torrid one, for the sun shed upon us abundance of light and heat for the whole twenty-four hours. When near Point Separation we met with the first party of Esquimaux, and between there and the fort on Peel's river we saw great numbers, all of whom, from their thievish propensities, gave us a great deal of trouble. They are a fine-looking race of people, and, from their general appearance and habits, I imagine them to be much more intelligent than the Indians. And if proof were wanting, we have it in a girl who was brought up from the Arctic coast, and is now living at my house. She is remarkably clever and active, and reads, speaks, and writes the English language very correctly. The men are tall, active, and exceedingly strong; most of them have a profusion of beard and The women are rather short, whiskers. but comparatively fair, and possess very regular and by no means badly formed features. The peculiarity in both sexes consists in the obliquity of their eyes and somewhat pear shape of their face. The females have a singular practice of periodically cutting the hair from the crown of their husbands' heads, and, fastening the spoil to their own, wear it in large bundles, one on each side of the face, and a third on the top of the head, somewhat in the manner of the Japanese visitors recently in the United States. This practice by no means improves either their figure or appearance, and as they advance in life the bundles become uncomfortably large. Both sexes are inveterate smokers, but they smoke very little at a time. Their pipes are made principally of copper, and are of their own manufacture. In shape the bowl is very like a reel used for cotton, and the aperture for receiving the tobacco not much larger than the hole through the centre of the reel. This they fill with finely cut tobacco, and, when lighted, withhold respiration till the pipe is finished. The smoke is all swallowed, none being allowed to escape even through the nose. The effect is very great upon their nervous system, and when a pipe is finished they will sometimes lie for ten minutes trembling like an aspen leaf. All that I saw were exceedingly well dressed in deer-skin clothing, with the hair outside; and, being new and nicely ornamented with white sealskins, looked clean and comfortable. Their little kiyacks or canoes were beautifully made, and all well armed with spears, bows, and arrows of their own manufacture. Their omiacks, or boats, were clumsy looking articles, and consisted of a rough framework of wood, lashed together with walrus lines, over which a lining of parchment was tightly stretched. They are used solely by the women and children, each one being large enough to hold three or four families, with their baggage.

At Peel's river I met with a large number of Loucheux Indians, and with a far greater number at the Youcon. They are a fierce, turbulent, and cruel race, much more nearly approximating to Algonquin tribes than to the quiet Chipewyans of the McKenzie valley. They extend from about 65° N. to very nearly the Arctic coast, and from the McKenzie westward to Behring's Straits. They were once very numerous, but wars among them and with their but the general appearance, dress, habits,

They are still, hownumbers a good deal. ever, a strong and powerful people.

They are doubtless of Tartar origin; for their personal appearance, the practice of Shamanism, scarifications in sorrow, burning their dead, infanticide, a species of caste, and many other customs, point us at once to the inhabitants of Eastern Siberia as the parent stock. And, though there are now many important differences both in habits and language, they are evidently a branch of the Chipewyan or Tinne race. And if this be so, then the Tinne family holds a very important position among the aborigines of the country, extending as it does in an unbroken line from Hudson's Bay to the Pacific Ocean, and in a broken though visible chain from near the Arctic coast to the Gulf of Mexico. How many centuries they took to traverse and occupy this immense extent of country, break up into bands, which grew up into tribes, and by non-intercourse acquire habits and dialects of their own, I can form no conjecture. But, with their wandering habits, nothing could be more easy; and with abundant means of life, there would soon be a rapid increase in numbers. A careful comparison of the vocabularies in Hale's Ethnology with several that have been taken in this district, and with the aid of a valuable and beautiful map of the aboriginal tribes of the country, lately published by the United States Government, shows at once the vast range the Tinne family takes. According to the above authorities, together with a census of the tribes here, taken a few years ago by the Hudson's Bay Company, the Tinne number forty-one tribes, amounting in the aggregate to about 32,000 souls. Many subjects of interest here suggest themselves for remark; but as they apply to the Tinne generally, and not to the Loucheux in particular, I must not indulge myself with them.

The Loucheux are divided into many petty tribes, each one having its own chief, as the Hun-Kootchin (River Indians), Vunta-Kootchin (Lake Indians), Touchon-Kootchin (Wood Indians), and many others; Eskimo neighbors have diminished their and language are very much the same in all, and all go under the general names of passionately fond. their own appellation, meaning literally coming and comfortable. "the people," and of course is the one by which they ought always to be designated. The former was given to them by the whites nose pierced, through which two or more who first came to trade with them. There hyaquois shells are placed, giving a most is another division among them of a more extraordinary expression to the face. The interesting and important nature than the women tatoo their chins in vertical lines, petty tribes just referred to. All, irre- from one corner of the mouth to the other; spective of tribe, are divided into three and in some few instances I observed two grades, faintly resembling the upper, middle, and lower classes of civilized nations. These are termed respectively Chit-sa, Nate-sa, and A-teet-sa, the former being the richest and the latter the poorest. They differ, however, from the customs of civilized life in this, that it is the rule for a the Hudson's Bay territories who collect man not to marry in his own, but to take wealth or have a system of barter among a wife from either of the other classes. A themselves. Both are much practised by Chitsa nobleman will marry an A-teet-sa them, hyaquois shells or beads being the peasant without any feeling of infra dig. medium of currency. The man who has This marriage code must have a beneficial the most beads is considered the richest. influence in allaying feuds, as in every case After they are purchased from the Compathe children belong to the grade of the ny's stores they are threaded by the women mother, and the different families and on strips of leather a fathom long, and are tribes that belong to the same grade will thus kept and bartered among themselves. never make war with each other. A man's Some never hunt a fur, but trade them children may belong to the grade against from more distant tribes, among whom which he is called upon by his chief to they make annual expeditions for that purfight, in which case he will naturally seek pose. Were they in a country more accesfor peace. And so it has been, for there sible and hospitable this propensity might is very little warfare among them now.

Their dress is the same in all the tribes, and very nearly so of both sexes. It con-Navajos, who are rich in agricultural and sists of a sort of tunic or pointed shirt, and commercial wealth. trowsers, to which the shoes are attached. The pointed shirt and shoes attached to looks and fewer in number than the men. the trowsers are two differences between The former arises, probably, from the harsh their dress and that of the Tinne. It may, treatment they receive and the heavy work however, be a difference only of recent they have to perform; the latter, I fear, date. For if the derivation of the word must be attributed to female infanticide, Chipewyan be "pointed shirt" in the Cree, which is but too prevalent among them. and not "dead dog," as some have said, The Company's officers have made strenuthen undoubtedly the Tinne wore garments ous and laudable efforts to abolish so cruel of that shape when the Crees first met a practice, and in many cases I rejoice to tween the dress of the women and that of to a large extent among them. Polygamy the men is that the tunic of the women is is also the source of many evils among rather longer, rounded a little in front, and them. The Kootchin multiplies his wives

Their dresses are all Loucheux and Kootchin. The latter is made of leather, and when new look be-

> The men paint their faces something like the Crees; and all have the septum of the or three horizontal lines from the outer corners of their eyes. Neither of these customs is practised by the Tinne of the McKenzie valley, but both are adopted by the Moyave (Tinne) tribes of the south.

> The Kootchin are the only Indians in be turned to a good account, and they become as renowned as their congeners, the

The Kootchin women are inferior in The only difference observable be-know were successful; but it still obtains more profusely decorated with either beads as a farmer increases his beasts of burden. or hyaquois shells, of which both sexes are The more wives he has the more work he gets done. Hence it is not uncommon for circle, each trying to outstrip the other in an influential Indian to have as many as the contortions of his body, but all beating four or five at the same time. The effect admirable time with their feet. The dance of this, where the number of females is so is accompanied by a song or kind of dirge, much below that of the males, may be easily in which the qualities of the deceased are conceived; dissatisfaction, jealousies, quar-lenumerated. Some of their airs are exrels, and murders are the natural results. ceedingly plaintive and beautiful. This There is no marriage ceremony of any kind, custom is kept up so long as the host can nor previous courtship required. only thing necessary is the consent of the sents of beads, etc., are distributed, and the bride's mother; that is a sine qua non in ceremonies completed. It is said of the all cases. Neither father nor brothers have Crees that they have "no music in their and see the girl torn in pieces by contend-means apply to the Kootchin. Mr. Lockfirst appearance the unfortunate creature is banished from the camp for a whole year. here. A little tent is built for her at a distance from the others, in which she has to pass among them, though Shamanism prevails the whole of that time alone. Should she throughout. Any one who feels disposed, bonnet on her head, with long fringes attached, which nearly cover her face. I All, however, are implicitly trusted, and nation to burn their dead, after which the think the "doctors" can charm away sickashes were collected, and being carefully ness and danger, but also that they have sewed up in a leather bag, were suspended power to inflict them—even on Indians at from the top of a painted pole placed in a a distance; and so deeply rooted is this clear and elevated spot. But owing to the idea in their minds, that they believe all long residence of the whites at Peel's river, who die before reaching old age have been time appointed all who are invited attend. proved the stronger. The first day is spent in feasting upon the As in the case of most other uncivilized best they have, and in the evening the people, it is very difficult to know what dance commences. It consists of a large their real dispositions are, as they so frenumber moving round and round in a quently do acts so completely at variance

The entertain his guests, after which time prea voice in the matter, and would rather sit souls." Be this as it may, it would by no ing rivals than interfere in any way, hart has already collected eight or ten of Youths of both sexes mature very early, their songs, which he has set to music, and Girls generally have their first menses from is still collecting others. Unfortunately thirteen to fourteen years of age. On their he had none of their "dead songs" when I was there, or I would have inserted one

There is no regular order of priesthood walk out at all, it must be with a kind of may turn "medicine-man;" but some are esteemed much more highly than others. saw one thus exiled near to Fort Youcon. very liberally paid when their services are Formerly it was the practice of the whole required. And not only do the people the inhabitants of that vicinity now bury killed by the influence of some conjuror on stages or in the ground. Their neigh-whom they have offended, or whom some bors of the Youcon are more or less adopt-other person had hired to do the deed. ing the same methods. There is but little When the services of a medicine-man are ceremony at the time of interment, unless required, a female takes a quantity of beads the deceased had been a chief or some other to the tent of the selected doctor, and notable personage. The property is inter- without saying anything throws them at red with the owner, and nightly wailings his feet and returns. If he thinks the sum are kept up for a time. During this pe-sufficient, he rises and follows her back to riod, indeed for nearly a year, the nearest her tent, where the incantations take place. male relative is employed in purchasing or If successful, he receives all the credit; if otherwise collecting meat, grease, furs, otherwise, he declares a distant doctor beads, etc., for a "dead dance." At the opposed him, who, being better paid, with each other. As a whole they are decidedly bloodthirsty, cruel, and treacherous, though to this charge there are many honorable exceptions. That they are superstitious and credulous, their whole system of Shamanism goes to prove. are tolerably honest; that is, they will not pilfer from the fort, and yet they pillage each other's wives if they can, and often rob distant Indians of their furs. They are exceedingly hospitable to any one visiting them in their camps; at the same time selfishness is not one of their least prominent traits. All, I fear, are confirmed liars, as are all the Indians throughout the whole district. The inferior estimation in which women are held, the practice of robbing each other of their wives, and the facilities for divorce, combine to produce a very low state of morality among them. But as the Gospel has now found its way among them, it will, I trust, produce its legitimate fruits among them. Their present religious notions are very few and in-They have some knowledge of a supreme being, but as they possess no idea of a future state, this knowledge exerts no influence over their actions. If they have any religion at all it is one of fear, as they all more or less deprecate the wrath of demons. They possess, however, neither rites nor altars of any kind, nor do their medicine-men at all oppose the preaching of the Gospel among them. When there last summer, all at the fort—upwards of five hundred in number-attended my ministry with the greatest delight three times a day, and before I left, medicine-men renounced their craft, polygamists gave up their wives, murderers confessed their crimes, and mothers told of deeds of blood that sickened one to hear, and all sought for pardon and amendment. Whether they were sincere or not I cannot tell. Much may have been owing to novelty, as they had never seen a clergyman of any kind before; but as I am just on the eve of visiting them again, I shall know this and many other things about them.

With the aid of my good friend, Mr. Ross here, I have mapped out the position of the different tribes, but as I am not very certain as to its accuracy, will not send it now. I will, however, take a copy with me this summer, and when on the spot shall be able to correct all the errors in it, and, if I hear that you would like it, will forward it next year.

Should this paper be of no use to you, may I ask you kindly to forward it to the editor of the Canadian Naturalist, as it may furnish him with an article.

With very kind regards,
Believe me, yours sincerely,
W. W. KIRKHY.

FORT SIMPSON, McKenzie's RIVER, June 1, 1869.

ADDITIONAL NOTES ON THE MASSA-CHUSETTS LAWS CONCERNING SLA-VERY AND NEGROES.

We have noticed with satisfaction the interest manifested in the articles recently published in the Historical Magazine on the subject of slavery in Massachusetts. But we confess a little disappointment that the writer of those articles has not continued the series—which must be our apology to that gentleman if in the present communication we are anticipating his treatment of a part of his general subject. If so, we beg "E. Y. E." to receive it as a contribution of materials only for him to work up, as he may please, hereafter.

We desire now to call attention to two acts of legislation in Massachusetts which were passed in the year 1788—eight years after the alleged termination of slavery in that State by the adoption of the Constitution. These acts were passed just after the adoption of the Federal Constitution by the State Convention.

The first is the only one directly and positively hostile to slavery to be found among all their statutes.

It is a very remarkable fact that the reluctance of the Legislature to meet the subject fairly and fully in front should have left their statute book in such a questionable shape. With Portia glowing with delight at the unsuccessful choice of her sable suitor, they seem to have wished to sav:

"A gentle riddance: draw the curtains; go-Let all of his complexion chuse me so. Merchant of Venice; Act II. Sc. VIII.

But neither the cupidity of their slavetrading merchants nor the peculiar improvidence of the negro—the one sharpened by successful gain, the other hardened into hopeless acquiescence with pauperismwould permit this "gentle riddance," and although the "curtains" have been "drawn" over these disagreeable features for nearly a century, the historian of slavery must let in the light upon them. To paraphrase slightly the verses of one of their own early elegiac poets:

" Let all New England, and let Boston know, How much they do to truth for slavery owe."

As early as 1785, the Legislature instituted an inquiry as to the measures proper to be adopted by them to discountenance and prevent any inhabitant of the commonwealth being concerned in the slavetrade. The inquiry was also extended to the condition of negroes then in the State, or who might thereafter come or be brought into it. Journals: V. 222. Bills were prepared and referred to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws, with instructions to revise all the laws respecting negroes and mulattoes, and report at a future session. Ib. 342.

In the following year, a joint order was made for a committee to report measures for preventing negroes coming into the commonwealth from other States. Jour-Another similar order nals: VI. 463. was made by the House of Representatives in 1787. Journals: VII. 524.

Earlier in the same year, a number of African blacks petitioned the Legislature for aid to enable them to return to their native country. Ib. VII. 381. A Quaker petition against the slave-trade was read in the Senate June 20, 1787, and not accepted, but referred to the Revising Committee, who were directed to report a bill upon "the subject matter of negroes in this Commonwealth at large." Senate: Vol. VIII. 81. H. of R. Vol. VIII. 88.

The prohibition of the slave-trade by Massachusetts was at last effected in 1788. A most flagrant and outrageous case of chusetts.

kidnapping occurred in Boston in the month of February in that year. infamous transaction aroused the public indignation, and all classes united in urging upon the Legislature the passage of effectual laws to prevent the further prosecution of the traffic, and protect the inhabitants of the State against the repetition of similar outrages.

The movement was successful, and on the 26th of March, 1788, the Legislature of Massachusetts passed "An act to prevent the Slave-Trade, and for granting Relief to the Families of such unhappy Persons as may be kidnapped or decoyed away from this Commonwealth." By this law it was enacted "that no citizen of this commonwealth, or other person residing within the same," shall import, transport, buy or sell any of the inhabitants of Africa as slaves or servants for term of years, on penalty of fifty pounds for every person so misused, and two hundred pounds for every vessel fitted out and employed in the traffic. All insurance made on such vessels to be void and of no effect. And to meet the case of kidnapping, when inhabitants were carried off, actions of damage might be brought by their friends—the latter giving bonds to apply the moneys recovered to the use and maintenance of the family of the injured party.

A proviso was added "that this act do not extend to vessels which have already sailed, their owners, factors, or commanders, for and during their present voyage, or to any insurance that shall have been made previous to the passing of the same." How far this proviso may be justly held to be a legislative sanction of the traffic we leave to the reader to decide. It is obvious that the "public sentiment" of Massachusetts in 1788 was not strong enough against the slave trade, even under the atrocious provocation of kidnapping in the streets of Boston, to treat the pirates who had already sailed as they deserved. Rome was not built in a day—neither could the modern Athens rejoice in an anti-slavery Minerva, fresh in an instant from the brain of the almighty "public sentiment" of Massa-

This act was, as we have seen, passed on the 25th of March, 1788. It was accompanied by another act, passed on the following day, hardly less hostile to the negro than this was to slavery—the pioneer of a series of similar acts (though less severe) most unsparing censure.

The Massachusetts Act of March 26, and punishing of Rogues, Vagabonds. common Beggars, and other idle, disorderly and lewd Persons," contains the following very remarkable provision:-

"V. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid Tthe Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled], that no person being an African or Negro, other than a subject of the Emperor of Morocco, or a citizen of some one of the United States (to be evidenced by a certificate from the Secretary of the State of which he shall be a citizen), shall tarry within this Commonwealth for a longer time than two months, and upon complaint made to any Justice of the Peace within this Commonwealth, that any such person has been within the same more than two months, the said Justice shall order the said person to depart out of this Commonwealth, and in case that the said African or Negro shall not depart as aforesaid, any Justice of the Peace within this Commonwealth, upon complaint and proof made that such person has continued within this Commonwealth ten days after notice given him or her to depart as aforesaid, shall commit the said person to any house of correction within the county, there to be kept to hard labor agreeable to the rules and orders of the said house, until the Sessions of the Peace next to be holden within and for the said county; and the master of the said house of correction is hereby required and directed to transmit an attested copy of the warrant of commitment to the said Court, on the first day of their said session, and if upon trial at the said Court, it shall be made to appear that the said person has thus continued within the Commonwealth contrary to the tenor of this act, he or she shall be whipped not exceeding ten stripes, and ordered to depart out of this Commonwealth within ten days: and if he or she shall not so depart, the same process shall be had and punishment inflicted, and so toties earliest classified edition of "The Per-application to "people of color, commonly petual Laws of the Commonwealth of called Mulattoes, presumed to come within Massachusetts," and is not to be found in the intention" of the law. Part I. among those relating to "The Publick and Private Rights of Persons," nor enforcement of this law, which is almost among the "Miscellaneous" Statutes, but as "singular" as the statute itself. In the Matters." We doubt if anything in human legislation can be found which comes nearer branding color as a crime!

By this law, it will be observed that all negroes, resident in Massachusetts, not citizens of some one of the States, were which have subjected the new States to required to depart in two months, on penalty of being apprehended, whipped, and ordered to depart. The process and punish-1788, entitled "An Act for suppressing ment could be renewed every two months. The only contemporary explanation of the design of the law, which we have met with, is to the effect that it was intended to prevent fugitive slaves from resorting to that State, in hopes to obtain freedom, and then being thrown as a dead weight upon that community. Belknap: 1795. A recent writer states that this "enactment was said to have been the work of her [Massachusetts] leading lawyers, who were sufficiently sagacious to foresee the dangerous consequences of the constitutional provision, which, on restoring fugitives from labor, not only threatened to disturb the public peace, but the stability of the sys-Amory's Life of Sullivan, I. 226, We give this illustration of legal sagacity in Massachusetts for what it is worth—although we are satisfied that the statute itself clearly illustrates the intention of those who framed it. Expositio contemporanea est optima.

Realizing the "dead weight" already resting upon them in the body of their own free negroes (though comparatively small in number) they evidently thought it "sagacious" to prevent any addition to it. Future research must ascertain who were "citizens" of Massachusetts in 1788—before we can safely declare that even Massachusetts Negroes, Indians and Mulattoes were exempted from the alternative of exile or the penalties of this statute. The reader will not fail to notice below the arbitrary The edition from which we copy is the and illegal extension of the statute, in its

We have met with one example of the in "Part IV." concerning "Criminal Massachusetts Mercury, Boston, printed by Young and Minns, Printers to the Honorable, the General Court, September 16, 1800, No. 22, Vol. XVI—the following notice occupies a conspicuous place, filling a column of the paper:

"NOTICE TO BLACKS.

The Officers of Police having made return to the Subscriber of the names of the following persons, who are Africans or Negroes, not subjects of the Emperor of Morecco nor citizens of the United States, the same are hereby warned and directed to depart out of this Commonwealth before the 10th day of October next, as they would avoid the pains and penalties of the law in that case provided, which was passed by the Legislature, March 26, 1788.

CHARLES BULFINCH, Superintendent.
BY ORDER AND DIRECTION OF THE SELECTMEN.

OF PORTSMOUTH.

Prince Paterson, Flora Nash, Eliza Cotton.

RHODE ISLAND.

Thomas Nicholas and Hannah Champlin, Nancy Scott, Thomas Gardner, Violet Freeman, Sylvia Gardner, Dolly Peach, Sally Alexander, Philis Nichols, Plato Alderson, Jack Jeffers, Julius Holden, Cuffy Buffum, Hagar Blackburn Polly Gardner, Philis Taylor.

PROVIDENCE.

Dinah Miller, Rhode Allen, Richard Freeman, Nancy Gardner, Silvia Hendrick, Nancy Hall, Elizabeth Freeman, Margaret Harrison.

CONNECTICUT.

Bristol Morandy, Scipio Kent, Phœbe Seamore, Phœbe Johnson, John Cooper, Margaret Russell, Jack Billings.

NEW LONDON.

John Denny, Hannah Burdine, Thomas Burdine.

NEW YORK.

Sally Evens,
Cæsar West and Thomas Peterson,
Henry Sanderson,
Robert Willet,
Mary Atkins,
Amey Spalding,
George Homes,
Abraham Fitch,
Abraham Francis,
Sally Williams,
Rachel Pewnick,
Esther Dove,

Thomas Bostick,
Prince Hayes,
Nancy Hamik,
Peggy Ocamum,
Sally Freeman,
Hannah West,
Thomas Stanton,
Henry Wilson,
Edward Cole,
Polly Brown,
John Johnson,
Prince Kilsbury,
Joseph Hicks,

Elizabeth Francis, William Williams, David Dove, Peter Bayle, Katy Bostick, Margaret Bean, Samuel Benjamin, Primus Hutchinson

PHILADELPHIA.

Mary Smith, Simon Jeffers, Peter Francis, Elizabeth Branch, William Brown, Clarissa Scotland, John Gardner, Fortune Gorden, Richard Allen, Samuel Posey, Prince Wales, Peter Gust, Butterfield Scotland, Cuffy Cummings, Sally Gardner, Samuel Stevens.

BALTIMORE.

Peter Larkin and Stepney Johnson, Jenny Larkin, Anne Melville.

VIRGINIA.

James Scott, Jane Jackson, Oliver Nash, Thomas Thompson, John Evens, Cuffey Cook, Robert Woodson.

NORTH CAROLINA,

James Jurden, Janus Crage, Polly Johnson.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Anthony George,

Peter Cane.

HALIFAX.

Catherine Gould, Cato Small, Richard M'Coy, Charlotte Gould, Philis Cole.

WEST INDIES.

James Morfut and Mary Davis,
Peter Lewis,
Peter Hendrick,
Mary Shoppo,
John Pearce,
Peter Branch,
Rosanna Symonds,
Lewis Vietor,
John Laco,
Peter Jesemy,
David Bartlet,
Joseph Lewis,
John Harrison,
Boston Alexander,

Hannah, his wife, George Powell, Charles Sharp, William Shoppo and Isaac Johnson, Charles Esings, Newell Symonds, Peter George, Lewis Sylvester, Thomas Foster, Rebecca Jesemy, Thomas Grant, Hamet Lewis, Mary Brown.

CAPE FRANCOIS.

Casme Francisco and Mary Fraceway. Nancy, his wife.

AUX CAYES. Susannah Ross.

PORT AU PRINCE.
John Short.

JAMAICA.

Charlotte Morris.

John Robinson.

BERMUDA.

Thomas Williams.

NEW PROVIDENCE. Henry Taylor.

LIVERPOOL.

John Mumford.

AFRICA.

Francis Thompson, Mary Joseph, Samuel Bean, Cato Gardner, Sophia Mitchel, Samuel Blackburn, Joseph Ocamum, John Brown, James Melvile, Hamlet Earl, Charles Mitchel, Samuel Frazier, Tiimothy Philips, FRANCE.

Joseph ——

ISLE OF FRANCE.
Joseph Lovering.

LIST OF INDIANS AND MULATTOES.

The following persons, from several of the United States, being people of color, commonly called Mulattoes, are presumed to come within the intention of the same law, and are accordingly warned and directed to depart out of the Commonwealth before the 10th day of October next:

RHODE ISLAND.

Peter Badger, Waley Green, Kelurah Allen, Silvia Babcock.

PROVIDENCE.

Polly Adams,

Paul Jones.

CONNECTICUT.

John Brown, John Way and Peter Virginia, Lucinda Orange, Britton Doras, Frank Francies. Polly Holland, Nancy Way, Leville Steward, Anna Sprague, Amos Willis,

NEW LONDON. Hannah Potter.

NEW YORK.

Jacob & Nelly Cummings,
John Schumagger,
Peggy Willouby,
Mary Reading,
John Miles,
Betsy Harris,
Susannah Foster,
Mary Thomson,
Lucy Glapcion,

Judeth Chew,
Thomas Willouby,
John Reading,
Charles Brown,
Hannah Williams,
Douglas Brown,
Thomas Burros,
James & Freelove Buck,
Lucy Lewis,

Eliza Williams, Cæsar and Silvia Caton, James and Rebecca Smith, Diana Bayle, ——Thompson,
William Guin.

ALBANY

Elonc Virginia, Lydia Reed, Rebecca Reed, and Abijah Reed, and Abijah Reed, Jr, Betsy Reed.

NEW JERSEY.

Stephen Boadley,

Hannah Victor.

PHILADELPHIA.

Polly Boadley, Hannah Murray, Nancy Principeso, George, Jackson, Moses Long. James Long, Jeremiah Green, David Jackson, William Coak, MARYLAND. Nancy Gust.

BALTIMORE.

John Clark,

Sally Johnson.

VIRGINIA.

Sally Hacker, John Johnson, Anthony Paine, William Hacker, Betsy Guin, Richard, Thomas Steward,
Mary Burk,
Polly Losours,
Lucy Brown.

AFRICA. Nancy Doras."

This notice appears to have been generally published in Boston, and was copied in other cities without the list of names. We have met with it in the Commercial Advertiser of the 20th September, 1800, and the Daily Advertiser, 22d September, 1800, both in New York. Also in the Gazette of the United States and Daily Advertiser of 23d September, 1800, in Philadelphia.

We have seen no comments of the Boston press on the subject, but references to it in the New York and Philadelphia papers hint at the probable cause of this stringent and sweeping application of this "singular" statute.

In the year 1800, the whole country was excited by the discovery of an alleged plot for a general insurrection of negroes at the South. Gabriel, the negro general, was the "hero," though not the only victim. The affair assumed at once a very serious aspect, and the alarm was "awful"

in Virginia and South Carolina. violence of the day was not slow to make they were instructed to prepare, it is peruse of it, and it was doubtless true that haps proper to infer that they considered the principles of Liberty and Equality had the State amply protected by the old law. been in some degree infused into the minds intemperate use of these words by the in 1825, but without alteration of the pro-"fierce democracie" of that day in Virginia may have inspired them with hopes of

But the alarm was not confined to Virginia. Even in Boston fears were expressed and measures of prevention adopted. N. Y. Advertiser, Sept. 26, 1800. The The Gazette of the United States and Daily Advertiser, by C. P. Wayne, Vol. XVIII., Number 2493, Philadelphia, September 23, 1800, copies the "Notice" with these remarks:

"The following notice has been published in the Boston papers: It seems probable, from the nature of the notice, that some suspicions of the design of the negroes are entertained, and we regret to say there is too much cause.

Such was the act, and such was one of its applications.

Additional acts were passed in 1798 and 1801, but this portion was neither modified nor repealed. It appears in the revised edition of 1807, without change.

In 1821, the Legislature of Massachusetts, alarmed by "increase of a species of concerning the admission into the State of of the cargo sold there. free Negroes and Mulattoes.

of Representatives in 1822 refers to the statute of 1788, in these words:

"They [the committee] have already found in the Statute Books of this Commonwealth, a law passed in 1788, regulating the residence in this State of certain persons of color—they believe that this law has never been enforced, and ineffectual as it has proved, they would never have been the authors of placing among the Statutes a law so arbitrary in its principle, and in its operation so little accordant with the institutions, feelings, and practices of the people of this Commonwealth."

The party this act, and reported no new bill such as

It appears again in the revised laws of of the negroes, and that the incautious and 1823. Another additional act was passed vision against negroes; and this statute, "so arbitrary in its principle, and in its operation so little accordant with the institutions, feelings, and practices of the people of the Commonwealth," continued to grace the Statute Book of Massachusetts until the first day of April, 1834, after which time its repeal no longer left it to "public opinion" to regulate its enforcement.— Journal of Commerce, March 17, 1864.

G. R. R.

Notes and Queries.

NOTES.

THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER FOR THE CONFEDERATE STATES.—I have very recently examined one of the copies of the Book of Common Prayer from the cargo of the Anglo-Rebel blockade-runner, Minna, population, which threatened to become captured on the 6th Dec., 1863, off Wilboth injurious and burthensome," and fully mington, by the Government despatchalive to "the necessity of checking" it, ship, Circassian, Capt. Eaton. The prize appointed a committee to report a bill was carried into Boston, and this portion

The book was no doubt printed in Lon-A report of this committee to the House don. I will give you a transcript of the title-page. I do not know whether Jeff. Davis is head of the Church as well as head of the Confederate States. Whoever was employed to correct the book has executed his work about as well as Mr. Davis's other agents; of this I will offer proof below.

The following is the title:—The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments; and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, according to the use "These be good words," but as the of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the committee did not recommend a repeal of Confederate States of America, together with the Psalter or Psalms of David. as to the place where Father Menard was Richmond, Virginia: J. W. Randolph, lost 1863. On the verso of the title, "London: " —Printed by G. E. Eyre and W. Spottis-woode." The imprint of the titles to the metrical Psalms and to the Hymns agree with that of the title to the book; but there is no reference on them to the place The accounts would indicate that he took of printing or to the printers.

The alterations in the book itself occur in the Prayer for the President of the III. 147. Confederate States, etc., in the service of ordaining or consecrating a Bishop, the from Keweenaw Bay. promise of conformity to be taken by the elected Bishop is left unchanged. It still reads, "I do promise conformity and obedience to the Doctrine, Discipline, and Worship of the Protestant Episcopal Church Huron village to which he was proceeding. in the United States of America, etc."

one of the prayers to be used in ships-of- Noquet Islands on Green Bay, and conwar at sea. The following passage is re-|cluding the river to be the Menomomee, I tained: "Preserve us from the dangers of gave, in the History of the Catholic Missions the sea and from the violence of the enemy; that we may be a safeguard unto the United States of America, and a security for such as pass on the seas upon their lawful occasions."

Every one will see at once how peculiarly appropriate it would be to use this form Perrot states it expressly in connection of prayer on board of the Alabama and with Menard's death and previously. the other Confederate privateers.

seen another copy in 12mo., but I have descriptive. A conversation with the Hon. not had the opportunity of examining it. I believe, however, that the two editions correspond in all respects.

J. L.

THE PLACE OF THE DEATH OF FATHER RENÉ MENARD.—Bancroft, in the third It rises in a lake, the journey to which volume of his history, using for the first from Keweenaw would have been long and time the simple narratives of the early mission labors of the Jesuit Fathers, drew runs at first through a marshy tract, and then a picture of singular beauty, which has enters a rough country, the channel being prompted many to read, appreciate, and study the period and the men.

"Bidding farewell to his neophytes and the French," says the eloquent historian, "and to those whom he never more should meet on earth, Menard departed with one attendant for the Bay of Chegoimegon. the route by way of Keweena Lake and portage." History of the United States

The course indicated in the Relations Morning and Evening Prayer, and in the did not seem to me to bear out the conclu-Prayer for Congress. But in the form of sion that he was going to Chegoimegon

> He made a considerable journey to a lake the source of a river which he descended to a portage where he was lost, when within one day's journey of the

I had found statements that led me to A more remarkable oversight occurs in believe that the Hurons were then on the (p. 356), as the locality of his death the rapid of that river.

A subsequent examination of Perrot's Moeurs et Coutumes des Sauvages makes it evident that the Hurons were then not on Noquet Island, but on the Black River. branch of the Wisconsin still bears this The copy I describe is in 16mo; I have name, which its black water makes true and Geo. Gale makes me judge that the Hurons were on this river, and that Menard died on its banks.

The Black River in name tallies with Perrot's account. In character it corresponds with that described in the Relations. toilsome. Here Menard rested. The river embarrassed with granite rocks. occurs at last, and here was apparently Directed to it myself, I made his chapter the portage where Menard was lost. What a volume. In one matter I came to a makes it the more probable, is that a day's conclusion different from his, and this was march below is a bluff commanding the river, evidently an old Indian village site, and recently occupied for a time by the Winnebagoes. It would be exactly the spot for a band of fugitives like these Hurons to plant their temporary village, as it gave them a look-out and protection J. G. SHEA. from attack.

FRANKLIN'S HOUSE AT PASSY .- Among the contributions to the Metropolitan Sanitary Fair was a sketch of the residence occupied by Franklin when at Passy. made by Victor Hugo, and accompanied by the following letter:

"In 1836 I happened to be one day at Passy, at M. Raynouard's, the author of the tragedy of the Knight Templars. He wore his white hair streaming on his shoulders, and I said to him:

"'You wear your hair as Franklin used,

and you look like him.'

"He said to me smiling: 'This may come from the neighborhood,' and he pointed to a house that could be seen from his garden. 'It is there,' said he to me, that Franklin lived in 1778.

"I drew that house, now pulled down. This is the sketch. I believe that this picture of the house of Franklin, at Passy, is the only one in existence. I offer it to the United States Sanitary Commission.

"I am happy that the Sanitary Commission have done me the honor to call upon me, and afford me an opportunity to renew the expression of my heartfelt sympathy for the gallant men who are struggling so gloriously to rid the great American Republic of that sinful system, Slavery.

"VICTOR HUGO.

"HAUTEVILLE HOUSE, 15th March, 1864."

CENTENARIAN IN MAINE. - Mrs. Rebecca Pendleton, probably the oldest person in Maine, died at Northport, a town adjoining the city of Belfast, on the fifth of March, aged one hundred and four years and six months. She was born on Island, but it was broken up by Argal. Cape Elizabeth, in September, 1759. She to the day of her death. When more than had a convent on the St. John's. One a hundred years old, she walked two miles and back on the same day, to attend the funeral of her daughter of eighty years of

BELFAST, MAINE.

THE CAPUCIN MISSIONS IN MAINE. During the autumn of 1863, Mr. W. H. Weeks of Castine, while at work on the road leading to the battery, which the government was then erecting near the mouth of the harbor, upon the site of the old brick battery known as the Lower Fort, found near the fort, and but little below the surface of the ground, a piece of sheet-copper. Not observing anything remarkable on it, he cut off a piece to repair his boat; subsequently, however, he discovered letters; and an inscription, which has been thus rendered, was found:

> 1648: 8 Jun: F. Leo Parisin: Capuc. Miss Posvi hoc fyndtm in hnrem Nræ Dmæ Sanctæ Spei

Some of these letters may not be correct, but the inscription is clear, and the plate was undoubtedly once in the corner-stone of the chapel of our Lady of Holy Hope, in the old French Fort. It runs in English thus:

> 1648. June 8th, I. Friar Leo of Paris, Capucin Missionary laid this corner stone in honor of Our Lady of Holy Hope.

The first French missionary effort on the coast of Maine was that of Rev. Nicholas Aubri, on Neutral Island, in 1604; but the colony soon removed to Port Royal, where he was joined by the Rev. Jesse Fleche. The Jesuit Fathers who came to Port Royal in 1611, attempted in 1613 to found a mission colony on Mount Desert

The two French fishing companies who witnessed the burning of Falmouth, now next obtained rights on the coast of Maine Portland, in 1779. Her faculties, with the sent out priests. The first who came were exception of her hearing, were preserved Reformed Franciscans, or Recollects, who perished in the wilderness in 1623, and from that quarter, ran to his habitation the rest abandoned the field the next year. with Jaques. They burst in the door, and

St. Etienne de la Tour, three Recollect into the muzzle of his musket. Jaques missionaries labored as far west as the asked him if he would "take quarter." Penobscot.

D'Aulney established a Capucin Mission on the Kennebec in 1643, and the Superior residing there had depending on him a hospice on the Penobscot at the old fort near Castine.

The Chapel founded by Father Leo in 1648 was evidently one raised to meet the requirements of the increasing number of French on the coast.

There is no published account of the labors of these Capucins, and we have simply a few detached facts and names.

When the Jesuit Father Druillettes visited the Kennebec in 1646, he found Father Ignatius of Paris as Superior. In of soldiers in boats to a point of land to be 1648, Father Cosmas de Mante held that crossed for the purpose of discovering the office. Father Leo of Paris is not named, movements of the Indians. He told the and was doubtless the chaplain of the Fort. At that time, D'Aulney's establishment was broken up before 1650, and the opinion he received a reproof that was Capucins carried off.

The account of that transaction, as pre- be greatly endangered by ambush."

and his frequent companion in Indian point of land, before he saw an Indian step hunting, came into the Kennebec region from behind a tree and level his gun at ton, to ascend the river and attack the Indian; and if his gun had not missed fire, movement of the detachment was suffi-did before the accurate aim of his enemy. his wigwam endeavored to destroy as Harpswell and there buried. many of his foes as his opportunity would allow. Harman seeing the damage done

In 1630, under the protection of Charles saw Rale in the act of dropping a bullet He replied "None, only what is in the muzzle of my gun." Thereupon Jaques discharged his musket and wounded him mortally. Harman was a witness of the scene, but did not fire. When the Indians saw their spiritual guide was killed they became discouraged. They lessened their exertions at resistance and soon fled, leaving the English masters of their village, which, with its chapel, was immediately committed to the flames. They never returned.

Some time after this event, Jaques was ordered to Bagaduce (Castine), under a colonel with the office of captain. Here he was commissioned to go with a detachment commander that he thought the enterprise would not be prudent. In reply for his equivalent to an imputation on his courage. He said he "would not turn on his heel to LIEUT. BENJAMIN JAQUES, who was save his life;" but that he "knew the the direct agent in the death of Father modes of Indian warfare so well that he Răle at Norridgewock, Me., in 1724, was a saw reasons for believing that the safety native of Harpswell, in the same State. of the soldiers in making the scout would served among his descendants, has been fur-lobeyed the orders, took the men and the nished to the writer by his great-grandson. boats, and landed with his company on the He states that Capt. Johnson Harman shore proposed. They had proceeded but of York, the father-in-law of his ancestor, a short distance into the woods, on the with a body of soldiers, with Capt. Moul-|him. Instantly he did the same to the Indian settlement at Norridgewock. The probably both would have fallen, as he ciently rapid and secret to take the enemy | The Indian fled at once, fearing the attack by surprise. But they availed themselves of the soldiers. Jaques told them they of the very brief notice given them to meet | " would see no more Indians, and might the invaders in a hasty but vigorous con- make their discoveries in safety;" and so flict, in which they were soon defeated. it proved. He lived but a few months Răle was a fighter with the rest; and from afterwards. His remains were taken to Brunovicus.

Maine, April.

LETTER OF BENEDICT ARNOLD.—Philadelphia, March 20, 1780.—Sir:—The President and Council of the State of Pennsylvania having published, and officially transmitted to the different States Sundry Resolutions of theirs, dated Philadelphia, Feb. 3, 1779, containing heavy charges tending to prejudice the minds of my Fellow-Citizens against me, previous to a trial, which with much difficulty I have at length obtained.

The justice due to my own character (and to the Public who have been so greatly deceived) will I trust excuse the liberty I take in transmitting to your Excellency the Proceedings of the Court Martial on my trial, which I must request you will do me the favor to lay before the Council and General Assembly; as I would wish to take off from the minds of those gentlemen every unfavorable impression, which the unprecedented Publication of the President and Council of Pennsylvania may have made, and to convince them that my character has been most cruelly and unjustly traduced.

I have the Honor to be with the greatest Respect Your Excellency most obedient and very humble servant.

B. Arnold.

His Excellency. GOVERNOR CLINTON.

REVOLUTIONARY Pensioners.—(Vol. viii. p. 148.) Jonas Gates, one of the twelve pensioners supposed to have been surviving when the additional pensions were granted, had then been dead some weeks. He died at Chelsea, Vt., 14 January, 1864, aged 99 years, six months, and nine days. He was a native of Barre, Mass., and entered the service at the age of fourteen as waiter to his father, who was a captain. When about seventeen years old he enlisted as a private, but was promoted to the post of orderly sergeant, which rank he held at the close of the war. He also surviving revolutionary pensioner in Ver-

COVERTRY, VT., 27 April, 1864.

Indian Tribes, Chiefs, and Treaties. -The following paper, bearing the above title, and prepared by Hon. Henry S. Baird, an early, intelligent, and respected resident of Green Bay, Wisconsin, was lately read before the Chicago Historical Society. Presenting a compact summary of facts, derived in part from authentic public documents, and in part from the extensive personal information possessed by its author, it may be convenient for reference.

In relation to the "orthography" of the names, Mr. Baird writes: "I will not vouch for its correctness. I take it from treaties; and on reference to them, I find the same names often differently written in different treaties. An Indian language is difficult to write correctly. As there is no Indian alphabet, names are written according to their supposed sound. The Winnebago is the most harsh and guttural of all languages. The Menomonee is softer and more harmonious; but both are very difficult to speak properly by any one who has no Indian blood in his veins.

"The district of country bounded by the Wisconsin River, Lake Michigan, Wolf River, and on both sides of Green Bay, Fox River, and Winnebago Lake, was formerly claimed and occupied principally by the Menomonee and Winnebago tribes of Indians. Each of these tribes, forty years ago, was powerful, and numbered several thousands.

Principal chiefs of the Menomonees.— Oshkosh (The Brave), Kaush-kaw-no-naive (Grizzly Bear), Josette Caron (-A-yaw-mah-taw (Fish Spawn), Osh-kee-na-neur (The Young Man), Pe-wait-enaw (Rain), Che-na-po-mee (One that is looked at), Ke-ma-ni-kin (Little Wave), Ke-shee-o-quo-teur (Flying Cloud), Wa-bose (The Rabbit), Wain-e-saut (One who arranges the circle), Ke-shoh (The Sun), Ma-con-cee-wa-be-no-chee (Bear's Child), A-ca-mut (The Prophet), Shaw-e-no-ge-shick enlisted in the war of 1812, and held a (South Sky), Sho-ne-on (Silver), Shaw-bawlieutenant's commission. He was the last | so (Pale Color), Paw-a-ko-neur (Big Soldier).

Principal chiefs of the Winnebagoes.— Hoo-tshoop (Four Legs), Hay-tay-tshoansarp (Black-Hawk), Karry-man-nee (Walk- at "Winneconnee," on Lake Winneconnee, ing Turtle), Shoank-skaw (White Dog), near Oshkosh, in November, A.D. 1848. Shoank-tshunsk-kaw (Black Wolf), Maunk- Hon. William Medill, then Commissioner hay-raith (Tattooed Breast), Wheank-kaw of Indian Affairs, Commissioner of the (Big Duck), Spoank-ay-paw-kaw (Dog United States. Head), Sar-ray-num-nee (Walking Mat), (Red Waunk-tshay-hee-sootsh Waw-kawn-hoa-noa-nick (Little Snake), land owned by the "Menomonees" was Non-kaw (Wood), Kaw-nee-show (White purchased by the Government. Crow), Hoon-kaw (Chief), Hoo-wawn-ee-kaw (Little Elk), Tshay-ro-tshoan-kaw Man-ah-kee-tshump (Spotted Arm).

essentially different, as may be inferred of South Carolina, and of Scottish parentfrom a former paper on the "North age. He was a Loyalist, and witnessed

American Indians.<sup>3</sup>

Indian title to the lands and domain formerly occupied and owned by these tribes was purchased, or, in popular phrase, "extinguished," were the following:
1. Treaty of Butte des Morts, August

11, 1827, with Chippewas, Menomonees, and Winnebagoes. Lewis Cass and Thomas L.

McKinney, U.S. Commissioners.

2. Treaty of Green Bay, August 25, 1828, with Winnebagoes, Pottawattimees, Chippewas, and Ottawas. Lewis Cass and Pierre Menard, Commissioners.

- Neil, Pierre Menard, and Caleb Atwater, of the Refugee Loyalists in the Province. Commissioners.
- 4. Treaty of Washington, February 8, 1831, with Menomonees. John H. Eaton and Samuel C. Stambaugh, Commissioners.
- 5. Treaty of Fort Armstrong, September 15, 1832, with Winnebagoes. Gen. Scott and John Reynolds, Commissioners.

6. Treaty of Green Bay, October 27,

Porter, Commissioner.

and the Menomonee Nation of Indians, north, boldly penetrated to the extreme concluded at "Cedar Point," on the Fox northern sources of the Mississippi, which River, near Green Bay, on 1st September, he designated as the "Julian" sources, in Governor of Wisconsin, Commissioner of Albany. In the journal of his tour, he the United States.

8. Treaty between the United States and the same Tribe of Indians, concluded

The last are the latest and most impor-Devil), tant, as by them the largest portion of the

Mr. Crawford, the last N. S. Loyal-(Smoker), Morah-tshay-kaw (Little Priest), 1sr.—Mr. Archibald Crawford, who died on Monday last at Musquodobolt Harbor, In character these two tribes were in the 101st year of his age, was a native the first American Revolution; and when The several treaties, by which the that great revolution was consummated, young Crawford and his parents made the best of their way to Nova Scotia, in order to preserve their allegiance to George III. He lived for many years on the Musquodo-bolt River, near Crawford's Falls, where his hospitality was often enjoyed by travellers. From this place he removed to Porter's Lake, where his house was always the home of Presbyterian clergymen officiating there. For the last few years he lived with his grandchildren at Musquodobolt Harbor. His wife, who 3. Treaty of Prairie du Chien, August died about five years ago, was also a loyal-1, 1829, with Winnebagoes. Gen. Mc- ist. Mr. Crawford was probably the last He had a clear recollection of all the stirring times when the great Republic first took its place among the nations.—Halifax Reporter, BELTRAMI, THE DISCOVERER OF THE NORTHERN SOURCE OF THE MISSISSIPPI. -On the morning of the 28th of August. 1832, with Menomonees. Gov. George B. 1829, Beltrami, an ardent Italian, with orter, Commissioner. only an Indian guide, and bois-brule 7. Treaty between the United States voyageur, by way of the Red River of the A.D. 1836. Hon Henry Dodge, then compliment to the esteemed Countess of also describes Lac La Biche, or Elk Lake, now poetically rather than accurately designated Itasca, and says: "It is here, in my opinion, we shall fix the western sources of the Mississippi."

This discoverer, so little known to Americans, was born in Bergamo, and in 1807 was chancellor in one of the districts of Italy. In 1812 he went to Florence and became one of an interesting literary circle in that city, of which the Countess of Albany was a prominent member.

Suspected of "Carbonarism," he became an exile, and visited France, Germany, England, the United States, and Mexico. Later in life he resided for several years near Heidelberg, but at length returned to his beloved Italia, and died at Filotrant in 1855, aged seventy-five years.

Prominent in the public library of Bergamo, there is a finely-executed painting representing Beltrami in a canoe, pushing towards the sources of the Mississippi. A letter just received from Bergamo, dated February 11, and addressed to a gentleman who has given great attention to the topography of the Upper Mississippi, and now on duty at the headquarters of the army, states that the city of Bergamo is about to publish a biographical notice of Beltrami, with a portrait, and that the work will be dedicated to the Historical Society of Minnesota.

This society of the most northern State in the valley of the Mississippi has become favorably known in Europe, through the labors of its members, who have given to the world the "Dakota Grammar and Lexicon," issued by the Smithsonian Institution, and one of the largest works on the language of the aborigines of North America ever published, and also by varions additions to the topography and history of the region west of Lake Superior, printed in its own Annals, and other historical magazines.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME PENNSYLVANIA. Being moved to inquire when, and from whom, and under what circumstances the State received its name, we consulted Day's Historical Collections of Pennsylvania, a simple memorandum: "By the King's order, much against Penn's inclination, the new province was to be called Pennsylvania, in honor of the services of his illustrious father." No particulars were given and no proof of the statement was cited. We opened a book of more research, and found the particulars recorded, with the authority given. It was Hazard's Annals of Pennsylvania, a work which contains, it is believed, the only authentic and circumstantial account of the naming of the province on record. And now see how true is history:

Hazard quotes from official records to show that when the privy council of Charles submitted to him the draft of the charter of the province, "there being a blank left for the name, their lordships agree to leave the nomination of it to the King." day after the charter was granted to Penn, he wrote a letter to a certain Robert Turner, in which he gives the particulars of The essential the naming of his province. parts of that letter we quote:

* * Know that after many waitings. watchings, solicitings, and disputes in council, this day my country was confirmed to me under the great seal of England, with large powers and privileges, by the name of Pennsylvania, a name the King would give it in honor of my father. I chose New Wales, being a pretty hilly country; but Penn being Welsh for a head, as Penmanmoire in Wales, and Penrith in Cumberland, and Penn in Buckinghamshire, the highest land in England, called this Pennsylvania, which is the high or head woodlands; for I proposed, when the Secretary, a Welshman, refused to have it called New Wales, Sylvania, and they added Penn to it, and though I much opposed it and went to the King to have it struck out and altered, he said it was past, and would take it upon him; nor could twenty guineas move the under-secretaries to vary the name, for I feared lest it should be looked on as a vanity in me. and not as a respect in the King, as it truly was, to my father, whom he often mentions with praise."

Although it may appear irreverent in us to say so, we cannot resist the temptation to remark that the great Quaker seems to have been a perfect master of the art of "how not to do it." At first sight the reader will probably conclude, as we did, that to the King do we owe the whole of the name of our State; but a second look very good compilation, and found only this | will convince him that we are indebted to Penn for the Sylvania portion of it. So den, etc. Why not New Wales and New much seems to be clear and unquestionable. Welshmen! Now, from whom came the prefix Penn? ful analysis of its meaning. Wales, Penn, as we have seen, proposed make the Elm-Tree treaty. Sylvania, and immediately afterwards rethe under-secretaries to omit the prefix, Penn! which he would hardly have done if the King had ordered it to be inserted. far the evidence points from the King. But Penn does not forget himself, and accustomed to attend the sessions of Constraightway proceeds to give evidence on the other side—"for I feared lest it should failed to notice at the right of the Speaker be looked on as a vanity in me, and not as a tall, slim, pale-faced, bright-looking lad, a respect in the King, as it truly was, to who gradually grew up into manhood, and my father." the naming of our State. That the King's was that of "Speaker's page." No matter privy council, in submitting to his majesty what party was in power in Congress, the draft of the charter of the province, left to him the selection of a name therefor, Hazard expressly states and proves assistant. Standing just at the Speaker's before giving the Turner letter; but that elbow, with his arm leaning upon the desk the King exercised the privilege is not and his chin resting upon his hand, which proved from that letter, nor from anything was between the Speaker and the audience, else in Hazard's book.

the general subject. Inappropriate and during many sessions of Congress, the uneuphonious as would have been the name prompter of Boyd, Banks, Orr, Penningby which Penn first proposed to call our ton, Grow, and Colfax. It is said he knew State—namely, New Wales—there was more of parliamentary law than any man nevertheless ample precedent for its use. in America. And he knew every member The impulse to prefix new to the names of of the House in all these Congresses; it provinces and towns was a strong one with our colonial forefathers. There were New No Speaker could get along without such England, New Netherlands, New Amster- an assistance at first. When Pennington dam, New York, New Jersey, New Swe-was Speaker a good portion of all the

The charter of the province of Pennsyl-That is not so clear. Penn having at first vania was granted to William Penn in constated with much positiveness that "the sideration of a debt of £16,000 due by the King would give" to the province "the King to his father at the time of his death. name of Pennsylvania," and having sub-Sir William Penn, the father, had been an sequently stated that he proposed Sylva- admiral of distinction in the British navy nia, we naturally hesitate to receive the and a warm personal friend of his majesty. remainder of his statement without a care- The son, therefore, in reality paid nothing Failing to out of his own pocket, as we say, for his obtain the adoption of the name of New province, except the sum it cost him to Penn's fears that the name of Pennsylmarks that "they added Penn to it." To vania would be attributed to a desire on whom does the term "they" refer? There his part to perpetuate his own name in are three considerations which point to the that of his province, have been realized in secretary and his assistants as the persons the popular opinion of the day. But how meant. First, if Penn had meant the many pioneers of civilization who build King it is to be presumed that he would towns and found cities in these latter days have said so; secondly, the term is plural, —there are no longer any provinces to be not singular; thirdly, Penn offered to bribe chartered—reflect the modesty of William

THE LATE THADDEUS MORRICE, THE SPEAKER'S PAGE.—No one who has been gress during the past fifteen years has And this is the history of still retained his position and title, which Thad. Morrice was retained. Every new Speaker found him an almost indispensable in that attitude of whispering to the We add a remark or two appropriate to Speaker, the faithful Thaddeus has stood words he uttered were literally put into his ear by Thad. He did not know onequarter of the members even by sight, and was sadly deficient in parliamentary law. When any member arose he would say, "the gentleman from," generally without the least idea what State he was to name, but so prompt was Thad. to give it, and so unobserved in doing so, that not one in a hundred who was not cognisant of the process would imagine but what Pennington knew all the members. And many and many a time the old man would commence the statement of a question, not knowing how he was to finish his sentence, which was furnished and finished by the youthful parliamentarian at his elbow.

OLD HOUSE IN BOSTON.—One of the most noted landmarks in our city is about to disappear. The ancient building which has stood for nearly one hundred and fifty years at the corner of Water and Washington streets, is doomed. Workmen are now at work upon it, and it is to be taken down, and in a few days it will be numbered with the things that were. It is without doubt the oldest building now standing in its original state on Washington street, it having been built in 1715-16. Its dilapidated condition at the present time renders it an event not to be regretted. except by a certain few, who in their zeal for the preservation of the monuments of the past, seem to forget what is due to the present age. If such persons could always have had their way, what a queer place Boston would be now! There are reminiscences relating to this old building and its associations with the newspaper press in this city, as well as with the printing business generally, that may not be uninteresting.

The estate formerly belonged to one Enoch Greenleaf, saddler, who, in 1709, owned seventy-one feet on Washington street, north of Water street, and included the site of the Journal building that now is, and that now occupied by Whittemore's book store.

In April, 1716, Greenleaf sold this estate, measuring twenty-four feet on Cornhill great distinction in the Province. The street, as it was then called, to Thomas paper was more than half filled with moral Debuke, for £800. Debuke was a butcher, and had for a long time occupied part of the premises—his slaughter-house was in the rear. In June, same year, he mortgaged it to John Cutler, surgeon, for £400 -including in the description "my new built messuage," &c. This fixes the date of the erection. In front it was used as a butcher's-shop, by Mr. Debuke; and for a long time after his death a ponderous hook and staple were to be seen affixed to one of the principal beams, upon which it was said he used to hang his slaughtered cattle. He resided there till his death. In 1731 it was sold by his heirs, Thomas and Jemima Debuke, to James Bowdoin, for "£1200 good public bills of credit"—he to assume the payment of a mortgage of £460 to one John Valentine.

In June, 1744, Bowdoin sold the estate to Thomas Fleet, for £650, lawful money, equal to $2167 67. Mr Fleet was a printer, and had formerly carried on his business in Pudding lane, now Devonshire street. He had, however, occupied these premises as a tenant since 1731. He had designated the building as the "Heart and Crown," in Cornhill—the emblems of which were displayed from the outer walls. This was a common practice in those days, the streets not being numbered. "The Three Kings"—"The Three Nuns"—The Three Fans"—and the "Brazen Head," were all in the immediate vicinity.

The printing office was located in the upper rooms of the building; the front chamber was fitted up as a "Vendue" or auction-room, and was used for that purpose many years; and on the lower floor was a bookstore; while his family occupied the other parts of the house.

For more than forty years a weekly newspaper was issued from this place. The first was the "Weekly Rehearsal," the fifth newspaper established in Boston; the first number, dated "Monday, September 27, 1731," and "printed by J. Draper, for the Author." The Author was Jeremy Gridley, a young man of fine literary acquirements, who, in after life, attained to great distinction in the Province. The paper was more than half filled with moral and entertaining essays, which were good specimens of the kind of writing that was popular in the times of the "Tatler," "Guardian," and "Spectator." It did not succeed, however, according to his wishes, and he soon retired from the concern, and in 1733 it fell into the hands of Thomas Fleet, who had for some time been the printer, and was interested in the publication. He now became sole proprietor. The "Rehearsal" was continued by him till August, 1735, when its publication was brought to a close—to be succeeded by " The Boston Evening Post," of which Mr. Fleet was sole editor and proprietor as well as printer and publisher. The Evening Post soon became the most popular of the Boston newspapers, and was conducted in an able and independent manner.

Mr. Fleet was a man of more than ordinary talent, well versed in the ways of the world, and of great wit and humor; of these he frequently furnished specimens in editorial paragraphs and advertisements. He was also well able to defend himself in any controversy in which he was engaged, whether secular or religious, as the columns of his paper abundantly testify.

He died in July, 1758, in the seventythird year of his age. The Evening Post was continued by his sons, Thomas and John Fleet, and conducted with equal ability till April, 1775, when it was discontinued by order of General Howe. As all insignia of royalty had become unpopular at this time, the Crown was stricken from their sign and the Bible put in its place; and the "Bible and Heart" soon became equally as well known as the "Heart and Crown" previously had been. The printing business generally was also carried on by them, and of which they had always enjoyed a large share. For more than twenty years, from 1779 to 1801, "Fleet's Pocket Almanac and Register"—a very useful manual of nearly two hundred pages-was compiled and published by them, and met with extensive sales. It afterwards passed into the hands of Manning and Loring, and John West.

aged 65 years. He was never married. John Fleet died in 1806, aged 72, leaving several children; one of them, Thomas Fleet, a printer, was connected in business with his father, but relinquished it soon after his father's death, or in 1809, when the family vacated the premises and removed to another location. Thus, for a period of seventy-eight years, the Fleets, father, sons and grandson, conducted the printing business in this same venerable building, well known in times past as the "Heart and Crown," and the "Bible and Heart," in Cornhill, but now known simply as the corner of Water and Washington The estate is still in possession of streets. the family.

Until a few years, comparatively, it continued to be used as a dwelling by many families, and for various kinds of business down to the present time; but no one person has occupied the premises so long as to have become identified with the building, or the building with them. Although it has stood so many years, it seems to have undergone no material alteration in its outward appearance, and may therefore be considered a fair specimen of the style of building a century and a half ago. The walls appear frail, and in danger of falling, and have more than once been complained of to the city government,-but examination by competent persons appointed for the purpose has resulted each time in the opinion that they were as firm as when first built; the proof of this, however, will be ascertained in a few days.

A new structure will soon rise upon the site, and being from plans drawn and under the superintendence of B. F. Dwight, Esq., the well known architect, is a sufficient guaranty that it will be worthy the location, an ornament to the city, and an honor to all parties concerned.—Boston Transcript.

How Tecumsen was Killed.—The Western Christian Advocate recently contained an obituary notice of Isaac Hamblin, Sen., who died at his residence, near Bloomfield, Ind., a few months since, aged Thomas Fleet, the son, died in 1797, about eighty-six years. Mr. Hamblin was Thames, and the writer gives the following and running off to join a neighboring in which Tecumseh was killed:

from Colonel Johnson when he fell, and in them. When I discovered the record of full view, and saw the whole of that part its being an artificial work, a natural but of the battle. He was well acquainted groundless fear was excited that it would with Tecumseh, having seen him before do harm to publish the truth concerning it. the war, and having been a prisoner seventeen days, and received many a cursing from him. He thinks that Tecumseh thought Johnson was Harrison, as he often to designate the place. Shaw soon after heard the chief swear he would have died, but the committee suggested the Harrison's scalp, and seemed to have a measure of forming this new stream, which special hatred towards him. Johnson's is recorded in these words: horse fell under him, himself being also deeply wounded; in the fall he lost his that a ditch shall be dug at common sword, his large pistols were empty, and charge, through upper Charles Meadow he was entangled with his horse on the into East Brook, that it may both be a ground. Tecumseh had fired his rifle at partition fence in the same, and also may him, and when he saw him fall, he threw form a suitable course into a water mill, down his gun and bounded forward like a that it shall be found fitting to set a mill tiger, sure of his prey. Johnson had only upon in the opinion of a workman to be a side pistol ready for use. He aimed at employed for that purpose. the chief over the head of the horse, and shot him near the centre of his forehead. When the ball struck it seemed to him that the Indian jumped with his head full fifteen feet into the air. As soon as he struck the ground a little Frenchman ran his bayonet into him, and pinned him fast to the ground.

An Early Canal (vol. viii. p. 114).— Worthington, in his History of Dedham, for this stream has been preserved in one p. 12, gives the following account of a family, which, from fear of consequences, canal constructed soon after the settlement has refrained from divulging the fact." of the Massachusetts Colony. If his statements are to be relied upon, this canal was gentleman well versed in the history of your March number.

"About a quarter of a mile north of the is certainly worth investigating. new Court-House in Dedham, Mother Brook starts out of Charles River and runs in a proper and direct course round the highlands near the village, and then, at the only place where it could find a passage, goes easterly and joins the Nepouset a man of deep piety and unquestionable two rivers five mill seats of great value. veracity. He was in the battle of the This stream, thus leaving its principal bed as his statement in regard to the manner stream, has been represented as a natural curiosity; at least the inhabitants have no He says he was standing but a few feet knowledge of its having been caused by Abraham Shaw had been encouraged to build a water mill in the first year of the settlement, and a committee was appointed

'28th day, 1st month, 1639. Ordered

"The water-mill was soon after built, as we shall see hereafter. The source of East Brook was more than one hundred yards east of the Norfolk and Bristol Turnpike, where it crosses the stream. At this point a curious observer may see the truth of this account in the original state of the ground; he will in vain seek for any natural bed of this stream. In addition to this evidence, the tradition of cutting the canal

I remember hearing, several years ago, a dug about a century before that in the Dedham, Mass., express strong doubts of County of Orange, N. Y., mentioned in Mother Brook being an artificial work, but do not recollect his reasons. The subject Boston.

QUERIES.

House where Hamilton died.—"The River, forming in its course between the house in which General Alexander Hamilton breathed his last is still standing on the north-west corner of Eighth Avenue and Eighteenth street."—Evening Post, March 25th.

Is not this an error?

A large modern edifice now occupies the whole of that corner. On the northeast corner is a house with modern brick front, while the main body of the building is evidently of a much more ancient construction. But it has been generally understood that Hamilton was taken from the boat which bore him from Weehawken, to the house of his friend, William Bayard, where he died. Did not Mr. Bayard live at or near the foot of the present Thirteenth street?

Alsop, Boerum, Haring, Low.—Can any reader give me information respecting the living descendants of the late John Alsop, Simon Boerum, John Haring, or Isaac Low, who represented this State in the Continental Congress—their names, present addresses, &c.

ALBANY.

MAYOR JOHN WHISTLER.—Where can I find a fuller account of this officer than the necessarily brief statements of facts given by Gardiner in his dictionary of the army?

H. J. R.

REPLIES.

Henry Francisco.—(vol. viii. p. 78.) His. Mag., Feb. 1864.—An intelligent resident of this city states, that one "Francisco" held the plough at one of the first agricultural fairs in Washington County, N. Y., about the year 1820, and was there spoken of as "the oldest man in America."

The same informant adds, that in November, 1824, he became slightly acquainted with a Mr. Francisco Tyler, of one of the Masonic Lodges in Cincinnati, Ohio, who, during a brief conversation, informed him that he was the youngest son of Henry Francisco, of or near Whitehall, N. Y., and that his father was then deceased.

The records of the agricultural fair referred to, as also inquiries at Cincinnati, Ohio, may throw some light upon the American patriarch of the nineteenth century.

CHICAGO.

A STATUE ON THE BATTERY, NEW YORK.—(vol. viii. p. 154).—I recollect having seen an equestrian statue of Washington or Jackson on the Battery about twenty-five years ago, but if memory serves, it was a plaster model. It remained there some time, until sharpshooting youth became too daring or expert for its safety. I think one knocked off the index finger pointing to victory or in a better direction.

ANCHOR.

Societies and their Proceedings.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The Massachusetts Historical Society.—
Boston, April 14.—The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society was held on the 14th, the President, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, in the chair. The attendance was uncommonly large. The President, at the conclusion of the usual monthly business, thus referred to the proposed Shakspeare commemoration:

You will hardly need to be reminded, gentlemen, that you are now within a few days of the great Tercentenary Commemoration of the birthday of Shakspeare; and though our society has made no arrangements for any formal observance of the day, we can none of us be insensible to the interest of the occasion.

It is eminently appropriate that the principal celebration of the event should take place in the land and on the spot where it occurred; and we shall look eagerly for the reports of what shall be said and done at Stratford-upon-Avon on the successive days which have been designated for the commemoration. Our own land is, unhappily, hardly in a condition for engaging in the festivities of such an anniversary with all the zeal and heartiness it is so well calculated to excite. Yet we all feel that it might well become us to take a part in the jubilee. We all feel that, as the descendants of English ancestors who were cotemporary with Shakspeare, we have a full share both in the large inheritance of his fame, and in the world's great debt to his memory.

We do not forget that he had finished his marvellous work, and gone to his rest four years before the Pilgrim Fathers landed at Plymouth Rock: fourteen years before the Massachusetts

Company embarked at Southampton.

We do not forget that it was the wreck of Sir George Somers in the Bermudas in 1609, when on his way to Virginia for the settlement of an American Colony, which suggested the scene and some of the most striking incidents for that one uncertain tradition. And so it happens that we of his dramas which stands first in his printed know least of him of whom we should all desire volumes, and which, for the sublimity of its conceptions and the exquisite beauty of its language, is second to nothing which he ever wrote.

It is interesting to us to remember, too, that the son of the same Earl of Southampton, who was Shakspeare's earliest patron and especial friend, and to whom he dedicated his first poem, was among the best friends of some of our own

New England colonies.

But, above all, we cannot forget the inexhaustible wealth which Shakspeare has contributed to that English Literature, which, down to the period of our National Independence, certainly, we have a right to speak of as our literature, and to that English language, which, thank Heaven, is ours, and will be ours for ever.

Nor can we fail, as an Historical Society, to remember Shakspeare as an historian as well as a dramatist and poet. The original title of his collected works, as published successively in 1623, 1632, 1664, and 1685, was "Mr. William Shakspeare's Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies." And what historian has ever done so much as he to give life and individuality to the great characters which he portrays, or to make the events which he describes familiar as household words for ever? It may be that he was not always exact in following the old chronicles of Hollinshed, or that he may have sometimes indulged a poetic license in dressing his figures for the stage. Yet no one will doubt that the common mind of the last two centuries has owed its most vivid impressions—I had almost said its only impressions-of the Richards and the Henries, of Macbeth and Hamlet, of King Lear and King John-to say nothing of Julius Cæsar and Mark Antony-to the historical dramas of Shakspeare.

Unhappily he that has given us so many grand delineations of others has left but few records or Even the day of his birth, which is about to be celebrated, is but a matter of inference; it is only known, certainly, as the day of his death. We know the date of his baptism of Shakspeare, we gladly avail ourselves of the born and where he was buried. We know that he married Anne Hathaway, and had three children. We know that he went to London, wrote plays, and helped to perform them at the Globe and the Blackfryers. We know that he returned to Stratford-upon-Avon, made a will, "commending his soul into the hands of God his creator, hoping and assuredly believing, through the only merits of Jesus Christ his Saviour, to be made partaker of life everlasting," and soon afterwards died at fifty-two years of age

Almost everything else is inference, conjecture, to know most. Not one familiar letter, not one authentic conversation, hardly a domestic incident. Only three or four known autographs, and those but signatures. Not a scrap of his original manuscript, a single line of which would outsell the collected autographs of all the monarchs of the world; not a scrap of those priceless manuscripts, though the players must have had them all when they said, in their preface to the first edition of his works, that "his mind and hand went together; and that what he thought he uttered with that easiness that we have scarce received from him a blot in his papers."

And this brings before us a fact most important to his character. We know that so insensible was he to the worth of his own writings, or so indifferent to their fate, that he never collected or revised them for publication, and that it was seven years after his death before they entered upon that world-wide career of immortality which the press and the stage, the art and the literature of almost every land beneath the sun, have since united to secure for them, and which they seem destined to enjoy, generation after generation, age after age, above all other writings except the Holy Scriptures.

Nor would we willingly forget that the only epithets coupled with his name by his cotem-poraries and friends were, "Our gentle Shak-speare"—"Our worthy Shakspeare"—"Our beloved Shakspeare."

But it is not my purpose, gentlemen-even were it in my power—to forestall the eloquent eulogies which will be pronounced on the great English Dramatist, at home and abroad, during the approaching Commemoration Week. I only designed by these few remarks to prepare the way for the following resolution, which your Standing Committee have authorized me to submit for your adoption:

Resolved, By the Massachusetts Historical Society, that in view of the near approach of the and of his funeral. We know where he was opportunity afforded us by this, our Seventy-third Annual Meeting, to enter upon our records genius of that marvellous man; of our gratitude proud of it, and try to improve it. One of the to God for the matchless gifts with which he consequences of this change has been the estamankind; of our deep sense of the inexhaustible the attractions of our city as a place of residence riches which his writings have added to the for persons of taste and culture. Our present literature and the language which were the birthright of our fathers, and which are ours by inheritance; and of our hearty sympathy with all those, whether in Old England, in our own country, or in any other part of the world, who shall unite in celebrating so memorable a nativity.

The resolution was unanimously adopted. The reports of the Standing Committee, the Librarian, and the Treasurer were read.

After the transaction of some private business the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing year:-

President, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, LL.D.; Vice-Presidents, Jared Sparks, LL.D., Colonel Thomas Aspinwall, A.M.; Recording Secretary, Charles Deane, A.M. (in place of Rev. Chandler Robbins); Corresponding Secretary, Rev. Chandler Robbins, D.D. (in place of Joseph Willard, who declined a re-election); Treasurer, Hon. Richard Frothingham, A.M.; Librarian, Thomas C. Amory, jr., A.M. (in place of Dr. Nathaniel B. Shurtleff, who declined a re-election); Cabinet Keeper, Samuel A. Green, M.D.; Standing Committee, William G. Brooks, esq., Rev. George E. Ellis, D.D., Horace Gray, jr., A.M., Charles E. Norton, A.M., Rev. Edward E. Hale, A.M.

NEW YORK.

LONG ISLAND HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—A Sketch of its Origin, Progress, and Position. Ten years ago it was justly said of Brooklyn that it was merely a dormitory for New York business men. Thousands of residents of Brooklyn—citizens of Brooklyn they could not be called, for they exercised none of the most cherished privileges of citizenship here—knew and cared nothing about our local affairs, took no in- establish, and this meeting does found and estaterest in local institutions, except their own blish the 'Long Island Historical Society,' whose churches. Brooklyn was called the City or Churches probably because it had no other institutions. Something had been done for the cause national, civil, ecclesiastical, and literary history of education, but that had its origin in a charita- of the United States, the State of New York, ble bequest, and was not an evidence of public and, more particularly, of the counties, cities, spirit. We had a few scattered literary societowns, and villages of Long Island." ties, which lingered along in a feeble condition,, no place of public amusement; a lecture-room, and a second rate ball-room or two, limited our facilities for providing anything else in the shape adopted, the Society duly formed, and thirtyof a public entertainment.

We have, happily, changed all that. People an expression of profound reverence for the who reside here begin to own Brooklyn, feel was endowed for the instruction and delight of blishment of various institutions which enhance object is to sketch the most recent of these institutions, the Long Island Historical Society. The growth of this Society has been remarkable; any person stepping into its well furnished rooms, looking through the amply stocked library and museum, not acquainted with the facts, would scarcely believe that this Society is hardly a year old.

The first movement towards the formation of this Society was the issuing of a circular dated Feb. 14, 1863, which says: "The time has arrived when the city of Brooklyn should found and foster institutions-religious, historical, literary, scientific, educational, and humanitarianbeyond the scope of former undertakings. As one of these, a Historical Society, associated with our peculiar geographical position, naturally suggests itself." The details of the proposed Societv are more fully set forth as follows: To call out the recollections of the living, who will soon pass away, drawing public records and private writings from their concealment, having a fit place for the collection and deposit of trophies. medals, and historic materials, and also for conversations and lectures upon historic subjects, it cannot be doubted that much valuable knowledge will be saved and communicated which would otherwise be lost.

This call was signed by representatives of the three counties on the Island, gentlemen whose names had been long identified with our public institutions and had contributed to their success. The first meeting was held in the Hamilton Buildings, corner of Court and Joralemon streets; it was well attended, and there was a deep interest manifested in the movement.

A resolution offered by Mr. A. J. Spooner was unanimously adopted, "declaring that the time had arrived when Brooklyn should found and objects shall be to discover, procure, and preserve whatever may relate to general history, to the

A committee on by-laws was then appointed, which in one week from that date drew up and presented a constitution and by-laws which were one members enrolled that evening (March 10).

rooms was engaged in the Hamilton Buildings; of May last the Society made its public débût at Lawrence Smith, Wm. S. Pelletreau, Esq. the Academy of Music, when the Rev. R. S. Storrs, D.D., read his address on the "Life, Character, and Services of the late General O. M. Mitchell."

Since that date, the progress of the Society in the acquisition of literary treasures, as well as in the increase of its membership and its consequent influence, has been rapid and brilliant to a degree hitherto unequalled in the history of similar in-Its roll of members, already numbering more than 500, is rapidly increasing by the addition of a class of citizens whose character, social position, and high cultivation, form a sure guarantee of the future prosperity and permanence of the Society. Its library now comprises (principally by donation) more than 10,000 distinct works, of which over 6,500 are bound volumes—the whole forming a collection of rare interest and value, and, in some departments, already superior to any other collection in the The liberality of several of our well known citizens has further secured the foundation, on a broad and liberal basis, of certain spealso adorned the walls with the attractions of several fine portraits, paintings, etc.

In addition to the library there is a collection of curiosities and relics, embracing over three hundred specimens, many of rare interest, and nearly all pertaining to Long Island. Nearly all these articles were donated to the Society. They were in possession of descendants of the oldest settlers on the Island, and the Society has been looked upon with great favor by the old families, who have cheerfully contributed these relics to enrich its collection.

GOVERNMENT OF THE SOCIETY.—The Society has a set of officers similar to all other organizations -a President, Vice-President, Secretary, etc., also a Board of three councillors from each county on the Island; likewise a Board of twenty-five directors, and the necessary com-

The following are the present officers of the Society:

President—J. Carson Brevoort. First Vice-President—John Greenwood. Second Vice-President—Charles E. West, Foreign Corresp. Sec'y—Henry C. Murphy, Home Corresp. Sec'y—John Winslow. Recording Secretary—A. Cooke Hull, Treasurer-Charles Congdon. Librarian—Henry R. Stiles.

Counsellors—King's County—Hon. John A.

The memberships rapidly increased; a suite of Queens County—Wm. Cullen Bryant, Esq., Hon. John A. King, Rich. C. McCormick, Esq. a library speedily accumulated; and on the 7th folk County - Hon. Selah B. Strong, Hon. J.

> The Society comprises Resident, Corresponding, and Honorary Members, the first being residents on Long Island, the second and third residents elsewhere. The initiation fee is $5, with $3 per annum for dues, or the payment of $25 secures a life-membership.

The rooms of the Society, situated on the second floor of the Hamilton Building, on the corner of Court and Joralemon streets, are five in number. First, the lecture-room, a very comfortably furnished apartment, with desk and platform for lecture, will seat 175 persons, and by throwing open the back room, 250 can be seated so as to see and hear all that is going on.

The second room serves as an office for the librarian, and students' room. The third room is devoted to curiosities and relics, books of general literature, and European history. The fourth room contains the collection of works on United States political history. The fifth is a readingroom, where may be found the local newspapers and current publications on file.

The library contains many works of great cial departments of historical research, and has merit, and the most complete historical collection to be found anywhere. The library has been very handsomely endowed by several of our liberal and public-spirited citizens. Mr. Charles Storrs has contributed a fund of $500 for the purchase of English County and Local Histories. and works of Topography illustrative of the early colonization of America, which have already been purchased and are on their way from England. Mr. S. B. Caldwell has since added $100 to this fund.

Mr. Franklin B. Woodruff has given $500 for the purchase of works on Voyages of Discovery, illustrative of the discovery of America and the extension of commerce.

Mr. Henry Sheldon has donated $1,250, to be applied, $750 for historic paintings and portraits. $500 for books of art.

Another gentleman, too modest to see his name in print, has commenced a fund for the purchase of works on Heraldry.

Still another gentleman, reticent of fame, is now purchasing in Paris for the Society a valuable collection of French historical works on America.

Mr. S. B. Chittenden, whose public-spirited generosity embraces all things, gave, in October last, a valuable set of Congressional documents, embracing 800 volumes, collected by the late Hon. Ashbury Dickens, of Washington.

The library contains also a collection of works Lott, Francis Vinton, D.D., Teunis G. Bergen, Esq. on American genealogy, and is very rich in American local history; some four hundred volumes of newspapers, bound and unbound, and a collection of pamphlets and other publications on the Rebellion. But for fuller particulars we must refer our readers to the catalogue, or to the courteous librarian, Dr. Stiles, who is an enthusiast in his vocation, and takes a pleasure in imparting information to visitors.

CURIOSITIES AND RELICS.—As we have before mentioned, nearly all the curiosities and relics belong to Long Island, and they have been judiciously selected. There is no accumulation of rubbish; every specimen possesses an individual interest. The recent Sanitary Fair collected together many rare and curious things, many of which were purchased and presented to the Historical Society by its members.

There is a fine collection of autographs, and a beginning has been made towards a numismatic collection; and the Society already possesses several hundred coins and medals of great variety. Zoology has not been entirely neglected; over the librarian's desk we notice, as we enter, a fine specimen of the grey or white owl, a native of Queens county, now a very rare bird on the

We can notice but a few of the more important specimens in the museum department, which, better than anything that could be written, illustrates the "olden times" of Long Island. Here are specimens of the old Dutch tiles in blue, purple, and white, with Scriptural illustration, Holland landscapes, etc.; the pewter platters, oldfashioned chair and spinning-wheel, bed-hangings, and other domestic articles. There are also many Indian relics, a copper axe-head, the stone apparatus for grinding corn, etc., all found on Long Island.

A specimen of early Brooklyn manufactures is given by a glass bottle, the first one manufactured at a glass works started in 1754 near the site of the present glass works in State street. This enterprise, we are informed, was brought to an untimely end for want of sand-that is, the right kind of sand.

There is a wooden gun rack, used in the first meeting-house on Long Island. This is a rather curious piece of furniture for a church, but it was The rascally Indians necessary in those times. were no respecters of the Sabbath, and, learning the devout character of our ancestors, often attempted to surprise them at their devotions. So the male members of the congregation took their guns to church with them, and put them up in these racks, as we hang up our hats and overcoats; and it was no uncommon thing for the dominie to be cut short in the middle of his ser-of the brethren to get a shot at the Red Skins. Let our church folks be thankful that their lot has fallen in more peaceful times.

Next of interest in the martial line, though not a relic of the past, but a painful reminder of the present unhappy condition of our country, we find the battle-flags of the First Long Island Regiment. Borne on many a hard contested field ever in van, they are mementoes of the valor of Long Island's sons—an evidence that they are worthy descendants of the brave old settlers who first disputed with the Indians the possession of the soil, and then consecrated it with their blood to freedom in the revolutionary struggle.

A more pleasing relic of revolutionary times is a set of bed-hangings embroidered by a lady of Bridgehampton, Long Island. This lady had a patriotic disgust of the Britishers, and she caricatured their army in embroidery for her own entertainment. The figures are exceedingly grotesque, and afford much amusement to the visitor of the museum.

An iron "back-plate" of a fireplace, bearing the royal arms and the date of casting, 1704, taken from one of our old mansions; and a brass pepper-box of ample dimensions, brought from Zivol, in the province of Overyssel, Holland, by Garret Cornelius Van Duyn, who emigrated in 1649, are among the most curious of the domestic relics.

The Communion cup used in the Old Dutch Church in Bushwick, in 1708, is presented here. Engraved on it are some wise axioms: "Speak what is true—eat what is well done—drink what is pure."

The most interesting natural curiosity is a large stone bearing the distinct imprint of a human foot. This was found at Fort Pond, near Montauk Point. It attracted the notice of some of the earliest settlers of that part of the Island. The Indians regarded it with veneration, and had a legend about it to the effect that on this spot the Evil Spirit and the Good Spirit had a desperate struggle, in which, as in all proper works of fiction, the Evil One got the worst of it, and in despair he jumped from this stone into the pool below and disappeared, and was never seen in body or spirit again, but left the measure of his foot indelibly impressed on this boulder that he might live in the memory of future generations.

A piece of the genuine Plymouth Rock is also embraced in the collection.

One of our religious sects will be particularly interested in a curious memento of their celebrated preacher, the Rev. George Whitfield. It is a simple pane of glass, with four words scratched upon its surface, the history of which is given as follows: During his visit to this country in 1765, mon by a rush for the gun rack and a stampede | Whitfield visited Southold, Long Island, and was lodged at the house of one Thomas Fanning, who was well provided with worldly treasures, but lacked what his worthy guest preferred to all besides, an "upright heart and pure." Whitfield wrote with a diamond upon a pane of glass in his bedroom window these words: "One thing is needful." The house passed through many hands, was altered and repaired; every other pane of glass in the house was broken and replaced at some time or another, but this one represerve it for the edification of future generations of the followers of the great apostle of Methodism.

By way of variety there is a collection of small

Egyptian curiosities.

Portraits.—The Society has a few valuable historical portraits, the commencement of a col-

The walls of the lecture-room are ornamented with the principal pictures. First, a portrait of General Warren, who fell at Bunker Hill, painted by Copley, father of the late Lord Lyndhurst. A portrait of De Witt Clinton, by Ingham. A portrait of Commodore Truxton, of Long Island, by Otis, 1817. These three paintings were purchased from the Sheldon fund. Two others have been purchased and will be shortly added to the collection.

Opposite are fine portraits of Generals Banks and Meade, presented to the Society by Mr. H.

Near the door is a portrait of Judge Egbert Benson, of Long Island, painted by Gilbert Stuart, and presented to the Society by Mr. George S. Stephenson.

There is a smaller picture of the Rev. Samuel Buck, who was pastor of the church at Easthampton, Long Island, from 1746 to 1798, presented by Mr. J. B. Woolworth.

In the museum is a fac-simile of the bust of Shakspeare over his tomb at Stratford on the Avon. Only four copies were ever taken.

There are also fine and costly bronze portraits (in relievo) of Washington and Franklin by H. K. Browne, the sculptor, donated by Mr. A. S.

Entertainments.—The Society has not only furnished all these means for its members to entertain and instruct themselves, but has given semi-monthly entertainments of a literary and scientific character, in which learning and talent of a high order have been engaged.

Since the opening of its rooms the following addresses and original papers have been read before the Society:

June 11. In the chapel of the Packer Institute, the Providence Plantations," by Rev. Francis Vinton, D.D.; accompanied by a poem by George W. Curtis, Esq.

July 4. In the Academy of Music, an oration, by Grenville Tudor Jenks, Esq.

Sept. 4. At a county meeting held at Hempstead, Long Island, a paper on "Experience in Charleston, South Carolina, in the earlier Part of the Rebellion, and as United States Consul at the Bahamas during the first two Years of the mained intact, and was recently presented to the War," by Captain Samuel Whiting; also, a "Me-Historical Society, who have it framed and will moir of Timothy Clowes, LL.D., of Hempstead, Long Island," by Alden J. Spooner, Esq.

Sept. 24. At a special meeting of the Society, a paper entitled "Personal Recollections of Aaron Burr, and some of his Contemporaries of the New York Bar," by the Hon John Greenwood.

Oct. 9. A conversational meeting. Subject,
"The Indian History of Long Island."

Nov. 2. At a regular meeting of the Society, a paper on "Long Island," by Wm. Alfred Jones, Esq., Librarian of Columbia College, New York.

Nov. 10. In the chapel of the Packer Institute, the first of a series of six lectures, to be delivered on successive Tuesday evenings, on "The Fall of Rome," by the Rev. John Lord.

Dec. 3. At a regular meeting of the Society in the chapel of the Packer Institute, a paper on "The Battle of Long Island," by Henry B. Dawson, Esq., of Morrisania, New York.

Subject. Dec. 17. Conversational meeting.

"Indian History."

Special lecture, at Packer Institute, by Dr. W. H. Thompson, "Arabs, and their Contributions to Science."

Jan. 7, 1864. Regular meeting. By Rev. Joshua Leavitt, D.D., "Monroe Doctrine." Feb. 4. Regular meeting. Rev. I. S. Prime, on "Early Ministers of Long Island."

Feb. 18. Poem by Charles Thurber, "Social Nature of Man considered by the aid of History." March 3. A paper by A. H. Dana, Esq., of Brooklyn, on "Greek Life in the Fourth Century B. C.

March 17. Dr. Winslow delivered a lecture on the "Telegraph."

And on Thursday evening next Dr. Peter Wilson, Chief Sachem of the Six Nations, will lecture before the Society on the "Legends and History of the Iroquois.

The Society is gradually exciting an interest throughout the Island, and has attracted the attention of other societies. It has awakened also an interest in our local history; and one of the Society's members and founders, Alden J. Spooner, Esq., has projected a new History of Long Island, a work that has never yet been properly done; but if written by a gentleman so well an oration on "The Annals of Rhode Island and qualified for the task as Mr. Spooner, will, we are sure, prove a valuable addition to the historical works of the country.

In conclusion, we would advise such of our readers as are not members of the Society to pay a visit to its rooms; they will be well repaid for their trouble. They will find the librarian, Dr. Stiles, a gentleman with whom it is a pleasure to hold communication, always at his post, to receive and conduct them through the rooms and give them all the information and explanations they may ask.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Pennsylvania Historical Society.—April, 1864.—The Historical Society met at their rooms in the Adelphi Building. Dr. Coates presided.

The list of donations to the Society was as large as usual, and embraced several articles of rare value and curious associations. A beautiful series of photographic views were exhibited, comprising representations of the Leib mansion on Frankford road, presented by A. H. Hemple; a large photograph of Gen. Meade, from Wenderoth & Taylor; sundry photographs of historic buildings, from F. D. B. Richards; a copy of the Philadelphia Post Office Circular for the year 1791, from Mr. Walborn. In those days but one collection and delivery was made daily. Photographs of St. John's Church—interior and exterior views—presented by John A. McAllister; a view of the interior of the First Dutch Reformed Church of Philadelphia, by Jno. Moran; photograph of the destruction of Priestly's house at Birmingham.

Among the donations were copies of the Philadelphia Directory for 1816 and 1837; a newspaper of 1765, with several curious advertisements; the Aurora or General Advertiser. published in 1797; Poulson's American Advertiser for 1803; an appeal to the nations of Europe against the Continental System, by Madame Staël Holstein, published in 1813; an old life of Stephen Girard, by Stephen Simpson; a gavel made from a piece of oak taken from William Penn's Brew-House at Penn's Manor, cut before there was a saw-mill in America; chronicles of the first Planters of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, from 1623 to 1636; the works of John C. Calhoun; the correspondence of Daniel Webster : correspondence of eminent men to George Washington during the Revolution.

Dr. H. J. Morton and Jos. H. Trotter were elected members of the Society. The Committee on procuring views of Pennsylvania battle-fields was, on motion of Colonel Childs, increased to five, and General Henry D. Maxwell, of Easton, and Dr. Henry J. Morton, appointed as the additional members.

Mr. Armstrong offered the following:-

Whereas, It is represented that the premises at the south-east corner of Second and Norris alley, on which the Penn Mansion stands, have been sold; and whereas, it is desirable that so interesting a relic of the past as this house should, if practicable, be preserved;

Resolved, That a committee of six be appointed to ascertain if the building can be purchased; if not, if it can be removed to the Park, or to some other suitable place; and if this can be accomplished, to take such action as may secure its removal or preservation.

The resolution was agreed to, and Messrs. Richard Wright, Thomas McAllister, Cephas G. Childs, Thomas H. Montgomery, Jno. C. Troutwine, and John Rice, were appointed the committee.

A general discussion then ensued between the members. It was generally desired to possess and preserve the building entire, or, if not, to preserve as much of the house as possible. Different statements were made concerning the condition of the building. The woodwork of the lower portions of the house are disintegrated by time, but the original woodwork of the upper stories is little injured. If it cannot be preserved entire, the members present urged the purchase of the materials, to be incorporated into the new hall to be erected for the Society, or to be used to build a monumental structure. The building and ground were sold to the parties at present owning it for $65,000. The house cannot be moved as it stands, as it is wider than the street. If it is attempted to remove it, it will have to be taken to pieces and rebuilt. After a further discussion, the meeting adjourned.

Notes on Books.

Early History of New England, being a relation of Hostile Passages between the Indians and European Voyagers and First Settlers; and a full Narrative of Hostilities to the close of the War with the Pequots, in the year 1637; also a detailed account of the Origin of the War with King Philip. By Increase Mather. With an Introduction and Notes by Samuel G. Drake him at No. 12 Bromfield street; also J. Munsell, Albany, N.Y. 1864. xxxviii. Pp. 309.

Mr. Drake, well aware of the increase of the antiquarian taste which he has done so much to foster, gives us from Mr. Munsell's elegant press Increase Mather's Early History of New England. It matches the historical series of Mr. M., which included one volume on King Philip's war, and, with the volume issued by Mr. Drake last year, increases well our collection for the period.

Mr. Drake's preface and notes are characterized by his well known research, clearness, and frankness.

The Chaplains and Clergy of the Revolution. By J. T. Headley, author of "Washington and his Generals," "Napoleon and his Marshals," etc. New York: Scribner, 1864. 12mo. pp. 402.

THE part of the clergy in the great movement of the last century which resulted in American Independence is beginning to be treated as a specialty. We have already had two collections of important sermons of the epoch, edited by Frank Moore and by J. Wingate Thornton, neither, perhaps, wide enough in its scope or broad enough in conception and handling. In the present volume Mr. Headley presents biographical sketches of many of the prominent clergy-men of the Revolution. His volume cannot tail to interest and attract the general reader, and at the same time afford a convenient manual even for students. The mission of Rev. Mr. Carroll to Canada, and his services, we hope to see given in a future edition.

My Cave Life in Vicksburg. New York: D. Appleton & Co., 1864. 12mo. pp. 196.

This is a charming book. Tiring as the public is of works on the war, going over the same ground or presenting the same views, it must receive with welcome this picture of a true woman's trials during the siege of Vicksburg. a picture of the strange subterranean life led by polished and educated ladies in the midst of our civilization and refinement, it is one to read and be pondered os. How much the women of the South labored to stimulate the passions of men! How bitterly some have tasted of the dregs of the bitter chalice of war!

Life of Edward Livingston. By Charles Havens Hunt, with an Introduction by George Bancroft. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 8vo. pp. 448.

Boston: Printed for the Editor, and sold by was, has long been needed, and it is now a matter of satisfaction that the task has fallen into the competent hands of Mr. Hunt.

The life of Livingston, whose code alone gives him immortality, was one of great interest. An active lawyer, a member of Congress fully impressed with the responsibilities of legislative duty, Secretary of State when Jackson issued his celebrated proclamation against South Carolina, and subsequently minister to France in a time of great difficulty, Livingston everywhere displayed talents and abilities of the highest order.

Miscellany.

THE recent issues and announcements of works relative to the history of the country are not very numerous.

POE and HITCHCOCK, of Cincinnati, have in press "Contributions to the Early History of the North-West, including the Moravian Mission in Ohio," by S. P. Hildreth, M.D.

W. J. Dodge promises a history of the Second Division of the Army of the Cumberland, under McCook, Sill, and Johnson, with plates and maps.

NEWSPAPERS OF THE REVOLUTION .- A tin peddler in Berkshire county brought to North Becket, the other day, among his collections of rags, papers, &c., some rare old newspapers, printed in 1775 and 1776, among them twelve copies of the Massachusetts Spy, nine of the Connecticut Courant, two of the New York Packet, and one of the New York Advertiser. They luckily fell under the eye of C. O. Petkins, of North Becket, who has rescued and will preserve them

THE WINSLOW FAMILY.—A register of this family is being prepared by the Rev. Hubbard Winslow, D.D. It is intended that the work shall contain a full and accurate genealogy of the family, with biographical sketches of the most distinguished of its members. Information on A CAREFULLY digested, well written life of the the subject will be gladly received, and should great Edward Livingston, for great he really be sent to No. 160 West 49th st., New York.

THE

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE:

Vol. VIII.]

JUNE, 1864.

[No. 6.

General Department.

HISTORICAL NOTES ON SLAVERY IN THE NORTHERN COLONIES AND STATES.

Continued from page 80.*

NO. IV.-MASSACHUSETTS.

But the humane efforts of Roger Williams and John Eliot to abate the severity of judgment against captives, and mitigate the horrors of slavery in Massachusetts, hardly amounted to a positive protest against the institution itself.

In their time there was no public opinion against slavery, and probably very little exercise of private judgment against it. Even among the Quakers the inner light had not yet disclosed its enormity, or awakened tender consciences to its utter wickedness.

Morgan Godwyn, a clergyman of the Church of England, who wrote and published in 1680 "The Negro's and Indian's Advocate, suing for their Admission into the Church," etc., hardly intimates a doubt of the lawfulness of their slavery, while he pleads for their humanity and right to religion against a very general opinion of that day, which denied them both.

Dean Berkeley, in his famous sermon before the Venerable Society in 1731, speaks of "the irrational contempt of the Blacks, as Creatures of another Species, who had no right to be instructed or admitted to the Sacraments." Sermon,

And George Keith (then Quaker), whose paper against the practice was said to be given forth by the appointment of the meeting held by him in the city of Philadelphia, about the year 1693, gave a strict charge to Friends "that they should set their negroes at liberty, after some reasonable time of service." Pamphlet quoted by Dr. Franklin in his letter to John Wright, 4 November, 1789. Works, X., 403.

This would seem to have been the very earliest testimony against slavery in America, if, indeed, it went far enough to deserve that character. Keith appears simply to have repeated the words of George Fox in Barbadoes in 1671, when he urged the religious training of the negroes, as well as kind treatment, in place of "cruelty towards them, as the manner of some hath been and is; and that after certain years of servitude they should make them free." Journal, II., 140. The explicit answer of Fox to the charge that the Quakers "taught the negroes to rebel," shows very clearly that anti-slavery doctrines were no part of the Quaker creed at that time. Ibid, pp. 147-9. See also Ralph Sandi-Compare 454. ford's Brief Examination, etc., Preface.

* In article No. I., Vol. vii., p. 348, in the references to Winthrop's Journal, the dates should be July, 1637, instead of May, 1637, and February, 1638, instead of December. 1637.

In the concluding sentence of article No. III., Vol. viii., p. 30, "a Dudley" was mentioned with Williams, Eliot, and Sewall, as having been in advance of their contemporaries in their views of slavery. The reference was to Paul Dudley, who was the author of a tract, published in 1731, entitled "An Essay on the Merchandize of Slaves, and Souls of Men. With an Application to the Church of Rome."

This title and references to the tract by others, gave us the impression that it was against slavery; but an opportunity recently enjoyed of examining the tract itself showed the mistake. It is altogether "an application to the Church of Rome"—in fact "an oration against Popery," of which Massachusetts had a much greater horror than of slavery.

But for half a century afterwards "that people were as greedy as any Body in keeping Negroes for their Gain," so as to induce the belief that they "approved of it as a People with one consent unanimously." Lay, 84. Ralph Sandiford, in 1729, in his "Brief Examination," etc., thus bemoaned the fact, "that it hath defaced the present Dispensation."

"Had Friends stood clear of this Practice, that it might have been answered to the Traders in Slaves that there is a People called Quakers in Pennsylvania that will not own this Practice in Word or Deed, then would they have been a burning and a shining Light to these poor Heathen, and a Precedent to the Nations throughout the Universe which might have brought them to have seen the Evil of it in themselves, and glorifyed the Lord on our Behalf, and like the Queen of the East, to have admired the Glory and Beauty of the Church But instead thereof, the tender of God. seed in the Honest-hearted is under Suffering, to see both Elders and Ministers as it were cloathed with it, and their offspring after them filling up the Measure of their Parents' Iniquity; which may be suffered till such Time that Recompence from Him that is just to all his Creatures opens that Eye the god of this World has blinded. Though I would not be understood to pervert the Order of the Body, which consists of Servants and Masters, and the Head cannot say to the Foot, I have no need of thee; but it is the Converting Men's Liberty to our Wills, who have not, like the Gibeonites, offered themselves willingly, or by Consent given their Ear to the Doorpost, but are made such by Force, in that Nature that desires to Lord it over their Fellow Creatures, is what is to be abhorred by all Christians." pp. 9-10.

Again, he says in another place: "But in Time this dark Trade creeping in amongst us to the very Ministry, because of the profit by it, hath spread over others like a Leprosy, to the Grief of the Honesthearted." Preface.

Public sentiment and opinion against teenth century by sympathy for the Christian captives, Dutch and English, who were enslaved by the Turks and the pirates of Northern Africa. The efforts to ransom and release these unfortunate persons, excited by the terrible sorrow of relatives and friends, kinsmen and coun trymen, brought home to some minds (though few) the injustice of their own dealings with the negroes. The earliest writers against slavery urged that argument with peculiar force and unction, but They seem to have with little effect. made no impression on the legislation of the colonies, and curious and zealous research only can recover the memorials of their righteous testimonies.

The earliest positive public challenge to slavery in Massachusetts of which we have any knowledge, was in the year 1700, when a learned, pious, and honored magistrate entered the lists alone, and sounded his solitary blast in the ears of his brother magistrates and the people, who listened in amazement and wonder, not unmingled with sorrow and contempt. His performance is all the more remarkable from the fact that it stands out in the history of the time separate and distinct as "the voice of one crying in the wilder-

Samuel Sewall, at that time a Judge of the Superior Court, and afterwards Chief-Justice, published a brief tract in 1700, entitled: "The Selling of Joseph a Memorial." It filled three pages of a folio sheet, ending with the imprint: "Boston of the Massachusetts; Printed by Bartholomew Green and John Allen. June 24th, 1700."

The author presented a copy of this tract "not only to each member of the General Court at the time of its publication, but also to numerous clergymen and literary gentlemen with whom he was intimate." MS. Letter. Compare Brissot. Although thus extensively circu-I., 224. lated at that day, it has for many years been known apparently only by tradition, as nearly all the notices of it which we slavery were first aroused and stimulated have seen are confined to the fact of its in America in the latter part of the seven-publication early in the eighteenth century, the date being nowhere correctly

Beyond this, it appears to have been unknown to our historians, and is now reproduced probably for the first time in remains the same as to one another. So the present century. met with no quotation even from it later such thing as Slavery. Joseph was rightthan 1738, when it was reprinted in Penn-fully no more a Slave to his Brethren, than and deeper root, and bore earlier fruit than in any other part of America.

Its rarity and peculiar interest will justify us in placing the reprint before our readers in this connection. It is somewhat remarkable that so signal a testimony against slavery should have escaped Interest in him than the Ishmaelites had. the research of those who have in their custody "the historic fame" of Massachusetts. It is a most honorable memorial of its venerated author.

"THE SELLING OF JOSEPH A MEMORIAL.

By the Hon'ble JUDGE SEWALL in New England.

"FORASMUCH as LIBERTY is in real value next unto Life; None ought to part with it themselves, or deprive others upon it. It is most certain that all Men, their Liberty is, as they are the Sons of Adam, are Coheirs, and have equal Right unto Liberty, and all other outward Comforts of Life. God hath given the Earth [with all its commodities] unto the Sons of Adam, Psal., 115, 16. And hath made of One Blood all Nations of Men, for to dwell on all the face of the Earth, and hath determined the Times before appointed, and the bounds of their Habitation: That they should seek the Lord. Forasmuch then as we are the Offspring of God, &c. Acts 17. 26. 27. 29. Now, them a most beneficial and inviolable Few can endure to hear of a Negro's Lease under the Broad Seal of Heaven, being made free; and indeed they can who were before only Tenants at Will: yet through the Indulgence of God to our First Parents after the Fall, the outward Estate of all and every of their Children, Indeed, we have that Originally, and Naturally, there is no sylvania, where anti-slavery took an earlier they were to him; and they had no more Authority to Sell him, than they had to Slay him. And if they had nothing to do to sell him; the Ishmaelites bargaining with them, and paying down Twenty pieces of Silver, could not make a Title. Neither could Potiphar have any better Gen. 37, 20, 27, 28. For he that shall in this case plead Alteration of Property, seems to have forfeited a great part of his own claim to Humanity. There is no proportion between Twenty Pieces of Silver and LIBERTY. The Commodity itself is the Claimer. If Arabian Gold be imported in any quantities, most are afraid to meddle with it, though they might have it at easy rates; lest it should have been of it, but upon most mature consideration. wrongfully taken from the Owners, it "The Numerousness of Slaves at this should kindle a fire to the Consumption wrongfully taken from the Owners, it Day in the Province, and the Uneasiness of their whole Estate. 'Tis pity there of them under their Slavery, hath put should be more Caution used in buying a many upon thinking whether the Founda- Horse, or a little lifeless dust, than there tion of it be firmly and well laid; so as is in purchasing Men and Women: Whereto sustain the Vast Weight that is built as they are the Offspring of God, and Auro pretiosior Omni.

"And seeing God hath said, He that Stealeth a Man, and Selleth him, or if he be found in his Hand, he shall surely be put to Death. Exod. 21, 16. This Law being of Everlasting Equity, wherein Man-Stealing is ranked amongst the most atrocious of Capital Crimes: What louder Cry can there be made of that Celebrated Warning.

Caveat Emptor !

"And all things considered, it would although the Title given by the last ADAM conduce more to the Welfare of the Prodoth infinitely better Men's Estates, re- vince, to have White Servants for a Term specting God and themselves; and grants of Years, than to have Slaves for Life.

continual aspiring after their forbidden 26.27. Liberty, renders them Unwilling Servants. And there is such a disparity in their Con-Jacob and Rachel, if this Slavery were and the Israelites from 2 Kings 8. 10. 12. thrust quite out of Doors. Moreover it is to find them Wives, or pay their Fines. more rarely engraven upon this sort of Ser- Canaan, but of Cush. Husbands from their Wives, Parents from be prayed for. Jer. 13. 23. their Children. How horrible is the Unthe barbarous Usage of our Friends and of it. Kinsfolk in Africa, it might not be unreasonable to enquire whether we are not culpable in forcing the Africans to become Slaves amongst ourselves. And it may be a question whether all the Benefit received of Cash laid out upon them; and for the Redemption of our own enslayed Friends out of Africa. Besides all the Persons and Estates that have perished there.

· "Obj. 1. These Blackamores are of seldom use their Freedom well; yet their under the Curse of Slavery. Gen. 9. 25.

"Ans. Of all Offices, one would not ditions, Colour, and Hair, that they can beg this; viz. Uncall'd for, to be an Exenever embody with us, & grow up in cutioner of the Vindictive Wrath of God; orderly Families, to the Peopling of the the extent and duration of which is to us Land; but still remain in our Body Poli-uncertain. If this ever was a Commission; tick as a kind of extravasat Blood. As How do we know but that it is long sinee many Negro Men as there are among us, out of Date? Many have found it to their so many empty Places are there in our Cost, that a Prophetical Denunciation of Train Bands, and the places taken up of Judgment against a Person or People, Men that might make Husbands for our would not warrant them to inflict that Daughters, And the Sons and Daughters evil. If it would, Hazael might justify of New England would become more like himself in all he did against his master,

"But it is possible that by cursory readtoo well known what Temptations Masters ing, this Text may have been mistaken. are under, to connive at the Fornication For Canaan is the Person Cursed three of their Slaves; lest they should be obliged times over, without the mentioning of Cham. Good Expositors suppose the It seems to be practically pleaded that Curse entailed on him, and that this Prothey might be lawless; 'tis thought much phesie was accomplished in the Extirpation of, that the Law should have satisfaction of the Canaanites, and in the Servitude of for their Thests, and other Immoralities; the Gibeonites. Vide Pareum. Whereby which means, Holiness to the Lord is as the Blackmores are not descended of Psal. 68. 31. vitude. It is likewise most lamentable to Princes shall come out of Egypt [Mizthink, how in taking Negroes out of Afri raim]. Ethiopia [Cush] shall soon stretch ca, and selling of them here, That which out her Hands unto God. Under which God has joined together, Men do boldly Names, all Africa may be comprehended; rend asunder; Men from their Country, and their Promised Conversion ought to Can the Ethiopian change his Skin? This shows cleanness, Mortality, if not Murder, that that Black Men are the Posterity of Cush. the Ships are guilty of that bring great Crouds of these miserable Men and Woguished by their Colour. And for want men. Methinks when we are bemoaning of the true, Ovid assigns a fabulous cause > Sanguine tum credunt in corpora summa vocato. Æthiopum populos nigrum traxisse colorem. Metamorph, lib. 2.

"Obj. 2. The Nigers are brought out by Negro Slaves will balance the Accompt of a Pagan Country, into places where the Gospel is preached.

"Ans. Evil must not be done, that good may come of it. The extraordinary and comprehensive Benefit accruing to the. Church of God, and to Joseph personally, the Posterity of Cham, and therefore are did not rectify his Brethren's Sale of him.

"Obj. 3. The Africans have Wars one with another: Our Ships bring lawful Captives taken in those wars.

"Answ. For aught is known, their Wars are much such as were between Jacob's black as they are, seeing they are the Sons Sons and their Brother Joseph. If they be and Daughters of the First Adam, the between Town and Town; Provincial or Brethren and Sisters of the Last Adam, National: Every War is upon one side and the Offspring of Goo; They ought to An Unlawful War can't make be treated with a Respect agreeable. lawful Captives. And by receiving, we are in danger to promote, and partake Christianum & Christianum, ex parte servi in their Barbarous Cruelties. I am sure, patientis sæpe est licita, quia est necessaif some Gentlemen should go down to ria; sed ex parte domini agentis, & prothe Brewsters to take the Air, and Fish: And a stronger Party from Hull should quia non convenit regulæ illi generali: surprise them, and sell them for Slaves Quacunque volueritis ut faciant vobis to a Ship outward bound; they would homines, ita & vos facite eis. Matt. 7.12. think themselves unjustly dealt with; both by Sellers and Buyers. And yet 'tis to be jure locum habere, nisi ex delicto gravi feared, we have no other Kind of Title to quod ultimum supplicium aliquo modo our Nigers. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, matione proxime accedit ad vitam ipsam, do you even so to them: for this is the & eidem a multis præferri solet. Law and the Prophets. Matt. 7. 12. "Ames. Cas. Consc. Lib. 5, Cap

"Obj. 4. Abraham had Servants bought with his Money and born in his House.

" Ans. Until the Circumstances of Abraham's purchase be recorded, no Argument can be drawn from it. In the mean to be long years after he "slept with his time, Charity obliges us to conclude, that fathers." And he exhibited in his corre-He knew it was lawful and good.

"It is Observable that the Israelites were strictly forbidden the buying or selling one another for Slaves. Levit. 25, 39, 46. Jer. 34. 8—22. And God gaged His Bless-done away. When about to sit on the ing in lieu of any loss they might conceit trial of a master for killing his negro, he they suffered thereby, Deut. 15. 18. And wrote to a friend: since the partition Wall is broken down, inordinate Self-love should likewise be de Province, such as are of the lowest condition, should be of a more Ingenious and benign Ethiopians, they have the same right to reliframe of Spirit. Christians should carry it gion and life that the richest heirs have; to all the World, as the Israelites were to and they who go about to deprive them carry it one towards another. And for of this right attempt the bombarding of Men obstinately to persist in holding their heaven; and the shells they throw will fall Neighbours and Brethren under the Rigor down on their own heads." of perpetual Bondage, seems to be no proper way of gaining Assurance that God and generation in these views, and has has given them Spiritual Freedom. Our himself left the record that he met more Blessed Saviour has altered the Measures of the ancient Love Song, and set it to a most Excellent New Tune, which all ought to be ambitious of Learning. Matt. 5. 43. John 13, 34, These Ethiopians, as

"Servitus perfecta voluntaria, inter Christianum & Christianum, ex parte servi curando & exercendo, vix potest esse licita;

"Perfecta servitus poenae, non potest meretur: quia Libertas ex naturali æsti-

"Ames. Cas. Consc. Lib. 5, Cap. 23. Thes. 2. 3."

Thus signally and clearly did Judge Sewall expose the miserable pretences on which slavery and the slave-trade were then justified in Massachusetts, as they continued spondence his desire that "the wicked practice of slavery" might cease, as well as his strong conviction that there would be "no progress in gospelling" until slavery was

"The poorest boys and girls in this God expects that Christians whether they be English, or Indians, or

But Sewall was far in advance of his day

ginson, April 13, 1706.

Nor was his publication allowed to pass without reply. John Saffin, a judge of the same court with Judge Sewall, and a slaveholder, printed an answer, of which we regret to say we have been able to find Negroes dead last year, which being comno copy. Could it be found, it would undoubtedly be an interesting document and very important in illustration of the history of slavery in Massachusetts. We might naturally expect to find in it some porting of Negroes into this or the Neighreferences to the laws, the principles, and boring Provinces is not so beneficial either the practices of the Puritan Fathers of that colony.

It must not be forgotten that "the question of tolerating the slave trade and the question of abolishing slavery rested on different grounds. The one related to the refusal of a trust, the other to the manner of its exercise."—Bancroft, III.

It was obvious that the first step towards the destruction of slavery was the restraint or prohibition of the importation of slaves. We have already noticed the acts of 1705, with the additional acts of 1728 and 1738. import duty of four pounds per head upon all negroes brought into the Province.

There is no indication in the acts themselves, nor have we been able to find any evidence that they were intended other we have presented in these notes.

Judge Sewall's efforts in 1700. Fruitless purchase a White Man Servant. as it seems to have been, it shows that even at that date some were wise enough to see bandman must fit out a Man against the that the importation of negroes was not so beneficial to the Crown or Country as white him, but if he has a White Servant, 'twill servants would be. In 1706, an essay or answer the end, and perhaps save his Son "Computation that the Importation of at home. Negroes is not so profitable as that of White Servants," was published in Bos couraged as already said to bring in Men ton, which may properly be reproduced Servants, there needed not be such Comhere. It was the first newspaper article plaint against Superiors Impressing our against the importation of negroes pub- Children to the War, there would then be

"frowns and hard words" than sympathy | Boston News-Letter, No. 112, June 12, "for this undertaking."—Letter to Hig-1706. We are inclined to attribute this article also to Judge Sewall.

> "By last Year's Bill of Mortality for the Town of Boston, in Number 100 News-Letter, we are furnished with a List of 44 puted one with another at 30l. per Head, amounts to the Sum of One Thousand three hundred and Twenty Pounds, of which we would make this Remark: That the Imto the Crown or Country, as White Servants would be.

"For Negroes do not carry Arms to defend the Country as Whites do.

"Negroes are generally Eye-Servants, great Thieves, much addicted to Stealing, Lying and Purloining.

"They do not People our Country as Whites would do whereby we should be strengthened against an Enemy.

"By Encouraging the Importing of White Men Servants; allowing somewhat to the Importer, most Husbandmen in the Country might be furnished with Servants imposing and enforcing the collection of an for 8, 9, or  $\overline{10l}$ . a Head, who are not able to launch out 40 or 50l. for a Negro the now common Price.

"A Man then might buy a White Man Servant we suppose for 10l. to serve 4 years, and Boys for the same price to Serve than as revenue acts, beyond that which 6, 8, or 10 years; If a White Servant die, the Loss exceeds not 10l. but if a Negro We have heretofore quoted the instruc- dies, 'tis a very great loss to the Husbandtion of the town of Boston in 1701. It is man; Three years Interest of the price of not improbable that it was the result of the Negro, will near upon if not altogether

> "If Necessity call for it, that the Hus-Enemy; if he has a Negro he cannot send

"Were Merchants and Masters Enlished in America, and appeared in the Men enough to be had without Impressing.

"The bringing in of such Servants would much enrich this Province because Husbandmen would not only be able far better to manure what Lands are already under Improvement, but would also improve a great deal more that now lyes waste under Woods, and enable this Province to set about raising of Naval Stores, which would be greatly advantageous to the Crown of England, and this Province.

"For the raising of Hemp here, so as to make Sail-cloth and Cordage to furnish but our own Shipping, would hinder the Ima year to make Returns for which we now and Cordage, but likewise with Pitch, Tar, Hemp, and other Stores which they are allow Forty Shillings per head for five years, to such as should Import every of but 200l. a year, and a 1000l. for the 5 the 4th year they serve the 5th for Wages, the Colonies. and the 6th there is 100 that goes out into the Woods, and settles a 100 Families to Strengthen and Baracado us from the Indians, and also a 100 Families more every year successively.

Town of Boston has lost 1320L by 44 Ne groes were not forgotten. None ever asgroes, which is also a loss to the Country serted their rights in stronger terms. in general, and for a less loss (if it may improperly be so called) for a 1000l. the Counpostpones Otis's "protest against negro try may have 500 Men in 5 years time for slavery" to a later year (1764), when he the 44 Negroes dead in one year.

had two Negroes dead computed both at rights of the British Colonies. The differ-60l. which would have procured him six ence in time is not material for our present white Servants at 101. per head to have purpose. Many years were to pass away Served 24 years, at 4 years apiece, without before his views on this subject were acrunning such a great risque, and the Whites cepted by the children's children of those would have strengthened the Country, that to whom his words then sounded like a Negroes do not.

"Twould do well that none of those Servants be liable to be Impressed during Landing.

"That such Servants being Sold or Transported out of this Province during the time of their Service, the Person that buys them be liable to pay 3l. into the Treasury."

A few years after the publication of Judge Sewall's tract, Elihu Coleman of Nantucket is said to have written and published a tract against slavery. Coffin's Newbury: p. 338. In 1755, March 10, the town of Salem authorized a petition to the General Court porting it, and save a considerable sum in against the importation of negroes. Felt's There may have been Salem, II. 416. do, and in time might be capacitated to other occasional efforts of this sort, but furnish England not only with Sail-cloth they must have been comparatively few and fruitless.

We have thus noticed the most importnow obliged to purchase in Foreign Nations. ant, if not the only anti-slavery demonstra-"Suppose the Government her should tions which appear in the history of Massachusetts down to the period immediately preceding the revolution. Excepting those these years 100 White Men Servants, and already mentioned, we know of no public each to serve 4 years, the cost would be advocates for the slave in that Colony and Province until the cry of resistance to years. The first 100 Servants, being free British tyranny began to resound through

James Otis's great speech in the famous Cause of the Writs of Assistance in 1761 the first scene of the first act of opposition to the arbitrary claims of Great Britaindeclared the rights of man inherent and "And here you see that in one year the inalienable. In that speech the poor netranslated the "scathing satire" of Montes-"A certain person within these 6 years quieu in his assertion and proof of the rhapsody and an extravagance.

It was a strong arm, and it struck a sturdy blow, but the wedge recoiled and their Service of Agreement at their first flew out from the tough black knot of slavery, which was destined to outlast the fiercest fires of the revolution in Massachusetts, though kindled with live coals from the altar of universal liberty.

John Adams heard the words of Otis, and "shuddered at the doctrine he taught," and to the end of his long life continued "to shudder at the consequences that may be drawn from such premises." Yet John Adams "adored the idea of gradual aboli-Works, X. 315. For his later views on emancipation, see Works, VI. 511., X. 379.

The views expressed by Otis must have sounded strangely in the ears of men who "lived (as John Adams himself says he did) for many years in times when the practice [of slavery] was not disgraceful, when the best men in my vicinity thought it not inconsistent with their character." Works,

X. 380.

If there was a prevailing public sentiment against slavery in Massachusetts—as has been constantly claimed of late—the people of that day, far less demonstrative than their descendants, had an extraordinary way of not showing it. Hutchinson, who was certainly the man of his time most familiar with the history of his native province, says in his first volume, published in 1764: "Some judicious persons are of opinion that the permission of slavery has been a publick mischief," p. 444. This is certainly the indication of a very mild type of opposition—by no means of a pervading public sentiment.

John Adams was not alone in his astonishment at the ideas expressed by Otis. These ideas were as new as they were startling to the people of Massachusetts in that day. And to the calm judgment of the historian there is nothing strange in in that province should have shuddered at the doctrines which Otis taught.

be removed from the colored races in Masthat none of those disabilities which so strongly mark the social status of the negro still linger in the legislation of that State. E. Y. E.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS 1779. REPORT OF BRITISH COMMISSIONERS.

Overtures having been made by General Washington for settling a Cartel for the Exchange of Prisoners, Commissioners met by appointment at Amboy, April 12th, and remained there until the 23d, when Colonel Hyde of the Foot Guards and Captain Andre, Aid-de-Camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, returned to New York and made the following Report.

> To His Excellency SIR HENRY CLINTON, K.B. &c., &c., &c.

REPORT.

Report of Colonel Hyde and Captain Andre, Commissioners on the part of His Excellency Sir Henry Clinton, for negociating an exchange of prisoners, &c. To His Excellency Sir Henry Clinton, K.B.

We beg leave in this report, to refer your Excellency to our letters from Amboy: In these we expressed our surprise to find that General Washington's commissioners objected anew, to the powers we produced, as being incompetent to a general cartel, which must rest, as they termed it, on the broad basis of national faith, not on personal confidence; they quoted on this occasion, the customs of nations at war where commissioners were vested with powers from the supreme authority of the State, not from the Commanders of armies: We would not consume time in refuting such inapplicable parallels, or in questioning the great the fact that the foremost man of his time breadth of basis ascribed to the faith of unrecognized power which ratified the Convention, but desired to proceed on the More than a century passed away before powers we had, to an immediate exchange all the ancient badges of servitude could of prisoners, and to frame regulations for others in future, under whatever name sachusetts, if indeed it be even now true they chose to enter into such an agreement, as it was surely an object of importance enough to deserve our attention, and fully within the compass of our commission to redeem some *

and more comfortable maintainance of Officers of militia not taken in arms, theresuch as should hereafter be taken. thought it rather derogating from the zeal deductions, they transferred the balance professed by the enemy in this affair, to to their own side. hear their commissioners propose in answer, that in case your Excellency was ing their ideas to coincide with ours, when not authorized to pledge the faith of the we proposed to agree on an exchange as nation, the exchange might be deferred far as our abilities should be found to extill such authority could be obtained from tend, involving in the exchange of all offithey could treat on a present exchange. vate soldiers. In order therefore, to enter closely on the subject, we proposed a mutual communicumscribe their views to the redemption cation of the nature of the agreement we of their officers on Long Island, pressing had in view, and we produced to them an us to mention the number of private men imperfect sketch of a cartel which we had we should insist on receiving if any exdrawn up, according to the spirit of our instructions, and of which we subjoin a

In return they exhibited to us some articles which they had compiled, and had intended as the chief tenor of a general appeared to us ill defined and leaving to those points. room for arbitrary constructions, which might easily afford ill grounded pretences fully discussed in our several conferences for violations. We could not but be very during the preceding week, we thought, consideration, brought to mind such fla-ed for deliberation. vention.

their assent to our first article for the uni- of avoiding all exchange (except possiversal delivery of prisoners, in which we bly on a very particular and confined princonceived they would on computation, ciple) are to remain in captivity. have remained indebted to us, but from therefore, after waiting three days, wrote in Georgia, having, they assured us, no ther with their answer. authentic intelligence concerning them, probably upwards of 1000 men; likewise quitted Amboy. We have now with our pretended to be forfeited by an infringe- Excellency of our sense of the honour you and to provide for the more speedy relief ment on the agreement at the Cedars: We fore styled citizens. By these and similar

> We were not more successful in bring-They however admitted, that cers, that of a certain proportion of pri-

> > Upon the whole they appeared to circhange took place, as if whatever equivalent we might have, their instructions had been to limit the private men they were to surrender.

Unable to bring them to compliance with our terms, or induce them to name cartel, had they judged our commissions their own, we at length on Monday the to have been sufficient. These pieces were 19th inst., presented the following defininot interchanged, we can therefore only tive proposals, the form and diction of observe as to them, that most of the arti-which, we said, might be altered, if necescles differed widely from ours, and many sary, as we had not adverted particularly

As each subject of these others had been cautious in harkening to terms of such a if the enemy's instructions admitted of any tendency, where the business under our agreement, much time could not be require But as they had grant instances of perversions of that nathroughout the negotiation objected to ture in the affair of the Cedars, and in a everything in a minutious spirit of contentreaty of much greater importance, where tion, we drew no favourable inference from a few cartouch boxes were wrested into their delay in answering, and presumed a pretext for invalidating a solemn con-they were only framing a reply which should serve as an apology to the unhappy The American Commissioners refused people who, through the obvious policy our account, they struck off all prisoners to them the letter which we annex, toge-

Having thus closed our business, we between 4 and 500 officers and soldiers warmest acknowledgments to assure your conferred upon us, and to entreat you to be persuaded, that our zeal to effect the benevolent purposes of our commission is only equalled by the concern we feel at their having been so unhappily frustrated.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 26

We have the honour to be, &c., WEST. HY

WEST. HYDE, JOHN ANDRE.

Definite Proposals to Colonels Davies and Harrison, Commissioners on the part of General Washington, for an Exchange of Prisoners.

WE renew our first proposal which we still think the most equitable that could be adopted: That a general restoration of all prisoners of war now in possession of both parties take place, including the troops of the Convention of Saratoga, the balance in favour of either to be accounted for by the other with the first prisoners taken: In default of similar ranks unequal to be interchanged on a Tariff which we annexed.

But as this was objected to on a supposition that the prisoners of one party would not extend to the redemption of those of the other, a more partial mode was suggested. Having in our several conferences on that subject fully investigated the matter, we now offer the following terms as the result and a final proposal.

1. The troops of the Convention shall be first exchanged, and in the following succession as far as the prisoners in the hands of the British in any part of the Continent will suffice to exchange.

Half the Artillery One Regt. British One Foreign British Right Wing Major General Foreign. British Foreign Lieut. General British Foreign British Major General Left Wing Foreign British Foreign Half the 'rtillery

Dragoons, Staff-Officers and Corps not included above, to be exchanged half with each wing, and disposed of as may be agreed upon.

Brigadier Generals with their regiments.
2. In the above exchange officers shall be accounted for according to the ranks they held on the 17th Oct. 1777 (the day of signing the Convention) and shall be exchanged by us for officers of equal rank as far as numbers will admit. In cases where the ranks and numbers will not exactly apply, officers shall be exchanged by an adequate proportion for other ranks the nearest to their own, according to the Tariff annexed.

In the exchange of our General Officers we will return those of the highest ranks in our possession, reserving a sufficient number of Brigadiers and Field-Officers to release all those of ours who are prisoners, according to the principle of equality.

On the other hand, the private soldiers of the Convention who shall exceed the number of privates we may have to return for them, shall be exchanged by an adequate proportion (according to the Tariff) of such Staff-Officers, Subaltern-Officers, and afterwards officers of next inferior rank as may remain in our possession more than the number of Subalterns or Staff-officers of the Convention troops.

The account of these balances to be settled according to the returns of officers and men actually and bona fide restored on each side, and such British regimental officers as are absent on parole shall be accounted for with their regiments, or if required, be exchanged amongst the first on the footing of their being already restored.

3. And should there, after this, remain prisoners in the hands of the British in any part of the Continent—Georgia particularly included—they shall be assigned to a further exchange of prisoners, as far as they will extend.

4. Officers who being on parole have not complied with the summons to return, and officers who have violated their paroles, are to be sent back immediately, or accounted for first in the exchange. And

Sir Henry Clinton leaves it with General Washington in the present case to determine as to officers of the American army, which shall be accounted for as having unwarrantably absented themselves.

5. And though we are instructed to assert the just pretension, and to claim in the most explicit manner the due performance of the Capitulation of the Cedars, yet that no obstacle may remain to impede the immediate object of these proposals, we consent that the discussion of that affair shall remain for some future opportunity.

6. And we further consent, in the same view of removing difficulties, that sergeants continuing to be exchanged as heretofore as privates, subaltern-officers shall only be rated as you propose at 6 men, though we think the appreciation inadequate.

7. In case either party from motives of generous confidence, and to accelerate relief, should be induced to dispossess themselves of a portion of prisoners before wishes to effect the end of our commiscircumstances admit of receiving an equi-sion, and supported by the duties of pervalent, the plighted honour of the Gene-sonal politeness, we have waited three rals, or some adequate security, must days to receive your assent or negative guarantee the delivery of the said equiva- to the proposals we offered you on Monlent, so that no pretence whatever may day; as they are determinate and unalterbe made use of to delay or evade it. But able, so we hope they are clear. In the we can neither on the present or in any first case, they can only require a decisive future case admit that officers and soldiers answer; should they be deficient in perof militia not on service shall be exempted spicuity we shall be happy to explain from being made prisoners of war.

We are not unwilling to frame regulations to establish and facilitate future peritions to establish and facilitate future peri-odical exchanges upon terms of mutual on the basis of their equity; should you advantage, and which can leave no room not be inclined to acquiesce in them, we for altercation or misconstruction. Whether such an instrument shall be called a General Cartel, we will not dispute, and into your motives, especially as we have shall be contented with powers on the Sir Henry Clinton's orders to bring this part of the American Commissioners of a negociation to a speedy conclusion, and like manner with our own.

TARIFF.

General commanding in chief5000
Lieutenant General
Major General350
Brigadier General250
Majors of Brigade According to rank in the army Aides de-Camp ( according to raine in the army

Colonel
Lieutenant Colonel
Major
Captain
Lieutenant
Ensign
Adjutant10
Quarter-Master
Chaplain10
Serjeant2
Corporal1
Private1
Drummer

If the above rates are agreed to, it will be easy to settle others for the Staff, &c., upon the same principles of equity.

WEST. HYDE. (Signed) JOHN ANDRE. Commissioners on the part of SIR HENRY CLINTON.

Amboy, Thursday, April 22, 1779.

Gentlemen,

With a patience inspired by our anxious them.

We present you on our part terms untrust you will not, on your side, detain us for the purpose only of entering at large to return to New York as soon as we are convinced there are no hopes of success.

> We are, Gentlemen, Your most obedient and Most humble servants, WEST. HYDE, JOHN ANDRE.

Colonels Davies and Harrison.

Amboy, April 22d, 1779.

Gentlemen,
We are sensible of your personal politeness through the whole of our negociation, and should be extremely unwilling you should indulge an idea that in any instance should indulge an idea that in any instance we would wish to detain you unnecessarily.

We affect not delay, but actuated by the warmest desires to accomplish the humane purposes of our appointment, we have paid the closest attention to the proposals you have offered; we have found them extensive and important in their consequences, involving a variety of interests, which necessarily required much con-With a truly anxious zeal we sideration. have endeavoured to accommodate them to our mutual advantage and that of the prisoners, and are sensibly distressed to find ourselves unexpectedly restricted to a bare assent or negative to your propo-Should they, however, be finally determinate and unalterable as you express, we have only to lament that they are such as we cannot accede to without manifest injury to our country, and incurring the disapprobation even of our unfortunate prisoners themselves.

We are, Gentlemen,
Your most obedient and
Most humble servants,
WILLIAM DAVIES,
ROB. H. HARRISON.

Col. Hyde and Capt. Andre.

Copies of the Letters referred to in the Report.

Amboy, April 14th, 1779.

Sir.

We landed on Monday at about 12 o'clock, and yesterday had a first Conference with the gentlemen deputed to meet us. At interchanging our powers, we were not a little surprised to find ours objected to as to their competence to effect a general permanent cartel, these being the same grounds on which they had before obliged British Commissioners to break off a similar conference. They wished to have read in our Commission from your Excellency—"I do hereby in virtue of full powers to me delegated nominate and appoint you, &c., &c."

We also thought it rather inauspicious and not easily to be reconciled to the zeal expressed by the enemy for an exchange, to hear their Commissioners in a first interview propose, that if your Excellency were not authorised to pledge the faith of the nation, the release of prisoners might be deferred till such authority could be obtained from Europe.

Solicitous, however, to find if any desire of treaty existed on their part, and cordially resolved to attempt everything on ours, we entered on the subject; and in our conversations of yesterday and this morning have been able to observe:

That although they conceive our powers inadequate to a general cartel, they do not alledge them to be so as to a present exchange of prisoners, nor can we find where they mean to draw the line which is to circumscribe our regulations for the future; we are therefore inclined to hope that in this we are disputing on words.

They disclaim all intention to draw us into an acknowledgement of their independence, and have fully satisfied us that the preamble may be couched in terms not repugnant to our general mode of expression with respect to them. They appear willing to talk of an exchange without entering into accounts.

But they stile General Burgoyne a Commander-in-Chief, and intimate that he and the other General Officers should be first exchanged.

They will not accede to the general delivery of prisoners, pretending, contrary to what we know to be the case, that the balance is greatly in their favour.

They profess ignorance of all transactions in Georgia and refuse to enter into any agreement extending to prisoners taken there.

They cavil upon the rates at which unequal ranks might be interchanged where their interest in the present case appears concerned.

to break off a similar conference. They wished to have read in our Commission mode of exchange, at an arrangement possession.

part from our demand of receiving private which may leave private soldiers in their men, with officers, in a battalion proportion; or by exchanging the soldiers of each regiment of the convention army at > impartially to afford relief to all conditions of men.

We will not however despair of agreeing upon some measures for granting relief to the whole or a large portion of the prisoners now in their hands, and of fixing some line by which to be guided on future occasions of this nature.

We take the liberty to observe to your Excellency that we cannot recommend the concession they require in the matters relative to our powers, confident that the main point of shortening or alleviating the pain of captivity is in no manner connected with it, and as we think it only demanded in the same spirit of encroachment with which in each successive power granted to Commissioners for treating on this subject, they have affected to display more at large their usurped dignities.

We must acknowledge that the Gentlemen we have met, are personally such as we could have wished to confer with.

We have the honour, &c., WEST. HYDE, JOHN ANDRE. To His Excellency Sir Henry Clinton.

Amboy, April 16th, 1776.

We have to give your Excellency some further information as to our proceed-

We find that the American Commissioners still urge the enlargement of our powers as necessary for a General Cartel, but we evidently see that it is for the purpose of appearing to treat on the footing of a nation at war; and we cannot perceive that a concession on this head would have any other effect than giving them a triumph, especially as they introduce very improper matter to be acceded to, which this would not tend to remove.

We have candidly shown them the ground on which we can proceed, and even made a proposal as to the rates at which officers of dissimilar ranks, and privates, might be exchanged for each other; but we have told them on the other hand, that if only a partial exchange was to take place, we insisted on, and would not de- To His Excellency Sir Henry Clinton.

They appear as though they felt they must accede to something of this nature, and consequently want to confine it as much as possible, and to reduce to the lowest, the proportion of privates given with officers, rejecting that proposed; and they lay some stress on the different value of our trained soldiers, inlisted for life, and their own troops, whose term of service is daily expiring, or who are a rude militia, lending a precarious assistance, thus justifying their reluctance to giving ours up; they also, with the utmost perseverance, strive to enhance the ranks they chiefly possess, and depreciate those where we have the advantage in number, without reference to precedent, or regard to impartiality.

the same time with their officers, in order

The articles which they have shewn us in a model for a cartel are many of them utterly inadmissible, and for the most part are vague and obnoxious to wilful constructions, tending to furnish pretences for retaliative infringements. Whatever success may attend our labours, they shall be unremitted: We shall continue to compare our ideas upon matters that can become the objects of this negociation, and shall see, if (when all is rejected on both sides that cannot be agreed upon,) there will be a residue worthy of making the substance of a treaty. We shall at least acquire materials for evincing your Excellency's generous intentions, and the satisfaction of having followed up the enemy's difficulties, till we found them originating in severe and unjustifiable policy.

We shall be happy to know that your Excellency approves our conduct, and to receive your further commands and advice.

We have, &c. WEST HYDE, John Andre. New York, April 17, 1779.

I have received your letters of the 14th and 16th of this month, from the hope that the Enemy's Commissioners would soon be convinced of the generous intentions with which you mean to prosecute the business, and would in consequence meet you with as fair an inclination. I do not think it necessary to answer your account of their first cavils; I am concerned to find by your second letter, that on their Part there still subsists an Hesitation and Chicane, so little merited by the Tenor of your Propositions.

Gentlemen,

I have only to say, that I approve entirely, both the Liberality and Circumspection of your Conduct in those Points of your Negociation you have hitherto laid before me; should the conference prove fruitless, the Uprightness of your Proceedings will at least mark undeniably the generosity of our views.

I have the Honour to be, Gentlemen, Your most obedient Humble Servant, H. CLINTON.

Col. West Hyde, and Capt. John Andre.

Amboy, the 17th April, 1779.

We had the honour to inform your Excellency, that whatever might be our hopes of our success, we wou'd, if possible, make ourselves acquainted with the real views of the enemy, as to an exchange: We are sorry to have to report, that the more we become acquainted with them, the more dissonant we find them from liberality, and the less hopes we conceive of being able to come to any kind of arrangement. They appear to us to be totally governed by the policy of not giving up private men; and the whole of their meeting us, seems to have been to amuse the clamorous prisoners in our hands. There are, perhaps, some extravagant terms on which they wou'd accede to a partial exchange, excluding from it 450 officers and privates due from the agree-The prisoners of ment at the Cedars. Georgia, of whom they have no authentic conference was solicited by Congress, mereaccount, amounting perhaps to upwards of a thousand, striking off militia-officers and soldiers, whose capture whilst out of service, they think inadmissible, reducing the rank of others, and rating officers for privates, at a proportion of their own; but even these terms we cannot bring them to propose, and only find that they would not give us anything approaching to a battalion proportion of men with officers.

In consequence of their refusing their assent to a general delivery of prisoners, and declaring they cou'd not frame a General Cartel on the powers we had, we proposed to them to exchange two regiments of the Convention at a time (one British and one foreign) a Major-General with a wing; General Burgoyne after the first half, &c., as far as the number of Prisoners, both officers and men here, or elsewhere, in our power, should extend.

In the whole course of our conferences, they have found obstacles to whatever we have thrown out; nor have we been able to discover that any opening to compound, or even any concession, tended to soften or bring them nearer to an agreement-We have therefore resolved to make a definitive offer, as soon as we shall hear from your Excellency what your determina-tion is on the prisoners of the Cedars, &c., have you further instructions, where you may see them necessary. On a refusal to accede to that offer, we shall with the utmost disappointment and mortification close this fruitless negociation.

We have, &c., West Hyde, John Andre. To His Excellency Sir Henry Clinton.

New York, April 18th, 1779.

Gentlemen,

I have received your letter of yesterday, and am sorry to find, that the fixed determination of the enemy's Commissioners to evade every preliminary which might tend to real negociation, becomes hourly more

I agree in sentiment with you, that this ly to still clamours of their officers; their real indifference for whose fate, appears clearly through every step of their proceedings.

With this conviction, possibly the most becoming step would be to break off instantly, and spurn the idea of further negociation with a people who invariably meet you with such ungenerous resolutions: But a just tenderness for the sensations of our officers and soldiers in their hands, and even a desire to prove to those of the enemy, prisoners with us, how averse we are to take any unworthy advantage of the severity of their situation, oblige me to attend to two or three articles on which the enemy ground their principal subterfuges.

I am not sufficiently informed as to the transaction at the Cedars; but having always heard that affair stigmatized as a glaring breach of faith on the part of the Americans, I cannot give my sanction to the infraction of that capitulation, by yielding the claim in this public negociation: Yet, that from thence no bar may arise to your present business, I will consent that the charge shall sleep 'till Sir Guy Carleton, or those more particularly interested shall have made their represen-

The principle of not accounting for officers bearing commissions in the militia, and not taken actually in the field, is utterly inadmissible, the proposition is as illiberal towards us, as it is cruel to the unfortunate objects concerned; It is a point which could not have been disputed, but for their present purpose.

With regard to the prisoners whom we have taken in Georgia, as I have sent with you a formal return, signed by Major General Prevost, of all taken before their defeat at Briar Creek, I cannot accede to the enemy's proposal of paying no regard to those prisoners, should exchange either general or partial be agreed upon. When they say they have no authentic documents on that head, I must consider it merely an evasion: It is not to be conceived that they have not yet procured exact returns to Mr. John Rogers, who held the office of a matter, in which so many anxious of Town Clerk of Gloucester, Cape Ann, families amongst them must be distressingly interested. I will suspend, if necessary, the consideration of the prisoners taken at Briar Creek, 'till a more formal report shall have been made of their rank and number.

As to the arbitrary and incongruous proportion of men for officers, on which they hint a possibility of their acceding to a Tariff, which would, toward us, be very inequitable, it is not to be supposed that they even expected your concurrence to such vague and partial propositions.

I have now, gentlemen, given you my final determination on those points of their changeable and indefinite pretensions, to which they seem most to adhere. Should that spirit of evasion still subsist on their part it will neither be becoming, nor will my wishes for your satisfaction permit, that you should remain with them an hour longer; and I do therefore in that case, direct your immediate return.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen, Your most obedient,

Humble Servant,

H. CLINTON.

Col. West Hyde, and Capt. John Andre.

K.

Motes and Oneries.

NOTES.

"Josiah Quincy, Jr., of 1775.—(Vol. VII. p. 192).—In consequence of the notice of the death of Josiah Quincy, Jr., of 1775, in "THE HISTORICAL MAGAZINE for June, 1863," it is requisite to state that the account of his death, given in the memoir published by his son in 1825, was received from his widow, and confirmed by his sister, Mrs. Storer, who died in 1826, at the age of ninety years. Previous to the publication of the memoir, a letter was addressed for upwards of forty-five years, and also that of Notary Public. In the reply of Mr. Rogers to Mr. Quincy, dated "Gloucester, April 2, 1825," he regrets that "after examining the Records of that Town and of the Board of Selectmen for that period, and after conversing with two aged men who attended the funeral of Josiah Quincy, Jr., in April, 1775, he has no farther information to impart, except the assurance that the last services were very fully attended, and every testimony of respect and of sorrow for the loss the country had sustained rendered by the inhabitants of Gloucester."

This communication has been delayed until the letter of Mr. Rogers, written thirty-nine years ago, could be found and consulted.

The conflicting accounts of the death of Mr. Quincy are to be attributed to the agitation and alarm prevalent in the country around Boston in April, 1775, when all direct intercourse was interrupted.

ELIZA S. QUINCY. No. 5 PARK St., BOSTON, May 11, 1864.

CAPT. THOMAS MACHEN.—Vol. VIII. p. 149.—It is due to the memory of Capt. Thomas Machen to say that the note, page 149 of the April number of your magazine, is not correct in the statement that his coinage was illegal. In 1787, Capt. Machen formed a partnership with Samuel Atlee and others, of New York, for the purpose of coining money under charter to be obtained from the Legislature of New York. They either failed to obtain such charter or made better arrangements, for in 1788 they united with Reuben Harrison, and others of Bennington, Vt. who had a charter from that state, and also authority to coin for the state of Connecticut, and it was under this authority that Capt. Machen's mill at New Grange was conducted. As soon as the coinage of money was taken from the states by the adoption of the federal constitution, Capt. Machen's mill was stopped. The business was certainly discontinued in 1790. Capt. Machen never transacted any illegal business, and the authorities never had occasion to interfere with him. Mr. Bushnell, ing over the immortal roll of the Signers of New York, and Gen. Thos. Machen, now residing in Albany, can satisfy your correspondent upon these points.

Indians in Orange County .-- (Vol. viii. p. 152.) The article on "Indians in Orange County" (p. 152) would be of much value if authorities were given. have been led to believe that there never was a "Wawayanda Tribe," and I beg to say that "Minsies" was never corrupted into "Minisink." The fact in the latter case is, that the terminal ink is pure Delaware or Algonquin, and signifies locality -literally the country of the Minsies. The term Wawayanda was applied as describing land, not tribe, or my reading of the original deed is sadly at fault (see land papers at Albany). Will "J. M. E." favor me with his authorities?

An Acrostic from the Massachusetts Magazine for September, 1789:—

"Great in the martial field, in council wise; Each virtue guides thee in thy pleasing way, On wings triumphant, how thy glories rise! Refulgent as th'unclouded God of Day! George on his sea-girt throne beholds his sun, Eclips'd forever by a Washington!

When War's tumultuous bloody front alarmed: And civil discord every torch had fired; Serenely brave, the tyrants thou disarmed, Hence, at thy frown, Britannia's host retired, In peace; reverting to thy Vernon's stream; No views ambitious pointed thee to thrones; Genius of Freedom, thou art hailed supreme, The chosen guardian of Columbia's sons. On brass and marble shall thy deeds remain; No time's corroding breath can blight thy fame." H. P., JR.

PHILADELPHIA.

Col. Pickering.—(Vol. VIII. p. 66.)-The tradition that this distinguished patriot died at the Hasbrouck house, Newburgh, N.Y., at the close of the Revolution, alluded to in the interesting sketches of Mr. Eager, is not correct. He died at his native town, Salem, Mass., Jan. 29, 1829, in . his 84th year, after a life of great usefulness and honor.

LINEAGE OF THE "SIGNERS."—On look-of the Declaration of Independence, curio-|drew Jackson, written during the troublous sity has led me to examine from what stock times of 1814. they sprang. I find that 4 of them were natives of Ireland, viz. Thornton, Rutledge, Smith, and Taylor; 2 of Scotland, Wilson and Witherspoon; 1 of Wales, Lewis; and 1 of England, Robert Morris. There are also 3 of direct Welsh origin, learn from your letter the mutinous dispo Williams, Floyd (originally Lloyd) and L. sition that has made its appearance in Morris; 3 of Irish, Carroll, Read, and your Regt. This is a bud of that spirit McKean; 2 of Scotch, Hooper and Living-that was excited long ago by the officers ston; 1 of Swedish, Morton; 1 of Norman, of the volunteers and militia last fall, and Bartlett, and 1 of Austrian, Lynch. The the indulgence of the Governor and thro others are of old English stock generally; though there is Welsh blood in the ancestry of John Adams, Jefferson, Hewes (probably), Clymer, Gwinnett (originally Gwinnedd), and perhaps Robert Morris, as I am informed by a gentleman better informed on genealogical matters than myself. Morris was born in Lancashire, near Wales, and from the name there cannot be much doubt of his Welsh origin. Clymer and his wife, the daughter of Reese Meredith to be held at Fort Jackson. A proper (originally Meredidd), were both of Welsh example will put an end to all further atorigin. The Signers from New England tempts at meeting—and if the troops or were generally direct descendants from the Puritans. J. B. R.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Ruled Paper.—Why will paper-makers and stationers persist in leaving the last page of letter or note-paper blank, in ruling it? I believe this question is daily asked by thousands. Now that the use of envelopes is all but universal, there is no sense or reason in leaving the last page unruled, to the annoyance of every letterwriter. Let some stationer try the experiment of ruling and advertising a lot, half with the blank page and half without, and see which sells first. Although it is really less trouble to rule over the whole sheet completely, I would pay twenty-five cents per ream more for paper thus ruled, being somewhat of an extensive son.—Among the donations of a sanitary and the classic spirit in the heroic times fair was an official letter by General An- of 1775: HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

LETTER-WRITER.

To Col. Phillip Pipkin.

FORT JACKSON CREEK NATION HEADQUARTERS 7TH DIST. Mobile Sept 12th 1814.

Sir: It is with extreme regret, that I his influence that was extended to them by the General Government.

I told him it would have a baneful influence on the service-but must be checked or our independence and liberty is gone forever. Unless checked a war cannot be carried on, a defence against that foreign coalition that we have every right to believe does exist, cannot be made.

I have ordered a general court martial any part should attempt to desert, the troops now organizing at Fayetteville will be competent to apprehend them.

On such an event, send an express direct to have them apprehended and confined.

A few being shot, will learn the ballance that the have a country, and the have rights to defend; and if the expect the protection of the law, the must perform the duty of good citizens.

We have various accounts of the British. They are in Pensacola, and would the Government say the word we would soon have a frolic.

With sentiments of esteem and respect,

I am your most ob't serv't, ANDREW JACKSON, Maj. General Commanding.

LATIN ODE ON WASHINGTON .- (Vol. VIII. p. 154.)—The following translation of this ode, more literal than poetical, will AUTOGRAPH LETTER OF ANDREW JACK- allow the English reader to see its measure

On Geo. Washington appointed to the office of Generalin-Chief by Congress and the American people.

Boston demands thee, (where a wicked leader Shuts up the hapless people, and forbids them Leaving the city); and she is exciting Courage of old time.

Brave man! may prosper what thou art preparing. They slay the people, and the maid assaulted Perishes wretchedly! and the shrill outcry Sounds on our hearing.

May God afford thee what we are entreating, Safely return thee to a grieving nation: Quick may'st thou smite the armies of the foemen Raging with slaughter.

Praises await thee, and the kindest favor Gives thee a welcome from the face of all men, Where once the cruel Indian spread his havoc Sprinkled with bloodshed, BRUNSWICK, ME.

QUERIES.

GILMARTIN.—What is the force of the first syllable, GIL, in this and similar combinations; Gilman, Gilpatrick (Kilpatrick), and perhaps others?

Gil in Irish and Scotch names is from the word Giolla, meaning servant, and is found before the name of God, Jesus, Christ, Mary, forming Gildea (Culdee), Gillis, Gilchrist, Gilmore (Gilmary); before the name of St. Martin alone of foreign saints; but before a great number of Irish saints-Gilpatrick, Gilbride, Gilsenan, Kil is often a corruption of Gil, but as a local name means church.

Trial of Tortoises in Canada.—In a note on trials of animals for crimes and misdemeanors in the London Notes and Queries it is stated that tortoises were tried in Canada towards the end of the 16th century. He seemed to draw his statement from Berriat St. Prix (Mem. de la Société des Antiquaires). What can be the meaning of this? As there was no French settlement in Canada at the close of the 16th century, we are left in the that Clarendon drew up these laws? dark?

REPLIES.

THE ARMS OF HERBENDINCK .- (Vol. VIII. p. 154).—If "H." (instead of putting an idle query in the April number of the HISTORICAL MAGAZINE) had taken the trouble to look into the North Dutch Church in William street some Sunday morning he would have seen the hatchment containing John Harpendinck's or (Herbendinck's) arms hanging over the pulpit, where it has been for the last ninety years, since it was first removed from the old Garden Street Church.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN FENWICK.—(Vol.  ${f VIII}$ . p. 154.)—There appears to have been  ${f a}$ close connexion between the families of "Lorraine," of Northumberland, and "Fenwiche;" thus Sir Thomas Lorraine had a son William, a daughter Catharine, and a son "Fenwich"; his son William had a daughter Jane, who married "John Fenwiche," thought to be the Major John Fenwich who was of Cromwell's army, and was on duty at the execution of King Charles the First; and possibly, though I should think not probably, the West Jersey proprietor in connexion with Penn, who was I believe a royalist and courtier. Catharine above named as daughter of Sir Thomas Lorraine, married (a runaway match I believe) David Lyell, an artizan of London, and they came to this country and settled at Amboy; they had a son "Fenwiche Lyell" (died in 1742), he left a son Fenwich Lyell; the name of both Fenwich and Lyell, however, I think is now extinct in that line; there are descendants from him of the name of Micheau in New Jersey; this is all I know. I should like to club my slender stock with your querist's for common benefit.

No. 87 WALL STREET.

THE DUKE OF YORK'S LAWS. - (Vol. VIII. p. 116.)—In the last March number of the Historical Magazine it is asked, "When and where did the idea originate not 'scissors' more properly the author?"

ASHER TAYLOR.

P. Daly, in his introduction to E. D. Smith's New Haven had been printed as early as Common Pleas Reports, published in 1855, states that after the Duke of York learned the success of Nicolls's expedition, he aplied to Lord Chancellor Clarendon, "to 332; Thomas I. 260; Col. Rec., Conn., draw up a body of laws for the government II. 190, 201, 214, 567, 568). Nicolls of his new territory. Clarendon accordingly prepared a code, and this code or New Haven and Massachusetts codes, and digest was transmitted to Nicolls, who appears to have asked Governor Winthrop immediately called a convention formally to furnish him with a copy of that Connecto ratify and adopt it." In a foot-note, ticut not yet printed. But he was disap-Judge Daly reiterates "the fact that Clarendon was the author of this code," add-of February, 1665, five days before the ing that "many circumstances might be adduced, the result of a very full investigation of the subject, to show that he was author." This appears to have been the first publication of the theory.

In a letter to Secretary Hedges, dated July 15, 1705, Lord Cornbury states that when the Duke sent Nicolls to take possession of New York, "he gave him certain laws by which the Province was to be your lawes, knowing that nothing of so governed, which to this day are called the Duke's laws."—Colonial Documents, IV. 1154. There is also a marginal note in Learning and Spicer's Grants and Con-applyd to matters of that nature."—Trumcessions, page 174, that the Duke's laws bull Papers, XX. 74. MSS. Mass. Hist. were "supposed to be sent over with Governor Nicolls." Both these statements are without authority.

pied" or continued from that established by the Dutch, and in which he had the chief voice), prepared the code before the meeting of the Assembly at Hempstead on the 28th of February, 1665, at which it was promulgated. On page 578, Chalmers adds, "there is the most decisive evidence that the code was compiled at the Assizes before mentioned." The code was evidently the work of Nicolls himself, assisted by his Provincial Secretary, Mathias Nicolls, who was a lawyer, and perhaps by other members of the Court of Assizes. Many of its provisions are borrowed from those "in practice in His Majesty's other colo-

Let me answer both queries. Judge C. in its general arrangement. The laws of 1656 (New Haven Rec. II. 146, 154, 186, 559), while those of Connecticut were left seems to have had copies of the printed pointed in the latter case; for on the 23d Hempstead Assembly, he thus wrote to Winthrop-"I am very sorry that the copy of your Lawes will not come early enough to my hands, out of which I might have made a choice before the general meeting which will be next Tuesday at Hempstead; having made it my whole business to prepare a body of Lawes against that time: -but however, I shall be glad to receive public a nature as Lawes can be perfect at first, especially from my collection, whose genius and capacity (if any) hath not been Soc. Nicolls sent his code to the Duke of York for confirmation after November, 1665: Col. Doc. III. 104, 226; Chalmers, On the other hand, Chalmers, in his 577, 580, 599. I trust this will settle the Political Annals, p. 577, says that the question of the authorship of "The Duke's "Court of Assizes" (which Nicolls "co- Laws." J. B. B.

Societies and their Proceedings.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—April 19, 1864. The stated monthly meeting was duly held,

W. L. Newberry, Esq., presiding.
The library collections for the month, making an aggregate (of all classes) of 1,422, included an extensive contribution from the literary remains of the late John Russell, LL.D., of Bluffnies in New England."—See Thompson's dale, Illinois, the obliging gift of the family. A Long Island, II. 324. It resembles them bound volume of autographs of officers of the "Confederate" army, prisoners on Johnson's Island, was presented by Lieutenant J. R. Johnson, U.S.A. A valuable collection of MS. statistics from the several counties of Iowa was donated by Mr. N. H. Parker.

The monthly correspondence (twenty-six letters received, and sixty-seven written) was then communicated. A letter was read from Mr. Spencer G. Russell, giving interesting particulars of the life and literary remains of his father, the late John Russell.

A paper was then read, presented to the Society by Mr. L. Proudfoot, of Chicago, furnishing the substance of information given by Guoden S. Hubbard, Esq., relative to the Indian Treaties of 1832, by which the Pottowattomie Indians ceded to the United States their lands, then embraced in the territories of Illinois, Indiana, and Michigan, Mr. Hubbard having been "Indian Interpreter" during the treaty negotia-

MASSACHUSETTS.

AMERICAN ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY.—The semiannual meeting of the American Antiquarian Society was held at the Hall of the American Academy, in the Athenæum Building in Boston, April 27th. The President, Hon. Stephen Salisbury, in the chair. The semi-annual report of the council was read by Hon. Ira M. Barton. It reviewed the condition of the funds, library, and cabinet, and contained a defence of the Puritans of New England against the charge of cruelty in the removal of the French neutrals from Acadie.

The report of the treasurer, Nathaniel Paine, Esq., showed the present state of the funds of the society as follows: Librarian's and general Fund, $21,763.82; Collection and Research Fund, $8,910.06; Bookbinding Fund, $6,691.04; Publishing Fund, $6,092.64; aggregate, $44,267.56.

The librarian, Samuel F. Haven, Esq., introduced his report by a reference at some length to the position occupied before the world by an American antiquarian society in connexion with the fict of the superior antiquity of this continent, while the supposed primitive inhabitants of Europe, in respect to arts, habits, and even physical conformation, had apparently their exact counterpart in the recent aborigines of America, and while the extinct mammals and fishes ascribed to remote geological periods are here still represented, or have been coëxistent with man of no very distant date. 302 bound volumes and 1,002 pamphlets had been added to the library, including a large col- Historical and Genealogical Register. lection of matter relating to the war.

A resolution of respect to the memory of Shakspeare, and paying a tribute to his wonderful intellectual endowments, offered by the president, was adopted.

The following gentlemen, recommended by the council, were nominated and elected members of the society: Ashbel Woodward, M.D., of Connecticut; Hon. Wm. Willis, of Maine; President Martin B. Anderson, of Rochester University, New York; Alexander S. Taylor, Esq., of San Francisco, Cal.

Mr. Folsom presented to the notice of the Society an interesting Latin inscription on a p'ate of copper recently discovered at Castine, Me. This plate was evidently once attached to the foundation of a Roman Catholic chapel, built in 1648, and dedicated to the Virgin under the title of "Nostræ Dominæ Sanctæ Spei"— "Our Lady of the Holy Hope"—the inscription being written by a Capucin missionary, Leo of

It was voted that the reports and proceedings of the meeting should be printed in the usual

After a vote of thanks was passed to the American Academy for the use of its rooms, the meeting adjourned.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SO-CIETY.-Boston, April 6 -A quarterly meeting was held this afternoon, at three o'clock, Vice-President Moore in the chair.

Mr. Sheppard, the Librarian, reported eleven volumes of books and two of newspapers, seventy-three pamphlets and two manuscripts, received as donations since last meeting.

Frederick Kidder reported that the Board of Directors had decided in favor of celebrating the tercentenary birthday of Shakspeare, and had invited Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., to deliver an address on the occasion.

Colonel Almon D. Hodges announced the death of his friend, John Barstow, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Society, and offered the following resolutions, which he prefaced with a few remarks upon his character:

Resolved,—That in the death of John Barstow. Esq., of Providence, R I., our Society has experienced the loss of one of its most liberal benefactors—an upright, honorable, and honest man, a true and faithful Christian, an enterprising and universally respected citizen, and one who has filled all offices of responsibility and trust with honor to himself, and for the good of all with whom he has been connected.

Resolved,-That a memoir of the deceased be prepared for publication in the New England

Resolved,—That we deeply sympathize with the afflicted family of the deceased, and that the Recording Secretary be instructed to communicate to them these resolutions.

Rev. A. P. Putnam, of Roxbury, read an able and interesting paper on Our Country, as seen from a Distance

Rev. F. W. Holland, from the committee to whom the communications of Rev. G. G. Hepgood, of Delta, N. Y., were referred, made a report adverse to the views on the Eastern languages advocated in those communications.

Boston, May 4.—A stated meeting was held this afternoon. Rev. Mr. Bradley, the Corresponding Secretary, reported a letter from Frederick W. Sawyer, of Boston, accepting resident ledge of human nature, of man as an individual, membership, to which he had been elected.

Thanks were voted to Rev. J. F. Clarke, D.D., John H. Sheppard, and Rev. F. W. Holland, for the able manner in which they acquitted themselves on the occasion of the tercentenary celebration of Shakspeare's birth, April 23, and copies of the addresses and ode were requested.

Rev. F. W. Holland, of Cambridge, was unanimously elected a director in place of the late John Barstow.

Rev. William P. Tilden, of Boston, read a care-Hon. Horace Mann, whose labors in the cause of education have laid New England, and especially Massachusetts, under a lasting debt of gratitude.

Boston, April 23.—SHAKSPEARE CELEBRATION. The 300th anniversary of the birthday of Shakspeare was celebrated in this city by the New England Historic Genealogical Society, in the Hall of the House of Representatives, commencing at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Winslow Lewis, the President, called upon Governor Andrew to preside, and the Governor, on taking the chair, said he did so merely for the purpose of introducing those who were to make the addresses on the occasion.

Rev. James Freeman Clarke delivered the principal address, and in speaking of the little that was known of the early life of Shakspeare, said the class of critics who denied the existence of Homer, Moses, and Christ, might find equally strong grounds for doubting whether such a man as Shakspeare lived. With all the labor that had been expended by the numerous critics that had been on his track, there had been but a few incidents of his life learned. These were that he married, had three children, was an actor in London and a writer of plays; became tolerably wealthy, returned to Stratford, and died at the age of fifty-two.

Shakspeare was better known by his works, but neither in the century in which he lived nor the following one was he appreciated. Tt. remained for a German, Schlegel, to rediscover him, and since his day, the standard of learning and taste was to be measured in proportion to the appreciation in which Shakspeare was held, until it had come to this result, in the estimation of men of learning, to place him at the summit of human intellect. The conclusion from this followed that imagination was the highest of human faculties.

The speaker referred to some of the characteristics of the plays of Shakspeare, the greatest of all which was his wisdom in the knowledge of the laws which govern the world-his knowand mankind in action. The address was closed with quotations which were said to be applicable to the affairs of our own country at this time, and to Great Britain in expressing sympathy for a rebellion which was likened to that of Jack Cade.

John H. Sheppard, the librarian of the Society, made some quotations of the opinions of Fisher Ames, Rev. Dr. Chalmers, and others, of the genius of Shakspeare, and gave some reminiscences of his early remembrance of the Fedefully prepared and discriminating memoir of ral Street Theatre in the days of Cooper. He then recited with spirit the following original poem upon Shakspeare:

> In Stratford upon Avon Where the silent waters flow, The immortal Drama woke from sleep, Three hundred years ago;

When, as the long, dark ages roll'd away, A light from Heaven shone on SHAKSPEARE'S face.

Land of the illustrious Dead! With thee this day,

We love to linger near that hallowed place. For thou wert there the Fatherland of our New England race.

Beyond the Rocky Mountains, From the Golden Gate of fame, To Schoodia's distant misty shores, Is heard his honored name. Live where we may, such life-like scenes he drew, Arrayed in robes of beauty, all his own, Nature herself proclaims each picture true To Albion's echoing hills ;-nor there alone, Even Niagara speaks in Prospero's thunder-tone.

Ah! what a halcyon memory Our school-boy days bring on, When young Othello told us how He Desdemona won. Where are the voices that once fill'd the air? Let no stern manhood deem the allusion wrong, When the boy dream'd the enchanted isle was there

Near Academic grove, unknown to song Where Kennebec among the hills meandering glides

Not in the Theatre alone Is seen his wondrous power, Though some great actor tread the stage, The pageant of an hour: He visits many a humble home-and when Some brave thought stirs the heart sorrow riven, We feel like heroes-though we live like mer. In lowly lot; and yet where oft at even The Bard of Avon sweeps th' Æolian harp of Heaven.

England! with all thy glory From the Druid days of old, Not Cressy's pride, nor Agincourt, Nor Field of the cloth of gold, Shine with such virtue in all coming time As genius, learning, minstrelsy inspire. They fill the ideal world with thoughts sublime, Guiding Ambition's eye to aim far higher, Than light the flames of civil war, with strange, unholy fire!

Ther gleam like stars in history Along a dreary waste, Who first enlarged the bounds of mind, Or raised the tone of taste. Thus Bacon looms up in that glorious age Of Spenser's lay and Johnson's critic eye, When a Promethean spark illum'd the Stage. And SHAKSPEARE drew such scenes of time gone

That life seems but a Drama here-midst shadows of Eternity.

Rev. F. W. Holland also made an Address, in which some of the principal characteristics of Shakspeare were pointed out.

These addresses closed the celebration, the Hall of the House and the galleries being well filled on the occasion.

NEW YORK.

LONG ISLAND HISTORICAL SOCIETY. - Brooklyn, May .- A special meeting of this Society was held on Thursday evening. Prof. West in the chair. A donation of $250 for the purchase of books on American biography was received from Mr. William H. Swan. Dr. Stiles, the librarian, read a paper on the battle of Long Island, translated from Max von Eelking's "History of the Hessians in the Revolution." Mr. John Fowler, jr., read a paper on Wayne's attack on the Jersey Block House. It was announced by the chairman that the annual meeting would be held simile."

on the first Thursday in May, at which time there would be an election of officers for the ensuing year.

NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—April 5. The President, Frederick De Peyster, presided.

The minutes were read.

Dr. Osgood, Domestic Corresponding Secretary, read letters from Alexander C. Anderson, of Victoria, Vancouver's Island, accepting his election as a corresponding member; and from Jared P. Kirtland, of Cleveland, Ohio, giving an account of the discovery at different times in Rockport (five miles west of Cleveland) of warlike instruments, and especially of an extensive common grave, containing very many human skeletons.

The Librarian, among a long list of donations, called the especial attention of the members to that of the President, Mr. De Peyster, an original pencil portrait of the once famous John Cleves Symmes, by the late Mr. Audubon. Mr. Benjamin R. Winthrop presented on behalf of Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, of Boston, a copy of the original "Conditions for New Planters," promulgated by Governor Nicolls soon after the conquest of New Netherland, regarded by the Society as one of the most interesting memorials of early New York history.

Mr. Moore also mentioned the recent donation by Mr. John Austin Stevens, Jr., of all the original letters and documents connected with the great meetings of the Loyal National League, and referred to Mr. Stevens's previous gift of a similar collection of the papers of the Loyal Meeting of the 15th July, 1862.

The thanks of the Society were tendered to Messrs. Winthrop and Stevens for their dona-

Judge Kirkland, from the Executive Committee, reported on the nominations for membership, and the following gentlemen were elected:—As an honorary member, M. Edouard Laboulaye, of Paris. As resident members: Thomas R. Hawley, Rinaldo M. Waters, Reuben W. Howes, Jr., S. Howard Howes, Leonard W. Tobey, John W. Somers, James B. Stokes, John Wolfe, Thomas E. Brown, Thomas A. Whittemore, Appleton Sturgis, John E. Barron.

Candidates for new members were submitted and referred to the Executive Committee.

The President read a letter from Rev. Dr. Dix, Rector of Trinity Church, presenting to the Society, on behalf of the vestry, "the monumental stone which formerly marked the grave of William Bradford, and which has been recently replaced by a new head-stone, its perfect fac-

Thanks were voted to the vestry for the interesting relic.

Mr. Edward Satterlee, from a Special Committee appointed at a preceding meeting, read a report confirmatory of Mr. Thomas J. Bryan's views of his intention to present to the Society his collection of paintings, about 250 in number, which he had been collecting during the past thirty years; his object being to form a collection of pictures representing the early schools of painting, and to illustrate in some degree the relation existing in early times between Art and Religion. Mr. Satterlee submitted the form, a conveyance setting forth the terms of the gift, be properly taken care of, and advantageously exhibited in the buildings of the Society for public inspection, and that artists and visitors shall have the privilege of studying and making copies thereof, subject to the rules and regulations of the Society.

The Society adopted the report of the committee, and ordered its officers to execute the necessary instruments to carry into effect the munificent intentions of Mr. Bryan.

Dr. Osgood made a report on behalf of the committee appointed to tender a welcome to the Iroquois chiefs, on visiting this city, on their way to Washington, stating that committees of chiefs were welcomed in the hall of the Historical Society on the evening of the 21st March.

John Fowler, Jr., Esq., of New Rochelle, read the paper of the evening, entitled, "Wayne's Attack on the Jersey Blockhouse, July 21st, literary assistant to the historian.

The Society returned thanks to Mr. Fowler for the reading of his paper, and asking him for a copy for its archives.

Mr. George H. Moore, in a suitable resolution, called the attention of the Society to the death of its fellow-member, Thomas Tileston. Osgood made some remarks on the character of Mr. Tileston, and was followed by General W. K. Strong, and the resolution was adopted unanimously.

Mr. Fowler, after some remarks, submitted a resolution expressive of the sentiments of the Society on the recent decease of its fellow-member, William J. Davis. The resolution was adopted.

The Society then adjourned.

consisted of two papers prepared by Mr. Geo. H. Moore, the librarian; one of them upon the War-sword of Washington and John Bailey the cutler who forged it, and the other, a sketch of a Council of the Six Nations, held in 1785 upon the spot where Buffalo now stands. This sketch is part of an account of a journey from Montreal to Detroit in 1785, written by Miss Powell, the daughter of a Boston loyalist who fled away in 1776, sister of Chief Justice Powell, of Canada, and a connexion by marriage of Lord Lyndhurst. A paper by Judge Charles P. Daly was also read, entitled, "When was the Drama introduced into America?" Some which are substantially that the pictures shall interesting articles from the Metropolitan Fair, gifts from Col. Rush C. Hawkins, were exhibited, including a complete model of a pontoon train and bridge, John Morgan's saddle, and one of those ingenious "letter boats" by which the rebels used to communicate with the mainland from Fort Macon and other island places. A resolution, moved by Col. Hawkins, was adopted, to constitute a Committee to secure for the Society trophies, arms, and other memorials of the war, and the Committee was appointed, Colonel Hawkins, Chairman. Upon occasion of the presentation of a book to the Society by Mr. Verplanck, Mr. Bancroft delivered a very eulogistic address upon the attainments and the Ethnological and Geographical, and of this merits of the donor. Mr. Bancroft also made Society, had performed that duty, and that the some remarks upon Mr. W. J. Davis, a deceased member of the Society. Mr. Davis was a man of many pleasant qualities, possessed of a large store of local antiquarian knowledge, and for some time, we understand, a faithful and useful

> BUFFALO HISTORICAL SOCIETY. - Buffalo, March. -At the meeting for the month of March, M. Fillmore, President, in the Chair, and Guy H. Salisbury, Secretary, the following were among the proceedings:-

> Guy H. Salisbury, as Corresponding Secretary, in his written report for the preceding month, mentions the matters below noted.

The weekly Club meetings during the month were held at the following places: Feb. 15th. at Gibson T. Williams's, where O. G. Steele read a biographical sketch, prepared by him, at the request of the Society, of the late Walter Joy; and Charles D. Norton read a similar sketch, relative to the late Silas Sawin-both of the deceased having been members of the Society; February 22, at E. S. Prosser's, where a memoir of the late Judge James Mullett, former-New York, May 3.—The regular meeting of the ly of this city, was read—having been prepared Society took place on Tuesday evening. President by O. Stiles, Esq., of Fredonia, for the Scientific De Peyster in the chair, and a large audience pread Historical Association of that place; Feb. sent. The literary exercises of the occasion 19th at Dr. Jas. P. White's, where a portion of a History of the Lake Marine, prepared by Capt-

Augustus Walker, was read.

An important historical feature of the month, was the "Old Folks' Festival," held at American Hall, during the entire week, commencing Feb. 22d. The hall was hung with portraits of many of our oldest residents, and all of the exercises had were of an interesting character. Papers, intended to be read on the occasion, were furnished as follows:

By Col. Benj. Hodge, a sketch entitled, "Buffalo-Past, Present, and Future."

By Wm. Hodge-A brief narrative of the journey performed by his father, the late William Hodge, when he came from Exeter, Otsego County, in 1805.

By Henry Lovejoy-An interesting review of the progress of Buffalo during the past half century

By Mrs. Jane Bidwell-Her recollections of the War of 1812, during a part of which her husband, Mr. Benjamin Bidwell, was engaged in building the American fleet at Sackett's Harbor and Erie.

By Mrs. Frances E. Lay-Her mother, Mary Enos, came to Buffalo in 1804, and shortly after married Asahel Atkins, who held a Lieutenant's commission in the war of 1812.

By Mrs. Thaddeus Weed—Her father, Doctor Cyrenius Chapin, first came to Buffalo in 1801, before the land was surveyed into village lots and proposed to Joseph Ellicott, that he and forty others would buy a township, including the site of Buffalo, but the application was unsuccessful. After the village was laid out, he located here permanently, and opened the first anothecarv's shop in the place. He was a Coloapothecary's shop in the place. He was a Colonel in the war of 1812, and did most efficient service.

By Mrs. Dr. Warner-A brief notice of her father, the late Benjamin Caryl, who came to Buffalo in 1807, but in 1812 removed to Williamsville in this country, where the firm of Juba Storrs & Co, in which he was a partner, had a store, and several large mills. He returned to Buffalo in 1812, and lived here nearly forty years.

By Ira Merrill—A statement of his first journey to Buffalo in 1814, with a stock of goods, and a recital of his adventures in Canada, in disposing of them.

By Sophia Reynolds-Recollects well the matters below mentioned are noticed: burning of the village. Her brother-in-law, in the defence of which he participated. He removed to Hamburgh in 1815.

By Nathaniel Wilgus-Relating an incident that occurred when Judge Wilkeson was building the harbor at Buffalo Creek; also, that he was employed to paint and decorate the "Seneca Chief," the first boat that made the passage through the Erie Canal from Buffalo to New York in 1825.

By Capt. F. P. Billings—In the spring of 1839, he fitted out and sailed the Brig "Osceola," longing to Kingman and Durfee of Black Rock, and Oliver Lee, of Silver Creek, and during that season, brought the first load of wheat in bulk that was shipped from Chicago.

By Theodore N. Boynton—In relation to the Old School House that stood at the junction of Swan and Erie streets, 35 years ago, its teachers, and its scholars.

By Mrs. Mary B. Wesley-Came to Buffalo in 1836—is mother-in-law of the late Capt. Edward Drew, and has sacrificed several of her family upon the altar of the country's cause during the present war.

By James Clark, of Lancaster, Erie Co.—Came to what is now Lancaster, 1808, when there were but twelve dwelling-houses on the road from Buffalo to the eastern bounds of the county. He was in the war of 1812, and describes the appearance of Buffalo, the next day after it was burned.

By Mrs. Elizabeth Keller—A poem, entitled was duly elected in his stead.

"Ffty Years Ago."

By Guy H. Salisbury-An ode, which was sung at the Old Folks' Concert. Charles D. Norton tendered to the Society his resignation of the office of Recording Secretary, which was accepted, and George Gorham

The following persons were elected as Corresponding Members: Rev. James K. Hosmer, of Deerfield, Mass.; George F. Houghton, of St. Albans, Vt. Edward Everett, of Boston, was elected an honorary member.

BUFFALO HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Buffalo, April. -At the meeting for April, M. Fillmore in the chair, and George Gorham, Recording Secretary, the following were among the proceedings.

Guy H. Salisbury, Corresponding Secretary, submitted his monthly report, in which the

The deaths in the families of old residents have John Reynolds, then owned a farm of 200 acres been unusually numerous. They are noted as on Batavia street, about a mile east of the Court follows: March 1st, at San Francisco, Alexan-House, now covered with hundreds of houses.

By Daniel Brayman, of Hamburgh, Eric Counfalo, and son of the late Capt. Ramsdell; March ty—Came to Buffalo in 1810, and furnished a 8th, Albert L. Baker, Jr., aged 20, Midshipman detailed statement of the burning of the village, in the U.S.N., and youngest son of Judge A. L.

Baker; March 14th, Charles Taintor, aged 58; Albany; Monroe Weed, Wyoming; Samuel B. March 15th, Mrs. Francis Kimmett, aged 56; Woolworth, Albany; Dr. Samuel Freeman, March 18th, Mrs. Julia Pool, wife of Cyrus O. Saratoga; Jas. R. Doolittle, Racine, Wisconsin; Pool, and daughter of the late Wm. Meade; Henry S. Randall, Cortland Village, N.Y.; Wm. March 19th, at Louisville, Ky., Maj. Isaac Sanford, son-in-law of Geo. W. Bull, of this city; Brooklyn, N. Y.

March 22d, Pliny F. Barton, aged 58; Wm.

Guy H. Salisbury, Corresponding Secretary Williage, M.Y. Rink, aged 35; March 27th, at Cleveland, Mrs. and Librarian, tendered his written resignation Maria Fiske, aged 73, mother of Mrs. Orson of those offices, which was accepted, and Dr. Phelps, of this city, and eldest daughter of the Wm. K. Scott was, by ballot, unanimously late Gamaliel and Margaret K. St. John, who elected in his stead. were among the earliest residents of the village of Buffalo; April 3d, Geo. Hadley, aged 17, son of Elijah Hadley; April 6th, Aaron Rumsey, aged 67, a life member of the Buffalo Historical Society and the fifth member that has deceased since its organization; April 11th, Charles Wolfe, aged 26, only son of Christian Wolfe.

The Historical Society Club Meetings have been held as follows: March 14th, at Geo. Palmer's, where Gapt. E. P. Dorr read a paper on "Insurance:" March 21st, at H. W. Rogers's, where Prof. Bradish, of Fredonia, read a memoir memberships. of the late Douglas Houghton, State Geologist of Michigan, prepared by him for the Fredonia Scientific and Historical Association; March 28th, at Capt. E. P. Dorr's, where A. R. Ketchum read a paper on the Buffalo Water Works, Judge Clinton an obituary notice of the late Edward S. Warren, and Judge Skinner one of the late Hon. Jas. G. Hoyt. No further weekly Club meetings are to be held this season.

On motion of H. W. Rogers, the Correspond-Emslie, Civil Engineer, the thanks of the Society for his valuable donation of a manuscript map of the "Village of New Amsterdam," now part of the city of Buffalo, showing the original Holland Land Company.

On motion of Lewis F. Allen, a committee of three was appointed to prepare a memoir of the printed in Philadelphia in the year 1685. late Aaron Rumsey, and resolutions expressive of the regret of the Society for his loss. The President appointed as such committee Judge Skinner, H. W. Rogers, and Judge Hall.

On motion of H. W. Rogers, the Corresponding Secretary was directed to procure a book for the registration of vistors, to be opened May 1st.

The Library Committee reported in favor of purchasing a complete set of the New England England boasts its possession. It was called Historical and Genealogical Register, from its "America's Messenger." A certain Samuel commencement, being 18 volumes; and were Atkyns edited it. authorized to make such purchase.

On motion of Lewis F. Allen, the thanks of the Society were unanimously voted to Guy H. Salisbury, for his untiring zeal and faithful efforts in behalf of the Society, since its inception.

An arrangement formerly made by the Secretary with the proprietors of the daily papers who publish the notices and proceedings of the Society, and furnish their respective newspapers to the Society, for preservation, in return for one membership for each paper, was confirmed; and the privilege hereafter extended to two

PENNSYLVANIA.

PENNSYLVANIA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Philadelphia, May 9.—A meeting of the members of this Society was held at their room, Dr. Benjamin H. Coates in the chair.

Several interesting communications and memoing Secretary was directed to express to Peter rials, etc., were presented. Among them was handsomely engraved invitation card to a ball given on the President's birth-night in 1796, in the amphitheatre. Admittance at six o'clock. A letter was read from Hon. John William Wallots and subdivisions of them, with names of lace, written at Newport, R.I.. transmitting a grantees, and the date of each deed from the volume as having been found in that ancient volume as having been found in that ancient town, which was the first ever issued from the press of the middle colonies. This tract was

In May last, at the celebration in New York of the Bradford bi-centenary, Mr. Wallace referred to this tract in the following words, having then known but little about it:

The earliest issue of Bradford's press known to me is an Almanac for the year 1686, produced of course in 1685. One copy alone seems to have survived to this day, and that one has wandered far from the place of its origin. New Among the remarkable events which were set down opposite to par-The following Corresponding Members were ticular days, there was set down opposite to elected: Theodore C. Peters, of Darien, N.Y.; that one on which Mr. Penn assumed the con-Henry E. Davies, New York; Joel Munsell, trol of things in Pennsylvania, the following to their Governor was offensive to the Pro-siderably less the past year than during any vincial Magistracy. before the Council and ordered to blot out the reorganization, yet the additions are not withwords "Lord Penn," and Bradford was warned "not to print anything but what shall have ly-cence from the Council."

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

The copy which Mr. Wallace now writes about is a second one the one to which he referred in New York not being in the possession of any one, so far as he knows.

The Librarian then read a long list of donations to the library since the last meeting, among which were several valuable pamphlets. Among the number was "A Confession of Faith" of the Quakers, printed at Philadelphia by William Bradford, in 1693.

There was also exhibited one of the original diaries kept by Mason and Dixon, surveyors of the celebrated Mason and Dixon's This has been given to the Sanitary line.

Other communications were read, after which the meeting adjourned.

WISCONSIN.

STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF WISCONSIN.-Madison, Jun. 2, 1864.—Prof. O. M. Conover in the Chair. The Librarian reported many additions to the Library and Cabinet:

Messrs. Shipman and Carpenter were an pointed on the Auditing Committee, with S. G. Benedict, to audit accounts and Treasurer's Report, which were reported correct; and the Annual Report of the Executive Committee was approved.

The annual meeting was called to order, Jan. 1864; twelve members present. Hon. Geo.

B. Smith in the Chair.

Messrs. Benedict, Carpenter, Gurnee, Conover, and Firmin, were appointed a committee to nominate suitable officers for the ensuing year.

During the absence of the committee, the annual reports of the Treasurer and of the Executive Committee were read and adoptedthe latter as follows:

TENTH ANNUAL REPORT-1863.

While our national troubles, with their constant excitements and anxieties, have so completely monopolized the attention of all classes of people, an institution like this could not reasonably expect to receive the same amount or public favor and patronage as in the halcyon entry: "The beginning of Government here by days of peace and prosperity. Though the addithe Lord Penn." This title of courtesy given tions to the library and cabinet have been con-Atkyns was summoned preceding twelve months since the society's out their interest and intrinsic value.

The Treasurer's report shows the financial condition of the society for the past year-exhibiting $1,042.78 received, including the small balance on hand at the commencement of the year, and $852.17 disbursed, leaving an unexpended balance of $190.61.

During the past year, the library additions have been 248 volumes, and 356 unbound documents and pamphlets, making the total additions 604. Of these additions, 112 are bound volumes of newspapers, of folio size, 5 volumes of works of quarto size, the rest being chiefly octavos. The library now numbers 790 volumes of folios, and 795 quartos.

The present condition of the Library, with its successive annual increase, for the past ten years, since the reorganization of the Society in January, 1854, may be seen in the following table:

			Vot Added		Both Together.	Total in Lib'y.
1854	Jan.	1			50	50
1855	44	2		1.000	2,000	2,050
1856	44	1		2,000	8.065	5,115
1857	"	6		300	1,305	6,420
1858	44	1		959	1,983	8,403
1859		4		500	1,607	10,010
1860	66	3		723	2,523	12,533
1861	"	2	837	1,134	1,971	14,504
1862	44	2	610	711	1.321	15,825
1863	"	2	544	2,373	2,917	18,742
1864	66	2	248	356	604	19,346
			9,290	10,056

During these ten years, the total cash disbursements have been $9,980.53; of which $5,387.79 has been for books and binding alone, and $4,592.74 for rents, fuel, postage, cataloguing, and other incidental expenses—thus exhibiting an average annual book expenditure of $538.78, and $459.27 for incidental purposes.

The whole number of bound newspaper files in the Library reported last year, was 811; we now add, as the result of another year's effort, 112 volumes—making a total of 923 volumes of bound newspaper files in our collection.

Of the past year's additions, the newspaper files are the most valuable and important. They are as follows:

Boston Evening Post, 1769-74, purchased, 3 vols, folio.

Pennsylvania Packet & Advertiser, 1782 to 1822, nearly complete, and from 1831 to 1838, inclusive, purchased, 79 volumes folio.

Carolina Gazette, 1798-1800, 1 vol. folio, from

E. Herrick, Jr.

Western Courier, Louisville, Ky., November, 1812, to December, 1816, 1 vol., rescued from a burning rebel house, at Greenville, Miss., March, 1863, and presented by Capt. A. R. Jones, Lt. J. M. Sumner, and Adj't W. G. Pitman, of the 23d Wis. Infantry.

Plough Boy, Albany, 1820-1, 1 vol. quarto, from Mrs. A. H. Gilman.

Metropolitan, New York, 1834-5, 1 vol.

quarto, from E. Gibbs.

Western Eagle, Cape Girardeau, Mo., May, 1849, to March, 1851, 1 vol. folio, from Quartermaster J. C. Mann, 1st Wis. Cavalry.

And the following files sent to the Society.

and recently bound, viz.:

New York Daily Herald, July, 1861, to December, 1862, 3 vols., folio.

New York Daily Tribune, July, 1861, to December, 1862, 3 vols., folio.

New York Daily World, July, 1861, to December, 1862, 3 vols., folio.

Milwaukee Daily Sentinel, July, 1861, to December, 1862, 3 vols., folio.

Milwaukee Daily Wisconsin, July, 1861, to December, 1862, 3 vols., folio.

Janesville Daily Gazette, July, 1861, to December, 1862, 3 vols, folio.

Madison Daily Journal, July, 1861, to December, 1862, 3 vols., folio. Madison Daily Patriot, July, 1861, to December, 1862, 3 vols, folio.

Madison Daily Argus, July to December, 1862, 1 vol., folio.

The venerable files of the Boston Evening Post, and the Pennsylvania Packet and The Advertiser, deserve especial notice: former volume contains 24 numbers for the year 1769, 17 for 1770, 34 for 1771, 16 for 1772, 5 for 1773, 31 for 1774, and 4 for 1775. The Packet & Advertiser are quite complete for the years 1782, 1783, 1785, 1786, 1787, 1788, one half of 1790, three quarters of 1791, nearly all of 1792, 1796, 1797, and 1798; and consecutively from 1800 to 1822, and from 1831 to 1838; and being a daily nearly from the commencement, each full year is divided, for convenience, into two bound volumes.

The volume of the Carolina Gazette for the year 1798-'99 and 1800, is rare and valuable.

Ten maps have been added to the map department of our collection, and a beautiful topographical map on linen, of the battle of Stone River, and another of the battle of Prairie Grove.

During the year we have received about the usual number of magazines and newspapersseventy-one altogether; and these are preserved with great care. One hundred and four volumes of ancient and modern newspaper files have been bound, thus making available a large accession to that invaluable department of our collection.

The Librarian, during the year, has arranged and catalogued several thousand pamphlets and documents-so that anything in our document department is now readily accessible. The cataloguing of the Library has also been continued, as opportunities have offered.

Space will not permit naming all donors of the year, but we may particularly mention Hon. T. O. Howe, Hon. W. D. McIndoe, Cyrus Woodman, J. F. McMullen, Rev. J. Watts, Capt. S. V. Shipman, Prof. Butier, D. Appleton & Co., D. T. Valentine, Cyrus Catlin, and D. W. Patterson, Esq., of Connecticut—the latter of whom has been constantly attentive to the Society's interests, and well merits the special acknowledgments of the Executive Committee, for his valuable services and donations.

The Picture gallery remains as reported last year-fifty-six oil paintings. Quite a number of pioneers and distinguished persons have heretofore promised their portraits-promises which, we hope, will not be forgotten.

The additions to the Cabinet, embracing documents, manuscripts, specimens of natural history, oriental relics, photographs, engravings, and coins and trophies, were there enume-

Probably few Historical or Literary Institutions in our country have succeeded, in so brief a period, in accumulating so rich and rare a collection of American and English newspaper files of the last century as it has been our good fortune to bring together. It is probably much more extensive than has been supposed even by those most familiar with that department of our collections. As a matter of general interest we give a list of such files as were published in the last century alone-being only about one-ninth of our whole newspaper collection, yet this particular portion numbers 123 volumes, and may almost be literally said to be worth their weight in gold:

		Year.
London Gazette
True Briton	1	.1723-4.
Edinburg Evening Courant
Pennsylvania Gazette	4	.1755 - 63
London Evening Post	. 1	.1757-8.
London Evening Post	. 1	.1757-9.
Edinburg Chronicle	. 1	.1759

	-
Edinburg Chronicle	11760
Maryland Gazette	11760-62
Maryland Gazette	11763-67
Boston Gazette	11764
Edinburg Advertiser	11765
Boston Chronicle	11767-8.
Boston Evening Post, &c	11769
Boston Evening Post, &c	11770
Boston Evening Post, &c	11771
Edinburg Advertiser	11772
Boston Evening Post, &c	11772-3.
Edinburg Advertiser	11773
Boston & New York Papers	11774
Pennsylvania Gazette, &c	11775
Pennsylvania Evening Post	11776-77
Boston Gazette, &c	11776-77
Boston Journal, &c	11778
Boston Journal, &c	11779
Edinburg Advertiser	11779
Boston and New York Papers	11780-83
Royal Jamaica Gazette	11782
Pennsylvania Packet	11782
Boston Chronicle	11782-84
Pennsylvania Packet	21783
Edinburg Advertiser	11783
Maryland Gazette	11784
Edinburg Advertiser	21784
Edinburg Advertiser	11785
Pennsylvania Journal	11785
Pennsylvania Packet	31786
Massachusetts Gazette	11786
Edinburg Advertiser	11786
Pennsylvania Packet	21787
New York Journal	11787-88
Pennsylvania Packet	21788
Pennsylvania Journal	11788
United States Gazette	11789-90
Pennsylvania Packet	11790
United States Gazette	1 1790-91
Pennsylvania Advertiser	11791
London Chronicle	11791
London Chronicle	11792
Pennsylvania Advertiser	21792
Massachusetts Spy	21792
London Chronicle	11793
Poughkeepsie Journal	11793-94
Massachusetts Spy	11793-94
New York Diary	11794
London Chronicle	11794
Philadelphia Advertiser	11794-95
Baltimore Intelligencer	11794
Baltimore Gazette	11795
United States Gazette	11795-95
Philadelphia New World	11795-97
Philadelphia Minerva	11795-99
Pennsylvania Advertiser	21796
Massachusetts Spy	11796
Pennsylvania Advertiser	31797
Massachusetts Spy	11797
New York Time Piece	11797-98
New York Journal	11797-99
Philadelphia Advertiser	21798
Philadelphia Advertiser,	11798–99

Columbian Centinel	11798
Carolina Gazette
Columbian Centinel
Baltimore Gazette
London Gazette	4 1767 to 1799

Ten years ago this very month, Gen. W. R. Smith, Rev. Charles Lord, Hon. Hiram A. Wright, Dr. John W. Hunt, Prof. O. M. Conover, S. H. Carpenter, and L. C. Draper, met in the office of State Superintendent Wright, in the N.W. corner room of the main floor of the old capitol, adopted a new constitution, and reorganized the Society under the charter obtained the year previous. The Society had had a nominal existence for five years, and had secured a small book-case, three and a half feet wide, and four feet high, containing four shelves. During the first year, Frank Hudson—the first donor to the Society-contributed two volumes of Transactions of the American Ethnological Society, and an original drawing of a lizardshaped mound, discovered by him, in 1842, near Third Lake, in Madison; a bibliographical vo-lume on the Literature of American Local History, was received from the author, Herman E. Ludewig, of New York; and a patent deed of land in the State of New York, dated 1794, and signed by Gov. George Clinton, from Dr. J. W. Hunt. Gen. W. R. Smith delivered the first anniversary address. And thus we have the sum total of the first year's doings and collections of the Society. During Gov. Farwell's term, he caused a set of the Territorial and State Legislative Journals to be placed on the shelves as the gift of the State; an unbound file of three or four years of the Milwaukee Wisconsin accumulated; and Hon. M. L. Martin delivered an historical address, and Rev. A. Brunson and Joshua Hathaway contributed historical papers. Thus the first five years' gatherings of the Society did not exceed fifty volumes; and considerable unoccupied space was still left in the small book-case. This case—which we still retain-occupied a conspicuous place in the Executive Office during the administrations of Governors Dewey and Farwell, with a lettered plate at the top, "STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY." The Society during that period was certainly in no very prosperous condition.

But at the annual meeting of January, 1854, it was resolved to make an earnest effort to accomplish something commensurate with the hopes and purposes of such an institution. A circular was directed to be prepared and distributed by the Corresponding Secretary, appealing for suitable contributions for a Library and Cabinet. A committee was appointed to memorialize the Legislature for an annual appropriation to aid the Society in its objects collections; and when the Secretary read the memorial he had prepared for that purpose to Gen. W. B. Smith, the latter approved the general scope of the document, but strenuously objected to asking for so large an appropriation as five hundred dollars a year—two hundred, he thought, was as much as should be asked for; that by asking for five hundred, we should defeat the whole object, and get nothing. The Secretary replied, that he thought the Legislature ing hand in providing a fund for a fire-proof would as readily grant five hundred as two hundred for such a purpose; that little could be accomplished with two hundred dollars, but with five hundred we could make a beginning, and he was willing the wisdom of the appropriation should be judged by its results. While the old General shook his head in doubt, the memorial have the management of the Society meet to was signed by the committee and a few otherswas presented to the Assembly by Judge Orton, then the Madison representative, who had it referred to the committee on State Affairs, of which Hon. Sam. Hale, of Kenosha, was chairman. At Judge Orton's suggestion, Judge Hale | fire-proof building, worthy of our noble Society, and his committee spent a Saturday afternoon with the Secretary, at his private library, who entertained them with an exhibition of his private collections on Western history; and the committee concluded—we hope wisely—that if a single individual could accomplish so much, what might not the associated effort of a whole state, like Wisconsin, effect? They unanimously recommended the passage of an act in accordance with the prayer of the memorialists—and, with the friendly attention of Judge Orton in the Assembly, and Beriah Brown's efforts among the Senators, the bill passed without any material opposition. This was the beginning of friendly legislative action in the Society's behalf, which has since led Hon. Richard S. Field, of New Jersey, to point to its success as the result of the "enlightened liberality of the Legislature of Wisconsin."

At the re-organization of the Society, in January, 1854, Dr. Hunt was chosen Librarian, and transferred the Society's book-case from the Executive Room to the office of the Secretary of State, where it remained that year; though long before the year closed, it was crowded with additions to the Library, and several hundred volumes had to be stored in the private library of the Secretary. In January, 1855, a small room, 15 feet square, in the south-eastern corner of Horace Rublee, the basement of the Baptist Church, was rented Prof. J. D. Butler, and occupied for two years, when further room | Gen L. Fairchild, was needed—and in January, 1857, a room on Hon. D. Worthington, the west side of the basement of the same building, forty-four feet in length by fourteen in breadth, was rented and occupied for one year- the annual meeting adjourned.

when we removed into our present quarters, which have since been somewhat enlarged. Our rooms, covering a ground area of 45 by 60 feet, are so well packed, that further extension would be exceedingly desirable.

More room we must have, sooner or later,—and the next removal should be a permanent one and to a fire-proof building, if possible.—A few friends sufficiently realize its importance, and evince their willingness to lend a generous helpbuilding sufficiently commodious for the present and prospective wants of the Society. Will not the friends of the Society in Madison and elsewhere, resolve to make suitable provisions for this greatly needed edifice?

And when, ten years hence, those who may review its progress during its second decade, may we not fondly hope that they may havenot twenty thousand volumes, as our present number nearly approaches—but twice twenty thousand volumes upon its shelves, in a durable and worthy too of its generous, unflagging friends who, from first to last, have sturdily and manfully adhered to its fortunes?

The nominating committee reported the following ticket for officers for the ensuing year, which was unanimously elected:

President:

Increase A. Lapham, LL.D., Milwaukee

Vice Presidents:

- 1..Gen. Wm. R Smith. Mineral Point. 2. Hon. Henry S. Baird, Green Bay. 3..Gen. James Sutherland, Janesville.
- 4.. Hon. James T. Lewis, Columbus. 5. Hon. Charles S. Benton, La Crosse.

Librarian. . Daniel S. Durrie.

6. . Hon. Charles Durkee, Kenosha. Recording Secretary . . Frank H. Firmin. Corresponding Secretary. Lyman C. Draper. Treasurer. Prof. O. M. Conover.

Curators:

Gen. G. P. Delaplaine, Hon. H. S. Orton, Hon. George Hyer, Gen. S. Mills, Hon. E. B. Dean, Jr. S. G. Benedict, Gen. D. Atwood, Gen. G. B. Smith, F. G. Tibbits, Hon. D. J. Powers, S. V. Shipman. J. D. Gurnee, S. H. Carpenter, John H. Clark.

After the result of the election was announced new Executive Committee, thirteen members being present, were called to order—Hon. G. B. Smith in the chair.

Hon. Simeon Mills, Hon. H. S. Orton, Hon. G. B. Smith, Samuel Marshall, and J. D. Gurnee were re-elected Trustees of the Building Fund for the ensuing year.

An arrangement was entered into with D. S. Durrie for cataloguing the Library and arranging newspaper files for the year 1864.

Voted, that the Society favorably entertain the question of rooms in the new capitol, should any be tendered for its use.

Stated Meeting, April 2d, 1864. Present, eight members of the Executive Committee—Hon. D. Worthington in the chair.

Thirty-five letters were submitted by the Secretary.

The Additions to the Library and Cabinet included 71 vols.; 31 broadside slips from N. E. Loyal Publication Society; and 76 pamphlets, from various donors.

Messrs. Carpenter, Conover, Shipman, and Dean, were appointed a committee to report upon the Drake historical papers.

Hon. Chas, S Todd, of Kentucky, a surviving aide of Gen Harrison, of the War of 1812, and subsquently Minister to Russia, was chosen an honorary member of the Society; Hon. J. P. Usher, Hon. Wm. P. Dole, Hon. Isaac Newton, Hon. F W. Seward, Hon. Alfred Ely, Dr. Geo. Smith, Wm. L. Stone, Frank H. Baldwin, F. A. Marble, Hon. Anthony Van Wyck, Horace W. Smith, Pierre M. Irving, and others, were chosen corresponding members; John S. Dean, Geo. W. Gilman, and B. W. Suckow, active members.

Adjourned.

NEW JERSEY.

THE NEW JERSEY HISTORICAL SOCIETY (Officers, etc., Vol. VIII. p. 121) held its regular May meeting in Newark, on 19th May. The Hon. JAMES PARKER, of Perth Amboy, in his 88th year, and the Hon, RICHARD S. FIELD, of Princetown, Vice-Presidents, presiding.

Mr. Whitehead, the Corresponding Secretary, made his report of the correspondence since the last meeting, and presented a large number of letters, including one from Hon. John Clement, communicating some information respecting the subject. Swedish records of South Jersey, and others from to the early settlers of his name in Newark; read extracts from the unpublished reports of Immediately succeeding the adjournment, the from Mr. J. E. Hilgard, of the Coast Survey office, transmitting copies of Dr. Kohl's Notes on the Eastern Coast of New Jersey, etc.; from Mr. T. J. Richards, of Burlington, relative to the settlement of Washington Township, in that county; and from various gentlemen engaged in genealogical researches, seeking information.

In regard to the resolution of the Society suggesting the name of Hudson for the new fort at Sandy Hook, Gen. R. S. Canby, Assist. Adj't Gen., had informed the Society that there is a battery of fifty guns on Staten Island named "Battery Hudson," and the Department does not deem it proper to change the name to confer it upon the new fort.

The Treasurer, Mr. Alofsen, reported a balance of $908.60 in the Treasury.

The Librarian, Mr. Congar, reported the donations of books since January, including upwards of forty-five different publications, relative to the present war, from Mr. S. Alofsen, of Jersey City, whose donations already, referring to the same subject, fill several shelves of the library.

The Committee on Publications reported that the Society's "Proceedings" and the sixth vo-lume of its "Collections" (Newark Town Records) had been delayed, but were now in press.

The Library Committee made a strong appeal for renewed subscriptions to enlarge and improve the library, and preserve its valuable documents. Several new members were elected and new nominations received.

John Rutherfurd, Esq., presented the original Field Book of John Lawrence, containing his notes while running the Quintipartite Line between East and West Jersey in 1743. Mr. Whitehead explained the contents, which include many items of local interest as to the location of houses, lands, &c., along the line at the period of the survey, and he regarded their identification as well worth the attention of some local historian. The little volume would also be valuable in many questions affecting the landed property, and should be printed by the State.

A beautiful volume of the "Dodd Genealogies," recently published, was presented by Dr. B. L. Dodd—a book reflecting great credit on all engaged in its publication.

Mr. Walter Rutherfurd remarked on the importance of the action of the last Legislature to ascertain the rights of the State and private parties to lands under water, and offered a resolution requesting the Librarian to furnish the Commissioners appointed by the State such information as the Society's archives contain on the

The Society then took a recess for dinner, and Mr. C. O. Tichenor, of Appleton, Wis., relative on reassembling, Mr. Whitehead presented and

Dr. Kohl, relative to localities along the Eastern Coast of N. J., which were obtained from the Coast Survey in Washington, with Dr. K.'s notes of early maps referring to the Province, illustrated by tracings of some of them. Some of the maps referred to are in the possession of the Society, and with others from the private

Captain W. S. Boudinor presented a photograph and a rare print of Washington, when

President of the Convention, in 1787. From Captain CHARLES S. BOGGS, U. S. N., was received a valuable donation of manuscripts. about one hundred in number, many of them of several folio sheets, connected with events in New Jersey between 1733 to 1808, papers which belonged to Robert Hunter Morris, Chief Justice, etc., and Robert Morris, Judge of U.S. District Court. Among the later documents were the original packages, unopened, containing the electoral votes of New Jersey, in 1800, for Thomas Jefferson as President, and C. C. Pinckney as Vice-President; and in 1808, for James Madison as President, and George Clinton as Vice-President. These were the triplicate packages which, as directed by the constitution, were deposited with the District Judge, the others having been forwarded to Washington at the time. The commission of the electors who cast the vote of the State for Washington in 1792. under the great seal of the State, was also among the papers. These memorials of other days and their political parties, which had so long remained undisturbed, were regarded with lively ject of minor importance to him. So far from interest by all present; the venerable presiding officer of the Society stating that he had made one of the interested throng that witnessed the administration of the oath of office to Washing-

The Society then listened with much satisfaction to a paper of the Rev. John PROUDFOOT, D.D., "On Early Confederacies and Our Own, in which an interesting review was given of the peculiar features of the Italian, Grecian, Germanic, Hollandic, and other federations, as compared with our own, and showing the superiority of the latter. It exhibited a very thorough acquaintance with the subject, and its reading occupied about an hour.

The Society then adjourned, and the remainder of the afternoon was passed by the members in examining the books and objects of interest in the library.

Miscellany.

THE ALLAN LIBRARY .- The principal event of the last month, in a bibliographical sense, has been the sale of the curious collection of books, engravings, and knick-knacks, which the late John Allan left as evidences of his perseverance as a book-hunter, his taste as an illustrator, and his unconquerable love of his native Scotlandlove which not even his seventy years' residence in this city could overcome, or even sensibly diminish.

Of Mr. Allan himself nothing need be said in this place, so well was he known while living to every collector in the country.

Of the Collection itself, were we to say that it was just such a one as any man, possessing such a character as that which we have quoted, might reasonably be expected to collect, we might leave the subject. It was simply a collection of odds and ends,—books, engravings, minerals, costumes, snuff-boxes, old china, old armor, shoe-buckles, old watches, etc., without any apparent object beyond the mere collection of them, and with no other aim than the mere possession of them. Not even his own beloved Scotland could induce him to make her a specialité; while America, his home for much the greater portion of his life, attracted so little of his attention, that it appears to have been a subthe collection having been a useful one in any department of knowledge, we venture to say that no student, in any department, would have remained in its owner's library a day for the single purpose of gathering information—he would have stayed much longer, it is probable, to enjoy the genial society of the venerable man, to look at things which were rare and curious. and to gather from the spirited descriptions of "Old New York," by Mr. Allan himself, an insight into the society and manners of the city in the beginning of this century, an accurate detail of the family connexions of our older families, and a graphic description of events which are remembered only by the few, and appreciated only by even a smaller number. The illustrated works, on which Mr. Allan had spent much time and money, and on which he greatly prided himself, afforded fewer evidences of his taste and good judgment as an artist than many had expected; and among the more experienced book-collectors and illustrators the disappointment was extended and freely expressed.

Of the Catalogue, which was prepared by Joseph Sabin, of Philadelphia, with the assistance of several others, much complaint was made, and not without reason. The exaggerations as well as the inaccuracies of description with which that portion which described the books abounded, were particularly noticeable; the announcement on the title, and at the close of the volume, that Mr. Sabin was the only person who was entitled to any credit for the preparation of any portion of the catalogue except the covers, gave offence to those who were acquainted with the services which were rendered by several of Mr. Allan's intimate personal friends, by whom, we believe, the engravings, minerals, coins, and other property—the books excepted-were exclusively catalogued.

The strange use of Latin words, and blundering application of them, exceed anything that we ever met.

Of the Sale itself we could say much more than our space will allow—in the language of a gentleman who is fully qualified to speak of its peculiarities, "there has been nothing to compare with it since the world began."

The salesman, Mr. Merwin, discharged his delicate duties, in the struggle between buyers, with his accustomed patient good-nature; and the proceeds of the sale will prove that his efforts were not without their reasonable result.

The number of bidders in attendance was not large; the number of those whom those bidders represented was probably much greater. prevailing fashion of purchasing at auction through brokers, while it tends to diminish the number of those who attend such sales, and serves to afford a living to several worthy men who act in a representative capacity, serves also to make the auction-room a less agreeable place of resort for collectors than it once was, prevents the formation of many a desirable personal acquaintance among book-buyers, and assimilates the occupation of a book-collector to that of a gambler in stocks at that soulless concern known as the Board of Brokers. Could Royal Gurley have dropped in at the sale which is under consideration, he would have failed to recognise more than one or two faces among the buyers; while the brilliant sallies of poor John Keese would have fallen still-born among the audience which attended the Allan sale; an audience among whom the amount of brokerage to be realized on the purchase of the several lots which were offered was vastly more important, in many cases, than the intrinsic value of the lots themselves, either to the bidders' principals or to any other person.

The bidding, among such an audience, may be easily understood; there has, indeed, "been nothing to compare with it since the world began." Those among the bidders who represented themselves only, were compelled, in many cases, to abandon the contest which the brokers made over the greater number of the lots; in other cases, where the volume was considered a necessity, they also rushed into the fight, and battled for the prize.

Our readers will not be surprised to learn. under these considerations, that the "Account of the Banquet given by the St. Nicholas Society of the City of New York, on the Occasion of the Visit of the Dutch Frigate 'Prins van Orange,' May, 1852,"—a mere pamphlet—brought $22.50; May, 1852,"—a mere pampniet—prougnt $22.50; "Alden's American Epitaphs," $13.75; Barlow's "Columbiad," quarto, $30; Bartlett's "Destruction of the Gaspee," $6; Bryant's 'Address on Irving," illustrated, $37.50; the first edition of Burns's "Poems," $106; Cheetham's "Life of Paine," illustrated, $11; Coleman's "Collection of Facts relative to the Death of Gen. Hamilton, illustrated, $25; "Cromwelliana," illustrated. **State of September 18 | September 18 | September 18 | September 29 | September 20 | September on "New York, during the last Half Century," extended and illustrated, $150; Freneau's "Poems," Monmouth edition, $10; Holgate's "American Genealogy," $15; Ingraham's "Capture of Washington," $8; Irving's Knickerbocker's New York, extended, and with 265 plates inserted, $1,250; another copy, extended and with 107 plates inserted, $400; the same, London, 1821, $55; Irving's Washington, quarto, $275; Josselyn's "Voyages to New England," title in fac-simile, $27; Josselyn's "New England's Rarities Discovered," $40; Livermore's "Historical Research," large paper, $12; Lossing's "Field Book," $15; Melvin's "Journal," $20; Miller's "New York," London edition, $4; Moore's "Treason of Charles Lee," $4; Morton's "New England's Memorial," MS. title, $40; "Papers on Hatfield and Deerfield," Bradford Club's editions of the composition o tion, $11; Commodore Porter's "Journal." $3.50; Sherburne's "John Paul Jones," 36 portraits inserted, $20; Simms's "Life of Marion," 22 prints inserted, $16; Sternhold and Hopkins, Ed. London, 1628, $19; the same, 1632, $11; Thomas's "Pensilvania and West-New-Jersey," Brady's reprint, on writing paper, illustrated, $47.50; the same, in ordinary style, illustrated, $15; "The Simple Cobbler of Aggavvam," edit. London, 1647, $55; Washington's Diary, 31 plates inserted, $50; Watson's Annals of New York, illustrated, $20; and an Autograph Letter of Gen. Washington, the enormous sum of $2,050 l

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

JULY, 1864.

[No. 7.

General Bepartment.

THE COLONIAL POLICY OF FRANCE IN NORTH AMERICA IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

Scarcely a century since, and from the silent cliffs and living deeps of New Foundland, from the frigid waters which break upon the flinty coast of Labrador to the warm, turbid, outflowing of the Mississippi, the Fleurs-de-Lys waved from a chain of posts whose morning drum at once awoke the Arctic seal, and roused the Tropic monkey. "I was struck"—to quote the letter of a friend, an artillery officer of great reflection and learning, since a prominent brigadier general in the present war — "when I visited that region of country, by the evidence which I saw of former French power upon this continent. As I descended the St. Lawrence by night, the lights from French cottages were glimmering all along its banks; the houses became thicker and thicker as we proceeded, and then I reflected that once a line of French settlements had extended from the mouth of the St. Lawrence to the mouth of the Mississippi. All along the immensely extended frontier, marked out by these two streams, there exist points, such as Detroit, Mackinac, St. Mary, St. Ignace, Green Bay, Chicago, Kaskaskia, Prairie du Chien, St. Louis, Baton Rouge, New Orleans, etc., which still indicate the giant-like grasp which France once held upon the territory of North America, and especially upon the English colonies. She seemed on the very point of strangling not only these colonies here, but also the other English colonies in Hindostan; but, the "Great Monarch" (Louis XIV) preferred "glory" at home to empire abroad, and, HIST. MAG. VOL, VIII.

while waging a cruel war against Holland, surrendered the rest of the world to England.

While few are aware that such was the facts, that such a state of affairs did actually exist but a little period prior to our first War of Independence,—still fewer are cognizant of the master mind which indicated that zone of military positions and forts and planned operations which, if carried out as he designed, would have rendered the French yoke of dominion on this continent much harder to break than Wolfe and his successor found the work to be.

The brain which saw ahead so far and planned so ably was that of ROLAND MI-CHEL BARRIN, MARQUIS DE LA GALIS-SONIERE, born 11th November, 1693, at Rochefort, the third military post of France. i. e. at the apex of a triangle whose base terminated at Finisterre (cape) in Spain and Finisterre (province) in France. son of a lieutenant-general of the military forces of France he attained the same elevated rank himself as much by deserts as favor. Doubtless he owed much to his inherited genius; but much likewise is attributable to the admirable education he received at the hands of ROLLINS, the celebrated Rector of the University of Paris, and historian. Entering the navy in 1710, in 1738, he was made post-captain. In 1741, in command of two vessels of the line, he was charged with the convoy of the East Indian fleet. This duty he discharged in the happiest manner. On his return, he was surprised to learn that his government intended to confer upon him the rule and administration of Canada, the most important of the French colonies. LA GALIS-SONIERE represented to the minister that his inclinations were rather to command and combat in his regular line of service, at than administer the affairs sea, colony. This honorable refusal was favorably received, and he was appointed to a naval command, when news arrived that the governor, designated in his place, had been captured on his passage by the English. Then the sea-captain became governor, against his will, yielded without farther remonstrance to the force of circumstances. He consented to proceed to Canada, in 1745, because he foresaw that he would there find frequent opportunities to signalize his zeal, stipulating, however, that he was to be recalled on the declaration of peace, because he felt that his sphere of usefulness as a military commander would be too constrained on a political post to satisfy his peculiar activity of mind.

Upon his arrival in Canada, he at once set to work to justify the confidence reposed in him, and demonstrated that in his case, as in so many others, the externals of the casket were no indication of the wealth contained therein. Like Marshal LUXEM-BURG the able opponent of the great WIL-LIAM III, the Marquis DE LEDE,* the Fleming, the sole general Spain possessed in 1717-1719, who conquered Sardinia and Sicily, and other celebrities in intellect, LA GALISSONIERE was not only diminutive in stature but humpbacked. Nor were his other physical peculiarities attractive, so that when the Indian chiefs came to pay their homage to the representative of their Great Father beyond the big sea, they remarked in their salutatory address: "Thou must indeed have a grand soul, since, possessing such a repulsive person, the great chief, our father, has sent thee hither to command us." Nor was it long before they recognized the justice of their opinion, and testified, in every manner possible, their love and veneration for a man,-to whom, with one consent, according the title of FATHER, -- who made no other use of the authority and power with which he was invested, except to ameliorate their condition. To the talents for administration which he subsequently displayed and his eminent ability as a seaman and commander which he demonstrated through his career, LA GALISSONIERE united an infinite number of other estimable qualities and vast practical intelligence. He loved and cultivated natural history. In all the islands which he visited he took pains to sow useful seeds, to plant fruit trees, and thus naturalize, far and wide, the productions of the climate and soil of Europe. He likewise brought back with him foreign trees and plants with which he enriched his own land. At his country-seat about 12 miles from Nantes. he established an arboretum wherein he collected and naturalized a large number of foreign trees. Reserved and firm, but at the same time gentle, considerate, affable and honest, he won the respect and affection of all who served under him. He was absolutely adored by his sailors, well aware of his incessant efforts to preserve their health and watch over their general interests and rights. At the same time such were the regrets with which he inspired his sovereign, that, when, worn out by the indefatigable efforts of his mind, he died in 1756, six months after his fortunate naval campaign in the Mediterranean, in which he foiled Byng, and occasioned the capture of Port Mahon, Louis XV expressed his lively grief that his admiral's decease had deprived him of the gratification of presenting him with the baton of Marshal of France, ready and due to his seamanship and success.

Such was the man to whom the governorship of Canada was entrusted, in troublous times, in 1745. From the moment he assumed the charge, he contemplated his field of operations with an eye which saw far, far beyond the requirements of his own day; and his combinations embraced not only the necessities of the present but of the extended future. Happy indeed had it been for the interests of France if his successors had been gifted with his enlarged views and energy. He filled the office of governor as if he had brought to it the experience of a life passed in similar administrative service, or rather as if the object of his whole previous life had been a preparation for such a commission; and he administered the colonial affairs like an expert in statesman-He established at Quebec a marine arsenal, and extensive naval ship yards, in which no timber was used but that grown in the colony. The Admiral Governor DE-LA GALISSONIERE, conceived, proposed, and succeeded in having adopted the vast plan of joining CANADA and LOUISIANA by a chain of forts and establishments at once military and commercial, along the Ohioand Mississippi, across the desert regions which separated these two colonies, to the west of the lakes. The links of this chain, stretching from 1600 to 2000 miles, through the wilderness, were located with a sagacity which subsequent experience shows to have never erred. Wherever the French engineers located their forts or posts, there has invariably been found the very best site for our largest and most flourishing cities. Witness, as a few examples, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Baton Rouge, New Orleans, &c.

*It is to the military superiority of DE LEDE that the House of Savoy owe their inferior title of Kings of Sardinia, since had it not been for him they would have been kings of Sicily. It was said of Spain at this epoch that her king was a Frenchman, the Duke of Aragon, her prime minister an Italian, Alberoni, her general, a Fleming, De Lede, and to a Dutch engineer was confided the enterprise of rendering the Manzanares navigable and Madrid accessible by water. Happy for Spain had she been ever so ruled and by such foreigners.

To the advantage of establishing an easier inter-communication between the settled points, was added the power of forwarding convoys and dispatches to the home authorities, in France, in winter as well as summer, by the route of Louisiana, while the mouth of the St. Lawrence was entirely blockaded by ice. And last, and especially, this chain of military establishments, so planned and located as to command key points, strategical as well as commercial, shut in the English colonies between the Alleghanies and their spurs and parallel mountain chains and the ocean. By the order which he established LA GALISSONIERE, not only made it a most difficult operation for the English to undertake any warlike enterprise against his people, but almost rendered impossible the success of any such aggression. Under the guidance of this humpbacked, diminutive seaman, gifted with a giant intellect, the success of the French compelled the English to remain upon the defensive, and harassed them to such a degree, along their exposed and constricted frontier, that the mother country, but especially the colonists, became very desirous of peace.

LA GALISSONIERE was not content however with securing the tranquillity of the frontier of his colonial governments. He devoted himself ardently to every measure which would render them flourishing, and at the same time make them productive of revenue to France. Nor was he backward in laboring for the happiness of both her white and red subjects. He won their attachment so that the wild men became affectionately bound to him as a sagacious and paternal benefactor; and upon his return to France, in 1749, he carried with him the regrets of all who had been subject to his authority.

After the peace of Aix la Chapelle in 1748, Louis XI charged LA GALISSON-IERE and STEPHEN DE SILHOUETTE previously comptroller general and afterwards minister of finance, with the responsibility of negotiating with the English commissioners the limits between Canada and the other French colonies, in North America, and those of the English. The memoirs and reports published in this connection, prove with what care LA GALISSONIERE had collected the most extensive and accurate information in regard to the vast territory over which he had exercised authority. Nevertheless, notwithstanding the ability of the commissioners on both sides, they could not agree upon the boundaries. With his withdrawal from this particular duty terminated LA GALISSONIERE'S immediate connection with French colonial affairs. His subsequent career was equally useful and glorious; but the blade of his intellect was surely and unceasingly wearing out the scabbard of his body. His triumphs in science and naval affairs, however, have nothing to do with the subject of this article; and having thus briefly recorded his immense influence in the affairs of France on this continent, it remains for other hands to trace and delineate his equally important services in the naval Bureaux and in the command of fleets. Had France kept LA GALISSON-IERE at the helm of her colonial administration or found an honest, energetic, sagacious chief to succeed him, rulers gifted with his extraordinary powers of prevision and provision, history would have had a different account to give of the progress of the Anglo-Saxon race in North America.

LETTER OF THOMAS JEFFERSON TO THE EARL OF BUCHAN.

The following letter by Thomas Jefferson addressed to the Earl of Buchan dated Washington, July 10th, 1803, appears in a catalogue of "Autographs and Manuscripts" issued by Holloway and Son, London, the present year. The letter is stated to be unpublished. It fills two pages 4° of manuscript and is priced £5. 5s.

"My Lord-I received through the hands of Mr. Lenox, on his return to the U.S. the valuable volume you were so good as to send me, on the Life and Writings of Fletcher of Saltoun. The political principles of that patriot were worthy the purest periods of the British constitution. They are those which were in vigour at the Epoch of the American emigration. Our ancestors brought them here, and they needed little strengthening to make us what we are; but in the weakened condition of English whigism at this day, it requires more firmness to publish and advocate them, than it then did to act on them. This merit is peculiarly your Lordship's; and no one honors it more than myself; freely admitting at the same time, the right of a nation to change its political principles and constitution at will, and the impropriety of any, but its own citizens, censuring that change. I expect your Lordship has been disappointed, as I acknowledge I have been, in the issue of the convulsions on the other side the Channel. This has certainly lessened the interest which the Philanthropist warmly felt in those struggles. befriending human liberty, a gigantic force has risen up which seems to threaten the world; but it hangs on the thread of opinion, which may break from one day to another. I feel real anxiety on the conflict in which your nation is again engaged; and bless the Almighty Being, who in 'gathering together the waters under the heavens into one place, divided the dry lands' of your hemisphere, from the dry lands of ours, and said 'here, at least, be there peace.' I hope that peace and amity with all nations will long be the charter of our land, and that its prosperity under this charter will re-act on the mind of Europe, and profit her by the example. My hope of preserving peace for our country is not founded on the Quaker principle of non-resistance under every wrong, but in the belief that a just and friendly conduct on our part will procure justice and friendship from others, and that in the existing contest, each of the combatants will find an interest in our friendship. I cannot say we shall be unconcerned spectators of the combat. We feel for human sufferings; and we wish the good of all. We shall look on therefore with the sensations which these dispositions and the events of the war will produce.

I feel a pride in the justice which your Lordship's sentiments render to the character of my Illustrious countryman, Wash-The moderation of his desires, and the strength of his judgment, enabled him to calculate correctly that the road to that glory which never dies is to use power for the support of the laws and liberties of our country, not for their destruction and his will accordingly survive the wreck of everything now living.

Accept my Lord, the tribute of esteem from one renders it with warmth to the disinterested friend of mankind, and assurances of my very high consideration and respect.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

MEMORIALS OF GOV. STUYVESANT.

We are indebted for the following unpublished letter of Governor Stuyvesant, the last Dutch ruler in New York, to the courtesy of Lewis J. Cist, Esq., stray leaves from whose most extensive autograph collection have often enriched our columns.

I. Letter from Peter Stuyvesant to Jeremias Van Rensselaer, 1664.

Erentseste, Voorsienige en seer discrete Heer:

UE. aengenaeme van 8 deses is my den 17d. wel geworden, bedanke UE voor de genome moyte in 't vernemen nae myn paert hebbe met den brengen deses geschreven aen Jurian Westval, om het paert by gelegenhevt uvt de Catskil to laeten haelen. Aengaende den toestant der saecken alhier referere my aen missive in beantwoordinge van de haar, aen de gerichte geschreven; myne hoope en voornemen was in de herwest in de Esopus en met eeuen boven te coomen, bysonderlyck om met UE gecom muqueert te hebben het gepasserede tusschen my en Bostons commissioners; aengaende haer pattent en pretensie die sy als noch syn maeckend van de 42½ graat aff: van see tot see; 't welck nae myn opinie (?) onder de hooge bergen off u boven hy lant dwars door de Colonie soude loopen wat daar benoorden leyt pretenderen sy haar toe te coomen uyt cracht van Connicks pattent en neffens dien noch eenige andere saecken van dat subjact; maar wy verhindert door myn sieckte; en UE tegens hoop en meeninge van UE schoonvader, niet afgecoomen synde, moeten die saecken differeren tot het voorjaar; hoop dat met het erste open water malcanderen met gesentheyt sullen outmoeten en ten besten van 't gemeen demonstreren daar het behoort, dat doch dese pretensien eenmal moogen geweest werden. Inmiddels sal UE in die hem lieff syn Godes schutt en scherm bevoolen, en blyve

Erentfeste, voorsienige, seer discrere Hr Ue geaffectionneerde

Vrient,

P. STUYVESANT.

Groetenisse aen hr Schuyler, met recommandatie dat op myn wey lant hy wat achting gelieft te geven.

N. Amsterdam in N. Neerlant, A. Di. vi Jannuarie, 1664.

Address:

Eventfeste, voorsienygte, seer discrete Hr Heer Jeremias van Renselaer, Directeur der Colonie, Renselaerswyck.

TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Honorable, prudent, and most discreet Sir:

Your welcome letter of the 8th of this month has reached me, in good order, on the 17th. I thank you for the pains you have taken in making inquiries about my horse. I write by the bearer of this to Jurian Trespool to have some one fetch the horse from the Catskil, should an opportunity offer.

As regards the state of affairs here, I refer to my letter to the court, in answer to theirs. It was my hope and intention to have come during the fall to Esopus, and at the same time above, mainly to communicate to you what took place between myself and the Boston Commissioners, as to their Patent, and the pretensions they still make from degree  $42\frac{1}{2}$ , from sea to sea. The line, according to my opinion, would run alongside the high mountains, or on the same, by land, diagonally through the Colony; whatever lies to the north thereof they pretend to be theirs, on the strength of the King's Patent.

Besides this, I desired to confer with you on some other matters, relating to the same subject, but was prevented by sickness, and as you, contrary to the hope and expectation of your father-in-law, did not come down, we must necessarily delay said matters until spring. I hope we may meet in good health, as soon as the river opens, and show at the proper place, in behalf of the public intererest, that henceforth a stop must be put to all such pretensions. In the meantime, I commend you and all those dear to you, to God's care and protection, and remain,

Honorable, prudent, and most discreet Sir,

Your affectionate friend, P. Stuyvesant.

My compliments to Mr. Schuyler, with my recommendation that he will please to take some care of my pasture.

New Amsterdam in New Netherland,

A. D. January 6th, 1664.

Address:

Honorable, prudent, and most discreet Lord. Mr. Jeremias Van Renselaer, Director of the Colony, Renselaerswyck.

The following order made by the Duke of York, on a petition of ex-Governor Stuyvesant (see the document in N. Y. Col. Doc., III, 164), is given in "Memoirs of English affairs, chiefly naval, from the year 1660 to 1673, written by his Royal Highness James Duke of York." London, 1729, p. 155.

"Whereas the King, my Sovereign Lord and Brother, by his Majesty's Order sitting in Council, dated the 23d of October 1667, upon the humble petition of Peter Stuyre-sant on behalf of himself, and the Dutch nation, now his Majesty's subjects in New York, hath been pleased to grant a temporary Permission for seven years (with three Ships only) unto the Dutch, freely to trade with the Inhabitants of the Lands, lately reduced from the Dutch, unto the obedience of his Majesty: These are therefore to will and require you, to permit and suffer the ship called the King Charles, whereof Peter Reyerts is master, belonging to Cornelius Steenwick, Mayor of New York, Jeremias Renslaer, Johannes Prugge, and Francis Boone, with their participants (being the first of the three Ships allowed for this year) to pass and repass, for the Space of one whole Year, to commence from the 23d of October instant, with her Company, Passengers, Goods, and Merchandizes, unto any of the Forts of the Lands lately reduced from the Dutch, unto his Majesty's obedience, without any Lett, Hindrance or Molestation, according to the aforesaid Grant. And for so doing this shall be your Warrant. Given under my Hand and Seal at St. James's, this 24th of October 1668.

To all Persons whom this may concern

James."

STRAY LEAVES FROM AN AUTOGRAPH COLLECTION. NO. VI.

LETTERS OF GOVS. ANDROS AND LEISLER, OF NEW YORK. LETTERS OF ROBERT MORRIS TO JOHN NICHOLSON.

I.

Sir Edmund Andros to Mathias Nichols, Mayor of New York.

MR. MAJOR,

This person, Samuel Carman, Canting up

& down, from place to place, and pretending imediate revelation to preach and expound ye Scriptures, and aleagin that no Ministers or teachers apointed or upheld by ye Magistrates are from God, I think itt our duty that such licentious (fellows) be restrained, & therefore that he be bound over to answer itt att ye next Court of Sessions of ye North ridings and in ye meane time to be of ye good behaviour & nott to wander from home, & if you think fitt, that he give security for ye same, in weh I pray yo take prest order.

I am yrs

4th of June '75.

E. Andross.

To Mr. MATHIAS NICOLS
Major of New York

(Endorsed) From the Governor June Sessions 1675 Gravesend.

$\mathbf{II}$

Commission issued by Jacob Leisler Lieutenant and Acting Governor of New York, 1689-91. Executed for treason, 1691.

By the Lieut Govern and Commander in Chief &c. By Vertue of authority Derived unto mee I doe hereby Constitute authorize and apoint you Andrew Fauvet, to Be Justice of the Peace for ye County of Westchester, giving you full Power and authority to act as a Justice of the Peace, for the good and Welfare of ye Governmt and due administration of a Justice according to Law, and all Persons Whome it may Concerne, are strictly Charged and Required to give you due Respect and obedience accordingly, and thus to Continue untill I receive further orders from his majsty King William. Given under, my hand and Seale at Fort William this 14 Day of Decembr 1689,

Past the Office

JACOB LEISLER

No 22

JACOB MILBORNE, Secr'y.

III.

Letters of Robert Morris to John Nicholson.

The two following letters of Robert Morris to Nicholson are interesting; the first was written when his embarrassment had about culminated in his ruin and imprisonment; the second as showing, what probably few have ever known; the great financier's abilities as a Poet:

No. 1. HILLS, Dec. 15, 1797.

DEAR SIR:

This is the day pregnant with our fate, it opened here with appearances again of C. Tunis & Co. I sent the gardners who chased them off.

Wm. & James seems to think they have been lurking about all night, having discovered their fires among the rocks on the Schuylkill side.

They seem determined—so am I. I do not fear them, but I do J. Baker because I respect him & I swear by all that is sacred that he never shall suffer one cent by ROB'T. MORRIS.

JOHN NICHOLSON, Esq'r.

No. 1. MARCH 13th, 1798.

DEAR SIR:

Upon bringing Doct'r Benj. Say's notes to the Touchstone, I find they are dated March 10th, 1795, your notes to me at 3 yrs after date. I endorsed them for your use, being part of $170,000, endorsed for you on the 4th March, 1797, so that they had them only 12 months to run & the price was not more than 10 cents p 20s. Thus you see what sort of consciences these Doctors have.

When Doctors of Physick, instead of their pills Become dealers in Paper not Bank notes or Bills, Interest on their gains they lie without fear, That Morris or Nicholson (caught by the ear,) Can yet by their Touchstone, on any one day, Detect lying Lusby, or unconsciousable, say, I am, D'r. Sir,

Your Obed. Servt., Rob't. Morris.

JNO. NICHOLSON, Esq.

ADDRESS OF THE GRAND JURY OF DUTCHESS CO., NEW YORK, TO PRE-SIDENT ADAMS IN 1798 AND HIS REPLY.

To John Adams, President of the United States:

The address of the Grand Jury of the County of Dutchess in the State of New York:

On any common occasion we should not | think it proper to intrude upon you our opinions relative to affairs which are intrusted to the executive and to our most immediate representatives, but when ambitious enemies affect to treat the government of our choice as a usurpation, when under the mask of friendly embassies they send agents to involve us in war and insurrection, when they openly excite divisions among us and triumph in the success of their evils, and when besides demanding tribute they deny us the essential attributes of Independence, it is then if ever a crime to be silent, it is then that all men should explicitly take their side and that all honest men should rally round the standard of their country.— We therefore declare that not only ourselves but we are fully confident that a vast majority of our fellow citizens do cordially approve the measures of the general Government, in being the first and only Power to acknowledge and assist the French republic in the hour of her deepest distress, in sending embassadors of peace when she made war upon our commerce and afterwards preparing equal magnanimity to resist her hostilities in the moment of her highest exaltation and power. We are determined with the rest of our fellow-citizens who have addressed you at this important crisis to support at the risque of all that is dear to us the Constitution and Independence of our Country against foreign force and domestick intrigue. We disclaim the wish of being united to any European Nation, and the Idea of being concerned in their wars but We are Americans and will assert our rights and defend our country.

We do however candidly confess and exceedingly regret that in some Instances marks of disaffection have appeared in this State. Whether this has been owing to the want of Information in some particular places or to the influx of foreigners, chiefly discontented characters and the more Ignorant class of Europeans, we can equally felicitate our country on the gradual disipation of error, the defeat of malevolence and the increasing unanimity of the citizens of this State. With respect to yourself sir, we have neither a disposition nor a motive for flattery but declare in the plain language of sincerity that we think you have deserved well of your country. Posterity will not Judge you unworthy of occupying the place of the first of men if, warned by your voice and Guided by your councils, our country shall escape the snarcs of a power which befriends in order to enslave and Embraces in order to Assassinate.

The conduct of France has disgraced the cause of free governments. With the tears and blood of millions she has written an applogy for the Advocates of despotic government that will survive the decay of brass and marble. We anxiously hope for the good of mankind our own country may exhibit an opposite and not less Conspicious example of the benefits of republican system and that we may demonstrate the possibility of uniting great publick liberty with publick Justice, tranquility peace and order.

We request you sir to accept the assurances of our sincere affection and great respect and our prayers that you may live long to enjoy that national happiness which your labors have had so eminent a share in procurring.

Jno. D'WITT

Foreman.

Poughkeepsie in Dutchess County State of New York Sept. 1st 1798,

To the grand jury of the county of Dutchess in the State of New York:
GENTLEMEN:

I have received and read with great pleasure your address of the first of September which in this kind of writing with a few explanations may be considered as a model of sense and spirit as well as of taste and eloquence.

Is there any mode imaginable, in which contempt of the understanding and feelings of a nation, can be expressed with so much aggravation, as by affecting to treat the government of their choice as as an usurpation?

If in some instances, marks of disaffection have appeared in your State, it is indeed exceedingly to be regretted. If this has been owing to the influx of foreigners of discontented characters, it ought to be a warning. If we glory in making our country an asylum for virtue in distress, and for innocent industry, it behooves us to beware, that under this praetext, it is not made a receptacle of malevolence and turbulence for the outcasts of the universe.

The conduct of France must not disgrace the cause of free governments. With the tears and the blood of millions, she has demonstrated, that a free government must be organized and adjusted with a strict attention to the nature of man and the interests and passions of the various classes of which society is composed, but she has not made any rational apology for the advocates of despotick government. Society cannot exist without laws, and those laws must be executed. In nations that are populous, opulent & powerful, the concurrent interests of great bodies of men opperate very forcibly on their passions and break down the barriers of modesty, decency and morality and can be restrained only by force. But there are methods or combining the public force in such a manner, as to restrain the most formidable combinations of interest, passions, imagination and prejudice, with recourse to despotic government. To these methods it is to be hoped the nations of Europe will have recourse, rather, than surrender all to military dictators or hereditary despots.

JOHN ADAMS.

Quincy Sept. 22d 1798.

THE FIRST THEATRE IN NEW YORK.

When was the Drama first introduced in America? Paper by Judge Daly, read before the New York Historical Society, June 3, 1864.

Dunlap, the historian of the American stage, informs us that the drama was introduced in this country by William Hallam, the successor of Garrick in Goodman's Field Theatre, who formed a joint-stock company, and sent them to America, under the management of his brother, Lewis Hallam, in the year 1752; and that the first play ever acted in America was the Merchant of Venice represented by this company on the 5th of September, 1752, at Williamsburgh, then the capital of Virginia, in an old store-house which they converted into a theatre within two months after their arrival at Yorktown.

Dunlap's familiarity with the subject, the fact that he derived his information from Lewis Hallam, Jr., who came out a boy twelve years of age with this early company, and the circumstance that Burke, in his History of Virginia, has the same statement, has been deemed sufficiently satisfactory, and William Hallam, whom Dunlap calls "The Father of the American Stage," has been accepted as the person who first introduced the drama in America.

But Dunlap and those upon whom he relied were mistaken, for there was a theatre in the city of New York in 1733, ninetcen years before Hallam arrived in this country. It is mentioned in Bradford's Gazette of that year, in the advertisement of a merchant who directs inquiries to be made of him at his store "next door to the Play House." This reference is all that has been found respecting it; but in the month of February, 1750, more than two years before the arrival of Hallam, a regular company of actors, under the joint management of Thomas Kean and of a Mr. Murray, came to this city from Philadelphia, and applied to Admiral George Clinton, then the Governor of the Province of New York, for permission Governor Clinton was a man of rank, the son of an Earl, and had previously held a distinguished position as commander of the English fleet in the Mediterranean; while his wife, Lady Clinton, was a woman of great personal attractions and very agreeable manners, who had moved in the first circles of London society. To these cultivated persons there was nothing objectionable in the establishment of a theatre, and permission was accordingly granted; though from the spirit afterward exhibited by the local magistrates in this and other places, it would probably have been refused had the city authorities been applied to. It was announced through the columns of the Weekly Post Boy that the company intended to perform as long as the season lasted, provided they met with suitable encouragement; and upon obtaining the consent of the Governor they hired a large room in a building in Nassau street, belonging to the estate of Rip Van HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

Dam, formerly President of the Provincial Council, and converted it into a theatre; and here, on the 5th of March, 1750, they produced Shakspeare's historical play of Richard III, as altered by Colley Cibber, in which the part of Richard was performed by Mr. Kean. The performance was announced to begin precisely at half-past seven o'clock, and the public were informed that no person would be admitted behind the scenes—an important reform, as it had been the practice in London from Shakespeare's time to allow the purchasers of box tickets free access to the stage; a custom which led to many abuses and immoralities.

The room which had been converted into a theatre must have been a very capacious one, as it was arranged with pit and gallery, and afterward boxes were added. The price of admission to the boxes was eight shillings. to the pit five shillings, and to the gallery three shillings. The exact capacity of this theatre is known from the following circumstances:-Upon the occasion of Mr. Kean's benefit, who was the leading tragedian, he was honored by a crowded house in his favorite part of Richard III, and great complaint having been made that more tickets had been sold than the house could hold, Kean published a card in the Post Boy, which was accompanied by a certificate of Parker the publisher, to the effect that he had printed in all one hundred and sixty-one pit tickets, ten box and one hundred and twenty-one gallery tickets, declaring that as great a number had been in the house before. Kean in his card informs the public that it had been determined not to receive any money at the door, but that it was impossible to carry out that intention without giving great offense, and that the purchasers of tickets who had come after the house was filled had had their money returned. It may be inferred from this circumstance that the players found "satisfactory encouragement." Richard III appears to have been a favorite piece, and on the 12th of March, 1750, it was announced that it would be acted for the last time, together with the farce of the Beau in the Suds, and that on the following Saturday Dryden's play of the Spanish Friar would be represented. They continued to play on Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday from the 5th of March, 1750, to the 30th of April, 1751, when the season closed; and that the experiment was successful may be inferred from the fact that they opened the theatre again for another season on the 30th of December, 1750, and continued to play three times a week until the 17th of June, 1751, closing with a succession of benefits, when the company went to Virginia.

Before the close of the season, Kean, the joint-manager, withdrew, announcing in a formal card to the public that he had resolved to quit the stage, by the advice of several gentlemen in town who were his friends, and follow his employment of writing; that his co-manager, Mr. Murray, had agreed to give him a night clear of all expenses for his half of the clothes and scenery of the play-house; and that by his Excellency the Governor's permission he would, on the following Monday evening enact the part of "King Richard III" for his benefit, being the last time of his appearance upon the stage.

On the Monday following, April 29, 1751, the performance for his benefit was changed to the Busybody and the Virgin Unmasked, and in announcing the change he informs the public, as an additional attraction, that there will be singing by Mr. Woodham, and particularly the celebrated ode called "Britons' Charter," closing with this appeal:—
"As this will positively be the last time of Mr. Kean's appearing upon the stage, he honestly hopes all gentlemen and ladies, and others who are well-wishers, will be so kind as to favor him with their company."

How this company were collected, or where they originally came from, it is probably now no longer possible to ascertain. As they were announced, upon their first appearance in New York, as a company of comedians who had come from Philadelphia, it is highly probable that they had played before in the southern cities, and that they came originally from the West Indies, where, especially in Jamaica, theatrical companies from England had been in the habit of performing for some years previously. During the two seasons of the company in New York the following plays were given:-Richard III, Otway's Orphan, Dryden's Spanish Friar, Farquhar's Sir Harry Wildair, being the sequel to the Trip to the Jubilec, Recruiting Officer, and Beau's Stratagem, George Barnwell, The Beggar's Opera, The Distressed Mother, Congreve's Love for Love, and the Bold Stroke for a Wife, with the following farces: - The Beau in the Suds, the Mock Doctor, The Devil to Pay, The Walking Statue, The Old Man Taught Wisdom, Damon and Phillion, Hob in the Well, and Miss in her Teens. The names of the dramatis personæ were not printed in the play-bills, for the reason, probably, that the same actor had to play different parts in the same piece, but from references made to individual performers, the following persons are known to have been members of the company. Kean and Murray the joint managers: Messrs. Taylor, Woodham, Tremaine, Jago, Scott, Moore, Marks, and Master Dickey Murray, the manager's son; Miss Nancy George, Miss Osborne, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Davis, and Mrs. Osborne. Kean, Tremaine, and Jago played in tragic parts. Murray and Taylor were comedians. Miss Nancy George and Miss Osborne were the chief ladies in comedy and tragedy. Woodham and Mrs. Taylor were comedians and vocalists, and Kean, like his more distinguished namesake, Edmund Kean, appears to have possessed some musical talent. for on the occasion of his first benefit he announces that he will sing "an oratorio." Master Dickey Murray would seem to have been a favorite of the public; the other actors performed in subordinate parts.

During the second season, which lasted for six months, they had repeated the same plays many times, and probably having nothing new or more attractive to offer for another season, they determined to try their fortunes elsewhere. They closed with a series of benefits, and some of the appeals made respecting them are sufficiently curious to be noticed. Mrs. Davis announces that a benefit is given to her to enable her to buy off her time, and she hopes that all ladies and gentlemen who are charitably inclined will favor it, closing in legal phraseology, "and their humble petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray." It was the constant practice at that time for masters of vessels to bring out passengers to New York upon the condition that they should be sold immediately upon their arrival as servants, to any person who would pay their passagemoney. They were sold for a definite period of time, and were called Redemptors, of which class Mrs. Davis, from her earnest appeal, appears to have been one. Mr. Jago humbly begs that all gentlemen and ladies will be so kind as to favor him with their company, as he never had a benefit before, and is just come out of prison; and Mrs. Osborne appropriately selects the play of The Distressed Mother, with the announcement that it is the first time this poor widow has had a benefit; and having met with divers late hardships and misfortunes, she appeals to the benevolent and others.

It is stated in Clapp's Records, that Otway's Orphan was played in Boston in the coffee-house in State street, in the early part of 1750, by two young Englishmen, assisted by some volunteer comrades of the town; and as this is about the period when Murray & Kean's company began to perform in New York, this may possibly have been an initiatory attempt on the part of some of the members of that company to introduce dramatic amusements among the people of New England. Whether it was so or not, it was immediately followed by the passage of an act by the General Court of Massachusetts, in March, 1750, prohibiting stage plays and theatrical entertainments of any kind.

In the winter of 1751 another company came to New York, and opened the theatre in Nassau street on the 23d of December, 1751, with Othello and the farce of Lethe. The company was under the management of a Mr. Upton, and in all probability came from Jamaica, in a vessel which had arrived a short time before. The company were either inferior to the former, or the public had become indifferent; for the manager, after performing three weeks, announced that, to his great disappointment, he had not met with encouragement enough to support the company for the season, and that he would bring it to an end by giving a few benefits. Some doubt of the merits of the new performers seems to have prevailed, as he assured the public in a card that the company "were perfect, and hope to perform to satisfaction." It was the custom then for the actors to wait upon all the principal inhabitants and solicit their patronage: and fearing that he had been held accountable for some remissness of duty in this particular, he begs the public to remember that "he is an obsolute stranger in the city, and if in his application he has omitted any gentleman or lady's house or lodging, he humbly hopes that they will impute it to his want of information, and not to want of respect." But though he produced several pieces not yet played in New York, such as the Fair Penitent, Venice Preserved, The Provoked Husband, and Othello, it was of no avail. A few benefits were given,-one for a Mr. Leigh, another one for the poor widow Osborne, who, with Mr. Tremaine of the former company, had become attached to this one, and on the 27th March, 1752, the last performance took place for the benefit of the manager's wife, Mrs. Upton. Upton delivered a farewell epilogue, and a few days after he left in a vessel for Lon-

The prior company, after performing in Virginia, went to Annapolis, the capital of Maryland, and erected a small theatre there, which they opened on the 22d of June, 1752, with the Beggar's Opera, and the farce of the Lying Valet. Annapolis was at this period a place of considerable trade and commerce, with a thriving population. including many wealthy merchants; and being the capital of the province, was the residence of the leading officials, and a general place of resort for opulent planters and their families. There was among the people a great deal of refinement and cultiva-They were much more disposed to enjoy the recreation of the theatre than the mixed English, French, and Dutch population of New York; and, consequently, the theatre there was a permanent institution, and continued to be so for many years.

The company represented the same plays which they had before acted in New York, with the addition of Cato and the Busybody; and after playing for a season, they gave representations in other parts of Maryland. Some new names appear among the members, such as Eyrarson, Wynell, and Herbert, while many of the old members had left—a circumstance warranting the supposition that there was either another company then performing in the South, or that these actors had returned to England or to the West Indies. Among the remaining members were Murray, Scott, and Miss Osborne; and Kean, despite his formal farewell in New York, and declaration of his intention to resume his original occupation of a writing master, was again among them, representing principal parts.

All that has been here narrated occurred before Hallam came to this country and gave his first representation at Williamsburg, Virginia, in the autumn of 1752. He afterward went to Annapolis, and in the summer of 1753 he came with his company to New York. Finding the old theatre in Nassau street inadequate to his purpose, he took the building down and erected upon the same spot what the newspaper of the day, Parker's Gazette, describes "as a very fine, large, and commodious new theatre," which he opened on the 17th of September, 1753, with Steele's Comedy of the Conscious Lovers and the farce of Damon and Phileda. Dunlop says that it was erected on the spot afterward occupied by the old Dutch church (the present Post Office). In this he was also mistaken, for the church was erected on the place where the building now stands in 1729. The theatre which Hallam built, and the one before it, was on the east side of Nassau street, between Maiden Lane and John street.

Hallam's company was far superior to any that preceded it. Mrs. Hallam was not only a beautiful woman, but she was an actress of no ordinary merit. Dunlop in his youth heard old ladies speak in raptures of her beauty, grace, and pathos. Hallam was himself an excellent comedian, and two other members of the company, Rigby and Malone, were actors of established reputation upon the London boards. The arrival of a complete company like this, who were not only practised in their art, but amply provided before their departure with dresses. and all that was necessary for effective dramatic representation, was something too formidable to contend against. They seem, therefore, to have entirely supplanted the earlier pioneers, of whom nothing further is known except that some of their number, Murray, Tremaine, Scott, and Miss Osborne, played in Hallam's original company afterward, when it was under the management of Douglass.

After performing in New York for the winter, Hallam went with company to Philadelphia in April, 1754, and from there to the West Indies, where he died. In 1758 the company returned to New York, under the management of Douglass, who had married Hallam's widow. During the four years that they had been absent, the theatre remained unoccupied; and a short time before their arrival a congregation of German Calvinists had been formed, and being in want of a place of worship they purchased the theatre in Nassau street for $1250, and fitted it up as a church, which they continued to occupy until 1765, when the building, which had not been a very substantial one, becoming decayed, they took it down and erected another edifice upon the spot, which was standing fifteen years ago, and was familiarly known as Gosling's Eating House, Nos. 64 and 66 Nassau street.

Finding that the theatre had been converted into a church, Douglas built another one upon Cruger's Wharf, a large pier with houses upon it, which at that time extended from Pearl street into the East River, between Old and Coentie's slips. In the following year (1759), Douglass went to Philadelphia, where he erected a small theatre, and from there to Annapolis, where he built a very fine one of brick, capable of accommodating between five and six hundred people, which he opened on the 3d of March. 1760.

In 1761 Douglass returned to New York. and abandoning the theatre upon Cruger's Wharf, erected one in Beekman street, a few doors below Nassau street. This was torn down in a riot in 1764. Three years after, the theatre in John street, between Nassau street and Broadway, was built, which continued to be the principal one until the erection of the old Park Theatre in 1797.

Aotes and Queries.

NOTES.

INDIAN NAMES ON THE ANDROSCOGGIN.

Catalogues have been published from time to time with their supposed definitions, but too often with no real research. It is not till within a few years that literary men have been led to investigate the living language of the Indians residing in New England, by examining the Dictionary of the Norridgwock tribes compiled by Father Rale, and other original sources, so that they have succeeded admirably well in recovering from oblivion the names and definitions of many localities in Maine. With their assistance I now proceed to give the definitions of Indian names within the territory of the Anasagunticooks. If the reader will bear in mind that words ending in cook, keag, eague, keak, unk, sac, go, ic, og, ko, cot, ac, ack, oke, are all derived from the word ahke, meaning land, or place, and that che means great, kenne, long, sepe, a river, conte, a stream, or up the stream, pontook, falls, winne, beautiful, matta, much, namaes, fish; those in, at, et, it, ot, ut, there is, or, it is, he can readily recognize at least a portion of the definitions of very many Indian names of places. Sometimes a letter is omitted, or an additional letter inserted for the sake of euphony.

Sagadahoc, from sanktaiiwi, to finish, heuponic, and onk, place, Sankta-honk, "The finishing place," "The mouth," so given on Jefferey's Maps-name of the Kennebec from Merrymeeting Bay to its mouth.

Sabino, for Sebenake-sebe, river, n euphonic, oke, place, "River place." Others derive it from saponet, "Where they catch fish," V.—Atkins' Bay.

Erascohegan, Urescohegan, Uregan or Ulegan, good, skohegan, from kankskowhegan, fish spear, "Good-fish-spearing." The last part of the word is retained in Skowhegan. Others have defined it "The place to comb the hair." V.-Parker's Ísland.

Acquehadonganook, from Ughiadi, to terminate, agwan, smoked fish, ook place, "Smoked fish-point."-Chops Point.

Merriconeag, "It carries thither." V .-Harpswell.

Winnegance, also written Winneganne, winne, beautiful, and egan from Saurisegan (Algonquin) water, "Beautiful water." -Some have confounded this word with ounigan (Rale), a portage. There is a carrying place from it to Casco Bay. A river.

Macquait, Macqua, bear, it, there is, equivalent to "Bear-place." A bay in Brunswick. Musquequoik, Sullivan's Hist.

Psazeske, muddy. Muddy River in Brunswick.

Wiskeag or Waskeag. Weeds growing in the water of a cove. V.

Terrimugus. A cove in Topsham; name of an Indian chief.

Harraseeket, Harrasuket. "To travel in the river," V. A river in Freeport.

Magocook. A small bay in the eastern part of Casco Bay.

Quabacook, quaqunmps (dialect), duck, nebe, water, cook place. "Duck-waterplace." Others believe it to mean "The point where the water becomes narrow," V. hence Quebec, though the latter word belongs to another dialect, Kebec-Merrymeeting Bay.

Abagadusset, pagadassem. "It shines, or "The shining sun." A point of land near the outlet of the Androscoggin.

Namaskeag, namaes, fish, keag, place, "Fish place." A small island near Brunswick Falls, called also Little Skeag.

Bungonengamock. A small stream on the south side of Brunswick.

Sawacook. If it is Sawahquatook, it means "A tree forking in several branches." If it is Sowaranecook, it means the place to find many cranberries. V. Its definition is doubtful. Topsham.

Pejebecot. "It is crooked," or "It turns."

The crooked place, from pequomsque. crooked (Elliot). It may refer to the crooked river, or to the turning off place to Casco Bay, River and Falls, between Lewiston and Merrymeeting Bay. Anmirkangan. "Fish drying," name applied by Rale probably to the Androscoggin at Brunswick.

Amitigonpontook. Amiti, there is, gon, clay, pontook, falls. "Clay-land Falls,"

Lewiston Falls.

Rokomeko, perhaps Hanckameko, "Running under ground," referring to some river. V. Capt. Bean, who was a prisoner many years at Rokomeko, says, that it meant "The place where they hoed corn," from Arrokauhegan, a hoe. Canton Point, formerly Jay Point. Sabattis, who accompanied Gen. Arnold to Quebec, was at Carritunk Falls in 1797, and he defined it "The place where the water forms a semicircle around the land," a definition perfectly correct in point of fact.

Amoscoggin, namaes, fish, kankskowhegan, spear. "Fish spearing." Others say it means, "Fish coming in the Spring."

V. Androscoggin River.

Ahmelahcogneturcook, "Place famous for dried meats." Name given to both sides of the Androscoggin.

Amasagunticook, Anasaconticook, namaes, fish, konte, up the stream, cook, place. This word and Amoscoggin have been frequently confounded. It will be perceived that namaes, a fish, enters into the composition of many words. Names of the Indians on the Androscoggin.

Acomes.—Rumford Falls, as given on Jefferey's maps A. D., 1775.

Aurconganunticook. Possibly this may be the same as Anmirkangen, "The fish drying place." The Androscoggin above Canton Point.

Ammonosuc. Namaes, fish, hussan, stone, uc, place. "Stony fish brook or river." The western branch of the Androscoggin in N. H.

Chickwolnepy. Ktche, great, kwol, near, nebe, water. "Near Great Pond." A small river in Milan, N. H.

Pontocook, pontook falls, cook place. "Falls place."—Falls in Dummer, N. H.

Magalloway, is an Etchemin word, and means "Large tail." V.—A branch of the Androscoggin near the lakes.

Aziscoos, aseskou, mud, cowass, pines, "Pines on the mud bank."—Falls and mountains on the Magalloway river.

Umbagog, wompi, clear, shallow, nebe, water, g euphonic, og, place. "Shallowwater lake," or "Clear Water Pond." Name of a lake on the head waters of the Androscoggin.

Winnebacook, winne beautiful, kenne long, nebe, water, cook place. "Beautiful long water lake," or "Beautiful long lake."

—Richardson Lake.

Ellementebagog, nearly obsolete, definition uncertain. The narrows between the preceding and succeeding lake.

Molechunkemunk, mona (dialectic), Island, sehunk, goose, loon, m euphonic, unk, place. "Loon Island Lake." There are two islands in the lake where loons are numerous.—Richardson Lake.

Moosetocmaguntic. This seems to denote the river between the great Lake and Molechunkemunk, for here the fish go up the stream, and perhaps the moose did. Nemaes, fish, conte up the stream. Others say it means "Where the hunters were watching the moose at night." V. There are more than forty islands in this lake, none of which have any well known name at the present time.—Great Lake.

Cupsuptic, perhaps Capsatuc, "The act of drawing a sieve while fishing. V. Net fishing lake." The most northern of the Umbagog chain of lakes.

Acquessuc, derivation undetermined.—

Rangely Lake.

Kennebago, kenne long, nebe water, go, place. "Long water lake." River and lake.

Parmachenee, suppose Pah-matchene, possibly Pas-matchenebe, "Much bad water." The derivation of this word is not settled. It is also spelled Pomache, which means cursing. V. Lake at the source of the Magalloway.

N. E. TRUE.

GEORGE PEABODY — LORD TIMOTHY DEXTER.—It is rather uncommon in this day, says the Newburyport Herald, for persons to render invoices of their taxable property. The assessors advertise for them, but as it is understood that they will not doom anybody no notice is taken thereof; and probably not a half a dozen a year are rendered in Newburyport. Formerly it was not so, and in looking back to 1814, we find the following from George Peabody, the celebrated London banker, whose wealth and generosity are known the world over.

Invoice of all the taxable property of the subscriber on the 1st of May, 1814—

One Poll-

Personal Property, $200.

GEORGE PEABODY.

Newburyport, Oct. 26, 1814. Sworn to before Sam'l Cutler. Oct. 26, 1814.

It appears from the above that George Peabody, in 1814, arrived at manhood, took his oath that he was possessed of but two hundred dollars taxable property, which was just enough to make him a voter; and if he had lost one dollar of it the day before he would not have been a voter that year.

We find among the old papers of the assessor's office another document from a different man; one of no education, of some vices, and of great vanity, amounting nearly to insanity; but still a shrewd business man. It is endorsed on the back in a different handwriting from his own, "Timothy Dexter, minutes 1804." We give it as he writes it. It shows the man; also the condition of things then, when the horses, dog-, cows, cats, negro women and silver, were all alike articles of merchandise and taxation. Yet his closing words are worthy of a great man in the most illuminated age-" What is right is right; and all that is right I am willing to pay." This was the better part of the man cropping through the rough exterior; and the words are of characteristic force. As this does not represent all the property he had, by a great deal we suspect that the "minutes" is a "pickle for the knowing ones.

A List of what you have A Rite to tax me for first my hous

2 hosses 1 cow 2 dogs 2 cats
1 Litel Clowey* 40 wate silver

1 house in broad way 2700 Dollars papers in the bank 2662 from goods..233 Sam Nap ous me 710 Dolars a & C Glee owes me 160 Dolars

Dolars
money I ows in the old bank.......1800 money in the Noue Bank I ows.....1300
I am soued in broum ley for Land

Consider what is Rite in taxing the brig it takes 16 months to make Rods for the peopel at large therefore it is Not to be taxed put it to your own case what is Rite is Rite and all that is Rite I am the man willing to pay—

T. Dexter.

AN ANCIENT CLOCK.—Mr. John A. Mc-Allister, optician, Chestnut street, has a clock made by A. Fromanteel, Amsterdam, before he removed to London, where he introduced the art of clock making. This was about 1659, two years after the celebrated Huygens von Zuylichem, the natural philosopher, following up a hint thrown out by Galileo, constructed the pendulum clock, of which a full description is to be found in his great work, published at the Hague in 1658, and entitled "Horologium Oscillatorium, sive de Motu Pendulorum." Dr. Hooke, ten years later, removed the reproach that "Huygens' clock governed the pendulum, whereas the pendulum ought to govern the clock," by inventing an escapement, which enables a less maintaining power to carry a pendulum. This (the crutch or anchor escapement) is the governing power, we believe, of the old clock in the Philadelphia Library, whereas Mr. McAllister's has the Huygens pendulum. The Library clock was made, not at Amsterdam by the elder Fromanteel, but by his son, at London; consequently, it could not have belonged to Oliver Cromwell, as sometimes stated, seeing that the Protector died in 1658, the year before any clock had been made in England. To Mr. McAllister's clock a striking apparatus is appended; it occupies a place on the top of the clock, and is singularly clear in tone. The clock, as far as we can judge, by comparing it with a print, much resembles the Horologe presented by Henry VIII to Anna Boleyn. It stands about eight inches high, is richly carved, and is strongly gilt outside. The works are in excellent order, though two centuries have elapsed since they were made.—" Press," Philadelphia, June, 1864.

# Clowey, a negro woman.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION OF 1800.

—In 1796 the people of Pennsylvania elected the electors of President and Vice-President. The Republican party elected their ticket by a small majority, but owing to the detention in the Pittsburgh post-office of the returns of some of the south western counties, two of the Federal candidates were declared to be elected.

In 1799-1800 the Federal party, having a majority in the legislature, deprived the people of the choice of Electors and vested it in themselves.

At the autumn election in 1800, the Republicans had a very decided majority of the popular votes. They elected eleven members of Congress, and the Republicans only two. To the State House of Representatives, fifty-five Republicans and twenty-three Federalists were chosen, but in the State Senate, owing to the holding over of Senators chosen in previous years, the Federalists had a majority. This majority undertook to control the election in such a manner that the great State of Pennsylvania was, in effect, reduced to a single electoral vote.

It is believed that at this period the Electers of President and Vice-President were chosen by the people only in the States of Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

The legislature of Pennsylvania had to choose fifteen Electors. An election by joint ballot would have resulted in the choice of fifteen Republican Electors. This had been the invariable method in the legislature of Pennsylvania. The Senate refused to agree to such a method of election unless upon terms prescribed by themselves, and declined meeting the House of Representatives to hold an election until a mode of nomination was adopted which would secure to the Federal party seven of the fifteen Electors. They proposed to the House of Representatives that each body should nominate eight candidates, and that the fifteen to be elected should be chosen from them.

The house of Representatives proposed that each House should nominate nine candidates, so that only six Federalists would be chosen, but the Senate adhered to its own plan, and finally on the first of December, the Representatives, fearing that the election would be lost altogether, were compelled to submit to the dictation of the Senate. Of the Electors chosen, eight voted for Jefferson and Burr, and seven for Adams and Pinckney.

Indian Justice. — Many years ago, when a gentleman from the central part of New Hampshire was in the Pequawket country, attending to his property near the village of Fryeburg, a company of Indians from the Penobscot tribe came there for a temporary abode, and pitched their tents on an elevation near the Saco river. In passing to his lands, he noticed a squaw kneeling to pick strawberries, and creeping to the different parts of the patch that furnished the fruit. Her attitude struck him as singular: but he concluded she took that posture as most convenient for the purpose.

On his return she disappeared, and he supposed had gone to sell the berries. But as he approached the settlement, he observed the unusual sight of an Indian carrying a squaw on his back. A nearer view showed him the person whom he saw in the strawberry field. After having witnessed the occurrence several times, on inquiry of the Indians as to the cause of this action, one of them replied. "He bad Indian. He drink much occapee. He drunk, and Cheepie (devil) get in him. Then he put squaws feet in fire. They burn off." As he looked he saw they were crippled and useless. The tribe resented the cruelty, and its council were about to decide on his immediate execution. But one of the elder and wiser of the number interposed his opinion, and gave this advice: "No shoot: make him live long as squaw live; make him carry squaw, when she want walk; when squaw die, then shoot."

B tid . )

en d. 40

Dustry of M.

The decision was in accordance with this counsel, and thus secured to the injured woman a perpetual kind treatment from her husband. The fact of his own death as soon as she died, made him careful to preserve her health and life; and the punishment of bearing her as his constant burden, as well as the compelled attention to her welfare, formed a striking example of the retributive shrewdness of "Indian Justice."

B

THE DEATH OF JOSHUA COFFIN OF Newburyport, the author of the History of Newbury, has been announced. He was once the schoolmaster of the poet Whittier, who always held him in affectionate remembrance, and in later years was able by his kindly jests, to dispel the settled gloom which at one time threatened to sadden the end of the old man's life. A friend has called our attention to the lines of Whittier, To my Old Schoolmaster, addressed to Mr. Coffin. The poem is too long for our columns, but we give brief extracts which show the characteristics of the writer as well as the esteem in which he held his old teacher. He calls it "an epistle not after the manner of Horace."

> Old friend, kind friend! lightly down Drops time's snow-flakes on thy crown! Never be thy shadow less. Never fail thy cheerfulness; Care, that kills the cat, may plough Wrinkles in the miser's brow, Peepen envy's spiteful frown, Draw the mouths of bigots down, Plague ambition's dream, and sit Heavy on the hypocrite, Haunt the rich man's door, and ride In the gilded coach of pride;-Let the fiend pass !- what can he Find to do with such as thee? Seldom comes that evil guest Where the conscience lies at rest, And brown health and quiet wit Smiling on the threshold sit.

I, the Urchin unto whom,
In that smoked and dingy room,
Where the district gave thee rule
O'er its ragged winter school,
Thou didst teach the mysteries
Of those weary A, B, C's,—
Where, to fill the every pause
Of thy wise and learned saws,
HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 31

Through the cracked and crazy wall Came the cradle-rock and squall, And the goodman's voice, at strife With his shrill and tipsy wife,— Luring us by stories old. With a comic unction told, More than by the eloquence Of terse birchen arguments (Doubtful gain, I fear), to look With complacence on a book! Where the kenial pedagogue Half forgot his rogues to flog. Citing tale or apologue, Wise and merry in his drift As old Phædrus' two-fold gift. Had the little rebels known it. Risum et prudentiam monet! I,-the man of middle years. In whose sable locks appears Many a warning fleck of grey, Looking back to that far day, And thy primal lessons, feel Grateful smiles my lips unseal, As, remembering thee I blend Olden teacher, present friend, Wise with antiquarian search, In the scrolls of state and church: Named on history's title-page, Parish-clerk and justice sage; For the ferule's wholesome awa Wielding now the sword of law.

The poet goes on to speak of the Antiquarian tastes of the teacher,

—"with fowler's tact, Coolly bagging fact on fact," and concludes in the same merry vein in which he began.

And when thou art called, at last, To thy townsmen of the past, Not as stranger shalt thou come; Thou shalt find thyself at home! With the little and the big, Woolen cap and periwig, Madam in her high laced ruff, Goody in her home-made stuff,—Wise and simple, rich and poor, Thou hast known them all before!

LOUISIANA IN 1818.—The following is an extract of a letter from the Hon. Francis Xavier Martin, of New Orleans, bearing the date of the 22d of July, 1818, addressed to a gentleman in Georgia. It will be found to contain a most concise and minute topography of the state of Louisiana, and must be highly interesting to the enterprising of all descriptions.

Sir—You are not deceived in the idea you have formed of the prosperity of the

I believe in no part of the United States is agriculture more profitable.

Some of our sugar planters derive a revenue of a thousand dollars, in some years, from the annual labor of each of their working hands—from $500 to $750 is the ordinary calculation—and at the present price of cotton ($33) it is imagined that if the disease which injures the plant at present subsides, the culture of that article is equally profitable.

There is no difficulty in obtaining land in this state, but slaves are extremely scarce and dear in the market. An ordinary field hand, born in the country, or seasoned thereto, is worth from $1,500 to $2,000 in cash; genteel house servants command

$3,000.

From the Balize to the Baton Rouge, on one side of the Mississippi, and the Red River on the other, the land sells by the front acre; the usual depth of each tract is forty, and sometimes eighty acres; but the first twenty immediately on the river are alone cultivable, upon an average; beyond this is an impenetrable cypress swamp, constantly under water; the cultivated land being a narrow ribband on side of the river, and the land gradually sloping from the river. Within the first ten miles above and below the city of New Orleans, on either shore, the front acre sells from $2,000 to $4,000, and as you recede from the city the land becomes proportionably cheaper.

The plantations there are burthened with the keeping of the levee or dyke that secures them from inundation, and the road with its ditches and bridges, a labor which, some planters say, employs the sixth part of the labor of their hands.

On the shores of the Mississippi, within the limits I speak of, sugar is the principal staple commodity; there are, however, in the upper part of it, several cotton farms. Beyond the narrow strip of cultivable land, which extends along the western shore of the Mississippi, is a dismal swamp, bounded by lakes and morasses, which extend to the distance of about forty miles, when another cypress swamp bounds the eastern side of the lands in the next county-Attakapas. Here on the sea-shore, and along the banks of the Teche, the main river, are some sugar plantations lately established by Americans. which thrive very much. Cotton is also made here, but at a small distance from the sea begins what is called the prairie land. vast natural meadows destitute of trees, cx-cept along the water courses.

The plantations here are few, on account of the scarcity of timber, and the people employ themselves in raising cattle. number of farmers count their cattle by thousands. The cattle are left to shift for themselves during the whole year, marking the calves and counting the animals which are intended for immediate sale, being all the trouble the farmer takes. Land sells here from $20 to $25 the arpent—very little less than the acre. Upon the water courses where the land is fit for sugar, the land sells at times for double that price.

Above the Attakapas is the county of Opelousas, the lands of which are much the same, except that the quantity fit for sugar is extremely inconsiderable. Still higher up is the county of Rapides, chiefly inhabited by Americans.

There are here some extremely rich tracts of land. Cotton only is planted. Good lands sell from $15 to $20 per acre. To the north are the counties of Washita. Catahoula and Concordia. The population of these is chiefly American. These counties. before the cession, were inhabited by hunters. In these, as in the county of Rapides, there is a quantity of piny, sandy loam, which the neighborhood of rich lands prevents from being cultivated. The cotton lands of Red River are supposed to be the best cotton lands in the United States. In Washita, Chatahoula, and Concordia, large tracts are fit for the cultivation of wheat, tobacco, and Indian corn.

The United States have a great deal of land to sell here, and there are individuals who own immense tracts. This is the part of the state in which the cheapest lands are. To the west is the county of Natchitoches, bordering on the Spanish province of Texas. In it tobacco and cotton are cultivated to great advantage. It is intersected by numerous water courses, along which are very rich tracts of land. Cattle are also raised here in abundance. Pointe Coupée and Avoyelles, two counties on each side of Red River, are entirely occupied by French families who raise cotton. Of late a sugar plantation has been set up at Pointe Coupée; it is the most northwest in the state, and thrives well. Land sells at Pointe Coupée at $10 or $20 the front arpent or acre, with the usual depth of forty; but the cultivable land is here, also, a very narrow strip.

On the east bank of the Mississippi, immediately below the boundary of the new state of Mississippi is the county of Feliciana, taken from the Spaniards in the year 1810. The upper part, extending as far as the Bayou Manchac, is what is generally called rolling land, very fit for the cultivation of cotton, but the soil is not deep, and wastes or wears away in a few years. population is almost exclusively American. Land sells from ten to twenty dollars. At a distance from the Mississippi begins a body of land which is not at all sought The country around the lakes Maurepas and Ponchartrain, before the Americans took possession of it, was thinly inhab-The people immediately on the seashore drew from it large quantities of shells, which they burnt into lime; having but very few slaves they did little else, except raising cattle and burning tar. The land is sandy, piny, except along the water courses. Here the Americans have established cotton and grazing farms. The land (a great proportion of which is public land) is obtained on easy terms, and at various prices, from two to twenty dollars an acre. There are immense tracts of it in possession of individuals, who obtained them from the Spanish government when it was about expiring; they would gladly sell at twenty five cents per acre, but their title is a doubtful one. Throughout the whole state land is obtained with great facility. As to the mode of payment, long credit is given. This is owing in part to the productiveness, and the certainty there is that a man who has a force to cultivate will pay out of the crops; but chiefly to the facility with which payment is enforced by law. The premises are necessarily mortgaged for the payment of the price, and the production of the contract of sale, and an affidavit that the payment is due entitles the vendor to instant execution.

The government is as yet in equilibrium between the French and American party. In the legislature the first have a small majority in the lower, and they are equal in the upper. The governor, treasurer, and secretary of state are French. In the superior court two judges are French and one American by birth. Of the district judges one only French. In general the Americans are in majority in the other offices.

Our public institutions are few. We have a college pretty well endowed; five banks; the nuns have a boarding-school for young ladies, and are very rich. The catholic clergy are few in numbers, well provided for—the curate of New Orleans being the only member of it supposed to be rich. We have a bishop, but he resides at St. Louis, in the Missouri Territory.

The Americans have an elegant church of episcopalians, and are building a presbyterian meeting-house. The catholics have two churches only in the city. We have two theatres, one of which was lately built, the other is rebuilding.

The Creole ladies are fond of dancing. There is but little society here; however, it is so in every country where money is made with facility—the passion for acquiring it engrosses all others. Living in the city is as expensive as in New York or Charleston. House rent is high. Professional men are making money very fast. Here, beginnings are, like everywhere else attended with some difficulty; but when once a name is established, strides toward fortune are rapid.

A. T

SILVESTER.—Mr. Valentine's valuable Manual for 1862, contains a contributed article, entitled "The Huguenot Settlers of New York and its Vicinity," of which the following is an extract:

"Shelter Island off Sag Harbor, seems to have furnished a home for Huguenots, if we may judge by the title being vested in the Sylvester family, as early as the year 1666." p. 749.

The Silvesters were not Huguenots. Giles Silvester and Mary his wife were English.

Their children, named Constant, Nathaniel, Joshua, Giles Silvester and Mary Cartwright were born in Amsterdam in Holland. These facts are set forth in the act for naturalising these children, passed in the 12th year of the reign of Charles the Second, and entitled, "An act for naturalizing Gerrard Vanhethuyzen and others." For further particulars respecting the family, see Thompson's Hist. of Long Island, I, 364-369.

NEW YORK OYSTERS.—In 1676, some Indians of Westchester county applied to the council for leave to come upon this island (New York) and hereabout, "oystering." From this it would appear that the oyster had its habitat nearer the city than at present. Ω.

ELIOT'S INDIAN BIBLE AT ALBANY, SOME 200 YEARS AGO.—A party of Mohawks brought a number of Natick Indians, prisoners, to Albany from near Sudbury, Mass. in 1678. Capt. Salisbury, commander at that post, reporting the circumstance to his superiors says. "I doe presume they are Praying Indians, because there is one amongst them that brought ye Indian Bible here in governor Nicholls time."— N. Y. Col. Mss. 27, 140. Richard Nicholls was governor from 1664 to 1668.

E. B. O'C.

JONAS BRONCK: HIS LIBRARY. - This person was the pioneer settler of Westchester county, N. Y. If not a Dane by birth, he must have been one by adoption; as it is recorded that he had served as commander for the king of Denmark in the East Indies. His name appears for the first time in the records in 1639. He died in or about the year 1642, for we find an inventory of his personal effects taken in May, 1643, at his seat called Emaus, in the above county. To a literary man this inventory is interesting only so far as the contents of commander Bronck's library are concerned, which show him to have been a person of some reading. They are as follows:

Bible, folio. Calvin's Institutes. Bullingerus. Schultetus dominicalies.

Molineri Praxis, 4to.
German Bible, 4to.
Luther's Psalms.
Sledanis, folio.
Zie Spiegel, fol.
Danish Cronyk, 4to.
Danish Law book, 4to.
Luther's Catechism.
'T Lof Christi, 4to.
Four Ends of Death.
Two Schatkamers (Treasuries), sm. fol.
Petri a piani.
Danish Childsbook.
Veertich Taffereelen van Doots (40 ni

Veertich Taffereelen van Doots (40 pictures of death), 1 vol. by Simon Golaert.

Bible Stories.

Danish Calender.

't Gezicht der Grooten Seevaerts (view of the Major Navigation).

18 old printed books of divers Danish and Dutch authors.

17 manuscript books.

This is the earliest collection of books in this State of which we have at this time any account.

E. B. O'C

THE BLUE HEN'S CHICKENS.—The following account of the origin of the title of the "Blue Hen's Chickens," which the Delawarians are proud to claim, is authentic, and was vouched for by the late John M. Clayton:

At the commencement of the Revolutionary war there resided in Sussex county, Delaware, a gentleman of fortune, urbanity of manners, and great popularity in that and the adjoining county of Maryland. named Caldwell, in the language of the county called Kilwell. He was a sportemen, whose breed of horses and game-cocks obtained wide celebrity; and his judgment of the points of a horse or the make of a fowl none ventured to dispute. His favorite axiom was, the character of the progeny depends more on the mother than on the father; and hence his reply to all questions respecting the breed of game fowls was, be your cock ever so game, you cannot depend on his progeny; but must look to the hen. My observation has led me to select a blue hen, and in no instance have I failed to hatch a good game-cock from a blue hen's egg. In consequence of such an opinion expressed by such a man, at all matches and eack fights, the first question was as to the color of the hen, and frequently a certificate sworn to before a magistrate accompanied the fowls. Such questions engaged the time of the peaceful men of Delaware when the news reached them of the battle of Lexington, fought on the 19th day of April, 1775, between the royal troops and the militia of Massachusetts. This roused the people to arms, and nowhere was there more martial spirit displayed than in the State of Delaware. In a very short time a full regiment was raised, and a day appointed to organize on Dover Green. On the morning of that ever memorable day a full company from Sussex county was the first to enter the field, under the command of Captain Kilwell. Peering above the loaded baggage wagon, was a coop of fowls, the famous blue hen's chickens, crowing lustily.

Having been the first on the ground, Captain Kilwell's company was assigned to the right, and before the regiment took up the line of march, the boys were already called the game cocks, who, retorting on their comrades, called them the chickens. After their gallant conduct in covering the retreat on Long Island, the whole army saluted the regiment as the "blue hen's chickens."

They were on Long Island, and covered the retreat; they were at Trenton and Princeton, at Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth, in the north; and when the tories in the Carolinas had made their peace with Cornwallis, and driven the whigs to the mountains, lower Virginia overrun, her Governor and Legislature fled to Carter's mountain, a force was gathered at the North, under General Gates, and pushed South; to these were attached the troops of Delaware and Maryland, forming a brigade under the Baron De Kalb. On the "fatal field of Camden" Kilwell fell-there the game cock fought his last round. Lee, in his memoirs of the southern war, tells us:

"The regiment of Delaware was nearly applicated, and Lieutenant Colonel Vaughan and Major Patton being taken, its remainst, less than two companies, were afterwards placed under the orders of Kirkwood, senior captain. Contrary to the usual course of events and the general wish, the Virginians (who broke and fled at the first fire, and who set the injurious example which produced the destruction of our army) escaped entirely."

But the spirit of Delaware was not to be subdued; fresh recruits soon joined, and again we find the "Chickens" fighting under Green at Guilford—and finally present at Yorktown on the 19th of October, 1781, when Cornwallis surrendered, and the war of the revolution closed in triumph.—Delaware Inquirer of May 5, 1861.

Booder.—This word is credited to "New England" in Mr. Bartlett's Dict. of Americanisms. It may be in use in that section, but it is, originally, Dutch; the word boedel signifying, in that language, an estate. Thus, the whole boedel is, the entire property. The word was probably brought over in the Mayflower with many other valuables.

DISCOVERY OF A MASTODON IN LENAWEE COUNTY .- Adrian, June 11. - Your correspondent hardly expected that he would be called from reporting a Presbyterian General Assembly and a Wesleyan Conference to do the same kind office for the "big bones" of an extinct animal, but so it has been. When Uriah Decker, Esq., came into town yesterday from his home nine miles away on Wolf Creek, in Adrian township, and to the surprise of every one, showed a few of the immense bones, your correspondent felt his curiosity rapidly setting very strong. The fossils had but just been found and he proceeded to the spot at once, minus his dinner, (as all enterprising reporters should), if happily something might be still undug. In the back kitchen of Mr. Decker's house was an ordinary dry-goods box nearly full Among them were all the large leg bones but two, one being still in Adrian with Mr. Decker, and the other, as far as gould be ascertained, remaining out in the swamp for further discovery. An investigation of these relics of the cenozoic time naturally resulted in a wish to see where they came from, and being directed to the ditch at the end of the wheat field, your reporter and his friend took up their line of march again.

At this ditch Mr. Joseph Decker became visible, and up from its depth rose the head and shoulders of Dennis Ryan, the finder of the "big bones."

The body lay in what must have been a water course, and that at no distant day. The curve and the hills, the creek only 130 rods away, the evident slope and hollowing of the ground towards that point are proofs beyond peradventure of the fact. In this stream the body was found, only two feet and a half below the surface, with the ready solution of this small depth, in the wash and wear of the water which must have flowed above it. The soil is a clay marl and shell. quicksand, spongy and shaky as a peat bog, and with many little snail and muscle shells imbedded in its texture. To oblige us in our investigation, Mr. Ryan made a cut in the carth with his spade, showing the different strata. There were: 1 muck, 2 burnt soil, 3 marl, 4 quicksand. Mr. R. also, with no particular effort, ran his spade down to the handle, and said he had tried long poles and found no bottom. He also shook the earth with his foot.

The ditch runs nearly north and south, and across it, with his head to the north-cast and his tail to the south-west, the mastodon was found. He lay on his side, with his back to the north. One fore leg was doubled under and the other extended, and the hind quarters were a little the lowest. Like the remains in the fresh water marshes of Orange county, New Jersey, this specimen had apparently got mired and sunk.

And now for the finding of Behemoth. While Dennis Ryan was digging away at his ditch for two dollars per diem, coin of the realm, and therefore working very cheerfully, he struck on what he thought was a root. But such a root as the one he uncovered he never had seen before. He concluded therefore that it was a bone, and Mr. Jas. Decker and himself setting to work, opened up several others in a moment or two. That was Wednesday at five in the afternoon.

Since then they have investigated further, and have taken out nearly all the boncs. They have now the skull slightly damaged; all but one of the large leg bones; one of the smaller leg bones; a number of ribs, some nearly perfect, and others far from it; a broken tusk and its mate; several remarkably perfect teeth; shoulder and hip bones in good preservation; vertebræ and foot bones, knee caps and supplementary bones in great variety.

We urged them, by all the sciences, not to allow the parts to be dispersed, and to use great care in getting out the remainder. Indeed, in the digging while we were there, several bones of value were turned up, and among them the fourth knee-cap, or what we judged to correspond with that bone.

The following are the dimensions of the mastodon, as taken on the spot, from actual measurement, in company with Rev. George Duffield Jr., of Adrian:

From the extremity of the skull to the last bone found, 16 feet 6 inches; width of site, or height of animal, 10 feet (?). (It is probably nearer 8).

Shoulder blade—Length, 12 inches; largest circumference, 20 inches; smallest, 14; socket bone, 20.

Thigh bone—Length, 19½ inches; circumference of larger end, 24½; of smaller, 12½; socket circumference, 16½ inches; narrowest diameter, 3½ inches; broadest, 5‡.

Leg bone—Length, 15½ inches; larger circumference, 19¼ inches; smallest 10¼.

Smaller leg bone—Length, 15½ inches; larger end, 12 inches; smaller end, 9½; smallest circumference, 4½.

Knee joints—Circumference, 16 inches; diameter, 6 inches; thickness, 43.

Length of leg from top of shoulder to pastern joint, 5 feet.

Rib—Length, 29 inches; diameter of process, 10 inches; smallest diameter, 5 inches.

Vertebræ—Breadth, 7 inches; thickness, 3½ inches.

Tusks—Near base, circumference, 6 inches. The tusks were broken and much docayed — apparently about the size of those of an elephant.

Teeth—The teeth were in wonderful preservation, the crown of the molar teeth presenting conical tubercles covered with enamel. The enamel is still perfect. As it is from this peculiar nipple-tooth that the mastodon derives its name (mastos, nipple, odons, tooth), the character of the fossil remains thus discovered would seem to be very satisfactorily indicated.

What we took to be the eye-socket was oval; longest diameter, 1½ inches; shortest diameter, 1 inch; depth, about 1¾ inches.

The skull had undoubtedly been broken in getting it out, as no piece large enough for correct measurement appeared. There was a bit of cheek bone, another of jaw, and that was all.

Taken as a whole, the present mastodon is comparatively a small sized animal, not standing more than 8 or 10 feet in height, and being in length not more than 16. Dr. Warren, of Boston, had one from Newburgh marsh, on the Hudson river, of 11 feet in height, 17 feet in length, and which had tusks of 12 feet. This latter point, as has been already said, we could not settle, as the tusks we saw were defective, having scaled off in spots very badly.

SIR EDMUND ANDROS.—From an article in the London Notes and Queries (May 21, 1864), it appears that Sir Edmund Andros in 1686, in a petition to use the arms of Saumarcz, stated that "his great-grandfather's father John Andros, alias Andrewes, an English gentleman, born in Northhamptonshire, coming into the island of Guernsey, as Lieutenant to Sr l'eter Mewtis, Kaut the Govern did there marry Ao 1543 with Judith de Sausmarez onely daughter of Thomas Sausmarez, Lords of the Seignoric of Sausmarez in the said isle." His petition was granted Sept. 23, 1686, and his arms were:

Arg. on a chev. gu. between three leopard's faces sa. as many castles triple towered or. Crest, a falcon affrontant, wings expanded ppr. belled or. Supporters, Dexter, an unicorn arg. tail cowarded; sinister, a greyhound arg. collared gu. garnished or. His original arms were Gu., a saltire or., surmounted by another vert; on a chef arg. 3 mullets sa. Crest, a blackamore's head in profile, couped at the shoulders and wreathed about the temples all ppr. Motto, Crux et præsidium et decus.

Is there any portrait known of this celebrated Governor?

CENTENARIAN IN NEW JERSEY.—John Shulz, residing on the old Martha Furnace property in Burlington county, eleven miles from Tuckertown, has completed his one hundred and fifth year, and bids fair to live several years longer. He was born in Germany, and was sixteen years old when he arrived at Philadelphia, before the Revolutionary war, and was for thirty years a cooper in the employment of the late Stephen Girard. His eye-sight is failing, but his hearing is good. He lives with his son-in-law Daniel McCoy, on a farm belonging to Amory Edwards, of Shrewsbury.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT CONCERN-ING WASHINGTON.—On page 189, vol. vii., of the Life of Alexander Hamilton, just published by his son, will be found a statement in regard to General Washington that is very interesting at this juncture. It is well known that party spirit never raged more fiercely in this country than at the close of Washington's administration, and during that of John Adams, growing chiefly out of the intrigues of French Jacobins. Threats of "dissolving the Union" were freely indulged in by heated partisans, and many good citizens feared that such a catastrope would take place. In Mr. Jefferson's private papers of that period is one endorsed in his own hand-writing, "Heads of Information given me by E. Randolph," in which the following sentence occurs: "The President (Washington), speaking with Randolph on the hypothesis of a separation of the Union into Northern and Southern, said he had made up his mind to remove, and be of the North." Randolph had formerly enjoyed the warmest confidence of Washington; and the latter had made extensive tours of observation through the northern and southern sections of the Union, and could not fail to observe the relative and prospective social and political advantages of each section as a place of residence.

R.

An American Admiral in Russia.— Some fifty years ago a Massachusetts boy named Tate worked his way up to the position of Admiral in the Russian Navy. A writer in the Boston Transcript replying to a query of our friend J. B. R., says:

The Admiral was, we think, a native of Portland, Me., where a sister of his resided, the wife of the late Joseph H. Ingraham of that city. George Tate, his grandfather, was born in England in 1700; he was a seaman on board the first frigate built in Russia in the reign of Peter the Great. He came to this country several years before the Revolution, and is the ancestor of all of the name here. He died in Falmouth (now Portland) in 1794, at the advanced age of 94. Admiral Tate, the grandson, died about 1827, while in the Russian service.

R

QUERIES.

PRINTED BY BENNETT H. WHEELER .- A copy of the transactions of the Rhode Island Society for the Encouragement of Domestic Industry in the year 1863, lies before me. The necrological Report appended thereto contains biographical notices of members who have "paid the debt of nature" during the year. I really wish that two of these well written and very interesting biographies could appear in your magazine. They would be in place there, certainly, for well written memorials of two worthy men, both practical printers, both natives of Providence, and for many years connected with the newspapers of that city, would befit your pages. I refer to Bennett H. Wheeler and Hugh Hall Brown, The former was born August 18th, 1788, and died on the 17th of May, 1863. The latter was born May 16th, 1792, and died October 4th, 1863, at the age of 71 years. Taken together these two memorials occupy some seven and a-half or eight octavo pages of type (as near as I can judge) the size of that employed in your May issue, in your article on "William Jackson Davis." But I wish to call the attention of your readers to some statements in the biography of Mr. Wheeler. We are told that Bennett Wheeler-"called Major"—the father of Bennett H. Wheeler, was a native of Nova Scotia, which place he left "soon after attaining the age of twenty-one years, and came to Providence, landing first at Boston, on the fourth of July, 1776." "When he arrived in Providence" (the exact time is not named), "there were only two printing offices in the place." One of these was a "job office" kept by Mr. John McDougal, where Wheeler "at once engaged to work." He remained in that office "but a few months," and the "first work he did was on a reprint of Pope's Essay on Man, an edition of 750 copies." "In January, 1784, Major Wheeler commenced publishing The United States Chronicle, Political, Commercial and Historical," which was continued 1804, a weekly paper. "It was conducted with great ability. In April, 1806, Major Wheeler closed his eventful life in Providence, after a short illness. He erected the building in which his paper was printed, "and there carried on an extensive business as a printer, publisher and bookseller." We are also told that " a finely preserved copy of Goldsmith's 'Deserted Village' with his imprint* is now held here" (in Providence?), "a rare curiosity, as being probably its first reprint in this country." Now, can any of your readers throw any further light as to the exact date of these reprints and verify these statements, or give the dates, &c., of earlier reprints of the Poems above named? BOSTON.

CLAMS.—Where was this word first used for the shell fish? and how early. The piles of shells seen by F. Jogues on Mauhattan island, he mentions as oysters. They * Date not given—about 1784?

(BR)

5 415.6

ANCHOB

have generally been supposed to be clams, but from the note of  $\Omega$  may have been really ovsters.

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS .- The coin commonly called "the mind your own business" penny, struck during the revolution, has a sun-dial with that motto, and the word "Fugio." What is the origin of this? A Dial in the Temple, London, has the admonition "Be gone about your business." Did this suggest it?

MADOC'S DISCOVERY OF AMERICA .-What is known of the alleged discovery of America, by Madoc, the son of Owen Gwynedd?

STERNHOLD AND HOPKINS .- What is known concerning the Psalmists, Sternhold and Hopkins; and if anything, where may the information be obtained?

JOHN WILKES .- It is said that some members of the family of the celebrated John Wilkes reside in the United States. Can any reader of the Magazine specify their names and addresses, or any information which will throw light on the present custodian of his papers?

DOCTOR SAMUEL JOHNSON .- Is any thing known concerning the disposition of Dr. Johnson's library after the death of that distinguished scholar?

NEWSPAPER IN MORRISTOWN, N. J. -When was the first newspaper published in Morristown, N. J.; and where may a copy be seen?

REPLIES.

STATUE ON THE BATTERY, NEW YORK (Vol. VIII, pp. 154, 185).—In regard to the Equestrian Statue on the Battery, in the city of New York, already referred to in your Magazine, the following interesting or chrious facts may be added.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

An aged lady who resided many years ago at the lower end of Broadway, remembers that about thirty or forty years ago the erection of a statue on the battery was contemplated. The location selected was a sort of hollow south-east of Castle Garden, near the spot where the flag-staff was subsequently erected. On digging to lay the foundation, the subsoil was found so soft and unsuitable to sustain any great weight that the project was abandoned either because the expense of a foundation would have been too great or the necessity of filling unavoidable. The plastic model referred to in your May number may have been a fac simile of the statue intended for this location. That model, however, was set up in a different place. It was quite an imposing conception, but the fate of the cast, mutilation, indicated what would most likely have been that of a marble figure itself.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN FENWICK Vol. viii, pp. 154, 210).—Johnson, in his "Historical account of the settlement of Salem," states that Fenwick brought with him to New Jersey, three daughters-Elizabeth, Anna and Priscilla.

ELIZABETH was already married to John Adams, and had three children—Elizabeth, Fenwick and Mary, who with her husband accompanied her.

Anna married after their arrival Samuel Hedge.

PRISCILLA was married already to Edward Chamney, and had two children-John and Mary, who with her husband accompanied her.

Fenwick's grand daughter, Elizabeth Adams, formed an illicit connection with a colored man named Gould, much to the old man's distress, and at a settlement called Gould Town, in Cumberland County, are several families of the name descended from Although this may not answer fully the inquiry of P., it may assist his investiga-G. P.

Newark, May, 1864.

KENTAIENTON, (Vol. VII. p. 380; Vol. VIII. p. 79).—The Indian Mission Village at La Prairie, opposite Montreal, claimed as its first settler Catharine Ganneaktena. a manuscript life of Catharine Tehgahkwita I found a sketch of the foundress of the village, on which it is stated that she was an Erie, born at Kentaienton, and taken prisoner by the Western Iroquois when they took The object of my inthat palisaded town. quiry was to learn whether any spot in Ohio bore such a resemblance to Kentaienton as to enable us to examine whether it was the site of the Erie town, and so perhaps establish the geographical position of that lost tribe.

ALSOP, (Vol. VIII. p. 105, MAY, 1864.)-For John Alsop, see Thompson's History of Long Island, or consult Joseph W. Alsop, of the city of New York, or the Hon. John Alsop King, Jamaica, L. I., who has a portrait of him.

Societies and their Proceedings.

CONNECTICUT.

CONNECTICUT HISTORICAL SOCIETY .- Hartford, May 17th.—The following officers elected at the annual meeting

J. Hammond Trumbull, President; Henry Barnard, Henry White, Leonard Hebard, Daniel P. Tyler, Thomas B. Butler, Wm. C. Cothren, Samuel H. Parsons, and Loren P. Waldo, Vice Presi-Charles Hosmer, Recording Secretary; Charles J. Hoadly, Corresponding Secretary, James B. Hosmer, Treasurer, James B. Hosmer, Chas. Hosmer, J. H. Trumbull, Erastus Smith, E. Goodman, E. B. Watkinson, Com. on Membership; J. H. Trumbull, Geo. Brinley, Charles J. Hoadly, Com. on Publications and on Exchanges. C. J. Hoadly, Geo. Brinley, Samuel Eliot, Com. on Li-

The following were elected resident members of the Society:

Rev. Wm. C. Doane, Rev. Nathaniel J. Burton, Rev. Geo. H. Clark, D. D., Rev. Edwin P. Parker, Simon Towle, Esq., A. G. Hammond, Esq., Franklin Chamberlin, Esq., P. Henry Woodward, Esq.,—of Hartford; Dea. Alfred Andrews, of New Britain.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—May 17, 1864.— The monthly meeting was held, W. L. Newberry, Esq , in the chair.

The reported monthly collections (amounting to 632, from 51 contributors) included an extensive collection of charts, reports, &c , on the lake harbors, the gift of Col. J. D. Graham, U. S. A.; manuscript returns of statistics from the several counties of Iowa, from Mr. N. H. Parker; bibliographical publications of Munchen, Germany, from S. Webster Esq., U. S. Consul; and autograph letters of Gov. N. Edwards, and others distinguished in the early history of Illinois, from Hon. G. Churchill.

Among the rare books received, were the Laws of the Cherokee Nation, 1808-1851. printed at the Cherokee Advocate office, Tahlequah, C. N. 1852, 12mo. pps. 248—the gift of J C. Miller, U S. A., and noticeable for its slave code; also Hugginiana, or Huggins Fantasy, N. Y., 1809-being a collection of the advertisements in prose and verse, of a once noted barber and friscur of the city of New York, who flourished there, and at the commencements of Yale College, about that periodthe gift of Mr. S. Davenport, of Chicago. The first official publications of Arizona Territory, with the first number of the Arizona Miner, published at Fort Whipple, March 9, 1864, and containing, with a historical sketch of the Territory, a report of the proceedings at the inauguration of the new territorial government, were received by the attention of his excellency John N. Goodwin, governor of the territory.

Of the correspondence for the month (consisting of 20 letters received and 51 written) were read, letters accepting memberships, from Z. Eastman, Esq., U. S. Consul at Bristol, E.; and of acknowledgment for publications forwarded from the Massachusetts Historical Society.

An interesting communication was received and read, from Hon. Geo. Churchill, Troy, Ill., an early and esteemed resident of the territory and state; who, at an advanced age, retains an active interest in the events, past and present, of this state; and is now engaged, with others, in pre-paring a history of Mudison county, one of the oldest organized in Illinois.

Letters were also read from James P. Snell, U. S. A., respecting his collections of valuable historical materials relating to the present war; and from J. C. Miller, U. S. A., accompanying the presentation of the "Laws of the Cherokee Nation." Some remarks followed upon this first, and perhaps only attempt of the North American Indians, to establish a written code of laws.

J. B. Stansell, Esq., a member of the Colorado legislature, communicated information relative to the Indians in that region, and his belief upon inquiry, that no books printed in the native dialects are to be found among them.

MASSACHUSETTS.

New England Historic Genealogical Society.

—Boston, June 1st.—A stated meeting was held this afternoon at three o'clock, the President, Winslow Lewis, M. D., in the chair.

Mr. Sheppard the !ibrarian reported as donations, since the last meeting, 27 volumns, 55 pamphlets, and 3 volumes of the Columbian Centinel (newspaper) bound, the last from Melvin Lord, of Boston.

Rev. Mr. Bradlee, the corresponding secretary, read letters accepting the memberships to which they had been elected from the following gentlemen, namely, As Residents—H. J. Boardman and Wm. O. Comstock, both of Boston; As Corresponding—Hon. Joseph H. Barret, of Washington, D. C., and Janes D. Fish, of New York.

ton, D. C., and James D. Fish, of New York.
Mr. Trask, the historiographer, read memoirs of two deceased members, namely, Hon. Henry Wyles Cushman, of Bernardston, Mass., resident, who died Nov. 21st, 1863, aged 58, and Ebenezer
Merriam, of Brooklyn Heights, N. Y., corresponding, who died March 19th, 1864, aged 69.

Mr. Whitmore, chairman of the newly appointed Com. on Heraldry, made the first report of its doings. The Committee had examined and made a record of quite a number of coats-of-arms used by New England families before the year 1760, found upon tombstones, seals, family plates, &c. The object is to preserve a record of the arms in case any of the articles are destroyed.

Rev. F. W. Holland, of Cambridge, read again by request his Study of Shakespeare, portions of which he had been obliged to omit on the 23d of April last.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY .- Boston, June 2 .-The regular monthly meeting was held on Thursday, June 2. After the ordinary business was transacted, the secretary read a letter from Mr. W. E. Dubois, of the U. S. mint, concerning the new emission of cents and two-cent pieces, enclosing specimens of the former. The chief interest of the meeting consisted in the number and value of the coins and medals exhibited. Of these Mr. Putnam had a very choice lot, among which were the following; an uncirculated specimen of the N. Y. copper with head of George Clinton, of a rich, dark color; a very complete and perfect set of the English colonial pieces, known as the Rosa Americanas; an uncirculated "Elephant" copper of Carolina; a very fine New Jersey cent of a rare type, and the finest known New York copper with the head of Washington, struck immediately after the revolution. He also exhibited several rare and fine silver pattern-pieces of Charles II, James II, William and Mary, and William III, of England.

The secretary exhibited a more miscellaneous, but very interesting and valuable parcel of medals. The one which excited most attention, was a very curious medal with the arms of Virginia and the inscription "Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God," on the reverse a white man and Indian sitting together, and the inscription "Happy while united," with the date 1780. Nothing is known of its origin or history. Among the others were the Washington medal by Eccleston, in tin, the Washington of the Series Numismatica in silver, the "Boston ship-medal" in silver, (see Hist. Mag. vol. vii. p. 197), and a silver medal celebrating the capture of Louisbourg in 1758 by the forces of England and New England. Foreign coins were represented by the rare silver pound piece of Charles I, and there were two very curious and fine Dutch medals, struck in 1782, on the successful ending of the American Revolution. Other members also showed medals, and a very agreeable meeting was dissolved at 5 p. m.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

New Hampshire Historical Society.—Concord, June 8th —The annual meeting of this society was held at the Library rooms of the Society. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Wm. H. Hackett, of Portsmouth, President; Joseph B. Walker, Concord, 1st Vice-President; Ass McFarland, Concord, 2d Vice-President; N. Bouton, D. D., Concord, Cor Secretary; Wm. L. Foster, Concord, Rec. Secretary; Edward Sawyer, Concord, Treasurer; Wm. F. Goodwin, Concord, Librarian; Hon. Samuel D. Bell, Manchester, Rev. N. Bouton, D. D., Concord, Publishing Committee; Benj. P. Stone, D. D., Joseph B. Walker, Wm. Prescott, of Concord, Standing Committee; Francis N. Fisk, Concord, Auditor. The Society is in a flourishing condition, though in need of funds to carry on its work. There are at present about 5,000 volumes in the Library.

The address expected before the Society last evening, by Prof. Brown, of Dartmouth College, was not delivered on account of that gentleman being detained in Boston.

NEW YORK.

New York Historical Society.—A stated meeting of this Society was held on Tuesday evening, June 7th.—Frederic de Peyster, Esq., President, in the Chair. After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, the President read letters from Richard Varick De Witt, presenting a drawing of the celebrated Steam Frigate Robert Fulton; from Oscar Coles. accompanying a copy of Higgins's Anacalypsis; from Augustus B. Sage, presenting an original letter of Gov. Tompkins; and from John L. Sutherland, presenting to the Society a Ms. note book of the proceedings of the "Moot," an association of lawyers in this city, commencing in the year 1770, and extending to 1774, with extracts from the Rules of the Colonial Supreme Court, commencing with the close of the 17th century.

The Librarian reported the donations since the last meeting. Among them was the silver snuff-box used by John Lang of the N Y. Guzette, presented by Edward H. Puffer, and the original Ms. of the famous reply of Mess. de Gasparin, Laboulave, and others to the Loyal League of N. Y., with copies of the various editions of the correspondence published by the Loyal Publication Society, presented through John Austin Stevens, Jr.

Mr. Moore called the attention of the Society especially to the donation of a very interesting collection of views, maps, etc., of old N. Y., for-merly belonging to David Grim, and presented by his granddaughter, Mrs. Sophia C. Minton, of this city, through Judge Daly.

On motion of Judge Kirkland, a committee of five members was appointed to cooperate with the special committee, on the Celebration of the two hundredth Anniversary of the Conquest of New Netherland, a report and form of a circular from the select Committee on Arms and Trophies was read and adopted. George H. Moore, Esq, the Librarian, then read a very interesting paper by Henry T. Tuckerman, embracing notices' of American Colonization and Nomenclature. On its conclusion a vote of thanks was given to Mr. Tuckerman, and a copy requested for the archives of the Society. After some remarks on the importance of preserving family papers, Mr. Gibbs submitted the following resolution which was Resolved. That the Executive Committee be instructed to make an appeal to all persons possessing original historical documents, letters, &c., to give to the Society either the originals, or certified copies thereof.

OHIO.

FIRE LANDS HISTORICAL SOCIETY. - Norwalk. June 8, 1864.—The annual meeting was held in Whittlesey Hall, Norwalk, on Wednesday, June 8th, 1864, at 11 o'clook A. M., and called to order by the venerable president, Platt Benedict, Esq. He expressed in fitting terms his gratification at again meeting so many of the members of the society.

The Rev. Mr. Cornell, of Norwalk, opened the meeting with prayer. By request of the Secretary, the Rev. C. F. Lewis, of Wakeman, was appointed Assistant, and the proceedings of the meeting held at Castalia were read by him.

C. A. Preston, Esq., Treasurer, submitted his report for the year, which was approved.

The annual report of the Secretary next presented, congratulated the Society on its prosperity during the past year. The Society is free from debt. The Pioneer is not only self-sustaining but increasing in size and interest and also in circulation beyond the Fire-Lands. It referred to the want of a better place for the deposit and arrangement of articles for the Cabinet; and closed with a reference to the fact that the first half century of the independent civil history of Huron county will close Aug. 1st, 1865.

After a vote of thanks to the Secretary, the Society proceeded to an election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows:

Platt Benedict, Norwalk, President; G. H.
Woodruff, Peru, Z. Philips, Berlin, E. Bemiss, Groton, H. Townsend, New London, S. C. Parker, Greenfield, Vice-Presidents.

C. A. Preston, Norwalk, Treasurer; F. D. Parish, Sandusky, P. N. Schuyler, Norwalk, corresponding secretaries; D. H. Pease, Norwalk, recording secretary; R. T. Rust, Norwalk, keeper of Cabinet.

F. D. Parish, Z. Philips, P. N. Schuyler, C. A.

Preston, D. H. Pease, Directors.

An opportunity was then given, and 20 persons became members of the Society. The several township historical committees were then called on for reports; after which, the Society took a recess till half past one P. M., during which the members were hospitably entertained by the citizens of Norwalk.

The Society met in the afternoon pursuant to adjournment, Vice-President Woodruff in the chair.

Mrs. John Wheeden, of Sandusky, presented the Society with six bound volumes of the Sandusky Clerion, the first newspaper published on the Fire-Lands.

The venerable John P. McArdle, of Fremont, the publisher of the Norwalk Reporter, the first paper published in the present limits of Huron county, presented the Society with a history of the "American Revolution," which was published by him in 1815, at the Register office, Clinton. Ohio, on the press which was brought over the Alleghany Mountains, and on which the Reporter was afterward printed. The work also contained a "columbiad" of 13 cantoes on the American war, by Richard Snowdon.

Mr. Ami Keeler, of Norwalk, presented four sermons, on the "Nature, end, and design of the Holy Communion," by Samuel Clarke, D. D., Dublin 1738; the hames worn by the horse which drew the family of his father, Luke Keeler, from Connecticut to Norwalk; and the veritable tin horn used by his father and himself to call people to meeting before bells were known in Norwalk.

Mr. Bartlett Davis, of Hartland, presented from M. D. Burt, of South Bristol, Wisconsin, several books, formerly the property of his great grandfather, Asa Chaffee, of Wilbraham, Massachusetts.

The following were also exhibited by Mrs. P. Reding, of Norwalk: A linen apron worn by her grandmother, Mrs. H. F. Benedict, at her marriage more than one hundred years ago:-By Dr. J. B. Ford, of Norwalk, a black lack stick, out by Colonel Wilder, on Mission Bridge, Tennessee, one-half mile south of Gen. Bragg's Headquarters. The bush and branches have been struck by thirty-four balls: by H. P. Nelson, of Bronson, a printed invitation to Mr. John Nelson, (his father), and lady to a Ball to be held in Mr. John Boalt's Ball Room, in Norwalk, in 1822, signed by J. Williams, M. C. Sanders, E. Cook, P. Lattimer, C. Butler, D. M. Benedict, Managers: By Mr. R. Osborn, of Berlin, specimens of cotton grown by him in that township in 1862-3: By Messrs. J. H. Niles and A. Haynes, of Norwich, a variety of ancient stone relics.

Not the least interesting portion of the proceedings of the afternoon, were the experiences of some of the early pioneers, as related by them-selves. Mrs. Polly Pieace, of Peru, gave a graphic description of the early trials and enjoyments of the first settlers of that township. She was present at, and member of the first Methodist class meeting held in Norwalk. During her remarks she presented to "Father Benedict" a crane, given to her grandmother, Sarah Sherman, at her marriage in 1759: a fire shovel, the first brought into Peru; the first mortar in that township, brought in by Mrs. Clary, and a chair of the olden style, made in 1815, by John Nelson, of Peru.

Mr. G. H. Woodruff, of Peru, described the early appearance of Norwalk, when emigrants avoided the sand ridge, as a place destitute of water and fit only for scrub oaks to grow.

Mr. Philo Wells, of Vermillion, related the excitement caused by the first steamboat on the Lake, how himself and wife used to cross the Vermillion on ox-back to go visiting, and a tavern story of the early days.

Mr. Osborn, of Fitchville, followed with an interesting account of early times in that vicinity.

Judge Parish, of Sandusky, described the appearance of the prairies on the Fire-Lands when first settled upon. He also paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Hon. Joshua R. Giddings, whose early history was connected with that of the Fire-Lands, and presented a resolution appropriate to his memory, which was unanimously adopted by the Society

Martin Kellog, Esq., of Bronson, gave an account of the trials experienced by himself and family in 1815, when moving from Vermont to the Fire-Lands, and exhibited a bill on the Cld Bank of Bloomingville, as a specimen of the worthless currency with which the country was flooded at that time.

E Bemiss, Esq., of Groton, in conclusion, gave a lively picture of the difficulties and discouragements of the early pioneers of the western part of the Fire-Lands

Judge S. C. Parker, in appropriate terms announced the names of pioneers deceased since the last meeting.

Hon. F. D. Parish and Judge Z. Philips were appointed a committee on the place for the next meeting.

The exercises of the afternoon were interspersed with music by Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Lovrein, Miss C. Rennan, Messrs. Kingsley and Gilbert, which added much to the interest of the occasion.

The Society voted its warmest thanks to the choir for their excellent music, the Committee of Arrangements for their successful efforts in providing for the wants of all, and the citizens of Norwalk for their generous hospitality; and after uniting with the audience in singing "Old Hundred," adjourned.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PENNSYLVANIA HISTORICAL SOCIETY .- Philadelphia June 13th .- A meeting of the Historical Society was held last night, Mr. Snowden in the chair. Donations and additions to the library were reported to the Society, numbering about one hundred and twenty-seven volumes. A report from the Historical Committee was then read in reference to a proposal for changing the Constitution of the Society. A report was read, giving an account of the organization of the Delaware Historical Society.

The report, from the last stated meeting, of the Executive Committee with regard to the purchase of the Penn Mansion was then read and sanctioned.

Wm. W. Lowery, Esq., on motion of Dr. Coats was elected a member.

A report was then read by Mr. Smith with regard to the proposal for purchasing the old State House or Penn Manor.

Mr. Smith showed that it was not advisable for the Society to make the outlay, but said that if through the exertion of the Historical Society one-third of the purchase money could be raised he had no doubt that the city authorities could raise the rest, and assume the responsibility of keeping the building in repair.

The report was accepted and the meeting adjourned.

OBITUARY.

JOHN WOODBRIDGE. - Another pioneer of Qhio one of the earliest and worthiest-has gone to join the company of the departed and memorable dead. On the 14th instant, John Woodbridge, of Chillicothe, died, in the 79th year of his age. There is probably not a living pioneer in the State who came earlier than he, nor one who has pursued a more useful or honorable life. This will be evident from a very brief review of his career. Mr. Woodbridge was born in 1785, and was the son of the Hon. Dudley Woodbridge, of Norwich, Connecticut, and the brother of Dudley Woodbridge, of Marietta, and the Hon. William Woodbridge, of Michigan. He and his brothers were brought by his father to Marietta, at the first settlement in 1788. It is, therefore, more than 75 years since this aged citizen first trod the soil of Ohio. He beheld its infancy cradled amidst the wilds of the forests and the war-hoop of the savage, and looked with pleasure upon its advance to strength and civilization. The memory of its pioneer life was mingled with the enjoyment of its prosperity.

Mr. Woodbridge was sent, when a boy, to Connecticut for his education, where his teacher was Azel Backus, afterward President of Hamilton College, N. Y.

Mr. W. settled in Chillicothe in 1806. After passing a short time in mercantile business, he was chosen cashier of the then newly chartered (since called old) Bank of Chillicothe. This office he held with distinguished honor and usefulness till the charter expired, in 1844-a period of thirty-five years. No one unacquainted with the history of banking in Ohio, and the great financial difficulties which for a long time obstructed or deranged business, can properly estimate the useful and valuable services of Mr. Woodbridge as a financier. The Bank of Chillicothe at times rendered great serivce to the Government, and when most of the banking institutions were crumbling around, maintained its credit with fidelity and honor.

Retired from this responsible situation, Mr. W. pursued for the remainder of his life the path of a private gentleman, with sufficient means to cultivate his literary and rural tastes. Few men un-derstand how to pursue such a life with dignity, urbanity, and usefulness. Yet Mr. W. had all of these. Naturally modest and diffident, kind, gentle and tender—he was yet possessed of all those sterner virtues which belong to strength of mind and character, and which shield life from much of human suffering.

Simple in his tastes, and abstemious in his habits, his last sickness was almost his only one. Nearly forty years ago he had made a profession of religion, and continued to practice it, a devoted, consistent and cheerful Christian.

Most happy in his domestic and social relations, he enjoyed life, but towards its close was obliged to feel some of those afflictions which the aged are ill able to bear. During his youth and early manhood the society of Chillicothe was unsurpassed in whatever is agreeable and attractive.— Many a brilliant intellect, and genial spirit, and hospitable citizen, long numbered with the dead, were centered there. Mr. Woodbridge outlived these, his early associates, and felt that he could not replace them. Col. W. K. Bond, a friend of fifty years, and almost the last, has just preceeded him to the grave. In the meantime he had met with that bereavement which comes nearest the heart, and which no time can cure. Then the clouds resting on his country cast their shaddows on his mind. All this was borne with patience and fortitude, till the aged pioneer came to his end, gathered like the full shock of corn when the reaper is ready.

Not often again will one of the band of 1788 be carried to the grave, not often will any one seventy-five years a citizen of Ohio, and therefore, as well as for his fair name, we record these few lines in memory of a pioneer.

Morrow, May 14.

E. D. M.

Rotes on Books.

Gleanings from the Harvest Field of American History. By Henry B. Dawson, part XI, Morrisania, N. Y., 1863. The Assault on Stony Point. By General Anthony Wayne, July 16, 1779,— Prepared for the New York Historical Society, and read at its regular monthly meeting April 1, 1862, with a map, fac similes and illustrative notes. By Henry B. Dawson, Morrisania, N. Y., 1863, imp. 8 Vo. VIII, 156 pp.

MR. DAWSON is one of the most thorough historical students in the country, and having made the revolutionary period a special object of re-search cannot make such a monograph as this anything but a most valuable and exhaustive contribution to our libraries. Having had full access to the well preserved papers of General Wayne, he found the series of documents on Stony Point extremely rich and valuable. Few who heard his paper can forget the impression produced as in his interesting narrative, he read one after another of these venerable papers, letters of Washington and Wayne. Many of these are here given in fac simile, and the volume elegantly printed becomes by these additionary enhancements a most luxurious work. Those who heard the paper will find in the appendix a map of documents sustaining its positions, and embracing all that is known of this brilliant action, History of the Rebellion, its authors and causes. By Joshua R. Giddings. New York: Follet, Foster & Co., 1864, 8° 498.

THE appearance of this volume coincides with the close of the life of its author. One of the earliest, most thorough and uncompromising opponents of slavery, his political life was a war against it; and in these ardent pages he gives really his political life. It is a work that must be read by any one who sits down to understand the present struggle, to form a correct idea of the movement which finally raised Mr. Lincoln to the Presidential chair and induced the South to attempt its long threatened secession. Many parts are extremely well written and cannot be read without being deeply impressed. We now live amid the storm, but "post nubila Phœbus" and in the clear sunlight we shall see much that is now dim and faint.

The Fire Lands Pioneer, published by the Fire Lands Historical Society. Vol. V, 1864.

WE welcome this new volume of transactions and collections of the enterprising society in the Fire Lands of Ohio, which comes adorned with a striking likeness of the late Govenor Elisha Whittlesey. Besides the reports of the meetings of the Society it contains memoirs of Ridgefield, Fairfield, Richmond, Greenwich, Sherman, Ruggles, and much miscellaneous matter of great value as contributions to local history.

The United Service Magazine, H. Coppie, Editor. Vol. I, C. B. Richardson, New York, 1864.

This new magazine printed in the finest style, gives the military profession a periodical which they have reason to be proud of and to sustain with hearty marks of appreciation. Edited by a gentleman who to a military education and actual experience in the field, adds the highest literary talent, it cannot fail to be what military men will expect, while its contributions from the pens of men universally acknowledged as chiefs in their departments of science, give their essays a weight that cannot but be acknowledged.

National Portrait Gallery of distinguished Americans. The portraits by Alonzo Chappell—the biographies by E. A. Duyckinck. New York: Johnson, Fry & Co., 1864.

THE publishers conclude with the number now before us, this American Portrait Gallery, which in many respects, replaces all former collections of the kind, and is likely to stand alone for many years as the best illustrated record of American Worthies. Our country has been so prolific of great men that there has been difficulty in selecting, but all the really great representative men are here. The Presidents form a group by themselves. The Revolutionary Patriots and soldiers, the heroes of the later wars, the jurists, men of science, artists, authors, are all included here. The engravings are not mere vignettes or busts, but full lengths, elaborately done; the biographies written with care, by a highly accomplished scholar who seizes in his graphic portraiture the strong points of life and character, and gives his picture the warmth and tone and color of a mas-

The History of the War for the Union, Civil, Military, and Naval. By E. A. Duyckinck. New York: Johnson, Fry & Co., 1864.

THE History of the War here given us by Mr. Duyckinck, comes down in these numbers to the capture of Maryland Heights, in 1862. It fully sustains the promise of its commencement, and is a full, impartial work, written with the literary skill which the author's name guarantees. Amid the endless detail of the great struggle he has chosen the important points, weaving into his narrative all the great events and enabling his reader to follow without confusion the course of the war. The illustrations are like all those that characterize the works issued by the house, superior.

The History of the Administration of Pres'dent Lincoln, including his Speeches, Letters, Addresses, Proclamations, and Messages, with a Preliminary Sketch of his Life. By Henry J. Raymond. New York: J. C. Derby and A. C. Miller. 12mo., pp. 496.

Mr. RAYMOND is known to the country as an able politician, once filling the position of Lieutenant-Governor of the State of New York, and for many years the able editor of the New York Times Of the political history of the time, few are more competent to write clearly and understandingly. The present volume is, in brief, a history of the present administration by one friendly to it. It is, however, written with great fairness and entire calmness, and none need hesitate to take it up from any fear of undue bias, or that perversion of fact and violent language which some seem unable to avoid.

The work is furnished with a full index, and, as it embraces all the messages and proclamations of President Lincoln, is a most acceptable work. The publishers have got it up in a very creditable style.

Historical Collections of the Essex Institute. Vol. VI., No. 1. Salem, 1864.

This welcome quarterly opens with a memoir of Daniel A. White, by G. W. Briggs, a paper read before the Essex Institute, January 4, 1864; Mr. Rantoul's Connection with M litary and Legislative Matters; the Book of Marriages of Rowley; an interesting account of the formation of the Essex Institute.

Miscellany.

Rev. D. Winslow who is preparing a Genealogy of the Winslow Family, may be addressed at No. 26, E. 4th St., New York.

26, E. 4th St., New York.

Elias Barr & Co., Lancaster, Penn., announce a History of the Pennsylvania Reserves, an octave of 600 pp., with portraits of Gov. Curtin and

Gen. Reynolds. We hope they will add General McCall and Gen. Meade.

Crosbey & Nichols, Boston, have issued Chaplain Quint's Notes of Campaign in Virginia and Tonnessee.

A STATUE OF COLUMBUS.—The government of Spain is about to erect a statue in Madrid to Christopher Columbus. It will be built in "passed de Recoletas," in front of the Royal Treasury. The statue will be of bronze, from twenty five to thirty feet in height, elevated upon a pedestal sixteen feet high. Three of the sides of the pedestal will be adormed with bas-relievos, representing incidents of the first transatlantic voyage of Columbus, and the fourth side will bear an inscription, to be dictated by the Royal Academy of History. It is understood that the competition for the commission will be open to sculptors of all nations, and it would be singularly appropriate should American genius win the prize, and the name of an American be associated with the statue to be raised in honor of the discoverer of America.

MESSES. SHELDON & Co., of New York, have in press, it is said, the long mentioned Memoirs of General Scott, a book which will be read with avidity. The long services of the General, a life of military activity from the war of 1812 to the great rebellion, including the triumphs in Mexico, his position before the country as a candidate for its highest honors, all give it more than usual interest.

We have had two Lives of the sainted Jackson, as our southern brethren are beginning to call him, but a third is announced from the pen of Rev. R. L. Dabney, of the Theological Seminary at Hampton Sidney College, who writes at the request of Gen Ewell, and Mrs. Jackson.

Among "War Books" appears a little book entitled, Soldiering in North Carolina, by Thomas Kirwan, 7th Mass., which is well spoken of.

THE LIBRARY OF THE LATE W. J. DAVIS, which is well known as one of unusual value in the department of American history, will be offered for sale at auction early in the fall. His friend, Henry B. Dawson, assisted by Messrs. John B. Moreau and John G. Shea, has undertaken to catalogue the property; and it is probable that Mr. Merwin will be invited to act as the salesman. It is hoped, for the sake of the children of our friend, that those who watched the Allan sale so closely will not forget this.

WALKER, WISE & Co., Boston, have in press the Notes of a Corporal in the Nineteenth Army Corps, by James K. Hosmer.

Moore, Wilstace & Co., Cincinnati, have in press the papers of Harman Blennerhassett, embracing his Journal and Correspondence, from which much light may reasonably be expected on one of the most obscure passages of our country's history.

GOULD and LINCOLN, Boston, have in press, an octave on The Military History of Massachusetts, in the war of the Rebellion, embracing a complete and authentic history of the part which that State has acted in the present war, from the commencement to the present time.

GEORGE W. CHILDS, of Philadelphia, will soon publish a volume entitled "The Union Generals," embracing the lives and services of the Generals of the Union Army. The biographies and battle sketches in this volume have been prepared by J. S. C. Abbott, B. J. Losing, J. T. Headley, E. A. Duyckinck, Prof. H. Coppee, Dr. Tomes, Richard Grant White, and several military authors of high repute.

A MAPPEMONDE, by Leonardo da Vinci, has recently been discovered among the Royal Collection at Windsor Castle, and has been described to the Society of Antiquaries by Mr. R. H. Major. This map contains three claims to priority over all maps previously known-viz., it is the first containing the map of America; the first showing the severance of the New World from Asia, and of Cuba from Japan, in the belief of which Columbus died; and the first representing the ancient idea of a great southern continent. The date due to the map, from the state of discovery which it represents, is 1512. Leonardo's remarkable habit of writing from right to left, which Mr. Major feared might prevent his proving the map (which is written from left to right) to be Leonardo's, was the very means of bringing that proof to demonstration. He was also able to show that the map had a Vespucian origin, from its containing the repetition of a blunder in the use of the word Abatia for Bahia de todos os Santos, that word being a translation of an error in printing the original Italian of Vespucci where the word Bahia was converted into Badia.

Mr. Major further showed, with great ingenuity, a highly probable connection between Leonardo da Vinci and Vespucci, though the medium of the Giacondi family, he having been four years engaged on the famous portrait of Mona Lisa Giacondi, while at the same time a Giacondi was sent from Lisbon to Seville by the King of Portugal to seduce Vespucci from the service of Spain to that of Portugal; and in the following year the narrative of his third voyage was translated into Latin by another Giacondi, the celebrated architect, who built the bridge of Notre Dame, at Paris. In tracing this connection, Mr. Major was able to illustrate, by a series of curious facts, the process by which the spurious name of America became first suggested and afterwards adopted in print by a small cluster of men at the little town of St. Die, in Loraine, who acted under the special patronage of Réné, second Duke of Loraine and Titular King of Jerusalem and Sicily.

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

AUGUST, 1864.

[No. 8.

General Department.

AFFAIRS AT FORT CHARTRES, 1768-1781.

The kindness of one of our historical students enables us to give our readers the following curious letters, dated chiefly at Fort Chartres, and giving impressions of the western country as an English officer found it after the pacification effected by much toil, at the close of Pontiac's bold endeavor to recover by a combined effort of the aboriginal tribes what all French valor had failed to accomplish.

The period of the letters embraces the time when that great chief of the Ottawas fell at Cahokia, beneath the knife of an assassin, hired by an Englishman, but unfortunately the writer, not knowing how posterity would thank him for details of the event, makes no allusion to it, although he mentions some of its speedy results.

Fort Chartres is now a ruin on the bank of the Mississippi, with part of its walls swept away by the turbid tide, and a dense forest around, towering trees even growing in its very midst, so that a stranger unacquainted with its history might easily attribute it to some early race. It stands near Prairie du Rocher, Illinois, and was built in 1720, at a distance of a mile from the Mississippi. It was repaired in 1750, and at the time of these letters, owing to a new channel formed by the river, was not over eighty yards from the water. It was a well built stone fort, of irregular form, the sides being about 490 feet each.

After the surrender of the country it was left in command of St. Ange de Bellerive, HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 33 an old and experienced officer who held command during the dangerous period of Pontiac's conspiracy, which had made it impossible for the English authorities to replace him. In vain did Major Loftus, with 400 regulars, attempt to reach it by way of New Orleans. Volleys from hidden foes on the shores drove him back with loss and panic to the new Spanish town; in vain Capt. Pitman made a subsequent attempt to penetrate in disguise, he lost heart and retired; in vain did Lt. Fraser seek to reach it overland. Narrowly escaping with life he reached New Orleans also in disguise, to add doubtless to the ill-concealed amusement of the French and Spanish officers, at these ineffectual attempts of the English to get to one of their own Forts.

When Croghan met Pontiac and peace was arranged, then and then only did Thomas Stirling, who died in 1808 a General and Baronet, now only a Captain, who had fought bravely under Abercrombie and Amherst, lead from Fort Pitt one hundred of the 42nd Highlanders, and to him on the 10th of October, 1765, did St. Ange surrender the Fort in a long document which the curious reader will find in the N. Y. Colonial Documents. At last the flag of England floated in Illinois. On the 2d of December Major Robert Farmer, of the 34th Foot, arrived with a strong body of troops and assumed command. It is not unlikely that he died in 1768, as his name then disappears from the army lists. At all events Lt. Col. John Wilkins, an officer of considerable experience, arrived there Sept. 5, 1768, and took command of the fort. The following letters give us a glimpse of his régime. He was probably its last commandant, as Father Mississippi in 1772, carried by storm two bastions and a curtain and the English struck their flag and abandoned Fort Chartres, soon to yield the whole Illinois country to a new republic.

MESSRS. EDITOR:

The correspondence, of which the following letters form a part, recently came into my temporary keeping, in the course of a genealogical investigation which I was pursuing, and seemed worthy of preservation in your valuable Magazine. It consisted of various letters, bills, etc., addressed to one Capt. Thomas Barnsley of Bensalem, Bucks Co. Penn., by various officers of the British Army, stationed at different posts in this country, and covered a period extending from '764 to '771. Capt. Barnsley became Ensign of the 60th Reg. Dec. 26, 1755, and as Lieut. in the Royal Americans was wounded at Ticonderoga July 8, 1758; became a Captáin May 5, 1759, and, as appears from these documents, had been in '763 and '4 Paymaster to the First Battalion of H. M. Royal American Regiment—and this correspondence sufficiently evidences the respect and confidence roposed in his character and judgment, as a man of business as well as a soldier, by all who had any dealings with him. From Colonels to Ensigns—from offlcial dignitaries to humble tailors—whether in America or in England—all seemed to make him their confidant—to seek his judgment-and to be content in his decision and advice. As for Ensign Butricke, the writer of these letters, we know little save what the letters themselves tell us. He seems to have fully shared in the public confidence in Mr. Barnsley; wrote very long, naive and rather interesting letters, and, as far as we can learn, received not a single answer from the Captain, yet without apparently suffering any abatement of his previous respect and affection for that reticent personage.

I.

A Letter from George Butricke, dated Philadelphia, 19th Feb. '768, and addressed to Capt. Thos. Barnsley, residing at Bensalem—mostly on private and pecuniary matters.

"We have no kind of news at present but that of Miss Hannah Boyts' marriage to Mr. Dean, merchant, which I am much pleased with for particular Reasons, you know."

"We in the Barrack are just as when you was in town, mostly in a Blaze with the fumes of that Dear friend Madiera, which seems to steal on them very powerfully, and very often makes the whole Barrk, as it were, a Hell indeed."

II.

To Capt. Thomas Barnsley.
PHILADELPHIA, the 22d May, '768.
DEAR SIR:

I have the pleasure to acquaint you that five Companies of our Regiment Rec<sup>d</sup> orders yesterday morning to be ready to march at six hours warning, under the Command of Col. Wilkins* for Fort Pitt, and as I am to proceed with them it prevents me having the pleasure to see you at Present, and to prevent there being any mistake betwixt us I have sent my Servant, with the things I mentioned to you when you was here, Vizt: Seven hatts, 20 yards of furniture Chintz and Lace, Powder, flints, Ball, &c.

I shall leave my Large Chest behind, with every thing in it I Cannot Carry, and as I know no person I can so well depend on as our Butcher Kirker, I propose to Leave it with him, with orders to deliver it to you should any thing happen to me, and before I Leave Town I will send you a list of what it Contains.

III.

A letter from Butricke to the same Capt. Barnsley, dated June 23d, 1768, at Philadelphia, announces his recovery from his "late illness, so as to hope to be able to set off for Fort Pitt to-morrow morning."—

* Lt. Col. John Wilkins, Capt. 55th Foot Dec. 30, 1755, was Major in 1762. He commanded at Niagara. In 1763 he marched to relieve Detroit, but was attacked by the Indians, his troops out to pieces, and he forced back to Fort Schlosser. He attempted next to reach it by water, but in a storm lost seventy men and was again compelled to return. In August, 1764, he was made Major of the 60th, and on the following June, Lt. Col. of the 18th Royal Irish. Compare Dr. O'Callagghan's note, Col. Doc. VIII, 185.

Complains of the conduct of an Apothecary, one Bass, of that city &c. &c.

IV.

FORT CHARTRES, 15th Sept., 1768.

DEAR Sir:

I had the pleasure to write you the 24th June, the day before I left Philadelphia, and the 30th I joined Colonel Wilkins at the Crossings of Juniata, he had been detained 14 days by Col. Armstrong, for Want of Carriages. But lucky for me he had got them a few days before I joined him. The 14th July we arrived at Fort Pitt, which is now a most shocking place; the Works and Barracks are all gone to Wreck, But the Country about it seems to be in a thriving way, a great number of settlers are already there, and many more Coming to it daily. 20th July we embarked on the Ohio with five companys of the 7 we had Brought up, the other 2 Left there to garrison Fort Pitt. It would be needless for me to give you a detail of our Voyage, as we mett with nothing metairil on it but the Loss of one man Drownded. From Fort Pitt to the Scioto River, which you will see by the List of the distances from Each place I send you inclosed, is 366 miles. We met with Little or no game till we arriv'd there. But from thence to the falls, which is 316 miles more, the River is covered with all kinds of Game. We killed so many Buffalos that We commonly served out one a day to Each Company, & they Commonly Weigh'd from 4 to 600 lbs. Wi.; they go in Hirds of 20, 30 & some times 50, some people say in 100; they have seen them. We had such plenty that when a Bull was killed we only took the tongue and left the Rest for the Wolves. Besides this there is the greatest quantities of Turkies, Deer, Geese, Ducks, Bears &c. I Believe the Like is not to be seen in any part of the known World. The River does not abound so much with fish as might be imagin'd, which I Believe is occasioned by there Being such quantities of Cattfish, which are so Large and Numerous that I think they destroy all other But the Turtle. We had such plenty of these two that I think we might have subsisted on them and flour, without the assistance of any other food. We Caught some Catfish of 100 lb. W: But their Common size is from 30 to 70 lb. W: The Turtle is commonly of 30 lb. W: But seldom above that. They are Reckoned to be near as good as those taken at sea for soop. The 8th Aug. We arrived at the Falls, which you'l see is 682 miles from Fort Pitt, in 20 days. We Reckoned this good going, But I think with two or three Boats it might be done in half the time. The Falls appear verry tremendous at first sight, and startled our people much, as thay had not been used to things of this kind before. I made Light of it, and after I had survey'd them well, offered to go down them immediately in my Boat, which made many of them swear that none but a mad man would attempt a thing of the kind. However, this pleased the Colonel so much that he swore there was nothing I ever see that I would not attempt; however, he would not suffer me to go down that night. Next morning sent the Engineer Hutchins to see if a passage could be found in the South shore, who return'd at 11 o'clock with the report that it could not be effected. Col. Wilkins Came to me again, tould me to be cautious of what I did, that he did not, by any means, desire me to hazard my Life in such a manner But if I really thought it could be done he would give me Leave. I jumpt at the opportunity, threw some Baggage out of the Boat to make her Light in the head, and went off instantly. I Reconitred the head of the fall well before I made the attempt, and when I had found the passage went off, and in 2 minutes and 5 seconds pass'd the falls, that are near a Mile in Length, without the Least difficulty. all the peaple was looking out to see what would be our fate and when the Colonel see I had gott safe down he Come to meet me on my Return to the Camp by Land & gave me his hearty thanks. He then ordered the whole to prepare to pass them, and that night we gott of 8 more, & next day completed the passage. These falls are near a mile in Length, and they appear much Like those you have seen on Hudson's River at Fort Miller. Having halted here a day or two to put every thing in proper order, on the 13th we embarked again, and the 23d arrived at the Mississipy River where the Ohio has its confluence 482 miles from the falls the Whole Length of the Ohio River makes 1164 english miles. We was very much surprised to see the difference of the two Rivers at First sight the Ohio Being a fine Clear Jentle Current and the Mississipy a great Rapid full of sand Barrs, and so muddy that its impossible to drink it. made our desposition to assend the Mississipi, we embarked Early next morning But mett with so many difficualties that we only got four miles that night. We continued in the same manner for three days more, and did not gain above 6 or 7 miles a day, the current in many places is so very Rapid and the Navigation so much interrupted by great quantities of trees that falls with the Banks of the River and drives with the fluds in the springs, that we many times Rowd for 3 and four hours and did not gain one mile these difficulties with the inexperience of our men and officers made the Colonel almost mad at last he came to a determination to send off some person to Ft: Chartres to send down some empty battoes to Lighten some of ours that was so heavy loaded that they was not able to proceed. he again came to me to know if it would be agreeable to me to go on, I immediately embraced his offer and in half an hour Left the Detachment with four men and two Indians in a very small Boat, we Rowd night and day for three days and the 31st Augt arrived at Keskiskee* a Town & River on the English shore about 18 miles below F: Chartres; this I think was the most dangerous and fatiguing journey I ever made, I was inform'd when I arrived at Keskeskee that I had, had the greatest Luck in the world that I had escapt the enemy Indians that several parties was then out and had Cutt off a boat of the Companies, with 8 men, one of which got in, and a Connoe with 3 men, I sent of some boats that night to meet the Colonel and next morning set off in a Callash For Fort Chartres, as I said before is 18 miles from Keskeskee and we passd thro' the finest Country in the known world not a tree to be seen for several miles and the finest Land my Eyes ever beheld, Here they plant Indian Corn in the Spring and never touches it 'til fall when they go to fitch it home, and most of what I see is 10 & 12 foot high, they raze Tobacco as fine as in Virginia, they have the greatest quantity of black cattle—the plains for miles are Covered with them-indeed most of the french peoples Riches Lies in Stock of that kind for there is no kind of money Current there Butt what they make themselves, which is Little notes of so many Livers each, the horses are pritty good for Saddles, and might be made a great deal Better, But they are so careless of them that there is not one gelding in all the Colonie of the Illinois, all plowing & Hauling is done by Bullocks. The Country abutt F: Chatres is free for many miles Round it and the finest meddow ever was seen, grass grows here within a mile of the Fort to a great highht, and such quantities of it that there might be hav made for 100000 head of Cattle every summer, Fort Chartres is a midling sized Fort built of stone the walls about 2 foot thick and 20 foot high, its Built in a Regular Square with a Bastion at each angle with Loop holes to fire small arms thro', there are some port holes for great Guns, But they seldom use them for they shock the works too much, the barracks are very good built of stone, But they will not contain more than 200 men exclusive of offi-

We have been very Lucky both with men and officers in Respect to health, when we took possission of the Fort.

[The remainder of this letter is lost.]

V.

(ILLINOIS,) FORT CHARTRES, 30th October, 1768.

DEAR SIR

I had the pleasure to write you by Captain Forbesthel5th September when the 34th Regiment embarked from hence for Fort Pitt, I had the pleasure to acquaint you then we were all arrived here in good health, and as the season was so far advanced we were in hopes we should not be troubled with the disorders frequent in these Climes for this year, But we was soon convinced otherwise, On Sunday the 18th Sepr. I was sitting at Dinner when a sudden Coldness struck me all over without saying any thing of it I Rose from table and walk'd into the fields thinking to shake it off, But to no purpose, I then went to Bed and found myself siezed with a Hott fitt which did not last long and after slept pritty well till morning when I found myself quiet well, I tould the Doctor of what had happened, who said it would turn to an Intermitting fever and indeed so I found it, that day Capt. Stewart L: Turner and 20 men was siezed in much the same manner and so it Continued that in 3 days time there was not one Commissioned Officer, non Commissioned or Private man But one Serg. 1 Corp', and about nine men but what was siezed in the same manner next day as the Doctor had said mine came on again and in such a Violent manner that it laid me up for good. I had it six days with a Cold and hott fit every day But no shaking till the seventh when I had a very severe Cold fitt, and shuck very much the Doctor was pleased to see it and said he would soon put a stop to it, which he accordingly did, for from that time I had it no more, in this seven days I had five different servants all taken ill, and should have been in the greatest distress had it not been for a Woman of the Regi. whom a few days before had Claimed me for a Country man & was very tender and good to me till I was quiet recovered in a few days I was able to make my appearance on the parade being the first of the whole Garrison that was taken ill, on going out I found that all or most of them was in a much more dangerous way than I had been that there was hardly any but was dangerously ill of a nervous fever and I Could plainly see we should Loose a great many men the first Visit I paid was to my Dear good friend, Capt Stewart who to my unspeakable grief I found was a dying man, and this had Like to have thrown me into a Relapse with greef, the 29th Sepr. Lieut Turner died who you may remember was a very modest good man, the 30th my Dear

* Kaskaskia.

Stewart died and the 3 October Lieut Paterson, the men now began to go off fast we for several days Carried out in a Cart four and five a day, at one time, men.and their wives have been Carried to the graves in the same Cart, and the poor Little Infant Orphans following, and no person to help or do the Least thing for them, we was now arrived at the greatest scenes of Calamity in the midst of which Col. Wilkins (who was then Lyingill himself) sent for me to ask me to do the Adjutant's duty. I was unwilling to engage in it but thought this was no time to Refuse any thing, and I was immediately put in order to do the duty, you may easily Conceive what a situation I was in with all the Officers and men of the five compys so ill that we Could only mount a Corp! and six men and had to Guard a fort in the heart of an Enemys Country, The disorder still Ragged and I have the greatest Reason in the World to believe it was Contagious for hardly any one Came into the fort but found themselves siezed soon after. have now sent to the Grave three Officers, twenty five men Twelve Women and fifteen Children, since the 29th Sept and many more in a Very dangerous way, tho' I am in hopes the could Weather will soon help

Since I Recovered I thought it highly Necessary to make my Willin which I have Left every thing to your Disposall tho' Little as I have it Comes with a hearty welcome I hope you will Receive this time enough to write in the Spring, if I dont hear from you then shall be very Uneasy.

VI.

(Illinois) Fort Chartres, 12th Febuary 1769. Dear Sir

I had the pleasure to write you the 30th October last by an Express that went from hence by land, with despatches for the Commander in Chief which was to acquaint him of our distressed situation at that time, I then wrote you we had Lost three Officers & twenty five men, since that we have Buried fifteen men more, Almost all the Women and thirty Seven Children that arrived here with the five companys in perfect health.

The Colonel has been kind enough to Recommend me for one of the vacant Ensigncy should the promotion go in the Regim'. But there is so Little probability of it that I dont flatter myself the Lest with hopes of succeeding, tho' one would think it hard too as there are so many Vacancies that some might not take Besides the Gent: that died here we have an Account of one Ens; Tracy being killed in a Duell at Fort Pitt, and Ensign Howard is on the decline of life here.

When I wrote you 15th Septr (which I sent by Capt. Forbes of the 34th Regimt) I gave you some Account of this Country It is certainly the finest Land in the known World, it Wants for nothing but inhabitants and cultivation to make it exceed any part of America I have ever been in, You would be surprised to see how Luxuriously every kind of Vegetables grows here,—they grow Wheat, Oats, pease, and Indian Corn, in great abundance, and there are such quantities of the finest Meadow that the grass is in Common to all, Their Cattle run in grass so high that you may be within five yards of a large Ox, and not see him, When the french (whom you know are a very Idle set of people in all parts of America they are in) Cut their grass its Common for them to take three or four teams to the Meddow in a morning, mow all day, and bring it home at night, which is all the Making the Hay gets here. The reason they give for bringing it home so soon is, that Were they to Leave it out two days it would be so much dryd with the excessive heat that it would be good for nothing. The Indians that live hereabouts are a very mean, Indolent Drunken set of people, whom the French have entirely at their command.

Col. Wilkins is taking great pains to settle the Affairs of the Collonie in some kind of Regulation, which as yet has been (since the English possessed it) without any kind of Laws but that of Military Decision. He has now* granted commissions of the peace to several people, both french and English; of those he has formd a Court of Judicature. who are allowed to determin on all causes of Debt, without a Jury. How this may answer with the Laws of great Britain I will not Pretend to say. He has appointed Mr. George Morgan President of this Court, which has given great offence to all the french inhabitants in the Colonie, he being Universally hated by all those people, and indeed has but few friends of any other Nation here (The Commandaut excepted). Indeed it would surprise you much to see how we are perplexed with party affairs in this Infant Collonie. The French to a man oppose the Morganians with all their might and I believe would not Scruple to spend their Estates to have their Ends accomplished, Indeed, if half what they allege be truth, they have great Cause of Complaintfor my own share I think there are faults on Both sides. The french are here (as in all other parts I have seen them in) a Cunning, litigous, jealous, set of people, By what I can Learn their grand dispute arises from an Opinion of the Commandant favoring the Company which he is obliged to do in Consequence of his orders from Gen. Gage because they are the only people that make use of English manufactures the others being all French Wines &c., and of Course is Contraband trade. It would be too tedious to enter into a detail of the many scandalous practices that is made use of by both parties, to ruin others, Petitions from the french party to the Commandant dayly Replete with Rebellion. He on the other hand is endeavoring to support the Company all in His power by issuing His Proclamations for bringing them to Justice and settling all their affairs on a solid foundation which he takes great pains to do, tho' I am afraid he will not accomplish it shortly: The 19th December last Col. Wilkins ordered a Court of Inquiry to be held to settle some disputesbetwixt Mr. Morgan and the french people, It was Carried on from day to day till the 20th January with the greatest Rancour by both partys, and when it was over not the lest thing settled to either partys satisfaction, What is most extraordinary the french was not able to proove any one thing

* His Proclamation, based on Gage's order, is dated Nov. 21, 1768. The Courts began Dec. 6, 1768

They Alleged against Mr. Morgan, It is said here the proceedings will be published in one of the Philadelphia papers But I hope they will think better of it, and not expose themselves so far.

The Spaniards make but an indifferent appearance here, You know, by the Definitive Treaty of Peace, they were to have all the Lands to the Westward of the Mississippi River, in Consequence of which they sent one hundred men from the Havana Under the command of one Capt. Don Rose,* an old experienced officer, to take possession of their part of the Louisiana Country He took post at a place called paincour, about forty miles above this Fort where he has Commanded so much to the people's satisfaction, as will redound much to his honor, tho' he has been so Unlucky with his people by deaths and desertions, that he has now only seventeen men left out of the hundred, It is now said there is another Officer coming up from the Havana to Relieve him and five hundred Spanish Soldiers, who are to be employ'd building a Fort on the Missouri River, which you may see by a map is about sixty miles from hence, on the Spanish shore, It is in the heart of the Country of a Tribe of Indians of that name, who are very numerous and give law to all the Indians hereabout.

It has been talked ever since we arrived here, of Col Wilkins having orders to establish a post at a place call'd by the French Post St. Vincent, the English call it O Post.† It is on the Wabash River, Its by Land 240 English miles but to go by Water is 600 at lest from this place, and for this purpose he is fitting up a very Large Boat, by Way of a Row-galley which is to row with 24 Oars, to Carry 35 men With six Months provisions &c and a Brass six-pounder Mounted on her forecastle, Her Gunwales are raised so high that the men are not to be seen Rowing, This Boat is to be Commanded by a Commissioned Officer, and is also to Cruise on the Wabash and Ohio Rivers, to intercept the french and Spanish traders from New Orleans, Carrying on an Illicit trade with our Indians at O Post and on the Rivers, It is likewise to prevent them from killing Buffalo, which the people from New Orleans have done in such quantities lately that were they allowd to continue it, they would soon destroy all those animals.

I believe when I wrote you by Capt. Forbes I mentioned the farm Capt. Stewart and I had bought in Company, from which we had great expectations, But that poor man being so soon Cutt off, has Rendered all our hopes fruitless, for we was obliged to take in other partners that quiet destroys all our endeavors, and things of all kinds being so extravagantly dear that I fear I shall not be able to save any thing out of my pay, had not these poor Gents: died since we came here, I had some hopes of getting leave of absence to go to England, But since it has so happened, I fear I may now give up all hopes of it for life, Indeed I should not so much mind that were I in a part of America that one could have the least hopes of health, I cannot so much complain of it myself for I have been very hearty ever since the Stroke I had in Septemr, that I mentioned to you in my last, But it would shock a Turk to see what the Poor men, women, & children, have suffered for want of proper nourishment. You may easily Conceive what Wretched state a poor man must be in when in the higth of a fever to have nothing to drink but Cold Water-

When the fevers had somewhat abated, a great many of the men was seized with a Bluddy flux, which now makes great havock amongst them, not a Week but we Burry some and when it will end God only knows, for there are numbers of them just at Deaths door, you would pity them much to see them so shortly changed from a sett of fine stout hearty Young men, now a weak, feable, emaciated poor Souls. I Believe by the time you have Read this far you will wish

*Rious reached St. Louis in 1768, but Sir Ange, the former Commander of Fort Chartres, remained in command till of 1770.

† This is Vincennes, which the English, who thought that every French place must necessarily be a Saint, changed to St. Vincent. The French have a way of using au, aux before names, and this has led to mistakes like that in the text. They would speak of Post Vincennes as au Poste, at the Post. Hence we have aux Arcs, Ozark; aux Sables, Ausable.

for a Conclusion, and indeed so it really is time. But my heart wishes much to Converse with you and as I Cannot have that happiness, hope you will excuse this long epistle. Ensign Howard has been very ill all winter It has been offered to him that if he would give in his Resignation he might return to Europe and I believe I might have the offer of it on the same Conditions I had Mr. Raymond's, I consulted the Colonel in it and he advises me to wait and see what may be the Issue of the Last Recommendation. We have had several expresses from Fort Pitt this Winter and I was in great hopes of hearing from you by some of them but not a line has made its appearance, however there is a good time coming in the spring, I long much to know what luck I have had in the Philadelphia Lottery, and hope to hear you have put out that trifle to Interest.

We have had a fine Winter here as any I have ever seen since I came to America and all the Gents: (except Howard) have been pretty healthy, I still keep bustling about am now busy fencing in a Garden for the men, which win my own and the adjutants duty that I have done ever since poor Turner Died keeps me constantly employ'd and I am sure ads much to my health. Pray make my most sincere Respects to Miss Shipphard to all my Little Countrymen, Missr: Bamsley, Shiphard and Smith, and the Rest of your good family, and may he who has the giving of all good gifts ever Bless you Sir & all your Undertakings, is the fervent prayer of

Dear Sir, your poor but sincere friend,

GEO: BUTRICKE.

VII.

FORT CHARTRES 27th June 1769

DEAR SIR

Though I am not so happy as to have heard from you once since I left Philadelphia, I have not mist any opporty of Writing to you, and this by Mr. Morgan being a very good one I Cannot let it slip without letting you know that one of your friends is still among the living.—My last was of the 10th Febry. which I hope you have Received by this time—In April I was Attack with a severe fever which kept me confined for ten days, and in May again much more severe than the Other tho' it did not last so long, since which I have been very hearty and indeed the whole Garrison are much recovered, tho' the Weather is most intolerably hott: the men keep up their spirits very well, I am in hopes the seasoning (as they call it here) is now almost over.

We have been all this Spring, under the greatest apprehension of an Indian Warr,* we had it from all quarters that several nations had entered into a League to strike the English in the Illinois Country this Spring, Col. Wilkins on this information very prudently filled all the stores with provisions and sent an Officer with the arm'd Boat to get in a quantity of Wood which was happily effected in a very short time and now we have 280 cords piled up under the Walls of the Fort and we can now bid defiance to all the Indians in America,—the 16th April a party of the Kickapocs broke into a house in this Village; surprised a soldier and his Wife in Bed, scalp'd both and got off without the least hurt; and the 14th May another party of the Sax and Revnards† attacked some of the Indians that live near this fort killed six, and Carried off their scalps, these strokes alarmed us much, obliged us to keep constantly in the Fort, & watch Night and day, Its now said the stroke intended against us will be in the harvest time, But I am of an Opinion it will blow over for this time or we should have had more of it before now.

I have had great hopes of getting leave from Col. Wilkins to return to europe, which he had in some measure promised me when the new adjutant arrived but we have heard nothing as yet how those vacancies have been filled; & Cap' Campbell, the Barrack master here, has got leave to return to Europe,

*These apprehensions were caused by the threats of vengeance made by the Ottawas and their allies, the Kikapoos, Sacs and Foxes, against the Illinois, for the murder of Pontiac, at Cahokia by an Illinois.

† Foxes (Outagamies.)

CHARITANN.

& has appointed me to act in his absence, with a Salary of two shillings sterling pr day, This with two I expect for doing the adjutant's duty, will I hope enable me to make you a Remittance of a hundred York in a short time, If I have not some letters from you soon, I shall think you have quiet forgot me. Pray give my kind respects to Miss Jemima, and all the rest of your good family and believe me

Dear sir

Yours Most affectionately GEO. BUTRICKE.

To Captain Barnsley

Superscribed

To

Captain BARNSLEY Esq<sup>r</sup>
At Bensalem in Bucks Co

Pennsylvania

Pr: favor of GEO. MORGAN, Esqr: }

VIII.

FORT CHARTERS 29th Deceme 1769.

DEAR SIR.

I cannot let slip this opportunity tho' am at a loss what to write, 'Tis almost two years since I had the pleasure to see you, and in all that time not one Line, tho' when I consider former times, I am not so much surprised for I Remember when I was at Niagara a letter in two years was look'd upon as a great favour.

This is the fifth I have wrote you since I came to this place and I took particular care to send them by good hands, so that I hope they are all come to hand. We are now in a melancholy situation we have not had the Least Accounts from any Quarter since the first of June, 'Tis thought the Indians have Cut of the Expresses from fort Pitt on the River Ohio, and we have Acc by frenchmen from New Orleans that since the Spaniards have returned to that place they have forbid all English or french from Landing there, If this be true all our Commuications are shutt up, the Indians are all out hunting now, But its said we shall certainly have an Indian Warr in the Spring, In HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

my last I inform'd you of my intention to return to Europe, But I have fear I shall not be able to Accomplish it, not only for the Reason above given, But my having so many employments on my hands, which will Render it very difficult.

I now do the duty of Qr Masr:, adjutant, Barrack Master and since the death of poor Captain Lieut Lane have been Obliged to act as paymaster tho' was given to Understand it was intended for another person, there are two candidates for this place, vizt: Lieut Chapman and one Rumsey who you may remember in the 42<sup>d</sup> Regm<sup>t</sup>, he is Recommended for an Ensigncy in this Reg'; and if he succeeds the present Commanding Officer will give him the paymasters place, -I could not help observing to Lt, Colonel Wilkins that I thought it something strange being desired to do a duty for a Regim<sup>1</sup>, and the emoluments given to another Person, but he gave me to understand that he was a Better Judge for me, than I was for myself, it then struck me of the Repeated Advice you have given me, and I immediately tould him there was no kind of duty he would desire me to do; but I should be happy in executing it, by this you will see I still am on a good footing with him, But you will pitty me when I tell you that the whole Corp and he are on very Bad terms, this makes me have a very difficult Card to play, however I hope to Rubb it out for a few years in order to save a little more money and I hope to be able to send you a Bill in the Spring for one hundred Penn: Curr, I have not time to say more at present, therefore Conclude with my sincere respects to all your family wishing you and them a Merry Christmas and many a happy New Year.

GEO. BUTRICKE.

IX.

Letter dated at Fort Chartres, on the 30th May 1770—is sent "by some Indians just going off for Fort Pitt by land"—speaks of some money matters, and the necessaries of Life there are "very dear"—He still continues to hold the numerous offices in the Regt, before described, and says "I keep in with the person [Col. Wilkins?] as you desired, tho' I assure you it is attended with many disagreeable Circumstances, however I shall still adhere to your advice. I am sorry to tell you there are many disagreeable things passes in this part of the world. I have Steered clear as yet, some think it will be a means of bringing us back to Philada for Court Matials &c &c."

His next letter dated June 13, 1770, mentions the preceding letter, and says "I have no news, health and I are again friends and we go hand in hand in spite of Climate, or a most shocking unhealthy Country,"&c.

The next letter dated May 2, 1771, still complains that he has not yet rec<sup>1</sup> a line from Cap<sup>1</sup>, B—sends this by way of Fort Pitt, and a draft will be sent by Lieut. Chapman of same Reg<sup>1</sup>. "who will embark for Philadelphia, by way of New Orleans in a few days," and adds,

"I am sorry to hear there is so great a probability of a Spanish war, We have frequent alarms here of enemy Indians, we have lost one man kill'd and scalped this Spring."

GOVERNORS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

The following interesting table contains matter which will be very useful for future reference, and having been prepared with great care, its accuracy can be relied upon:

FROM 1682 TO 1863.

1682, October. William Penn [Proprietary] acted as Governor till August, 1684.
Thomas Lloyd, President, until December, 1688.

Captain John Blackwell, Deputy Governor to 1690.

President and Council to April 26th, 1693.

Benjamin Fletcher, Deputy-Governor to September, 1692.

William Markham, Deputy-Governor, to December 3d, 1696.

William Penn again acted as Governor to November 1st, 1701.

Andrew Hamilton, Deputy-Governor to February, 1703.

Edward Shippen, President of Council to February, 1704.

John Evans, Deputy-Governor to February, 1709

Charles Gookin, Deputy-Governor to March, 1717.

Sir. William Keith, Bart., Deputy-Governor to June 1727.

Patrick Gordon, Deputy-Governor to June, 1736.

James Logan, President of Council to June, 1738.

George Thomas, Deputy-Governor to June, 1748.

James Hamilton, Deputy-Governor to October, 1754.

Robert Hunter Morris, Deputy-Governor to August 19, 1756.

William Denny, Deputy-Governor to November, 1759.

James Hamilton, Deputy-Governor to October, 1763.

John Penn, son of Richard Penn, Deputy-Governor to May 6, 1771.

Richard Penn, Governor to August,

John Penn, (second time) Governor to September, 1776.

Thomas Wharton, Jr., President of Executive Council to October, 1777.

Joseph Reed, President to November, 1781.

William Moore, President to November,

John Dickinson, President to October, 1785.

Benjamin Franklin, President to October, 1788.

Thomas Mifflin, President to the adoption of the new Constitution in 1790.

UNDER THE CONSTITUTION OF 1790.

1790.	Thomas Mifflin had	27,725
	Arthur St. Clair,	2,802
	Whole number,		30,529
1783.	Thomas Mifflin,	19,590	•
	F. A. Muhlenberg,	10,700
	Whole number,		30,391
1796.	Thomas Mifflin,	30,029	•
	F. A. Muhlenberg,	10,011
	Whole number,		41,031

1799.	Thomas McKean,	37,244
	James Ross, Whole number,	$\frac{22,643}{65,0}$	10
1802	Thomas McKean,	47,879
	James Ross,	17,087
	Whole number,	65,0	10
1805.	Thomas McKean,	48,483
	Simon Snyder,	43,644	oo.
1000	Whole number,	82,55	ZZ
1808.	Simon Snyder, James Ross,	67,975 37,575
	John Spayd,	4,006
	Whole number,	111,50	64
1811.	Simon Snyder,	52,319
	No opposition.	·
	Whole number,	57,60	03
1814.	Simon Snyder,	51,099
	Isaac Wayne,	29,566	۰.
101#	Whole number,	81,59	ยอ
1817.	William Findlay, Joseph Heister,	66,331 59,273
	Whole number,	$\frac{59,275}{125,6}$	14
1820.	Joseph Heister,	67,905
	William Findlay,	66,300
	Whole number,	134,20	)5
l823.	John A. Shultze,	89,968
	Andrew Gregg,	64,221
	Whole number,	154,14	19
1826.	John A. Shultze,	72,710
	John Sergeant, Whole number,	$\frac{1,174}{}$ 73,88	21
1 829.	George Wolf,	78,219
	Joseph Ritner,	51,776
	Whole number,	129.99	95
1832.	George Wolf,	91,235
	Joseph Ritner, Whole number,	88,186 169,42	21
1835.	Joseph Ritner,	94,023	Ľ
	George Wolf,	65,804
	H. A. Mulenberg,	40,586
1000	Whole number,	200,41	13
1838.	David R. Porter,	131,496 121,389
	Joseph Ritner, Whole number,	252,88	35
1841.	David R. Porter,	136,335
	John Banks,	113,374
0.4.4	Whole number,	249,70	9
1844.	Francis R. Shunk,	160,403
	Joseph Markle,	156,114 316,51	17
	Whole number,	510,51	L /

_
	1847.	Francis R. Shunk,	146,081
		James Irvin,	128,148
)		Eman'l C. Reigert,	11,247
		Whole number,	285,476
	1848.	W. F. Johnston,	168,462
		Morris Longstreth,	168,192
'		Whole number,	336,654
	1851.	William Bigler,	186,507
		W. F. Johnston,	178,070
i		Whole number,	364,577
	1854.	James Pollock,	204,008
		William Bigler,	167,001
		Whole number,	371,009
:	1857.	Wm. F. Packer,	188,890
		David Wilmot,	146,147
		Isaac Hazlehurst,	28,100
		Whole number,	363,137
	1860.		262,403
		Henry D. Foster,	230,239
		Whole number,	482,452
	1863.	Andrew G. Curtin,	269,496 '
		G. W. Woodward,	254,171
		Whole number,	523,667
		,	•
	l

AN ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL.

[Written in 1818 for the Port Folio, at the request of the editor, by H. Dearborn, Major Gen. U. S. A. and now reprinted here at the request of the venerable editor to make it accessible to students generally.]

On the sixteenth of June, 1775, it was determined that a fortified post should be established at or near Bunker's Hill.

A detachment of the army was ordered to advance early in the evening of that day, and commence the erection of a strong work on the heights in the rear of Charlestown, at that time called Breed's Hill, but from its proximity to Bunker Hill, the battle has taken its name from the latter eminence, which overlooks it. The work was commenced and carried on under the direction of such engineers as we were able to procure, at that time. It was a square redoubt, the curtains of which were about sixty or seventy feet in extent, with an entrenchment, or breast work, extending 50 or 60 feet from the northern angle, towards Mystic river.

In the course of the night the ramparts had been raised to the height of six or seven feet, with a small ditch at their base, but it was yet in a rude and very imperfect Being in full view from the northern heights of Boston it was discovered by the enemy, as soon as day-light appeared, and a determination was immediately formed by General Gage, for dislodging our troops from this new and alarming position. Arrangements were promptly made for effecting this important object. The movements of the British troops, indicating an attack, were soon discovered; in consequence of which, orders were immediately issued for the march of a considerable part of our army to reinforce the detachment at the redoubts on Breed's Hill; but such was the imperfect state of discipline, the want of knowledge in military science, and the deficiency of the materials of war, that the movement of the troops was extremely irregular and devoid of every thing like concert-each regiment advancing according to the opinions, feelings, or caprice, of its commander.

Colonel Stark's* regiment was quartered in Medford, distant about four miles from the point of anticipated attack. It then consisted of thirteen companies, and was probably the largest regiment in the army. About ten o'clock in the morning he received orders to march. The regiment being destitute of ammunition, it was formed in front of a house occupied as an arsenal, where each man received a gill-cup full of powder, fifteen balls, and one flint.

The several captains were then ordered to march their companies to their respective quarters, and make up their powder and ball into cartridges, with the greatest possible dispatch. As there were scarcely two muskets in a company of equal caliber, it was necessary to reduce the size of the balls for many of them; and as but a small proportion of the men had cartridge boxes, the

After completing the necessary preparations for action, the regiment formed, and marched about one o'clock. When it reached Charlestown Neck, we found two regiments halted, in consequence of a heavy enfilading fire thrown across it, of round. bar, and chain shot, from the Lively frigate. and floating batteries anchored in Charles river, and a floating battery laying in the river Mystic. Major M' Clary went forward, and observed to the commanders, if they did not intend to move on, he wished them to open and let our regiment pass: the latter was immediately done. My company being in front, I marched by the side of Col. Stark, who, moving with a very deliberate pace. I suggested the propriety of quickening the march of the regiment, that it might sooner be relieved from the galling cross fire of the With a look peculiar to himself. he fixed his eye upon me, and observed with great composure, "Dearborn-one fresh man in action is worth ten fatigued ones," and continued to advance in the same cool and collected manner. When we reached the top of Bunker's Hill, where general Putnam had taken his station, the regiment halted for a few moments for the rear to come up.

Soon after, the enemy were discovered to have landed on the shore of Morton's point, in front of Breed's Hill, under cover of a tremendous fire of shot and shells from a battery on Copp's Hill, in Boston, which had opened on the redoubt at day-break.

Major general Howe, and brigadier gene-Pigot, were the commanders of the British forces which first landed, consisting of four battalions of infantry, ten companies of grenadiers, and ten of light infantry, with a train of field artillery. They formed as they disembarked, but remained in that position, until they were reinforced by another detachment.

At this moment the veteran and gallant colonel Stark harangued his regiment in a short but animated address; then directed them to give three cheers, and make a rapid movement to the rail fence which ran from the left, and about forty yards in the rear of the redoubt towards Mystic river. Part

He is one of the only three surviving general officers of the revolutionary war.

The other two are major general St. Clair, who lives in the interior of Pennsylvania, and brigadier general Huntington, of Connecticut.

remainder made use of powder horns and ball pouches.

*This distinguished veteran is still alive, in the ninety-first year of his age, and resides in the state of New Hampshire.

of the grass having been recently cut, lay in winnows and cocks on the field. Another fence was taken up—the rails run through the one in front, and the hay, mown in the vicinity, suspended upon them, from the bottom to the top, which had the appearance of a breast work, but was, in fact, no real cover to the men. It however served as deception on the enemy. This was done by the direction of the committee of safety, of which Wm. Winthrop, esq., who then and now lives in Cambridge, was one, as he has within a few years informed me.

At the moment our regiment was formed in the rear of the rail fence, with one other small regiment from New Hampshire, under the command of colonel Reid, the fire commenced between the left wing of the British army, commanded by general Howe, and the troops in the redoubt under colonel Prescott, while a column of the enemy was advancing on our left, on the shore of Mystic river, with an evident intention of turning our left wing, and that veteran and most excellent regiment of Welsh fusileers, so distinguished for its gallant conduct in the battle of Minden, advanced in column directly on the rail fence; when within eighty or an hundred yards, deployed into line, with the precision and firmness of troops on parade, and opened a brisk but regular fire by platoons, which was returned by a well directed, rapid, and fatal discharge from our whole line.

The action soon became general, and very heavy from right to left. In the course of ten or fifteen minutes the enemy gave way at all points, and retreated in great disorder; leaving a large number of dead and wounded on the field.

The firing ceased for a short time, until the enemy again formed, advanced and recommenced a spirited fire from his whole line. Several attempts were again made to turn our left, but the troops having thrown up a slight stone wall on the bank of the river and laying down behind it, gave such a deadly fire, as cut down almost every man of the party opposed to them; while the fire from the redoubt and the rail-fence was so well directed and so fatal, especially to the British officers, that the whole army was compelled a second time to retreat with precipitation and great confusion. time the ground occupied by the enemy was covered with his dead and wounded. a few small detached parties again advanced, which kept up a distant ineffectual scattering fire until a strong reinforcement arrived from Boston which advanced on the southern declivity of the hill, in the rear of Charlestown. When this column arrived opposite that angle of the redoubt which faced Charlestown, it wheeled by platoons to the right and advanced directly upon the redoubt without firing a gun. By this time our ammunition was exhausted. A few men only had a charge left.

The advancing column made an attempt to carry the redoubt by assault, but at the first onset every man that mounted the parapet was cut down, by the troops within, who had formed on the opposite side, not being prepared with bayonets to meet a charge.

The column wavered for a moment, but soon formed again; when a foward movement was made with such spirit and intrepidity as to render the feeble efforts of a handful of men, without the means of defence, unavailing, and they fled through an open space, in the rear of the redoubt, which had been left for a gateway. At this, moment the rear of the British column advanced round the angle of the redoubt and threw in a galling flank fire upon our troops, as they rushed from it, which killed and wounded a greater number than had fallen before during the action. The whole of our line immediately after gave away and retreated with rapidity and disorder towards Bunker Hill; carrying off as many of the wounded as possible, so that only thirty six or seven fell into the hands of the enemy, among whon were Lt. Col. Parker and two or three other officers who fell in or near the redoubt.

When the troops arrived at the summit of Bunker Hill, we found Gen. Putnam with nearly as many men as had been engaged in the battle; notwithstanding which no measures had been taken, for reinforcing us, nor was there a shot fired to cover our retreat, or any movement made to check the advance of the enemy to this height, but on the contrary, Gen. Putnam rode off, with a number of spades and pick-axes in his hands and the troops that had remained with him inactive, during the whole of the action, although within a few hundred yards of the battle ground and no obstacle to impede their movement but musket balls.

The whole of the troops now descended the northwestern declivity of Bunker Hill and recrossed the neck. Those of the New Hampshire line retired towards Winter Hill, and the others on to Prospect Hill.

Some slight works were thrown up in the course of the evening,—strong advance pickets were posted on the roads leading to Charlestown, and the troops anticipating an attack, rested on their arms.

It is a most extraordinary fact that the British did not make a single charge during the battle, which, if attempted, would have been decisive and fatal to the Americans, as they did not carry into the field fifty bayonets. In my company there was not one.

Soon after the commencement of the action a detachment from the British force in Boston was landed in Charlestown, and within a few moments the whole town appeared in a blaze. A dense column of smoke rose to a great height, and there being a gentle breeze from the south west, it hung like a thunder cloud over the contending armies. A very few houses escaped the dreadful conflagration of this devoted town.

From similar mistakes, the fixed ammunition furnished for the field-pieces was calculated for guns of a larger caliber, which prevented the use of field artillery on both sides. There was no cavalry in either army. From the ships of war and the large battery on Copp's Hill a heavy cannonade was kept up upon our line and redoubt, from the commencement to the close of the action, and during the retreat; but with very little effect; except that of killing the brave Major Andrew M' Clary, of Col. Stark's regiment soon after we retired from Bunker Hill. He was among the first officers of the army. Possessing a sound judgment, of undaunted bravery,—enterprising, ardent and zealous, both as a patriot and soldier. His loss was severely felt by his compatriots in arms, while his country was deprived of the services of one of her most promising and distinguished champions of liberty.

After leaving the field of battle I met him and drank some spirit and water with him. He was amimated and sanguine in the result of the conflict for Independence, from the glorious display of valor, which had distinguished his countrymen on that ever memorable day.

He soon observed that the British troops on Bunker Hill appeared in motion and said he would go and reconnoitre them, to see whether they were coming out over the neck, at the same time directing me to march my company down the road towards Charlestown. We were then at Tuft's house near Ploughed Hill. I immediately made a forward movement to the position he directed me to take, and halted while he proceeded to the old pound, which stood on the site now occupied as a tavern-house not far from the entrance to the neck. After he had satisfied himself that the enemy did not intend to leave their strong posts on the heights, he was returning towards me, and when within twelve or fifteen rods of where I stood, with my company, a random cannon-shot, from one of the frigates laying near where the centre of Craige's bridge now is passed directly though his body and put to flight one of the most heroic souls that ever animated man.

He leaped two or three feet from the ground, pitched forward, and fell dead upon his face. I had him carried to Medford, where he was interred, with all the respect and honours we could exhibit to the manes of a great and good man. He was my bosom friend; we had grown up together on terms of the greatest intimacy and I loved him as a brother.

My position in the battle, more the result of accident, than any regularity of formation, was on the right of the line, at the rail fence, which afforded me a fair view of the whole scene of action.

Our men were intent on cutting down every officer whom they could distinguish in the British line. When any of them discovered one he would instantly exclaim "there," "see that officer," "let us have a shot at him," when two or three would fire at the same moment: and as our soldiers were excellent marksmen and rested their muskets over the fence, they were sure of their object. An officer was discovered to mount near the position of Gen. Howe, on the left of the British line and ride towards our left; which a column was endeavouring to turn. This was the only officer on horseback during the day, and as he approached the rail fence, I heard a number of our men observe, "there," "there,"—"see that officer on horseback,"—"let us fire," "no, not yet,"-" wait until he gets to that little knoll,"-" now,"-when they fired and he instantly fell dead, from his horse. It proved to be Major Pitcairn,—a distinguished officer. The fire of the enemy was so badly directed, I should presume that forty-nine balls out of fifty passed from one to six feet over our heads, for I noticed an apple tree, some paces in the rear, which had scarcely a ball in it, from the ground as high as a man's head, while the trunk and branches above were literally cut to pieces.

I commanded a full company in action and had only one man killed and five wounded, which was a full average of the loss we sustained, excepting those who fell while sallying from the redoubt, when it was stormed by the British column.

Our total loss in killed was eighty-eight, and as well as I can recollect upwards of two hundred wounded. Our platoon officers carried fusees.

In the course of the action, after firing away what ammunition I had, I walked on to the higher ground to the right, in rear of the redoubt with an expectation of procuring from some of the dead or wounded men who lay there, a supply. While in that situation I saw at some distance a dead man lying near a small locust tree. As he appeared to be much better dressed than our men generally were, I asked a man who was passing me, if he knew who it was. He replied "it is Doctor Warren."

I did not personally know Doctor Warren, but was well acquainted with his public character. He had been recently-appointed a general in our service, but had not taken any command. He was President of the Provincial Congress then sitting in Watertown, and having heard that there would probably be an action, had come to share in whatever might happen, in the character of a volunteer and was unfortunately killed early in the action. His death was a severe misfortune to his friends and country. Posterity will appreciate his worth and do honour to his memory. He is immortalized as a patriot, who gloriously fell in the defence of freedom.

The number of our troops in action as near as I was able to ascertain did not exceed fifteen hundred. The force of the British, at the commencement of the action, was estimated at about the same number, but they were frequently reinforced.

Had our ammunition held out, or had we been supplied with only fifteen or twenty rounds, I have no doubt but that we should have killed and wounded the greatest part of their army, and compelled the remainder to have laid down their arms; for it was with the greatest difficulty that they were brought up the last time. Our fire was so deadly, particularly to the officers, that it would have been impossible to have resisted it, but for a short time longer.

I did not see a man quit his post during the action, and do not believe a single soldier, who was brought into the field fled, until the whole army was obliged to retreat, for want of powder and ball.

The total loss of the British was about twelve hundred; upwards of five hundred killed and between six and seven hundred wounded. The Welsh fusileers suffered most severely; they came into action five hundred strong, and all were killed or wounded but eighty-three.

I will mention an extraordinary circumstance to show how far the temporary reputation of a man may affect the minds of all classes of society.

General Putnam had entered our army at the commencement of the revolutionary war, with such an universal popularity as can scarcely now be conceived, even by those who then felt the whole force of it, and no one can at this time offer any satisfactory reasons why he was held in such high estimation.

In the battle of Bunker Hill he took post on the declivity towards Charlestown Neck, where I saw him on horseback as we passed on to Breed's Hill, with Col. Gerrish by his side. I heard the gallant Col. Prescott (who commanded in the redoubt) observe, after the war, at the table of his Excellency James Boudoin, then governor of this commonwealth, "that he sent three messengers during the battle to Gen. Putnam, requesting him to come forward and take the command, there being no general officer present, and the relative rank of the colonel not having been settled; but that he received no answer, and his whole conduct was such, both during the action and the retreat, that he ought to have been shot." He remained at or near the top of Bunker Hill until the retreat, with colonel Gerrish by his side: I saw them together when we retreated. He not only continued at that distance himself during the whole of the action, but had a force with him nearly as large as that engaged. No reinforcement of men or ammunition was sent to our assistance; and, instead of attempting to cover the retreat of those who had expended their last shot in the face of the enemy, he retreated in company with colonel Gerrish, and his whole force, without discharging a single musket; but what is still more astonishing, colonel Gerrish was arrested for cowardice, tried, cashiered, and universally execrated; while not a word was said against the conduct of general Putnam, whose extraordinary popularity alone saved him, not only from trial but even from censure. Colonel Gerrish commanded a regiment, and should have been at its head. His regment was not in action, although ordered; but as he was in the suite of the general, and appeared to be in the situation of adjutant general, why was he not directed by Putnam to join it, or the regiment sent into action under the senior officer present with it?

When general Putnam's ephemeral and unaccountable popularity subsided or faded away, and the minds of the people were released from the shackles of a delusive trance, the circumstances relating to Bunker Hill were viewed and talked of in a very different light, and the selection of the unfortunate colonel Gerrish as a scape-goat, considered as a mysterious and inexplicable event.

I have no private feelings to gratify by making this statement in relation to general Putnam, as I never had any intercourse with him, and was only in the army where he was present, for a few months; but, at this late period, I conceive it a duty to give a fair and impartial account of one of the most important battles during the war of independence, and all the circumstances connected with it, so far as I had the means of being correctly informed.

It is a duty I owe to posterity, and the character of those brave officers who bore a share in the hardships of the revolution.

Nothing like discipline had entered our army at that time. General Ward, then commander in chief, remained at his quarters in Cambridge, and apparently took no interest or part in the transactions of the day.

No general officer, except Putnam, appeared in sight, nor did any officer assume the command, undertake to form the troops, or give any orders, in the course of the action, that I heard, except colonel Stark, who directed his regiment to reserve their fire on the retreat of the enemy, until they advanced again.

Every platoon officer was engaged in discharging his own musket, and left his men to fire as they pleased, but never without a sure aim at some particular object, which was more destructive than any mode which could have been adopted with troops who were not inured to discipline, and never had been in battle, but who still were familiar with the use of arm, from boyhood, and each having his peculiar manner of loading and firing, which had been practiced upon for years, with the same gun, any attempt to control them by uniformity or system, would have rendered their fires infinitely less fatal to the enemy. Not an officer or soldier of the continental troops engaged was in uniform, but were in the plain and ordinary dress of citizens; nor was there an officer on horseback.

(Signed) H. DEARBORN,

THE TOMB OF COLUMBUS.—In the Cathedral Church of the Havana, on the north side of the chancel, and near the high-altar, is an insignificant looking mural tablet. It marks the last resting-place of one whose life was a perpetual wandering to-and-fro upon the earth, to whose bones there came final rest only after many years of death. The rude likeness carved upon it shows the thoughtful, persistent face of Christopher Columbus. In the wall behind, his remains are built up.

It seems almost incredible that the spot where lie the ashes of one so great should be marked by no more than this poor tablet. It is too meagre to catch the attention of a stranger without direction. Perhaps that is best. For even the most glorious work of men's hands would fail to be fit memorial of him whose monument is half the inhabited world

It is not to much to say that Columbus owes his grand success to his unselfish unity of purpose. There was no want of breadth in his character to canker the fair fame of his benefaction to the world. We find no fault in him. When smaller men tried to rise upon the ruin of his credit, he took it quietly, and forgave it without scorn. There is not one imperfection to limit our reverence for his memory. The son of a humble Genoese wool-comber, he left his children a distinction prouder than a pedigree of the bluest blood. His education was the best his father could afford. From the earliest, his chief fancy was for the sea -a fact in which his simple piety recognised the original of that Divine guidance which afterwards led him to discover the New World.

After serving in ships of war, under one of his own relations, at the age of five-and-thirty Columbus was attracted to Lisbon by the fame of the Portuguese discoveries, and the scientific patronage of the young and amiable Prince Henry of Portugal. There he married a countrywoman of his own, whose father was one of the prince's seaman, and governor of the Island of Porto Santo. For awhile he made voyages to the Portuguese possessions on the coast of Guinea, chiefly with the view of HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 35 penetrating to India by the East. At the same time, from a theory of the spherical form of the earth, which he had founded on Ptolemy's globe and the chart of Marinus of Tyre, he conceived the idea of reaching India, and perhaps more, by way of the West. From this beginning arose the great work of his life. Once convinced in his own mind, he never afterwards hesitated, or doubted, or lost sight of his design.

His deep religious instinct served to elevate and confirm his purpose, with a sense little short of Divine inspiration. He saw himself foretold, in the prophecies of the Old Testament, as destined to bring together all nations and languages under the banner of the Redeemer. The power of his ruling passion showed itself outwardly, in the quiet dignity and authority of his demeanour. He was ready to spend himself and be spent for the success of his plans. And neither arguments, nor entreaties, nor even tears, could shake his convictions or turn him aside from his projects.

The baldest sketch of his great life would be too long for the present paper. Its history cannot be condensed without injury. Washington Irving's charming work is within the reach of all readers. writers have differed from his well-known conclusions as to the island first seen by the discoverers. In the "Landfall of Columbus," by Capt. Beecher, R. N., of the Hydrographic Office, Admiralty, the whole question is carefully examined and set at rest. To this the interested may refer with satisfaction, for accounts of the various fortunes through which this great navigator went, and the difficulties that he overcame; till, after long delay, his expedition was fitted out at the little port of Palos, in Andalusia, under the countenance of Ferdinand and Isabella, sovereigns of Castile: and, amid the tears and dismay of relations, he sailed with three vessels and a complement of not more than a hundred men in all, on Friday, the 3d of August, 1492, "half an hour before sunrise.

More than two months of westward sailing over the "Sea of Darkness" brought them to the Bahama Banks. Many times the superstitions of the sailors perilled the success of the expedition, and even the life of the admiral. At last, from natural signs, they deemed that they drew near to the land; mutinous tempers grew calm; all When day broke, on hearts took courage. Friday, 12th October, they found themselves at an island, called by the natives Guanahani, which Colnmbus henceforth "named San Salvador, in remembrance of that Almighty Power which had so miraculously" It is styled now, by showed it to him. Europeans, Watling Island, after a certain buccaneer captain. The San Salvador of modern maps is falsely so called.

This was the discovery of the New World. The fabled Cipango, by which some have understood Japan, and the mainland of India, had yet to be reached. For these the admiral continued to search, drawn towards west or east at the sight of larger islands opening up in the horizon, till he came to Cuba, "which I believe" said he,

"must be Cipango."

Here I leave him. He had succeeded in his great aim. Before his death he made three more voyages across the Atlantic to the newly discovered Indies. After two years of sickness, he died, in Spain, on the 26th May, 1506, and was buried in the Convent of San Francisco, at Valladolid. Seven years later, his body was removed to the Monastery of Cartujos de las Cuevas, in Seville. From there, according to a wish expressed in his last will, it was taken to the West Indies, and buried by the altar in the Cathedral of San Domingo. In 1795, when that island was given up to France, his remains were transferred from San Domingo to Cuba, and rest finally on the right side of the high-altar in the Cathedral in the city of the Havana.

The personal appearance of Columbus was not a bad index of his character. His general air expressed the authority which he knew so well how to exercise. His lightgrey eyes kindled easily at subjects of interest. He was tall and well-for ned. His complexion was fair and freckled, and inclined to ruddy. Trouble soon turned his light hair grey, and at thirty years of age it was quite white. Moderate in food, and simple in dress, temperate in language, bearing himself with courteous and gentle gravity, religious without being a formalist, repressing his irritable temper with a lofty piety, he was the model of a Christian gentleman. The devout reference of his successes to the Divine favor, with which he concludes the report of his first voyage to the sovereigns of Castile, is highly characteristic of the man.

"This is certain," he writes, "that the Eternal God our Lord gives all things to those who obey Him, and the victory when it seems impossible, and this evidently is an instance of it, for although people have talked of these lands, all was conjecture, unless proved by seeing them, for the greater part listened and judged more by hearsay than by anything else.

"Since, then, our Redeemer has given this victory to our illustrious king and queen, and celebrated their reigns by such a great thing, all Christendom should rejoice and make great festivals, and give thanks to the Blessed Trinity, with solemn praises for the conversion of so much people to our faith."

THE FIRST BOOK EVER PRINTED IN PHILADELPHIA.

A. D. 1685.

At the May meeting of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the following letter was read by Horatio G. Jones, Esq., Cor. Sec. It was addressed to him by the Hon. John William Wallace, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Society, who at the time was spending a few days at Newport, R. I.:

NEWPORT, R. I., April 21st, 1864.

DEAR SIR: I know the interest with which you pursue every inquiry which concerns either the honor of the press or the honor of Pennsylvania, and am sure you will hear with pleasure of my discovery in this ancient town of the first volume ever issued from the press of the Middle Colonies; a tract printed in our own city in the year 1685.

This volume was the subject of some remark by me in New York in May last on the celebration by the Historical Society there of the Bradford Bicentenary, but I had then never seen it, nor seen anybody who had. I knew but little about it. I referred to it, however, as follows:

The earliest issue of Bradford's press known to me is an Almanac for the year 1686, produced of course in 1685. One copy alone seems to have survived to this day, and that one has wandered far from the place of its origin. New England boasts its possession. It was called America's Messenger. A certain Samuel Atkyns edited it. Among the remarkable events which were set down opposite to particular days, there was set down opposite to that one on which Mr. Penn assumed control of things in Pennsylvania, the following entry: "The beginning of Government here by the LORD PENN." This title of courtesy given to their Governor was offensive to the Provincial Magistracy. Atkyns was summoned before the Council and ordered to blot out the words "Lord Penn," and Bradford was warned "not to print anything but what shall have lycence from the Council."

Behold! a second copy now turns up; I may say most fortunately turns up, since that copy to which I referred when in New York, as still in existence, cannot be found. Within a few years it has perished, apparently, to the world forever! The second copy, now discovered, is in the possession of DAVID KING, M. D., of this place—a gentleman not more advantageously known in the walks of medical science than in the departments of literature, history and social life. I have the tract now before me in his hospitable house. It is one of twenty pages duodecimo, well printed, and on paper much better than most which now absorbs the ink of Almanacks. The motives which the editor, ATKYNS, who styles himself 'Student in Mathematicks and Astrology,'—and who in our day of greater titles would have doubtless been 'Professor' in those arts-had to prepare the Kalendar, are stated in a preface written by himself. I make you an extract from it on the spot, and while I sit at Dr. King's table:

TO THE READER.

places, not only in this province but likewise in Maryland & elsewhere, & the people generally complaining that they scarcely knew how the time passed nor that they hardly knew the Day of Rest or Lord's Day, when it was,-for want of a Diary or Day-Book which we call an Almanack

I say hearing this general complaint from such abundance of Inhabitants which are here, I was, really troubled; and did design according to that small knowledge which I had, to pleasure these my countrymen, with that which they wanted; although it be not completed in that method which I did intend it should be. Beside the table of Kings &c I had thoughts to have incerted a figure of the moon's eclipse; a small draught of the form of this city, & a Table to find the hour of the day, by the shadow of a staff; but we not having tools to carve them in that form that I would have them, nor time to calculate the other, I pass it for this year, & not only promise it in the next, but likewise several more particular notes & observations which shall not only be useful to this Province but likewise to the neighboring provinces on both sides. In the meantime accept this, my mite; being my first fruits; & you will encourage me according to my ability to serve you in what I may or can,-while I am

SAMUEL ATKYNS 10th Month 1685

Our old friend, BRADFORD, too, looms up largely through the mist of centuries, as indeed he always does wherever in the visions of our early press we see him at all. We here have an account by the very man himself (how little he thought that you and I should ever see it!) of the introduction of printing into the vast region which now constitutes the Middle States! It bears incontestible evidence-any one familiar with his style of writing will see-of having come from his own pen. It reads thus:

THE PRINTER TO THE READERS.

Hereby understand that after great charge & Trouble, I have brought that GREAT ART & MYSTERY OF PRINTING into this part of I have sojourned in & through several | America; believing it may be of great service to you in several respects; hoping to find encouragement, not only in this Almanack, but what else I shall enter upon for the use & service of the Inhabitants of these Parts. Some irregularities there be in this Diary, which I desire you to pass by this year; for being lately come hither, my materials were misplaced & out of order. whereupon I was forced to use Figures & Letters of various Sizes, but understanding the want of something of this nature; & being importuned thereto, I ventured to make public this; desiring you to accept thereof; & by the next (as I find encouragement) shall endeavor to have things compleat. And for the ease of Clarks, Scriveniers, &c., I propose to print blank Bills, Bonds, Letters of Attorney, Indentures, Warrants, etc., & what else presents itself, wherein I shall be ready to serve you; and W. BRADFORD, remain your frind.

Philadelphia, the 28th. 10th month, 1685.

Among the items of interest in the Almanack is a Chronology. Mr. Atkyns, however, like a wise man, keeps on this side of the Flood, which he fixes as a starting point—thus:

"The flood of Noah, 3979 years" (before the Almanack.)

Next comes:

"The building of London, 2793 years" (before the Almanack.)

Like a good Englishman, however, he puts the building of London several years before

- "The building of Solomon's Temple, 2702" (before the Almanack.)
  - And, of course, before
- "The building of Rome, 2438" (before the Almanack.)

It was in this "Chronology" that he had placed

"The beginning of government here by the LOBD Penn," 5 (before the Almanack.)

And a "visum corporis" of Dr. King's copy shows that, sure enough, Bradford did actually "blot out" the words "Lord Penn." A three em quad, well inked from the ball, is stamped over both the words, which in Dr. King's copy are wholly illegible; and in the Errata we find "By reason of our making so much haste, some faults have escaped the press. The most material take as followeth... In the Chronology read, 'The beginning of government here by William Penn, Proprietor and Governor, 6 years.'"

The title of the Almanack, which I give you as a bibliographical and historic record, runs as follows:

KALENDARIUM PENNSILVANIENSE,

AMERICA'S MESSENGER, Being an ALMANACK For the Year of Grace 1686.

Wherein is contained both the English and Forragn account; the motions of the Planets through the Signs, with the luminaries, conjunctions, aspects, eclipses; the rising, southing and setting of the moon, with the time when she passeth by or is with the most eminent fixed stars; sun rising and setting and the time of High Water at the City of Philadelphia, &c. With Chronologies and many other Notes, Rules, and Tables very fitting for every man to know and have: All which is accommodated to the Longitude of the Province of Pennsilvania: Longitude of 40 Degr. North; with a table of Houses for the same, which may indifferently serve New England, New York, East and West Jersey, Maryland, and North parts of Virginia.

BY SAMUEL ATKYNS,
Student in the Mathematics and Astrology.

And the stars in their courses fought against Sesera.—Judg. v, 29.

Printed and sold by William Bradford. Sold also by the Author and H. Murray in Philadelphia, and Philip Richards in New York, 1685.

The accomplished wife of Dr. King has promised that she will have a copy of this Almanack made for our Historical Society, page for page. When I receive it I shall send it to you for the Society.

I am, with respect, dear sir,

Your obedient servant,
J. W. WALLACE,
To Horatio Gates Jones, Esq., Philadelphia.

Hotes and Queries.

NOTES.

THE TRISTRAM COFFIN MEDAL.—Several years ago, I, with some other little boys, was whiling away a summer afternoon, in the delightful employment of digging holes in my father's door-yard and filling them with water, which holes thus filled we dignified with the name of "wells." While engaged in excavating a "well" which was to be a grand affair, and which I had already sunk to the depth of a foot or more, I struck upon something smooth and glistening, and soon brought up de profundis a medal of large size which was regarded by us all as an object of great curiosity, and led to many childish speculations as to the manner in which it came to be buried in this locality. Well-digging ceased to interest us from that moment, and we forthwith became a company of money-diggers. Although our further efforts were unsuccessful, yet the appearance of the door-yard when we ceased our operations was more suggestive of a ploughed field than of a well kept grass-plat. My recollection of the appearance of this medal. which I have not seen for twenty five years, is this. On the obverse was the effigy of a man in the dress of a cavalier. The hat on his head was adorned with a feather; the wrists were surrounded with ruffles; the trousers were met at the knee by long stockings; and the feet were enclosed in buckled shoes. The legend was in these words :--"Tristram Coffin, the first of the race that settled in America." On the reverse were two hands clasped, the wrists ending in ruffles, but the legend if there was any I do not remember. In size the medal was larger than a crown piece, and was struck either in silver, tin or white metal. At that time a young man by the name of Coffin was a clerk in my father's office, and to him, on my father's suggestion, I gave the medal. Since then I have often made inquiries as to the origin and history of this memorial piece, but have never yet seen a satisfactory account of it. That Tristram Coffin was the first of his race that settled in America. there can be no doubt. In the second volume of the New England Genealogical Register may be found statements respecting his history, and in Dr. F. B. Hough's compilation of "Papers relating to the island of Nantucket," a copy of his signature is given, several of his letters are presented, and his importance as one of ten owners of Martha's Vineyard and as a local magistrate is recorded. If my friend who has the piece which rewarded my early efforts in well-digging, or if any of your readers can throw light on this subject, the information will afford me much pleasure.

B. H. H.

Troy, May 25, 1864.

WHY THE REBELS ARE CALLED " JOHN-NIES."-In 1861 the Federal Soldiers called the rebels "Secesh;" in 1862, "Confeds;" in 1863, "Greybacks," and in 1864 they call them "Johnnies." A correspondent gives us the following information about the origin of the last-named sobriquet: The name of Johnny originated in a quarrel between a couple of pickets, which begun by the Federal telling the rebel that they (the rebels) depended on England to get out of this scrape, which the rebel denied emphatically, saying they were able to scrape themselves out. One word brought on another, until the Federal said his opponent was no better than a Johnny Bull anyhow; the Reb swore he would shoot Yank if he called him a Johnny Bull again. The quarrel was stopped by another picket, and they soon cooled down, but the Reb kept muttering "I'd as soon be called a nigger as Johnny Bull."

Book-Collectors.—St. Isidore the Pelusite was wont to call the wrath of heaven upon the book-collectors of his day. We, who are no saints, occasionally indulge in similar imprecations, and, we hope, always for a good cause. The fact is, that wealth, since the Roxburg sale—a sale, as our readers doubtless recollect, where opulent and lively noblemen amused themselves with bidding 2260 guineas on a Boccacio, which the unsuccessful competitor a short time thereafter bought for one-third of that sum —wealth, we say, has become a crying evil. It prompts and enables men who formerly turned their attention toward collecting snuff-boxes and antique snuffers to monopolize every valuable book which comes within their reach—not for the purpose of reading it themselves, or of enabling some penniless scholar to peruse its contents, but to keep it under lock and key, in the dark, at the bottom of a huge box, until, themselves being dead, and, we trust, in the bottomless pit, a gay heir exhumes the book, and gracefully hands it to the nearest auctioneer.

THE BUFFALO QUESTION.—I do not remember to have noticed in your columns a quotation from Schoolcraft in regard to the Indian or original name of the city of Buffalo. In part IV, p. 563, I find the follow-

"In one of the earlier treaties with the Six Nations, it is called Tehoseroron. By Mrs. Kerr, a daughter of Joseph Brant, it was pronounced Te-ho-se-ro-ro. Both these forms of pronunciation are Mohawk. The Senecas, the true occupants of the stream, called it Dyosewa and Tushewa. The meaning appears, in all cases, to be the place of basswood—a tree common to this stream in early times."

FORT ST. PHILIP.—The Baron de Carondelet, describing to the Duke de la Alcudia what he had done for Louisiana, which he found utterly defenceless, says: "I erected at the mouth of the river a fort named St. Philip, which entirely prevents the passage of hostile vessels however numerously they present themselves." He was not the only one who overrated its powers.

THE FIRST SLAVE IN CANADA.—It is a curious fact that the English introduced slavery into Canada during their brief occupation of that Colony in the 17th century. A little negro boy from Madagascar was brought to Quebec and sold for fifty crowns by the Kirks to a settler named Le Bailly.—Jesuit Relations, 1632, 1633.

QUERIES.

USEFUL ANIMALS OF AMERICA .- It is desired to ascertain the ranges of the principal animals used for food or peltry by the Indians of North America at the earliest periods known, and also at subsequent times, with a view not only to their original habit at, but to the progress of extinction, &c. Among these animals may be mentioned the buffalo, musk, ox, caribou or reindeer, moose (alces Americana); elk (cervus canadensis); big-horn sheep (ovis montana); mountain goat (aploceras Americana) the beaver, otter &c. Among the birds, the range of the wild turkey and the different species of grouse are to be sought. I can myself furnish some particulars on this subject, and solicit information from others, with dates, authority, &c.

THE TEN ORATORS OF ATHENS.—Valerius Harpocration, a Greek rhetorician of Alexandria, was the author of a work, of which the first edition appeared at Venice, in 1503, entitled "Lexicon Decem Oratorum." "Lexicon of the Ten Orators, giving an account of many of the persons and facts mentioned in the discourses of the principal orators of Athens. I do not find the work in any library, although the Astor Library contains two others of that author. Can any subscriber give a clue to a copy.

BECKFORD—TRECOTHICK.—There were about 1770 two Americans of these names who were Lords Mayor of London and members of Parliament. Where can I find details as to them?

PENNSYLVANIA ACT OF 1711 PROHIBITING SLAVERY.—Can any reader of the Historical Magazine state whether this act has of late been discovered, and tell where a copy can be found. The act was concealed in England, and has been supposed to be lost. In the present investigations into the history of slavery in the northern colonies, this act should be discovered if possible.

M. H. G.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE FOLLOWING OR IMITATION OF CHRIST BY THOMAS à KEMPIS.—A gentleman in Belgium is engaged on a Bibliography of this work, and it would be interesting to gather in the columns of the Magazine the full titles of American Editions. Several versions have been represented here, one "by a female hand," those of Bishop Cheverus, John Payne, Dibdin, The Oxford Tractarians, and a recent Catholic one.

The following may be mentioned as a commencement:

1749

The | Imitation | of Jesus Christ, | being an | abridgment of the Works | of | Thomas & Kempis, | By a Female Hand. | London: Printed MDCCXLIV. | Germantown: Reprinted, by | Christopher Sower, 1749.

Three Books only. 8° 278 pp

1805

An edition of Challoner's translation was issued by Carey, of Philadelphia, but the title, size, &c., are required.

1810

The | Following of Christ, | in four books. | Written in Latin, | by Thomas & Kempis. | Translated into English, by the Rt. | Rev. Father in God, | Richard Challoner, D. D. | Bishop of Debra, and v. a. | The Second American Edition. | Published with the approbation of the Rt. Rev. | Archbishop Carroll. | Baltimore: | Printed for Bernard Dornin, and sold at | his Roman Catholic Library, 30, | Baltimore Street. | G. Dobbin and Murphy, Print, 1810 24° pp 246

1816

The | Imitation of Christ: | in three books. | Translated from the Latin | of | Thomas à Kempis | By John Payne | . Manlius, (N. Y.) Printed by Leonard Kellogg | 1816.

12° 231 pp a to z a2 to T2

Can titles of any other early editions be given?

MARRIAGES IN NEW ENGLAND.—When did marriages in New England begin to be celebrated before a clergyman? A French work on marriage in the United States supposes the marriage to have been always so solemnized by a minister. An Act of Barebones' Parliament in 1653 made a magistrate necessary, and in 1656 the intervention of a minister was allowed.

Dogs.—How many breeds of dogs are indigenous to North America, and at what dates, and in what works are they first noticed in different parts of the country?

G. G.

COX FAMILY OF QUEENS CO. LONG IS-LAND.—Who was the American Ancestor of this family and when did he arrive in the country?

REPLIES.

Indian Works by Mother Mary of the Incarnation. (Vol. v, 349; Vol. vi page 36).—The recent work "Les Ursulines de Québec," (Quebec, 1863) on page 147 gives the fate of these manuscripts, "As our venerable mother has made them for the good of the Indians and they could no longer be useful to us in this respect, it was supposed that her views were carried out, when forty years ago, they were given to missionaries going to the northern tribes."

It is deeply to be regreted that the Ursulines thus parted with such a relic of their foundress; the papers could have been of little or no use to the missionaries, and were probably lost or thrown aside as worthless. In a scientific point of view, however the loss is irreparable. They were the last known work of any size extant on the pure Algonquin of the St. Lawrence, a language now so entirely lost that philologists have no standard of reference except the vocabulary of the charlatan La Hontan. The Algonquin of the Lake of the Two Mountains is Nipissing and Chippeway and differs essentially from the original Algonquin.

Isaac Low, (Vol. VIII. p. 185).—All that is now known of this worthy who was the last Colonial President of the Chamber of Commerce, and went out with the British in 1783, is to be found in Charles King's Sketch of the History of the Chamber. Isaac and Nicholas Low were brothers. Isaac had a son Isaac who was Commissary General of Subsistence in the British Army, resident at Lyndhurst in New Forest, Hants, he died a few years since. Nicholas Low espoused the American cause and lived here. He died in 1827 much respected.

J. A. S., JR.

KILLICK, (Vol. VIII. p. 78).—Bartlett in his Dictionary explains this to be a small anchor, and cites New England authors for its use. It would seem then not to be a Dutch but a New England coinage.

MAJOR JOHN WHISTLER, (Vol. VIII. p. 185).—A son of this officer graduated at the West Point Military Academy some years ago. See West Point Register. G. G.

Societies and their Proceedings.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SCIETY.—Chicago, June 21, 1864.—The regular monthly meeting was held, W. H. Brown, Esq., President pro tempore.

Among the reported collections for the past month (293) were valuable publications of the Sanitary Commission received from Washington, Cleveland, Louisville and Springfield. From the army, many valuable gifts were forwarded; L. H. Evarts sending from Chattanooga the journal of a rebel "private;" A. M. Hyde, from Memphis, forms for the purchase of "plantation supplies;" several "War Maps," recently published by the U. S. Coast Survey office, were forwarded by Hon. I. N. Arnold; from the "Swea" (Swedish) Society of Chicago were received extensive files of the daily morning and evening newspapers of Stockholm, Sweden, carefully preserved by the Society.

There were received for the month 23 letters, and written 54. Besides letters of business among those accompanying donations, were read letters from Col. Augustus B. Sage, of New York, on presenting an autograph letter of Daniel D.

Tompkins, Governor of New York during the war of 1812-1815; and from Amos M. Hyde, U. S. A., Memphis, on forwarding forms of "Treasury Regulations" in captured territory.

Gen. J. A. Clark, U. S. Surveyor-General of New Mexico, presented to the Society a remarkable scalp of a Navajo Indian of New Mexico, the origin and history of which were given in a letter of David-J. Miller, "translator of the office," also presented; besides which, General Clark gave in writing the following Interesting accounts of the Navajo Indians, who have been the scourge of New Mexico for more than two centuries:

"The tribe to which the Indian belonging from whose head this scalp was taken, is in some respects peculiar. Until within the past three months, they have occupied—rather, roamed over -all that tract of country, with inconsiderable exception, extending from near the 107th to 111th meridian, and from the 34th to the 37th parallel of latitude. They have resisted, with the most stubborn pertinacity, the progress of civilization, and have been, for the greater part of the time for more than two hundred years, in a state of war with the whites. The Spaniards and Mexicans made numerous campaigns against them, but never con-quered them. They have been the terror of the inhabitants of New Mexico, from its first settlement, stealing immense quantities of stock, and murdering annually many of the people. In this way they have accumulated large flocks of sheep and of goats, and large herds of horses, asses and mules. They cultivate the earth—raising consider-able quantities of wheat, corn, beans, melons, pumpkins, &c. They also manufacture a very superior blanket, and a coarse woolen cloth with which they clothe themselves.

It is supposed they were once "Pueblos," living in town; but since the settlement of New Mexico—or, for more than two centuries—they have had no fixed habitations. Their dwellings are huts, constructed of brush, covered in the winter with grass and blankets, which they abandon whenever prompted by inclination or interest. They have also been found living in caves in the rocks on the sides of deep cañons.

Several campaigns have been made against them by our troops since we acquired the territory, and treaties made with them; but peace has never continued for any considerable length of time. During the past year, Gen. Carleton, in command of the department of New Mexico, has carried on a war against them and inaugurated the policy of removing them from this country to a reserve, which has been set apart for their use, on the Pecos river, about two hundred miles southeast from Santa Fe; and has been so far successful that, at last accounts, over five thousand had been gathered there, and it is confidently reported that the remainder—numbering one or two thousand—will submit, and go upon the reserve in the course of the present summer. When this is accomplished we hope to have a permanent peace, and that these Indians will be speedily converted again into "Pueblos."

A school has been established upon the reserve, for the education of the children, and a chapel built, and a priest stationed among them to attend to their spiritual wants. If Government will now do its duty, I believe that in ten years this wild tribe will be as far advanced in civilization as the Pueblos of New Mexico now are; and producers, instead of threateners and devastators of New Mexico.

An interesting communication was received and read, from J. A. Lapham, LL. D., of Milwaukee, submitted some remarks and inquiries relative to Council Hill (six miles east of Galena, Illinois), recently visited by the writer, and adding a valuable schedule of Indian Treaties, from 1804 to 1837. The main purport of the letter was the desire to identify the particular "council" from which the hill recived its name, the treaty of 1828 being suggested as possibly the one.

A valuable communication was then read from Hooper Warren, Esq., who edited the Edwards-ville Spectator in 1819, and still lives in Henry, Illinois, at the advanced age of seventy-four years. Mr. Warren referred to several subjects of interest in the past history of Illinois, and expressed his readiness to assist the Society's designs. The Secretary stated that he had, in the Society's behalf, requested Mr. Warren to prepare a candid memorial of the so-called Black Laws of Illinois, explaining their origin, and justifying or extenuating causes, as well as furnishing a brief analysis of the laws themselves. Such a memorial was thought due from the surviving actors in our Illinois history, in justice both to the past and to the future.

The Secretary then called attention to a paper prepared by Mr. Warren, and printed in the Henry Courier, in April, 1864, relating to the "Two per cent Fund," on which is a pending discussion between the authorities of Illinois and the United States Government. Mr. Warren revived certain historical facts relative to that fund, throwing some doubt on the justice of the claims made in behalf of Illinois.

The Secretary was authorized to intermit the monthly meetings during the summer months. The Society then adjourned.

MASSACHUSETTS.

MASSACHUSETTS HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Boston, July 14th.—At the monthly meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society held at their rooms after the transaction of the usual business the President, the Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, spoke as follows:—

When we were last assembled here, gentlemen, at our stated monthly meeting, on the 9th day of June, our society, for the first time since its institution in 1791, had on its catalogue just a hun-HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 36

dred names of living members resident within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. An election at the previous meeting in May had at length completed the full number allowed by our charter, and on that day our roll was full.

At the head of that roll,—first in the order of seniority, and second, certainly, in nothing that could attract interest, respect, and veneration, stood the name of one who had been a member of the society during sixty-eight out of the seventy years of our corporate existence; who had witnessed our small beginnings; who had been associated with Belknap and Sullivan and Tudor and Minot, and the rest of the little band of our immediate founders, in all but our very earliest proceedings and publications; who for seventeen years long past had been our treasurer, and had repeatedly done faithful and valuable service as a member of our Executive and of our publishing committees; whose interest in our prosperity and welfare had known no suspension or abatement with the lapse of time; who had contributed liberally to the means by which our condition had of late been so largely improved, and our accommodations so widely extended; and who so often, during the very last years of his eventful and protracted life, had lent the highest interest to our meetings by his venerable presence, and by his earnest and impressive participation in our discussions and doings.

You all remember, I am sure, how proudly he marshalled the way for us into this beautiful Dowse Library, when its folding-doors were first thrown open seven or eight years ago, and when it might so well have been said of him—

"The monumental pomp of age
Was with this goodly personage;
A stature undepressed in size,
Unbent, which rather seemed to rise
In open victory o'er the weight
Of eighty years, to loftier height."

You all remember how impressively he reminded us, not long afterwards, at that memorable meeting on the death of our lamented Prescott, that he became a member of this Society the very year in which that illustrious Historian was born.

You all remember, how playfully he observed, a few years later, when seconding the nomination of the late Lord Lyndhurst as one of our Honorary members, that the same nurse had served in immediate succession for the infant Copley and himself, and that she must certainly have given them both something very good to make them live so long.

You all remember, how pleasantly he recalled to us that earliest reminiscence of his own infancy, when, being taken by his widowed mother out of Boston while it was in the joint possession of the British army and of a pestilence even more formidable than any army, he was stopped at the lines to be smoked, for fear he might communicate contagion to the American troops who were besieging the town ing the town.

You have not forgotten that delightful meeting beneath his own hospitable roof, on the eightythird anniversary of the battle of Lexington, the guns of which might have startled his own infant slumbers,—when he read to us so many interesting memoranda from the manuscript diaries of his patriot father, in regard to events which led to the establishment of our National Independence.

Still less can any of you have forgotten his personal attendance here only a few months since, when, with an evident consciousness that he had come among us for the last time, he presented to us several most interesting and valuable historical documents,—at this moment passing through the press,—which he had recently observed among his private papers; which he thought might possibly have come into his possession as one of our Publishing Committee more than half a century ago and which, with the scrupulous exactness which characterized him through life, he desired to deliver up to us personally, before it should be too late for him to do so

No wonder, my friends, that we always welcomed his presence here with such eager interest. No wonder that with so much pleasure we saw him seated, from time to time, in yonder Washington chair, hitherto reserved for him alone,-for he alone of our number had ever personally seen and known that "foremost man of all the world." No wonder that we cherished his name with so much pride at the head of our roll, as an histori. cal name, linking us, by its associations with the living as well as with the dead, to the heroic period of our Revolutionary struggle. And no wonder, certainly, that we all feel deeply to-day, when we are assembled to receive the official announcement of his death, that a void has been created in our ranks, and in our hearts, which, in our day and generation, can hardly be filled.

I have spoken of his name as an historical name; and I need hardly say, that it would have been so, even had it been associated with no other career than his own. His own fortunate and remarkable life,-embracing the whole period of our existence thus far as a nation, and covering more than a third of the time since the earliest colonial settlement of New England,-a life crowded with the most varied and valuable public service, and crowned at last with such a measure of honor, love, and reverence as rarely falls to the lot of humanity, -was sufficient in itself to secure for him an historical celebrity, even while he still lived. But, indeed, his name had entered into history, while he was yet an unconscious child. In a letter of the Rev. Dr. William Gordon's, dated on the 26th of April, 1775, and contained in his contemporaneous History of the Rise, Progress, and Establishment of the Independence of America, will be found the following passage :-

"My friend Quincy has sacrificed his life for the sake of his country. The ship in which he sailed arrived at Cape Anne within these two days: but he lived not to get on shore, or to hear and triumph at the account of the success of the Lexington engagement. His remains will be honorably interred by his relations. Let him be numbered with the patriotic heroes, who fall in the cause of liberty; and let his memory be dear to posterity. Let his only surviving child, a son of about three years, live to possess his noble virtues, and to transmit his name down to future generations."

Nor can we fail to recall, in this connection, those most remarkable words in the Last Will and Testament of that patriot father, whose career was as brilliant as it was brief, and whose premature death was among the severest losses of our early revolutionary period:—

"I give to my Son, when he shall arrive to the age of fifteen years, Algernon Sidney's Works, John Locke's Works, Lord Bacon's Works, Gordon's Tacitus, and Cato's Letters. May the spirit of Liberty rest upon him!"

Such was the introduction to history of him whose life is just closed. Such were the utterances in regard to him, while he was yet but of infant years. How rarely is it vouchsafed to any one to fulfill such hopes and expectations! Yet now that he has left us, at almost a patriarch's age, these words seem to have been prophetic for the career which awaited him, and we could hardly find a juster or a more enviable inscription for his monument than to say, that "he lived to possess the noble virtues of his father and to transmit his name down to future generations," and that "the spirit of liberty did indeed rest upon him."

It is not for me, however, gentlemen, to attempt even a sketch of the career or character of our departed associate and friend. I had indeed been permitted to know him for many years past, as intimately, perhaps, as the difference of our ages would allow. As I attended his remains a few days since, as one of the pall-bearers,-a distinction which was assigned me as your President,-I could not forget how often, at least forty years before, when he was the next-door neighbor of my father's family, I had walked along with him, hand in hand, of a summer or a winter morning, -he on his way to the City Hall as the honored Mayor of Boston, and I, as a boy, to the Public Latin School just opposite. From that time to this I have enjoyed his acquaintance and his friendship, and have counted them among the cherished privileges of my life. But there are those of our number, and some of them present with us to day, who have been associated with him as I have never been, in more than one of his varied public employments, and who can bear personal testimony to the fidelity and ability with which he discharged them.

We may look in vain, it is true, for any of the personal associates of his early career as a statesman. He had outlived almost all the cotemporaries of his long and brilliant service in our State and National Legislatures. But associates and witnesses are still left of his vigorous and most successful administration of our Municipal affairs, and of his faithful and devoted labors for sixteen years as President of our beloved University. Meantime, the evidences of his literary and intellectual accomplishments are familiar to us all, in his History of the University, in his History of the Athenæum, in his Municipal History of Boston, in his Biographies of his ever honored father and of his illustrious friend and kinsman, John Quincy Adams, and in so many speeches, addresses, and essays, upon almost every variety of topic, historical, political, literary, social, and moral.

We may follow him back, indeed, to the day when he was graduated with the highest honors at the university, of which he lived to be the oldest Alumnus, and we shall never find him idle or unemployed; nor ever fail to trace him by some earnest word or some energetic act. Everywhere we shall see him a man of untiring industry, of spotless integrity, of practical ability and sagacity, of the boldest independence and sturdiest self-reliance; a man of laborious investigation as well as of prompt action, with a ready pen and an eloquent tongue for defending and advocating whatever cause he espoused, and whatever policy he adopted. Even those who may have differed from him,—as not a few, perhaps, did,—as to some of his earlier or of his later views of public affairs, could never help admiring the earnest enthusiasm of character, and the unflinching courage, with which he clung to his own deliberate convictions of duty. Nor could any one ever doubt, that a sincere and ardent love of his country and of his fellowmen, of political and of human liberty, was the ruling passion of his heart.

And seldom, certainly, has there been witnessed among us a more charming picture of a serene and honored old age than that which he has presented during the last few years. Patient under the weight of personal infirmities; hopeful in the face of public dangers and calamities; full of delightful reminiscences of the past, and taking an eager interest in whatever might promote the welfare of the present; grateful to God for a long and happy life, and ready to remain or depart as it might please Him; he seemed, so far as human judgment might presume to pronounce, to have attained a full measure of that wisdom of which it is written: "Length of days is in her right hand, and in her left riches and honor."

Not many years ago he prepared an Agricultural Essay, which is now on our table. Not many months ago, and when he was on the eve of his ninety-second birthday, I met him at the Cambridge Observatory, coming to visit the institution which had been a special object of his interest and of his bounty, and to take a last look, as he said, at the great revealer of the stars. Still later, I found him in his own library reading Thucydides, and applying the matchless periods of Pericles to the dangers of our dear land, and to the heroic deaths of so many of our brave young men. Nothing seemed wanting to complete the picture of such an Old Age as was described by the great Roman orator, and exemplified by the great Roman Censor. Nor would it be easy to find a better illustration than his last years afforded, of those exquisite words in which the great Poet of the English Lakes has translated and expanded one of the most striking passages of that consummate Essay of Cicero:

"Rightly it is said
That man descends into the vale of years;
Yet have I thought that we might also speak,
And not presumptuously, I trust, of Age,
As of a final EMINENCE; though bare
In aspect and forbidding, yet a point
On which 'tis not impossible to sit
In awful sovereignty; a place of power,
A throne, that may be likened unto his,
Who, in some placed day of summer, looks Down from a mountain-top."

It only remains for me, gentlemen, to call your attention to the Resolutions of your Standing Committee, which will be reported by the Rev. Dr. Ellis.

Dr. Ellis then spoke as follows:-The members of this Society, representing all the interests and pursuits of our higher social, civil, and literary elements, may heartily engage in this sincere tribute to the honored and venerated Nestor of our fellowship. He was the object of our common regard, and that of no ordinary sort or measurement. We loved to see him in these halls, if only as a silent listener; feeling that he helped us largely to realized history, and to connect the years that are gone by, their best memories and virtues, with our own living days. We loved more to hear his firm voice, as he stood erect under his burden of years, assuring to us an unchanging individual identity. We waited upon his always authentic and instructive utterances whether from the stores of a faithful memory, or from those almost printed manuscripts on which he had inscribed the terse matter, brief and full, which he had to communicate. Now that his own lips are closed, and we can no longer hold that delightful converse with him in which he made the men and the events of the two generations behind us to live with all their glow of vitality, we must look to books to tell us what was his own place and influence among them. He has told many of us his first recollection—a memory that might well stamp itself deep and strong of his looking out from a carriage on the British redcoats at their lines on Roxbury neck, a child of three years, when his mother, the widow of his patriot father, was among the last allowed to leave this then beleaguered town. He has prepared with his own pen the full autobiographic record of that part of his life which covers his political career, with its antagonisms, its sharp party strifes, its sympathies and antipathies for the soul of a good and true man. His own individuality in forming and holding to a conviction, of which the younger of us are not uninformed.

stands attested on the records alike of the National and State Legislature, where he is found in each place voting in a minority of one. Let us hope that we shall not have over long to wait for the full memorial of him from the most fitting hands and the closest confidential trust to which he committed all his private papers. We may assure ourselves that even when those papers deal with what is antiquated to us it will be in a way which will renew in them the fire and the vigor of life.

Besides a large number of pamphlets Mr. Quincy has contributed to our shelves seven substantial volumes of biography and history, the subjects of which cover the career of some of his own contemporaries, or relate the annals and fortunes of institutions in which he himself held conspicuous trusts and for which he did eminent service.

His long life was led through times and events of momentous interest, beginning and ending at revolutionary epochs, divided by nearly a century of years. His associates and correspondents all through his career were men of eminence, of place, and of high personal qualities. He was himself the equal of the best and ablest of them. The qualities of those times entered almost into his composition and organization; they wholly controlled and exercised the development of his character and the direction of his life. And while we share this common interest in him and in his career, there is hardly a member of this Society but had some special relationship of acquaintance or obligation with him, in his own private, professional, social or civil range. Mr. Quincy held a succession of offices which gave him more than a fractional headship over each of the learned professions, and a magisterial or advisory supervision of the various and most heterogeneous practical affairs of society. It is for that variety of service, performed uniformly with rare fidelity and with consummate ability, leaving permanent helps and advanced positions for all his successors. that we must speak of him with admiration and gratitude.

There is a stage or period in the development of every institution and organization, of progressive possibilities and capacities, when it needs the quickening or restorative skill of a man of practical energy, independent spirit, and firm will. One of the most characteristic distinctions of Mr. Quincy was his fitness for the successive offices which he filled at the time when he entered upon them and in the condition in which he found them. Critical and exacting were the demands and the responsibilities attending respectively the Chief Magistracy of this city and the presidency of the College when he assumed those trusts. He found City and College alike in transition states, from old methods, limited purposes, restricted means, inconveniences and embarrassments, to more expansive, generous and comprehensive possibilities, to the attainment of which they needed the foresight of a large directing mind, and the guidance of an independent and bold spirit.

This city is deeply indebted to Mr. Quincy for many of those admirable elements in its works of utility, its institutions, and its present principles of municipal administration, our own pride in which finds its full warrant in the encomiums they have received from over our whole land, and from abroad. Its streets, market, schools, and other public edifices testify that while he was providing wisely, though some thought rashly, for what to him was the present, he had in view the much larger demands—we all know now how reasonable and moderate the provision for them of a near future. Sometimes his schemes and plans were devised and pursued by his own fertility of faculty, under his own sole advocacy and resolute persistency of purpose. Sometimes he had the sympathy and cooperation of a few strong and wise supporters against sharp opposition from prominent individuals or a popular party. I never heard that in this office, or, indeed, in any other, he ever gave over any purpose or aim which he had proposed: nor can I recall a case in which any successor of his has undone his work. He loved what is good in popularity, and was utterly indifferent to the other ingredients of it:—being quite an independent judge as to what constituted those respective elements of popularity. Of course, a man of his always rigidly upright, often stern, and sometimes severe spirit in the works of reform and improvement, especially those into which he threw the most of his own earnestness and pride as their originator, would be sure to meet many opponents. His opponents might also become his personal enemies-a condition, however, contingent on his own feeling or judgment, as to whether he should or should not so regard them. The younger portion of us are told of his ardor, his impetuosity, his severity of sarcasm and rebuke in old political itrifes. We are the rather prepared to believe this when, besides assuring ourselves that in his earlier life men and measures engaged his attention which were likely to require just such treatment from a man of his rectitude and independence, we call before us his looks and tones as at times we have seen and heard him. He was compacted of Roman and Puritan virtues. allowing for the two meanings of virtue as preceded by either or both those epithets. He was able to stand the brunt of all the opposition which he provoked. He stood so clear of all imputations of sinister or selfish purpose, that when his schemes and enterprises were challenged be could give his whole advocacy to them without any incidental effort for self-defence. He saw some stormy days and was himself the subject of occasional hostility. He had to read the riot act, and to hear an angry mob surging threateningly near his own dwelling. The second line of an ode of his favorite Roman poet-civium ardor prava jubentium, must often have come to his lips, though not without generous variations for the word prava. But none of those citizens would have disputed to him the application of the whole of the first line, Justum and tenacem propositi virum; though they might have preferred to emphasise the Tenax propositi.

Having after six years of this city service declined to be a candidate for reelection as Mayor, he was ready for quite another sphere in the College, which was also in a condition to require wise and energetic oversight. He began there as he began everywhere, by acquainting himself with facts and phenomena, faults, needed changes, improvements, and the way and means for them, He puts things to rights. He asserted his headship. He renewed, invigorated, expanded, enriched every old department of the University, and added largely to its scope and resources. He sometimes stood between the students and the authorities. He always stood over the studentsharsh and imperious occasionally in word and aspect, faithful and friendly in counsel and feeling. They generally found out that the condition for respecting him was to understand him, and that the condition for loving him was to have no reason for being afraid of him. There are men doing noble service in all the professions around us whose charges were borne by his private benevolence, while their spirits were cheered by his rallying encouragement. The question I remember, was often discussed whether he had real strong sympathies for young men—could deal with them by wise allowances and gentle tolerances. Some said that having striven with politicians and presided over boards of Aldermen and Councilmen, and disciplined a Fire and a Police department, he sometimes confused the situation and mistook his measures in his academic sphere. Candor and justice will be satisfied with the judgment, that while there might have been reason for raising the question-which in fact was one likely to suggest itself-there was no reason for deciding the question in the slightest degree unfavorbly to the fitness, the grace, or the conspicuous success of his administration of the college. The living Alumni of his sixteen classes will not fail of bearing some form of testimony to this. It was characteristic of him that he should have written the History of the College down to his own time. The continuation of it will have a good start from him. Those beautiful appearances of his of late years on its public days, have been the joy of its Alumni, and have paid glorious tributes to him. Nor can one forget in connection with his life at Cambridge the generous and refined hospitalities of his home, discharged with such grace and dignity by that admirable lady who filled out the ideal of the old-school refinement and accomplishment.

We are sometimes helped to a knowledge of a man's excellencies by observing in him some of those characteristics which are called prejudices. One of those convictions held by Mr. Quincy was that it was an injury to our young men to travel or study in Europe. Many of his pupils can call to mind that on informing him of their purpose to go abroad, they received from him the frank avowal: "I am sorry for it. The chances are that you will be ruined by it. But I hope not." He had never been abroad. When he was most free to go he had no desire to do so. He was an American result of modified English antecedents. A true peer in nature and mien, unable to make himself honestly a democrat, he schooled himself to a special disciplinship of an independent republicanism. He thought that he and his country had got all of good that England had to give, and as for the other foreign nationalities and their ways, they certainly did not present to him their enviable side or qualities. Coming of a Puritan lineage, through an ancestral line which had discharged the trusts involved in the developing of a wilderness colony, onward to a self-governed commonwealth, he kept strong hold of the firm set pillars of the fabric. To a thoroughly sincere piety, and a most reverential tone of devotion, he joined a spirit of independent inquiry and a demand for reasonable convictions in matters of religion. No layman could at the time have been set over the University who could better than himself have softened the shock or the reminder of the change in usage and observance from a clerical headship.

The honors and labors of his life had a felicitous consummation mingled of dignity and of beauty. It presented one of those very rare cases in which providential allotments, combined with human conditions of the peculiarities of a marked indi-viduality gathered their finest garland for a crown of tranquil and revered old age. This afforded opportunities for the mellowing of character, for the turning of all sternness into a self-searching of principles, motives and actions, and for the vindication before all critical eyes of the well-tried integrity which had never faltered. The last decade of his years was numbered one by one, by some new token of the deepening interest and respect of our whole community. His calendar, as it advanced, was announced in the papers. The literary and oratorical fruits of his long harvest were credited to the verification of his own theory, that the way in which an old man should keep his mind from wearing out, was to keep it hard at work.

He had hoped that he might live to see the end of this fearful civil strife which convulses our land, and which so stirred the fire of his noble inborn, high taught patriotism. But whether or not that should be so, his faith outran his hope, and he believed that it could have but one possible end, and that a righteous one, leaving us still a nation, but chastened and purified. If any one asked him of the cause and purpose of the war, he would have been likely to referred his questioner to certain prophetic utterances of his own in the Congress of the United States, in January, 1811.

A full serenity of scene and feeling attended his release from life, by that rarest of all human experiences, a natural death: as the ripe fruit falls from the unshaken bough in the still air. He was waiting to be called and was just beginning to fear delay in the summons. He lived at last for simple rest, and musing on the gleanings of thought from his last readings of his favorite moralist and philosophers, Cicero and Lord Eacon, trusting his memory and his spirit for diviner nutriment. To the end he read and wrote. And because they were the last transcript from his pen he has enhanced the sweet and gracious piety of the lines of Addison, which he copied as his hand was losing its cunning:—

"When all thy meacies. O my God, My rising soul surveys — Transported with the view, I'm lost In wonder, love and praise!"

Dying in Quincy, receiving funeral honors in Boston, borne to his grave through Cambridge, and resting now on the slope of Havard Hill in Mount Auburn, we may share his own strong hope of immortality, and believe that his life is rounded by something better than a sleep.

The Rev. Dr. Kllis, from the Standing Committee, offered the following resolutions:—

tee, offered the following resolutions:—

Resolved. That in the death of Josiah Quincy—whose name has stood on our roll 68 years, and for the last seventeen years has led the list of our members,—this society shares in an especial manner in the feelings which have been manifested through our whole community. We honored him for the highest private virtues and for very many services to the public in the long succession and the large variety of the offices which he filled, and the trusts which he discharged. We recognized in him a combination of the hoblest principles which we venerate in the fathers of the commonwealth, and the elder patriots of the land who were also his friends. His lofty integrity, his large and wise public spirit, the utility of his enterprises and the practical benefits which are now enjoyed by us as their results, will assure to his name and memory enduring honors.

Resolved, That the President be requested to name one of our associates to prepare the usual memoir.

Mr. Everett in rising to second the resolutions of Dr. Ellis, said—

I have been requested, Mr. President, by the Standing Committee, to second the resolutions offered by Dr. Ellis, and I do it with the greatest pleasure, although his carefully prepared, just, and eloquent analysis of President Quincy's character and your own pertinent, feeling, and most impressive address have left me little to say. An opportunity will perhaps be afforded me next week of paying a tribute to his memory in another place; but I must ask your indulgence for a few moments at this time, to give utterance to the feelings which we all share, and which have been so eloquently expressed by the gentlemen who have preceded me.

You have, Mr. President, justly intimated the reasons for which President Quincy's decease should be noticed in the most respectful manner within these walls. He became a member of our Society in early life, and was considerably our Senior associate. He took a lively interest in the Society, and missed no opportunity of promoting its welfare, attending its meetings occasionally down to the last months of his protracted life. Besides this, he cooperated with the Society in its appropriate labors, enriching the literature of the country with a series of historical works of high and recognized value, two of them prepared at the instance of the Society. Still more, sir, it may be truly said, that he not only wrote history, but made it, in the sphere (and that a most diversified and elevated sphere) in which he moved, exhibiting through life those marked qualities, which, by sympathy, infuse moral strength into a community, and animate other men to the efforts, by which individuals and nations obtain an honorable place in the annals of mankind.

I have said, sir, that President Quincy's historical works had a high recognized value, and most certainly if his vigorous intellect, methodical stu-dies, his untiring industry, and his great facility of labor had borne no other fruit, the series of his historical publications would have given him, though not a man of letters by profession, a most respectable place among American authors. With the exception of Congressional speeches and occasional essays on the topics of the day, his first work of considerable compass was prompted at once by filial affection and patriotic duty, I mean the Memoir of his honored Father, one of the most distinguished of those, referred to by you, sir, who prepared the minds of their countrymen for the Revolution. He had the kindness to afford me an opportunity of perusing it in manuscript. It was appropriately published in 1825, at the close of the first half century. It contained the journals and copies of some of the letters of the lamented subject of the memoir, especially those written during his short visit to England in 1774-5—the last year of his life—and I can truly say that there is no volume, which to the present day I read with equal interest for the events of that memorable year, as contemplated by an eye-witness and such an eye witness-in England. He had theinestimable privilege of hearing the two speeches made byLord Chatham, on the 20th January, 1775, declared by his son, William Pitt, "to be surely the two finest speeches ever made, unless by himself." Of these speeches Mr. Quincy made a full report from memory, and a few notes he was able to take at the time. It is in some parts evidently a more accurate report than that published by Dodsley in 1779, after Lord Chatham's death, from notes by Hugh Boyd. Portions of Mr. Quincy's report were published in Gordon's letters on the Revolution, Mr. Quincy's papers having been placed in his hands while composing that work. The last entry in Mr. Quincy's journal is 'Had great satisfaction in reading my report of the debates in the House of Lords to one or two friends who heard them. They thought them exceedingly correct, and were amazed at the blunders, omissions, and misrepresentations of the printed accounts." President Quincy's memoir of his Father, also contains the journal of a visit made by him to Charleston, S. C., in 1773, and which is of ex-treme interest. This youthful patriot, as you have stated, sir, died on the return voyage from Europe, and within sight of the granite cliffs of New England; young in years alone, mature in wisdom, patriotism, and public service. When we reflect that he was taken from the country, at the age of 31, we cannot suppress the thought, that a gracious compensation was designed by Providence, in prolonging the years of the son to thrice that duration.

The History of the University is next in order of time, as it is the most voluminous and elaborate of President Quincy's works. It was suggested by the duty, which devolved upon him, on the memorable occasion of the second centennial anniversary of the institution. It was obviously, on the part of the President, a work at once of affection and duty. It embodies all those portions of the records of the University, which throw light on its general history, on its feeble but hopeful beginnings; its gradual development in the succeeding generations and in the last century; its rapid expansion in the present century. It exhibits the noble steadiness, with which Old Har-vard has maintained itself through the atorms of two centuries, and its reactive influence on the public opinion of the country. Especial pains was taken by President Quincy to do justice to the characters of the distinguished benefactors and patrons of the College, from the ever memorable Harvard to the present day. These and other pertinent and kindred topics are treated in his history in an appropriate detail, according to their respective interest and importance, in a clear and vigorous, and when the topic admitted, eloquent style of idiomatic English; the whole forminga repository which, next to the original records themselves, will constitute the standard authority for the history of the Institution, till its prosperous growth as we may hope through two more centuries shall require other volumes and other dutiful pens to record its multiplied benefactors, its extended usefullness, and ever growing honors.

President Quincy's next historical work of considerable compass, in the order of publication was the history of the town and city of Boston. Like the history of the University, this work grew out of an anniversary discourse, viz.: that which he delivered at the Second Centennial anniversary of the City. Suspended during his Presidency at Cambridge, its preparation was resumed inimediately upon his resignation of that high trust. This History, like that of the College, was truly a labor of love. The family of President Quincy had been identified with Boston from the foundation. His ancestor came over with John Cotton; and the position of his descendants had been maintained in honor and influence, through all the succeeding generations. His father had taken an active port in all the memorable occurrences, which had turned the eyes of the civilized world on Boston after the passage of the stamp act; the President himself, born and bred in Boston, had represented her in the State Legislature and in Congress; and in the infancy of the new civic organization he had served her at the head of its municipality for six years. Thus was he eminently a Bostonian of the Bostonians. The chief part of the work is naturally devoted to an account of the writer's administration, and of the series of measures relative to its public buildings, its markets, the elemosynary establishments, the fire department, the schools, and other municipal interests in which the public spirit, the executive ability, and moral courage displayed by Mayor Quincy cannot fail to awaken at once the admiration and gratitude of the citizens of Boston.

In 1845 appeared the revised edition of Graham's History of the United States. It was published under the superintendence of a committee of the Historical Society, consisting of President Quincy and two or three other respected members. The first volume of this work contained a memoir of James Graham, prepared in compliance with a resolution of the society by Mr. Quincy, and embodying all that is personally known of a writer who cherished a warm and consistent affection for this country, and did more than any other foreigner to extend the knowledge of it abroad.

In 1847, and being then at the advanced age of 75, Mr. Quincy, at the request of the late Mr. R. G. Shaw, prepared for publication the journals of their kinsman, Major Samuel Shaw, with a me-moir of his life. This most excellent gentleman not only served with great credit through the whole revolutionary war, receiving at its close an emphatic testimonial from Washington, but he sailed in the vessel which opened the trade to China, as the agent of an association of capitalists formed for that purpose, and was appointed last American Consul to Canton, under the old confederation, and afterwards by President Washington. President Quincy's Memoir is a highly interesting contribution to the history both of the Revolution and of American commerce; a just tribute to the memory of a man of sterling merit, and well worthy the pen of the distinguished wri-

The year 1847 was signalized by the death of John Quincy Adams, at the post of duty and in the capital of the United States. He was the distant relative, the neighbor, the contemporary, the confidential friend of Mr. Quincy, and at the request of our Society the duty of paying the last tribute of respect to the memory of the illustrious departed, devolved on him. He readily accepted the trust, and instead of confining himself within the limits of a memoir of ordinary length, he drew up a volume of more than 400 pages, embracing a comprehensive history of the life and services of Mr. Adams. The work did not make its appearance till the year 1858, and when the venerable author was now in his 87th year. I recollect no other instance in this country of so large a work from a person so far stricken in years; but I perceive in it no abatement of intellectual power. In a modest prefatory note, it is stated to be the object of the writer, to narrate the political life of Mr. Adams from his published works, from authentic unpublished materials, and personal acquaintance; and in this way to make him the expositor of his own motives, principles, and character, in the spirit neither of criticism nor eulogy. This difficult and delicate task was per-formed by the venerable author with signal success, and with this the series of his elaborate historical efforts closes. I need not say that with his other occasional literary labors,—several of which, such as the history of the Boston Athenaeum, which I ought to have included in the series, were of a nature to require no little time and research in their preparation;-they form what would, in almost any case, be considered the life, work of an industrious man. But still his retirement from the Presidency of Harvard at the age of 73, Mr. Quincy's literary labors must have been all prepared in the brief intervals of leisure allowed by engrossing official duties and cares. While therefore they would have given him an enviable reputation, had he been exclusively or even mainly a man of letters, it must be remembered that in his case the writer was overshadowed by the active relations—Political, Judicial, Municipal, and Academic-in which he stood to his day and generation. On these I need not attempt to dwell, but when we consider that Mr. Quincy was for years, and with a brilliant reputation both for business and debate, the representative of Boston, both in the State Legislature and in Congress,an acknowledged leader of the political party to which he belonged; that as a Judge, his term of office though short was signalized by a most memorable decision, relative to the law of libel; that as Mayor of Boston for six years—an office assumed under all the difficulties of the transition state to which Dr. Ellis has alluded, his administration was distinguished for the most imporant improvements and reforms; and lastly that, with great acceptance and public favor, he presided over the oldest Literary Institution in the country, bringing to the arduous and responsible station a variety of qualifications, administrative and literary, intellectual and moral, rarely if ever combined in one man, and most certainly never surpassed; and that having in an advanced but vigorous age become emeritus in this long and honorable career, instead of indulging in the repose conceded to the decline of life, he continued for 20 years, by word and deed, to perform all the duties of an active patriot, vigilant for the public weal, jealous for the public honor, and full of courage and confidence in the darkest hours of the present tremendous struggle, adding finally to all his other titles of respect and honor the authority, which length of years attended with virtue and wisdom can alone confer, we must all feel, we do all feel, as we gather round the grave of President Quincy, that we have lost our FIRST CITIZEN.

Mr. Everett was followed by the Hon. Richard H. Dana, jr., who gave a discriminating analysis of Mr. Quincy's noble character.

The meeting was then dissolved.

Miscellany.

MILITARY HISTORY OF MAINE IN THE WAR.—Mr. Wm. R. S. Whitman of Augusta, is engaged in writing a history of what Maine has done in the war for the Union. He is assisted by Mr. Chas. H. True. The work will number some five hundred pages, octavo, and will be published by Mr. Nelson Dingley, Jr., of Lewiston. It will be got up in fine style, handsomely illustrated with steel portraits of eminent Maine officers, and will contain a faithful history of every corps that has gone from this State to battle for the maintenance of the Government. The work has the approval of the Governor and Adjutant General.

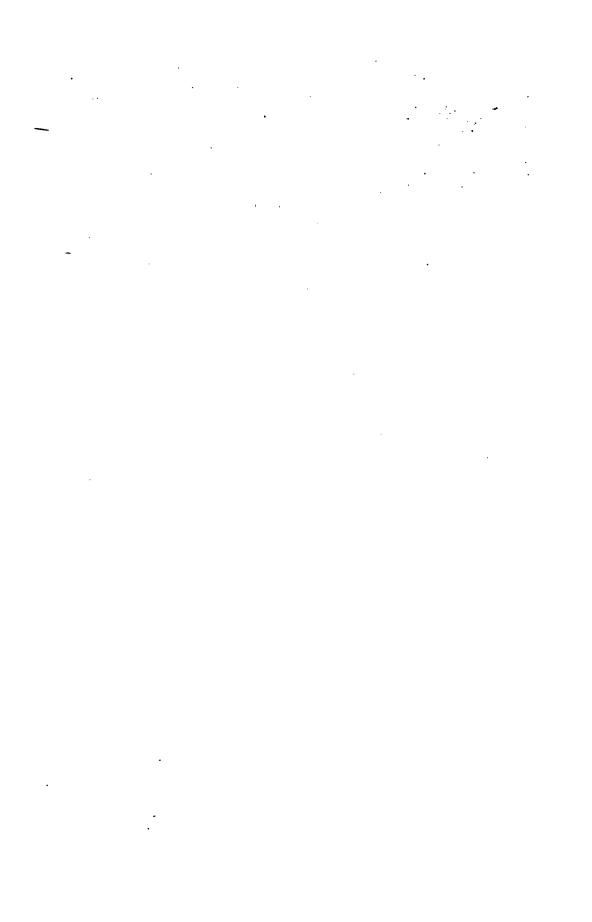

ABDREWS' HAWAHAN DICTIONARY.—The Sandwich Island Friend says: "We are glad to annonnee that the publication of Andrews' Hawaiian Dictionary has been commenced. It will appear in large octavo form, and contain from five to six hundred pages. This will be a national work, in the success of which all the friends of the Hawaiians will rejoice. From the South Seas we learn that a dictionary of the language of Western Polynesia, including the New Hebrides, has been commenced by the Rev. Mr. Geddie, the missionary from Nova Scotia,

M. W. Montgomery, Rsq., is engaged on a history of Jay County, Indiana. It will be accompanied with a map and appropriate illustrations. The War History is to be as complete as possible. The edition is to be limited. Application for copies should be made to Hon. J. M. Hayes, Jay Court House, Ind.

SAUNDERS, OTLEY AND Co. are preparing for publication a history of the careers of the two famous Confederate vessels, the Sumter and the Alabama, compiled from the private journals of Capt. Semmes while in command of the vessels, and from a mass of letters and other documents.

A copy of Columbus' first letter in Spanish has been found in the Ambrosian library in Milan, printed in 1493. In our number for September we will give a particular description of this pamphlet, hitherto unknown.

THE POPHAM COLONY.—Arrangements have been made for the Celebration of the Founding of this First European Colony on the main-land of New England. The Commemoration will be held at Bath, in City Hall, August 29th. The Hon. Judge Bourne of Kennebunk, has consented to deliver the Address, and other arrangements are to be made to give additional interest to this historical occasion.

FAC-SIMILES OF THE SPANISH LETTER OF COLUMBUS Published in 1493.

From the only known copy in the Ambrosian Library, Milan.

Commencement

Eñordor que se que aureis plazer dela grand victoria que uro señorme ha dado en mespate vos escrivo esta por la qua acua da que los una fudias cola acua da que los una se se se se repantos se uores me diema.

donde yo fallemny muchas Klas pobladas con gèce fyn numero. y dellas todas be comado posessó pozsus altezas conpregon y vádera real estedida y nó me fne cotradicho:

Close of the Letter.

ala espana mas a todos los cristianos ternan aqui refrige rio p ganancia esto segm el secho asi endezene secha enla car lanera sobre las plas de canaria a xv. de sedrero. Avill. 2 quatro ciencos 7 noventa p rres años.

Sara lo que mandareps El almirante.

IPpma que penia deutro enla carta.

Despues desta escripto: pestando en mar de Castilla salpo tanto viento comigo. sul y sueste que me ha secido descargar los namos poz con aque en este puerto desplhona op q sue la mayozmaranilla del mudo adonde acorde escrimiras salezas. En todas las yndias de siempre ballado los tempo tales como en mayo adonde po suy en transidias zbolni en cronistano que sas tormentas me han detendo, ruij. di ascorriendo por estamar. Diren aqua todos los honices dela mar que jamas ono tan mal puierno no mitatas per doas de nanes, secha a cris, dias de maco.

Esta carra embio Colon a lescrinano Deracion delas Illas balladas en las Indias. Contenida a otra Desis Alteras.

Colonel Maitland was next day directed to remain; but embarking all his heavy baggage and other incumbrances, to hold himself in readiness to come away on the shortest notice; or if through any other channel he received intelligence which should induce that measure, he was immediately to adopt it, without waiting the ceremony of orders, as best for his Majesty's service; his great care being to run no risque possibly to be avoided, of being cut off from this place, which was our principal concern.

6th. The French ships reappeared with one of addition, and from the Northward, Captain Moncrief, the commanding engineer, with one hundred men and a howitz, was sent to Tybee to reinforce the post and battery there; and an order to be forwarded to Col. Maitland, to join without loss of time.

7th and 8th. The fleet of the enemy encreased to 42 sail, the greater part men of war. Expresses to all the out posts to join.

9th. Fifty four vessels off the bar. Appoint the posts of alarm out of town, and make other necessary disposistions for sustaining an attack.—Repair and strengthen the abbatis.—A very superior force approaching the bar, our ships, the Fowey and Rose of twenty guns each, the Keppel and Germain armed vessels, obliged to retire towards the town. The battery on Tybee destroyed, the guns spiked, and the howitzer and stores carried off. Four large frigates came over the bar.

All the out posts in Georgia join. Lieut. Col. Cruger, from Sunbury, came by and with all his men able to march; his sick and convalescent he embarked on board an armed vessel to come inland. By contrary winds they were detained till the passage was seized by the enemy. They however put up Ogeeche river, where finding the communication by land also cut off, Capt. French (commanding) landed and took post, and for many days continued to defend himself, until obliged by want of provisions to capitulate to a very superior force. Began new redoubts and batteries, and strengthen the abattis. The troops encamped.

11th. Busy in landing cannon from the shipping. Making fascines—The engineer hard at work.

12th. Several French and Rebel vessels come over Ossibau bar.—At ten o'clock, evening the French landed at Beaulieu.

13th. Having confined our news to the defence of the town, as our sole object, which we determined, by the blessing of God, to be vigorous, and worthy of British troops, continued our works with unremiting ardor.

14th. The engineer hard at work.—Certain intelligence that Lincoln was crossing at Zubly's ferry from intelligent spies, who crossed with him. His numbers about 1500.—More on their way from all parts of Carolina, Polaski, already passed and joined the horse from above, advanced to within 3 miles of this town.

15th. Some French and Polaski's light horse appear in front. Force in a subaltern's picquet, of which six are taken, they are forced to retire in turn with some killed and an officer taken. No further loss on our side, our men not being suffered to pass beyond the cover of our cannon.

16. Receive a summons from the Count d Estaing, to surrender to the arms of France. No stranger to the unamimous opinion of the army; but for form's sake assemble the Field officers at the Governor's—We desire to know (Answer) what terms?—At noon Col. Maitland with the first division arrives (about 400 men)—Letter from the Count, "That the besieged should demand terms, and that he would willingly grant all in his power." We believed him, but demand a truce of 24 hours to deliberate, which is agreed to.

17th. By noon, and in the night before, all the rest fit for duty from Beaufort arrive, and take their posts in the line. The enemy being in possession of the ship channel, Col. Maitland had been obliged to come round Dawfuskie, and land on the marshes; and dragging his boat empty through a cut, got into Savannah river above the enemy, and so to this place.

Review the troops under arms at their posts, all in high spirit's, and the most pleasing confidence expressed in every face. The sailors not to be prevented from giving three cheers.

18th. and 19th. We continue to work hard on redoubts and batteries-Further strengthen the abbatis.

A frigate and gallies at Four Mile Point.—Capt. Moncrief prepares fire rafts. The Rose and Savannah sunk in the channel.

21st. A new work for seven 6 and 9 pounders begun in front of the barracks. Hearing the rebels were making fire rafts above the town, we got the boom across, and vessels ready to be sunk, a small galley and the Germaine to cover the boom, and occasionally to scour Yamaisan Swamp on our right. Some houses and barnes on our flanks, judged too near, are burnt, unfortunately property of friends.

22d. The enemy appear in force all along our front, in readiness to fight, but continue our works. Boats and other craft of the enemy go up Augustine Creek, probably with cannon and stores.

23d. As the day before. 24th. The enemy had been hard at work the whole night; and when the morning fog cleared off, were discovered to have pushed a sap to with 200 yards of our abbatis, to the left of the center. At nine o'clock three companies of light infantry, (97 rank and file), were sent out under Major Graham of the 16th, to give an oppurtunity of reconnoitering, and probably judging of the enemy's force, and to draw them exposed to our cannon.

25th. A good deal of firing with cannon and cohorns, to interrupt the enemy's workmen, with effect. Another sortie proposed, but, the idea rejected, having certainly not men to spare; and it being our great object to gain time, and particularly to detain d' Estaing as long as possible from, perhaps, attempts of higher consequence on the coast. Faint attack upon our picquets on the left, without effect. The enemy fire from two 18 pounders en barbette, which they are soon made to quit. At night one hundred marksmen spread without the abbatis to impede the enemy's workmen.

26th. Works continued on both sides: the enemy's however, not in advance, but on batteries, strengthening their lines, and extending from towards their rear to their left, to communicate with works carried on by the rebels; afterwards found to be a battery for nine mortars, and another for four 27th. A little firing, and a great deal of works on lines to cover the troops of the reserve from the expected cannonade. We begin to unroof the barracks. At night Major McArthur of the 71st with a part of the picquet, advanced and fired into the enemy's works; and, amusing them for some time, drew off. Three men wounded. He set the French and Americans firing upon each other. Their loss acknowledge above fifty.

La Trinité, a French frigate, moved and anchored in the north channel— Strengthen the river battery, and add the eight inch howitz.

29th. The barracks levelled the back wall to the ground, the front to a good parapet height from the floor, converted into a very respectable work in our center.

30th. As usual. A Captain of Polaskie's wounded and taken in the night; two of his men killed.

Oct. 1st. A new eight gun battery to the right of east road redoubt.

2d. The frigate and gallies cannonade our left without other effect than to point out where to make traverses. Begin a new battery for fifteen guns to the left of the barracks, and strengthen our works to the left, where it is probable the French may assault.

The fifteen gun battery begins to fire, as the guns come on it. All the ditches are deepened, particularly on the right and left. At midnight the enemy began to bombard, from nine mortars of eight and ten inch; continue about two hours.

At daylight they open with nine mortars, thirty-seven pieces of cannon from the land side, and sixteen from the water. Continue without intermission till eight o'clock, without other effect than killing a few hapless women and children, and some few negroes and horses in the town and on the common.-The firing renewed from time to time through the day. The Governor and Lieutenant Governor joined us in camp in the part of the cannonade. They remained with us till the siege was raised, most cheerfully determined to fare as we might in every respect.

5th. The enemy prosecute their works to their left; and we repair, strengthen and add.

6th. They throw carcases into town, and burn one wooden house.—At eleven o'clock sent to Count d' Estaing for permission to send women and children out of town on board of ships, and down the river, under the protection of a French ship of war, until the business should be decided. After three hours, and a great deal of intermediate cannon and shells, received an insulting answer in refusal from Messrs. Lincoln and d' Estaing conjunctly.

7th. Smart firing continued.—Busy at work all night repairing and adding.

8th. As the preceding.

9th. A little before daylight, and after a heavy (and, as usual, innocent) cannonade and bombardment, the enemy attacked our lines.

About ten o'clock a truce was desired by the enemy, and leave to bury the dead, and carry off the wounded :- Granted for those who lay at a distance, or out of sight of our lines; those within or near the abbatis we buried number 203 on the right, on the left 28;—and delivered 116 wounded prisoners, greatest part mortally.—A good many were buried by the enemy; many were selfburied in the mud of the swamp; and no doubt many were carried off.—From this to the 18th nothing very material happened. A great deal of civility passed mutually between us, and the French, and many apologies made for the refusal of sending the women and children out of town, laying the blame (to use the words of an officer of rank, Count O' Dunn) on the scoundrel Lincoln, and the Americans.—The offer is now made with great earnestness:—Mrs Prevost, her children and company, to be received by the Chevalier du Rumain on board the Chimere: To which was answered. That what had once been refused, and with some degree of insult, was not worth the acceptance.—The enemy we found were employed in moving off their cannon, mortars &c., and embarking their sick and wounded, of which they had a great number.-Many deserters come in to us.—On the 18th, the fog clearing off about nine o'clock, we were not much surprised to find the enemy had moved off.—Patroles of dragoons were sent out in every direction, to gain intelligence; but finding all the bridges broke down, these soon returned, unable to proceed to any distance.—Others, both foot and horse, were then sent, in a kind of hope that something might be attempted on the rear of the enemy, either French or Americans, but they were all out of our reach. -The French embarked in Augustine Creek; the rebels God knows where; but supposed from the route they had taken to be at or near Zubly's Ferry.—Till the country round about was properly reconnoitred, I did not think myself justifiable, circumstanced as we were, in making any attempt that had even the appearance of risque in it. In this opinion all the officers concurred.

I beleive, my Lord, it is not very necessary I should endeavour to say much of the behaviour of his Majesty's troops during the late very fatiguing, if not, as it turned out, very dangerous service,—though ever, in respect of danger, it must be allowed that appearances at least were formidable.

The noble and steady perseverance manifested by all ranks, in exposing themselves to every fatigue and to every danger; the cheerful yet determined spirit with which they set all the threats of the enemy at defiance; and their firm resolution of abiding, to the last man, by every consequence of an obstinate defence, will, I hope, meet with the approbation of his Majesty, and do them honor with their country. To mention in particular all those, whether British, Hessian, Provincial, or Militia, who either did; or ardently wished, to distinguish themselves, would be in fact to give your Lordship a list of the whole. But I must beg leave to acknowledge the great obligations we had to the very active and zealous services of Capt. Henry, of his Majesty's ship Fowey, Capt. Brown, of the Rose, and their officers and seamen; particularly Lieutenants Lock and Crawford, in working the batteries, and in every other part of service where they could give their assistance. I would also wish to mention Capt. Moncrief, Commanding Engineer; but sincerely sensible, that all I can express will fall greatly short of what the gentleman deserves, not only on this, but on all other occasions, I shall only, in the most earnest manner, request your Lordship taking him in your protection and patronage, to recommend him to his Majesty as an officer of long service, and most singular merit. Assuring you my Lord, from my own positive knowledge, that there is not one officer or soldier in this little army, capable of reflecting or judging, who will not regard, as personal to himself, any mark of royal favor graciously confered thro' your Lordship on Captain Moncrief. We have been greatly obliged to Major Fraser of the 71st, Acting Quarter Master General, for his zealous and indefatigable industry in landing and mounting upon the batteries the cannon, stores, &c, and constantly supplying all want.—The extreme vigilance and attention of Captain Prevost, Acting Adjutant General, deserves to be known. Indeed the whole Engineers, and every other public department, were activity itself.

For further particulars respecting this and every other part of the service, I beg to refer your Lordship to Captain Shaw, my Aid de Camp, who will have the honor to deliver this, and who is not uninformed, as he has been present on every active service in this country.

No. I.

Translation.

Count d' Estaing summons his Excellency General Prevost to surrender to the arms of the King of France. He apprizes him, that he will be personally responsible for all the events and misfortunes that may arise from a defence, which, by the superiority of the force which attacks him, both by sea and land, is rendered manifestly vain and of no effect.

He gives notice to him also, that any resolution he may venture to come to, either before the attack, in the course of it, or at the moment of the assault, of setting fire to the shipping or small craft belonging to the army, or to the merchants in the river Savannah, as well as to all the magazines in the town will be imputable to him only.

The situation of Hospital Hill in the Grenades, the strength of the three intrenchments and store redoubts which defended it, and the comparative disposition of the troops before the town of Savannah, with the single detachment which carried the Grenades by assault, should be a lesson to futurity. Humanity obliges the Count d'Estaing to recal this event to his memory; having so done, he has nothing to reproach himself with.

Lord Macartney had the good fortune to escape from the first transport of troops who enter a town sword in hand; but notwithstanding the most valuable effects were deposited in a place supposed by all the officers and engineers to be impregnable, Count d' Estaing could not have the happiness of preventing their being pillaged.

Camp before Savannah, the 16th of September 1779.

Signed)

ESTAING.

No. II.

Copy of a Letter from Major General Prevost to the Count d'Estaing, dated Camp Savannah, Sept. 16th, 1779.

Sir

I am just now honored with your Excellency's letter of this date, containing a summons for me to surrender this town to the arms of his Majesty the King of France, which I had just delayed to answer, till I had shown it to the King's Civil Governor.

I hope your Excellency will have a better opinion of me, and of British troops, than to think either will surrender on general summons, without specific terms.

If you, Sir have any to propose that may with honor be accepted of me, you can mention them, both with regard to civil and military, and I will then give my answer: in the mean time I will promise upon my honor, that nothing, with my knowledge or consent, shall be destroyed in either this town or river.

I have the honor to be &c
(Signed) -A. PREVOST.
His Excellency Count d' Estaing, commanding the French forces, &c.

No. III.

Translation.

CAMP BEFORE SAVANNAH Sept. 16, 1779

SIR

I have just received your Excellency's answer to the letter, I had the honor of writing to you this morning, you are sensible that it is the part of the beseiged to propose such terms as they may desire; and you cannot doubt of the satisfaction I shall have in consenting to those which I can accept consistently with my duty.

I am informed that you continue entrenching yourself. It is a matter of very little importance to me; however, for forms sake, I must desire that you will desist during our conferences together.

The different columns, which I have ordered to stop, will continue their march, but without approaching your posts, or reconnoitering your situation.

I have the honor to be, with respect, Sir, your Excellency's most humble and obedient Servant.

(Signed) ESTAING.

His Excellency General Prevost Major General in the service of his Britanic Majesty, and Commander in chief at Savannah in Georgia

P. S. I apprize your Excellency that I have not been able to refuse the army of the United States uniting itself with that of the King.

The junction will probably be effected this day. If I have not an answer therefore immediately; you must confer in future with General Lincoln and me.

No. IV.

Copy of a letter from Major General Prevost to the Count d'Estaing, dated September 16, 1779.

SIR

I am honored with your Excellency's letter in reply to mine of this day.

The business we have in hand being of importance, there being various interests to discuss, a just time is absolutely necessary to deliberate; I am therefore to propose, that a suspension of hostilities shall take place for twenty four hours from this date;

and to request that your Excellency will direct your columns to fall back to a greater distance, and out of sight of our works, or I shall think myself under a necessity to direct their being fired upon. If they did not reconnoitre this afternoon, they were sure within the distance.

I am, &

(Signed) A. PREVOST. His Excellency Count d' Estaing, &c. &c.

No. V.

Translation.

CAMP BEFORE SAVANNAH, Sept. 16 1779.

SIR

I consent to the truce you ask. It shall continue till the signal for retreat to-morrow night the 17th, which will serve also to announce the recommencement of hostilities. It is unnecessary to observe to your Excellency, that this suspension of arms is entirely in your favour, since I cannot be certain that you will not make use of it to fortify yourself, at the same time, that the propositions you shall make may be inadmissible.

I must observe to you, how important it is that you should be fully aware of your own situation, as well as that of the troops under your command. Be assured that I am thoroughly acquainted with it.—Your knowledge of military affairs will not suffer you to be ignorant, that a due examination of that circumstance always precedes the march of the columns; and that this preliminary is not carried into execution by a mere show of troops.

I have ordered them to withdraw before night comes on, to prevent any cause of complaint on your part. I understand that my civility in this respect has been the occasion that the Chevalier de Cambis, a Lieutenant in the navy, has been made prisoner of war.

I propose sending out some small advanced posts to-morrow morning; They will place themselves in such a situation as to have in view the four entrances into the wood; in order to prevent a similar mistake in future. I do not know whether two columns commanded by the Viscount de Noailles and the Count de Dillon have shown too much ardour, or whether your commanders have not paid a proper respect to the truce subsisting between us; but this I know, that what has happened this night, is a fresh proof that matters will soon come to a decision between us one way or another

I have the honor to be, with respect, &c.
(Signed) ESTAING.
His Excellency General Prevost, Major General in the service of his Britannic Majesty and Commander in Chief at Savannah in Georgia.

No. VI.

Copy of a letter from Major General Prevost, to Count d'Estaing, dated Savannah, Sept. 17, 1779.

SIR

In answer to the letter of your Excellency, which I had the honor to receive about twelve last night, I am to acquaint you, that having laid the whole correspondence before the King's civil Governor, and the military officers of rank, assembled in council of War, the unamimous determination has been, that tho' we cannot look upon our part as absolutely inexpugable, yet that it may and ought to be defended; therefore the evening gun, to be fired this evening an hour before sundown, shall be the signal for recommencing hostilities agreeable to your Excellency's proposal.

Ihave the honor to be,
(Signed) A. PREVOST.
His Excellency Count d'Estaing, &c &c.

No. VII.

Copy of a letter from Count d'Estaing and General Lincoln to Major General Prevost, dated Camp before Savannah, October 6, 1779.

STD

We are persuaded that your Excellency knows all that your duty prescribes;—Perhaps your zeal has already interfered with your judgement. The Count d' Estaing in his own name, notified to you, that you would be personally and alone responsible for the consequences of your obstinacy. The time which you informed him, in the commencement of the siege would be necessary for the arrangement of articles, including the different orders of men in your town had no other object than that of receiving succor. Such conduct, Sir, is sufficient to forbid every intercourse between us which might occasion the least loss of time. Besides in the present application, latent reasons may again exist—There are military ones, which in frequent instances have prevented the indulgence you request. It is with regret we yield to the austerity of our functions; and we deplore the fate of those persons who will be the victims of your conduct, and the delusion which appears to prevail in your mind.

We are with respect, &c,

(Signed)

B. Lincoln, Estaing.

No. VIII.

Copy of a letter from Major General Prevost to Count d'Estaing, dated Camp Savannah, October 6, 1779.

SIR

I am persuaded your Excellency will do me justice; and that in defending this place, and the army committed to my charge, I fulfil what is due to honor and duty to my Prince. Sentiments of a different kind occasion the liberty of now addressing myself to your Excellency; They are those of hu-The houses of Savannah are occumanity. pied solely by women and children. Several of them have applied to me, that I might request the favour you would allow them to embark on board a ship or ships, and go down the river under the protection of yours, until this business is decided. If this requisition you are so good to grant, my wife and children, with a few servants, shall be the first to profit by the indulgence.

I have the honor to be &c &c (Signed) A. PREVOST.

No. IX.

Return of casualties in the different corps during the siege.

16th, regiment. 2 rank and file deserted.
60th, do 4 rank and file killed;
1 serjeant 6 rank and file wounded; 2 serjeants, 5 rank and file deserted.

ŧ

1st battalion 71st. 2 lieutenants, 1 serjeant 6 rank and file killed; 17 rank and file wounded; 1 rank and file missing; 1 rank and file deserted.

2d battalion 71st. 1 rank and file killed, 1 lieut. 4 rank and file wounded; 3 rank and file deserted.

Trumbach. 4 rank and file wounded.

Wessenbach. 5 rank and file killed; 1 drummer, 2 rank and file wounded; 2 rank and file deserted.

New York Volunteers. 1 serjeant killed; 1 serjeant, 2 rank and file wounded; 1 drummer missing, 1 rank and file deserted.

1st battalion de Lancey's. 2 rank and file killed; 3 rank and file wounded; 1 serjeant, 7 rank and file deserted.

2d battalion de Lancey's. 1 Ensign killed, 1 drummer 1 rank and file missing; 1 drummer, 2 rank and file deserted.

3d battalion Skinner's. 1 serjeant killed; 1 Capt. wounded; 1 drummer, 1 rank and file deserted.

South Carolina Royalists. 4 rank and file killed; 1 Captain wounded.

North Carolina Volunteers. 1 rank and file deserted.

Kings Rangers. 1 rank and file killed; 1 rank and file wounded; 5 rank and file deserted.

Georgia Loyalists. 1 Captain, 1 Serjeant, 2 rank and file killed; 2 serjeants, 11 rank and file deserted.

Marines. 2 rank and file killed; 6 rank and file wounded.

Royal Artillery. 2 rank and file wounded. Seamen. 2 rank and file killed; 9 rank and file wounded.

Georgia Militia. 3 rank and file killed, 1 Lieut. wounded.

Total. 1 Captain, 2 Lieutenants, 1 Ensign, 4 Serjeants, 32 rank and file killed. 2 Captains, 2 Lieutenants, 2 Serjeants, 1 Drummer, 56 rank and file wounded, 2 drummers, 2 rank and file missing. 5 Serjeants, 2 Drummers, 41 rank and file deserted.

Names of Officers Killed.

Lieut. Henry M'Pherson, 1st battalion 71st 24th of September.
HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 38

Lieutenant Taws, of ditto, and Captain Lieut. of Dragoons, 9th of October. Capt. Simpson, Georgia Loyalists, October 8. Ensign Pollard, 2d battalion DeLancey's, 4th of ditto.

Names of Officers Wounded. Capt. Cozens, 3d Battalion Jersey Volunteers, 24th of September.

Lieut. Smallet Campbell, 2d battalion 71st, and Lieut. of Dragoons, 9th of October. Capt. Henry, of South Carolina Royalists, 9th of October.

(Signed) A. Prevost. M. G.

CAMP, SAVANNAH, Oct. 18, 1779.

A Return of Masters, Mates, and Men of the Transports who were at the batteries during the siege.

Masters—John Wilson, Archibald M'Curdy, John Higgins, Arthur Ryburn, Christopher Watton, John Take.

Mates.—James M'Donald,——Steele, John Chapman, James Ryburn,——Corvard, ——Harrison.

87 Seamen.

JACQUES CARTIER.

THE reverence of Canada, and the respect of France, have of late invested with a new interest the mariner of St. Malo, who gave a name to the St. Lawrence, which he ascended to its rapids. He stands forward, indeed, as a man of high principle, sound judgment, adventurous enterprise, and tarnished only by his unjust carrying off of the Canadian chiefs to France. But even in this there was not the incentive of gain; he did not take them to make them slaves, as Leon, Ayllon, and other Spanish adventurers did. If Cartier did not return with them as he proposed, we know not what obstacles prevented him, but we do know that there is nothing but what tends to show that the Americans were to their latest breath treated with kindness and as free

Antiquarian research tells us that his grandfather, John Cartier, was born in 1428, married Guillemette Baudoin in November, 1457, and had five sons, all of whom are represented in our day. The eldest of these, Jacques or James Cartier born at St. Malo, Dec. 4, 1458, married Geseline Jansart, and had three sons, the youngest of whom, named after himself, made the name famous at home and abroad, and is one of the glories of that old French town.

Jacques Cartier was born in December. 1494, probably on the last day of the year, when he was carried to the church of St. Malo to receive baptism. Men had but for a twelvemonth wondered then over the discovery of that New World to which his name was to be indissolubly connected. Of his early life we find few traces. In 1518, he appears on the parish register as godfather of a cousin, and the next year leads to the altar (May 2, 1519) Marie Katherine des Granches, daughter of Monsieur Honoré des Granches, knight and constable of St. Malo. Young Cartier had already, it would seem, made his mark. His marriage was a brilliant one, and he must have stood well in the world's esteem to have won a maiden so well connected, but Cartier was already at the age of 28, master pilot of the port of St. Malo.

Of his wanderings on the ocean during his earlier years we know nothing, although there are indications that he had visited the coast of America prior to his expedition in 1534. He had in all probability often cast his lines, with the hardy fishermen of northern France, amid the cod that swarmed on the Banks of Newfoundland, and was selected for his enterprise by Philippe de Chabet, the Admiral of France, to conduct the exploring expedition sent out by Francis I, in 1534.

Ten years had now elapsed since the voyage of Verrazzano, and while Spain had been rapidly extending her power in the New World, France had in no way availed herself of the discoveries made under her flag. Yet she had explored, and might claim as her own, a port at which the commerce of the new-found continent was one day to centre, and where in less than three centuries a city rivalling in population the greatest in the world was to exert on the globe its influence. France was represented on the western side of the Atlantic only by her hardy fishermen of Brittany and Normandy, no doubt the earliest discoverers of the continent, whose labors found no chronicler.

It was indeed time for France to act, but the expedition planned by Chabot disregarded the information acquired by Verrazzano, if we are indeed to regard the account of that Florentine's voyage as real. It was not to settle in New York bay or establish a trading post or colony there; nor was it to explore the country to the north or south for a better location. It was simply to discover a northern passage to China and Japan—to seek what Sir John Franklin has perished in search of in our day.

Had France but followed up her previous discoveries, by settling the bay of New York, and then occupied the St. Lawrence and the country of the Abnakis, how different would the world's history have been!

The French expedition of 1534, under Jacques Cartier, consisted of two vessels of sixty tons each, and carried sixty-one men in all. Cartier sailed from St. Malo on the 30th of April, and on the 10th of May made Cape Bonavista, but finding too much ice there, ran into Catalina, which has changed into Spanish the French name of the saint he gave it. He then coasted along Newfoundland to the Straits of Belleisle, visited the port of Brador, and the bay of Brest, from which he proceeded in boats to Checateca. Returning to Newfoundland, he made the isles of Brion and Magdelaine, and on the 3d of July entered a bay which still bears the name given by Cartier in consequence of the excessive heat. Proceeding next to Gaspé Bay, he planted a cross among the Micmacs on the 24th of July, and taking two of the natives on board, Taiguragny and Domagaya, sons of the chief, at last, though without being aware of it, entered one of the arms of the St. Lawrence. After visiting the isle Natiscotec, or Anticosti, Mont Joly and the river Nataskouan, he sailed back, reaching St. Malo on the 5th of September, after experiencing a severe storm.

Of this first voyage of Cartier, no contemporary French account is known. Ramusio in 1556 published an Italian version of a narrative in his hands, and this account, re-translated into Erench, was printed at Rouen in 1598.

This voyage had added little to the knowledge already acquired from the fishermen whom he found at almost every point, still it added to the fame of Cartier and won him favor.

Charles de Mouy, Sieur de la Melleraye, Vice-Admiral of France, took the matter of American discovery to heart. A commission was issued to Cartier on the 31st of October, 1534, styling him Captain and Master Pilot of St. Malo, "to lead, conduct and employ three vessels, each equipped and provisioned for fifteen months, to conclude the voyage already by him begun to discover beyond the Newfoundlands." His three vessels—the Grande Hermine of 120 tons, the Petite Hermine of 60 tons (commanded by his brother-in-law Macé Jallobert), and the Emerillon of 40 tons—were ready in May, 1535. On the 16th of that month, the feast of Whitsunday, Cartier and his companions, after approaching the sacraments reverently in the Cathedral of St. Malo, received the episcopal benediction of Francis Bohier, Bishop of St. Malo, and on the 19th set sail, bearing back the two Micmac youth. On the 26th of July they reached Blanc Sablon in the straits of Belleisle, after having been scattered by a storm. Pushing on his explorations, Cartier entered St. Genevieve Bay on the 7th of August, Anticosti on the 15th, and by the 1st of September was at the mouth of the deep Saguenay. Still ascending the St. Lawrence he came to the St. Charles, to which from the day of its discovery he gave the name of St. Croix. Here, on the site of modern Quebec, between Fabrique street and the Coteau St. Genevieve, then stood the bark village of Stadaconé, the town of Donnacona, with its fields of maize and squashes. Like all the tribes below them, the people were apparently Montagnais, for the Micmacs of Gaspé served as interpreters.

After cultivating friendly relations here, Cartier, leaving the Great and Little Hermine laid up, ascended the river in the Emerillon, in spite of the efforts of Donnacona and the people of Stadaconé to deter him. At La Pointe du Platon, the present St. Croix, fifteen leagues above Quebec, he found the village of Achelaiv, or Ochelai, and leaving the Emerillon at the mouth of the Sorel he continued his exploration in boats, arriving on the 2d of October at Hochelaga, a palisaded town at the foot of the mountain of Montreal. The inhabitants were evidently a different family from the Algonquins below; the town as described by Cartier, their sedentary life, the words of their language which he has preserved, all show them to be of that Huron Iroquois family who everywhere ruled the Algon-The chief, styled Agouhanna (evidently the Agovander of later writers), with his people, received Cartier and his companions with every mark of friendship.

From the mountain Cartier gazed with delight on the panorama before him, and exulted to learn that above the rapids the navigation extended for a three moons' journey to a land of glittering metal.

Reëmbarking in his boats, he returned to the Emerillon, and, looking in at the St. Maurice, returned to Stadaconé. Here his party had erected a palisade and planted cannon, making it strong enough to resist all Canada. They now prepared to winter there, but scurvy soon broke out and the men died rapidly. In vain public devotions were performed, and a pilgrimage vowed to Our Lady of Roc Amadour. Not till an Indian remedy was tried did the evil stay.

In the spring, taking by stratagem Donnacona and several of his chiefs, and leaving the Little Hermine (which he could no longer man), Cartier sailed from Quebec May 6, 1536, and by the 16th of July reached St. Malo.

Of his second voyage, an account addressed to the king was printed at Paris in 1545, and has been reprinted this year in the same city by M. d'Avezac, who has collated it with three manuscripts in the Imperial Library, by which means he has fortunately added considerably to the already valuable vocabulary given by Cartier as the "Language of the countries and kingdoms of Hochelaga and Canada," but which seems to be mainly of Hochelaga, many of the words being unmistakably Iroquois, and few recognizable as belonging to any of the numerous Algonquin dialects.

Cartier was not able at once to return and plant a colony. The Indians remained in France, were baptized March 25, 1538, and finally died in their exile. Thevet, the cosmographer, records his frequent interviews with Donnacona, who died soon after, four or five years subsequent to his arrival in France.

In 1540, Francis I. commissioned Francis de la Rocque, Sieur de Roberval, whom he nicknamed "the petty king of Vimeux," to continue the discovery; and on the 17th of October, by another patent, the king, "fully persuaded of the good sense, capacity, loyalty, gallantry, courage, great diligence, and good experience," of Jacques Cartier, constituted him Captain-General and Master Pilot of the whole expedition.

Meanwhile five vessels were slowly fitted out. But Spain was now alarmed. Verrazzano ran along the northern coast of the continent bearing the banner of France, she at once sent Estevan Gomez to the same territory, and that navigator in 1525 visited the shore from St. Mary's Bay on the Chesapeake to Narragansett. Now that France was renewing her attempts to occupy some portion of the New World, Spain prepared to prevent her. Spies were despatched to France to learn all the particulars of the expedition, and the Council estimated at 150,000 ducats the cost of a fleet to "resist and offend that of France." This was more than could be easily given then, and they consoled themselves with the reflection that the French fleet was too small to attack any of the Spanish colonies, and "as for settling on the north sea, there is nothing where the French can go that is to be coveted or worth anything, and even if they do take it, necessity would make them leave it."

The spy who went to St. Malo reported that thirteen ships were fitting out under Cartier; that he spoke to him and a relative of his, apparently Mace Jallobert, and found that they were going to Canada to settle there and build a fort, carrying mechanics and iron works of all kinds, and that they would start about the middle of April, 1541, with 2,500 men.

This was rather alarming, the more especially as the letter of the ambassador in France, who seems to have demanded explanations of the court at which he resided. said that they were going 700 leagues from St. Malo. This, on their maps, would bring Cartier to Florida in the discoveries of Ayllon and Gomez, and where De Soto actually was, and enable the French, in case of war, to waylay the treasure-ships of Spain. Hence it was resolved not to let them settle there or elsewhere, but to dislodge them at once, not openly, but by sending some adventurer with an expedition really fitted out by the king, but nominally a private one, the acts of which might be disavowed when they had irreparably destroyed the French settlement.

Unconscious of the threatening cloud, Cartier with his fleet of five vessels sailed May 23, 1541. The voyage was long and stormy, and he did not anchor before Stadaconé till August 23d. He planted his new settlement, Charlesburg Royal, at Cape Rouge river, and sent back two of his vessels under the command of Jallobert and his nephew Stephen Noel. On the 7th of September, leaving the fort in charge of the Viscount de Beaupré, he proceeded to Hochelaga. On his return to the fort, he found that troubles had already begun between the French and the natives, and that two of his party had been killed. Mistrust on both sides followed. The winter wore uneasily away. In the spring the French fairly mutinied; and as Roberval did not appear, compelled Cartier to set In the harbor of St. John, Newfoundland, in June, 1542, he found Roberval, who in vain endeavored to persuade him to return In October, Cartier, as appears by official acts, was in St. Malo.

It is believed that he subsequently sailed in search of Roberval, but we have no account of his voyage.

His subsequent years were spent in St. Malo, or in the village of Limoilou, where he built a dwelling still known, though in ruin, as Portes Cartier. He was ennobled by Francis I. about 1549, and is styled in his later years, "noble homme Jacques Cartier, Sieur de Limoilou."

The period of his death is not ascertained. He died apparently not in St. Malo, but at Limoilou, about the year 1555.

Cartier left no children. His nephew Jacques Nouel, "ship captain and master pilot," and Olivier Chatton, husband of a daughter of his sister Bertheline, succeeded him as navigators at St. Malo, and as such enjoyed the royal favor. Their descendants still exist at St. Malo, as do also descendants of his uncles on the father's side, who perpetuate the honored name of Cartier.

A portrait of Cartier, deemed authentic, has long been preserved at St. Malo, and has in our day been copied extensively in France and Canada.

THE CAPUCHINS IN MAINE.

The recent discovery of a copper plate, which had once evidently been laid in the corner stone of a Catholic convent or chapel at Castine, Maine, has drawn attention to the labors of this branch of the Franciscan family on our coast at an early period of our history.

At a meeting of the American Archæological Society some months since, Mr. Charles Folsom made some remarks, since printed; but as his researches gave but little detail on the mission of the Capuchins, we conclude to enlarge the brief note inserted in our May number, and give here all that is accessible in reference to this mission.

The Capuchins are a branch of the Friars Minor, founded by St. Francis of Assisi, who, in an age and country when all seemed devoted to the acquisition of wealth, reared the standard of poverty, and endeavored to correct the vice of his day by carrying its opposite, poverty, to its furthest possible extent. The Little Sisters of the Poor in New York in the 19th century, begging for themselves and their poor the subsistence for the day, giving no thought of the morrow, are not a stranger contrast than Francis presented in his day.

His order spread; but about the close of the 15th century, a Friar of his order, Matthew Bassi, learning that the brethren did not wear the same capuce or hood as their holy founder, assumed the long pointed one which he learned the saint had habitually worn. Another Friar, Louis de Fossembruno, joined him and proposing certain reforms of the rule obtained the papal sanction for the institution of a new division of the order. The bull was dated July 13, 1528, and under it the Capuchin order was instituted at Camerino.

The Capuchins began their career at the moment of the great religious movement in Europe; and one of the earliest Vicars-General, as the heads of the order are termed, Bernard Ochin, unfrocked and joining the Reformers, proceeded to England.

Charles IX, in 1573, requested the introduction of the order into France, and a few houses were gradually formed at Paris and elsewhere. Among its eminent members were Henry, Duke de Joyeuse, who left his convent to lead the armies of the League and who, having made his peace with Henry IV, resumed his habit and died a Capuchin Friar; and Bernard de Picquigny, whose Triplex Expositio of the Epistles of St. Paul is still studied and admired.

The Capuchins were consequently a new order in France, when Champlain settled Quebec. Their first appearance in the history of the French colonies is in 1632, when on the restoration of Canada to France, after its conquest by the Kirks, the religious affairs of the colonies were offered to the Capuchins.* Why they declined it, is not known; but on their refusal it was offered to the Jesuits, who had been the first missionary order in Acadia, and had labored with the Recollects in Canada.

Less than ten years after, d'Aulnay and de la Tour were contending for the mastery of Acadia, which then in the French idea embraced Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Maine, and doubtless a little more of New England. D'Aulnay, who prided himself on his fidelity to the church, of which de la Tour seems to have been, what in the more expressive than classic language of our land, is called a hickory member, invited the Capuchins to take charge of the religious affairs of his settlement. They began their labors, it is said, in 1643. Of their mission our information is derived almost exclusively from the incidental mention made by the Jesuits, as they came in contact with them.

* See the passport of the Jesuit Fathers, given by Cardinal Richelieu in 1682, in Martin's Bressani, p. 295.

Father Druillettes, a Jesuit, started in 1646 from Quebec, to visit the Abnakis and establish a mission among them. The Relation of the time, speaking of his wanderings in the month of October, 1646, says: "His Indian guide seeing himself on the banks of the sea of Acadia, conducted the Father in his little bark canoe to Pentagouet, where he found a little hospice of Capuchin Fathers, who embraced him with the love and charity, which was to be expected from their goodness. Their Superior, Father Ignatius of Paris, gave them every possible welcome. After recruiting some time with these good fathers, he reembarked in his bark canoe."*

Charlevoix in his General History of New France, mentioning this, says that Druillettes found them on "the Kennebec where they had a hospice, as well as a house at Pentagoet, and that they acted as chaplains not only to the French settled on this coast and on that of Acadea, but also to all those drawn there by trade. They received the Jesuit missionary with much joy and all possible cordiality. They had long desired to see missions established among the Indians in those parts, whom they deemed very apt for the kingdom of God, and they had even entertained the idea of visiting Quebec to induce the Fathers of the Society no longer to leave untilled, a land so well prepared to receive the seed of the Faith."

Now I know from other points that Charlevoix most unfortunately neglected to examine thoroughly and use in his history, the archives of the College of Quebec. The few manuscripts that have escaped the conquest by England and the suppression of the order, were evidently not used by him, and the great mass that has perished, doubtless, contained much that could not at the time be published in the Relations; but which would be of great value now.

The Journal of the Superior of the Jesuits is still extant. It notes the arrival of Druillettes from Maine on the 16th of June, 1647; but on the 3-4 July, has this curious entry:

"July 3-4.—The Abnaquiois asked to speak with me, to thank me for the visit of Father Druillètes, and to beg me to let him return; but the last comers from the Abnaquiois having brought letters from the Capuchin Fathers, who begged us not to return there; I refused them, and made the reply which will be found in a letter which I wrote on the subject to the Capuchins."

This correspondence was at Charlevoix's hand, but has now disappeared, and we can only conjecture its contents. Charlevoix might have given us the substance, but as we have said, he evidently failed to examine the written documents in the house. The captains of the fishing and other vessels in the habit of running across to New France, were as we see from the affair of Father Biard a few years before, considerably tinctured with Protestantism and viewed the Jesuits with direct and decided enmity. It is therefore probable that the wishes of the Capuchins dictated solely by a desire for the propagation of the Gospel, were thwarted by those in control on the coast, and that they were compelled to write the letter referred to in the journal of the Superior of the Jesuits.

Their good feeling towards the Jesuits is evinced by a letter written in 1648, by Father Cosmas de Mante then Superior, and preserved in the Relation of 1651. It is in these words. "We conjure your Reverences by the sacred love of Jesus and of Mary, for the salvation of these poor souls, who call for you at the south, &c., to give them all the assistance that your courageous and untiring charity can give them; and even if, in passing to the river Kinebequi, you meet any of ours, you will do us a favor to express your wants; if you do not meet any, you will continue, if you please, your holy instructions to these poor Indians, and forsaken ones, as far as your charity will permit."*

*Rel. de la N. F., 1647, p. 52, ed. Quebec. †Vol. i, p. 280.

‡ I examined very carefully, all the remaining papers of the Jesuits at the time I copied Druillette's narrative.

If we can draw any conclusion from this, it is that the visit of Father Druillettes led to efforts to establish the Capuchins on more permanent foundations; that a house was established on the Kennebec, † and a new chapel or hospice erected at Pentagoet (Castine) in 1648. Of this latter, the plate here presented was doubtless the cornerstone. It was found in the fall of 1863. by Mr. W. H. Weeks, while he was at work on the road leading to the battery, which the Government was then erecting near the mouth of the harbor of Castine, upon the site of the old brick battery, known as the Lower Fort. It was but a short distance from the fort, and but little below the surface of the ground.

At the time of the discovery Mr. Weeks did not observe any thing remarkable in its appearance, and afterwards, cut off a piece of it—about one sixth—to repair his boat. But recently, says Mr. George H. Witherle, to whose intelligence and care we are indebted for the earliest notice of this relic, " he noticed figures and letters on the larger part, which induced him to examine it carefully, and show it to others; he also took off the piece which had been put on the boat, fortunately without serious mutila-A photograph was subsequently taken; for a copy of which we are indebted to Joseph Williamson, Esq.

This incription reads:

1648. 8. IVN. F. 1648 June. 8. I Friar LEO. PARISIN. Leo of Paris CAPUC. MISS. Capuchin, Misionary, POSVI HOC FV. laid this foun-NDTM IN HNR- dation in honor

EM NRÆ DMÆ of Our Lady SANC TÆ SPEI. of Holy Hope

The members of the order in France generally put Capucin after the name; in Italy and Germany more frequently Ordinis Minorum Capuccinorum, or the initials, O. M. C. If the Father was on the missions, he added the word, Missionnaire. The signature is not then Capuchin Missionary; but Capuchin, Missionary. Folsom on the strength of a dot would read "in Capuc. Miss," but this would be without analogy. The title of the Chapel has caused some investigation, but not in the most likely fields. The poetic element which the Catholic Church drew from the East has never forsaken her and the Litanies, Offices, Festal and Votive Masses of the Virgin abound in poetic titles, many of great beauty, and in most cases drawn from Scripture. The Sapiential Books are a great store house for this purpose, and the words spoken of Wisdom are applied to her who bore Him who was Wisdom Increate. One of the most familiar of these is the passage " Ego Mater pulchrae dilectionis et timoris et agnitionis et Sanctæ Spei-I am the Mother of fair love and of fear and of knowledge and of HOLY HOPE" Ecclesiasticus xxiv, 18. In this the reader will see the source of the title of "Our Lady of Holy Hope" given by the Capuchins in 1648 to their convent and chapel at Castine.

Of Father Leo we have no tidings; his name is the third which we know as connected with these labors of the Capuchins.

It is not our province here to trace the contest between the two Acadian rivals. In 1649 D'Aulnay was overcome by de la Tour and his establishments broken up. In the following year yielding to the repeated and fresh entreaties of his first children Druillettes again visited the Kennebec and even proceeded to Boston and Plymouth as the envoy of the French governor to the New England Colonies. The narrative of his journey fell into my hands a few years ago and a small edition was printed in antique style by James Lenox, Esq., of New York. He makes no allusion to the Capuchins who had disappeared from Maine.

* Rel. 1651, p. 14-5.

+ It will be observed that according to the Relation, Druillettes found them at Pentagoet and not on the Kennebec as Charlevoix says.

There is every probability that other Capuchins may from time to time have been on the coast, as they were frequently chaplains on French vessels. One is mentioned in the next century in an English account as a missionary on the St. John's, if my memory serves me right, although the writer may have confounded Capuchin with Recollect.

The only subsequent missions of the Capuchins were in Louisiana. Here the Jesuits and Priests of the Seminary of Quebec had been pioneers, the former losing Fathers Poisson and Souel, and the latter Messrs. Foucault and St. Cosme, at the hands of the Indians. In the course of the changes in the administration of the colony, the Jesuits were restricted to the Indian missions, and in 1725 the care of the colonists was assigned to the Caruchins who were sent out by the company of the Indies and continued to exercise their functions till New Orleans was erected into an episcopal sec and a body of parochial clergy had gathered there.

The Capuchins then disappeared, but in our days a colony of German Fathers of the order came over and established this branch of the Franciscans in Texas, and another in Wisconsin.

Castine has had a varied and romantic Occupied first by the French, invited doubtless by its natural beauty and advantages, as well as by its commanding position, it fell at last into the hands of New England settlers, although the Indian missions under the able Thury and his successors long centred here. When these had passed away, and the Revolutionary struggle began England planted a fort at Bagaduce to control the colony, whose possession was so essential to Canada, and even in the war of 1812 it became again the scene of important events.*

Notes and Queries.

NOTES.

Lieut. Col. Throop to Governor Clinton.

NEW YORK, MARCH 8, 1784.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY:

I have been almost eight years banished from my family, I have been through the whole of that time assiduous in the service of my country and with the strictest economy I have not been able to remove my fami-I have applied for that favor to the legislature, I am told JudgeYates and Colo. Whiting to whom it is referred, have concluded they are not able or cannot be willing to remove my family. Had God in his Providence sent a happy bullet through my head or heart when I was in my country's service, I should have left my dear ones the rich inheritance of my country's pitty but I live to be despised, and what is more, to see my family Neglected.

I have to entreat your excellency, to Grant me a Permit to Beg in the Streets of this City, for three Days, that I may endeavor to obtain from the Charity of Individuals, what I am denied from the Generosity of my Country,

I have the Honor to be, Your Excellency's Devoted Humble Serv't JOSIAH THROOP.

His Excellency.

[Col. Throop, the writer of the above indignant letter, was if not a native, at least a resident, of Nova Scotia at the breaking out of the revolution, and with other friends of the American cause there, took up arms and endeavored to capture some British forts on the frontier. Having been unsuccessful, they retired to the states in 1776, and many of them were formed into a regiment called The Nova Scotia Refugees of which Mr. Throop was lieutenant colonel. It is unnecessary to say that his merits were not overlooked by the state. eventually settled at Chenango, and was very active in promoting the settlement of that valley. E. B. O'C.]

* For the History of the Capuchins in general the fullest work is the Annales Capuccinorum of Father Zachary Boverius, and its continution by Father Marcellus de Pisa. Lyons, 1676.

THE AUTHORSHIP OF THE DISPUTED NUMBERS OF THE FEDERALIST. A writer in the New York Times thus attempts to settle the authorship of Nos. 49 to 58 and 62, 63 of the Federalist:

As is well known, the work consists of eighty-five numbers. Of these, five were beyond all question written by John Jay, and the remaining eighty by Alexander Hamilton and James Madison, either separately or conjointly. According to one statement, for which the ultimate authority is Hamilton himself, he was the sole author of sixty-three numbers, and joint author of three more, leaving but fourteen to Madison. According to another statement, for which Madison is the ultimate authority, he was the author of twenty-nine numbers, leaving fifty-one to Hamilton.

It is quite conceivable that either Madison or Hamilton, after an interval of twenty or more years, might have fallen into an error as to the authorship of one or two out of eighty papers, written by consultation, for a common purpose, and under a common signature; but it is not credible that they should have been mistaken as to fifteen; that Madison, for instance, should have supposed himself to be the author of more than twice as many papers as he actually wrote. Still less can we suppose that either Madison or Hamilton would write or utter a falsehood in the case. There must be some means of reconciling the discrepancy in these statements. That means, we think, and shall endeavor to show, lies upon the very face of the admitted facts. The essential facts are as follows:

First, as to Hamilton. Two days before his death, when the duel with Burr was impending, Hamilton stepped into the office of his friend, Judge Benson. Finding him absent, he took a book from the shelves. placed in it a small scrap of paper, and left. Upon this paper was written as follows:

"Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 54, by J. Nos. 10, 14, 37, to 48, inclusive, M. Nos. 18, 19, 20, M. and H. jointly.

All the others by H."

That this memorandum was intended to designate the authors of the different numbers of the Federalist is unquestioned. HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

it Hamilton claims for himself the sole authorship of sixty-three numbers, and the joint authorship of three, leaving to Madison the joint authorship of three, and the sole authorship of but fourteen. Upon this memorandum rests the sole authority for attributing sixty-three numbers of the Federalist to Hamilton. Every statement to that effect is derived, either mediately or immediately, from this memorandum of Hamilton.

Second, as to Madison. There are two statements by him, both to precisely the same effect. One is in a copy of the Federalist, in which, at the end of each number, the name of the reputed author was printed, in accordance with Hamilton's memorandum. This was corrected by Madison, who with his own hand crased the name of Hamilton from certain numbers, and substituted his own initials, thus claiming for himself the authorship. This volume belonged to Richard Rush. The other statement of Madison is contained in an edition of the Federalist published by Gideon, in 1818, for which he corrected the papers claimed by himself, and furnished the names of the respective writers. In this list the figures for each number are expressed in full. These lists agree exactly. and are to the following effect:

Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5, 64, by Jay. Nos. 10, 14, 18, 19, 20, 37, to 58, 62, 63, by Madison.

All the others by Hamilton.

It will be seen that by this list Madison claims for himself twenty-nine numbers and leaves fifty-one to Hamilton. The discrepancy between this statement and that of Hamilton's memorandum in respect to the "joint" numbers, 18, 19, and 20, is satisfactorily explained by Madison in the following note to No. 18, written in his own copy of the former edition, and printed in this edition.

"The subject of this and the two following numbers happened to be taken up by both Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Madison. What had been prepared by Mr. Hamilton, who had entered more briefly into the subject, was left with Mr. M., on its appearing that the latter was engaged in it, with larger materials, and with a view to a more precise delineation, and from the pen of the latter the several papers went to press."

There is, therefore, no real discrepancy between the statements of Madison and Hamilton in regard to these three numbers.

The question is as to the twelve numbers, 49 to 58, and 62, 63. The ten consecutive numbers, 49 to 58, are among the ablest and most elaborate in the work, and it is utterly impossible that either Hamilton or Madison, upon deliberate examination, could be mistaken as to whether he wrote them. Yet both apparently lay claim to them under their own hands—Madison deliberately, formally and repeatedly, and Hamilton by omitting them from the numbers specially assigned to the others. Madison, at all events, could not by any reasonable possibility have been mistaken.

We propose to reconcile this apparently direct contradiction involving the authorship of these ten consecutive numbers, by supposing a mistake of a single figure in Hamilton's memorandum—a mistake which he had no opportunity of correcting, for within two days from the time when it was written he was a corpse. We suppose that instead of "37 to 48 inclusive," he should have written "37 to 58 inclusive." This simple substitution of a "5" for a "4" will give to Madison ten out of the twelve disputed numbers of the Federalist.

The list of Hamilton, it should be borne in mind, was a mere memorandum, without address or signature, written in haste, and probably from memory, at a time when his mind was burdened with the fearful weight of the responsibility of the duel in which he was to be engaged in a few hours. How great was his sense of that responsibility. no one can understand who is not acquainted with the circumstances of the time, which in his judgment, rendered it necessary for the safety of the country that he, conscientiously opposed as he was to dueling, should not decline the challenge of Burr. He never saw that memorandum after he had placed it in the book in Benson's libra-

Every one knows the difficulty, the impossibility almost of positively recollecting

a single insolated figure out of a score. Every one knows how liable he is to write one figure for another. In writing this very paper, with all the figures clearly in our mind, we made, in fast writing more than one lapsus pennæ, of precisely the character supposed. What more probable than that Hamilton, in these circumstances, should have made the error which we have supposed?

The probability of our supposition is increased by the fact that an error of precisely similar character does indisputably occur in this very memorandum of Hamilton. In this he says that No. " 54" was written by Jay. Now it is certain, and admitted and affirmed by all parties in the dispute, that No. 54 was not written by Jay, while "64" was. By this one mistake in writing a 5 for a 6, Hamilton makes three distinct misstatements: He attributes to Jay a number which he did not write; he denies to him a number which he did write, and he ascribes to himself a number which he certainly did not write. One such error being proved and admitted, enhances the probability of another similar one, especially when its admission furnishes a certain, and apparently the only, means of reconciling statements otherwise absolutely contradictory.

The external evidence thus corrected, seems to us to show, almost to a demonstration, that the ten numbers of the Federalist, 49 to 58, were written by Madison and not by Hamilton.

The internal evidence furnished by the numbers themselves seems to us to point unmistakably in the same direction. We lay no stress upon the mere point of style; for both Hamilton and Madison wrote pure English, without mannerisms or affectation.

No one, we think, from the style alone, could distinguish any paper by one from any one by the other. We rely wholly upon the topics, and the connection of the different numbers. Numbers 47 and 48 are, without question, Madison's. The title of 47 is: "The Meaning of the Maxim, which requires a Separation of the Departments of Power, Examined and Ascertained;" the title of 48 is: "The Same Subject Continued, with a view of giving Efficacy in Practice to that Maxim;" the titles of 49 and 50 are: "The Same Subject Continued, with the Same View;" the title of 51 is : "The Same Subject Continued, with the Same view, and Concluded." These five numbers are thus really but parts of one essay. The first two parts are certainly by Madison, and the antecedent probability is that the others are his also, for it is not likely that an essay tending to one point would be commenced by one and finished by the other. Number 52 commences a new essay on a topic closely allied to the preceding one. It is entitled, "Concerning the House of Representatives," &c. Numbers 53 to 58 are all entitled, "The Same Subject Continued," &c. seven numbers are thus parts of a single essay, without doubt written by the same person. It, as we have seen, is claimed for both writers. To assign them to Madison with the three preceding numbers, requires, as we have shown, the alteration of but a single figure in the hasty memorandum of Hamilton; while, in order to assign them to Hamilton, we must consider the deliberate signatures of Madison, and as many of his careful erasures in Rush's copy, to be willful falsifications, and also set down twenty figures or printed words, certified to by him in Gideon's edition, to be false and fraudulent.

Numbers 59, 60, 61, form but a single essay, the subject of which is "Concerning the Regulation of Elections." These numbers are certainly Hamilton's, and are ascribed to him by all statements.

Numbers 62 and 63, the two remaining ones, claimed for both Madison and Hamilton, are parts of a single essay "Concerning the Constitution of the Senate." In the distribution of topics this would naturally be assigned to the writer who had treated of the "Departments of Power" and of the "House of Representatives." As we have shown, we think, beyond all reasonable doubt, that these latter belong to hadison, we have no hesitation in giving to his formal and repeated claim to numbers 62 and 63, the preference over the merely implied claim contained in Hamilton's memorandum. To assign these numbers to Hamilton we must convict Madison of repeated and willful falsehood, while to assign them to Madison, we have only to suppose that Hamilton inadvertently omitted to credit them to his associate. Number 64 is a continuation of the Essay on the "Constitution of the Senate." It treats of that body "in regard to the power of making treaties." That this was written by Jay, is admitted, although Hamilton, in consequence of the admitted error to which we have adverted, virtually, though innocently, claims it for himself. Jay, who had written nothing since the fifth number, and who wrote no subsequent one, doubtless undertook this because his position as Secretary of Foreign Affairs made him especially familiar with the topic in hand.

We admit that the evidence in favor of Madison's claim to numbers 62 and 63 is less decisive than that to the others in dispute. This arises from two causes. First, because the "Constitution of the Senate" is continued in numbers 65 and 66, which are certainly Hamilton's; and we should here. as before, have expected that one subject would be treated by one writer; and secondly, because to give them to Madison we must suppose that Hamilton wholly forgot the authorship of two numbers, instead of merely, as in the case of 49 to 58, making a single error in remembering or writing a figure. Still, we think the balance of evidence, external and internal, in reference to these numbers to be decidedly in favor of Madison, even if they stood alone. When in addition to this, we consider that out of twelve disputed points, the evidence as to ten amounts almost to demonstration on one side, we think that there is a clear presumption in its favor in the case of the other two. Moreover, in giving 62 and 63 to Madison, no imputation beyond inadvertence rests upon Hamilton-an inadvertence rendered wholly innocent by circumstances -while, in order to give them to Hamilton we must accuse Madison of willful, deliberand repeated falsehood-falsehood without motive, and liable to exposure.

Moreover, Hamilton revised and corrected his own portion of the Federalist, leaving those numbers written by Madison unaltered. If the twelve disputed numbers were written by him, he would have revised them as carefully as he did the rest; and they would doubtless have received as many alterations as the others. Now, by referring to Mr. John C. Hamilton's "Collated Texts," it will be seen that these twelve numbers are given by him, almost precisely as by Mr. Dawson. In two numbers there is no variation noted; and with the exception of a single wholly new paragraph in No. 66, there are in the whole of these twelve numbers only a few trifling verbal changes. There are in the numbers, indisputably Hamilton's, no twelve consecutive numbers in which the alterations are not three times as numerous, while in some single numbers there are more than are found in the whole twelve. The inference is strong that these numbers were not corrected by Hamilton. If not corrected by him they were not written by him. And if not written by him, we may rest assured that he never intentionally laid claim to their authorship.

Mr. John C. Hamilton, indeed, place the name of his father over sixty-three numbers of the Federalist, including the disputed twelve. But his only authority is the evidence which he presents, every essential point of which we have analyzed. That evidence seems to us to show, almost to absolute demonstration, that the eighty-five numbers of the Federalist were written:

Five by John Jay, viz.: Nos. 2, 3, 4, 5,

Three by James Madison and Alexander Hamilton, jointly, viz.: Nos. 18, 19, 20.

Twenty-six by James Madison, viz.: Nos. 10, 14, 37, to 58, 62, 63.

FIFTY-ONE by Alexander Hamilton, viz.: Nos. 1, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 21, to 37, 59, 60, 61, 65, to 85.

We have proceeded throughout on the assumption that we have accurate copies of Hamilton's memorandum left with Judge Benson. There is every probability that such is the case—but it is not quite certain. The original disappeared many years ago. Benson wafered it into his copy of the Federalist, where it remained for some years. He subsequently removed it writing in its place what is presumed to be a copy of its contents. From this copy, as far as can be ascertained, have been taken, mediately or immediately, all subsequent citations. The original was given by Benson to the New York Society Library, and was inserted in its copy of the Federalist, from which it has been stolen, probably by some enthusiastic but unscrupulous autograph collector. We cannot learn that Judge Benson's copy, or any other, was ever carefully compared with the original memorandum. It is barely possible, though we think not at all probable, that in the original, if it were accessible, would be found 64 instead of "54" in the enumeration of Jay's papers; 53 instead of "48," and perhaps even the missing numbers "62" and "63" in the enumeration of Madison's. If the thief be still alive, he may now almost make atonement for his crime by sending the precious document to the Sanitary Commission. It would bring a fabulous price, and might be collated with the copies derived from it.

VIRGINIA "BLUE LAWS," 1663.—We have all heard more or less of the "Blue Laws" of Connecticut and of the "Blue Laws" of the South. But I did not know till since the present war commenced, that any such religio-legal enactments had ever been made by the Southern chivalry of the Ditch-land, as we have understood by this term of "Blue Laws." Some two years since, a soldier of the Potomac army, on entering the court house in Warwick county, Va., found the old records of the Court, which he forthwith confiscated and sent to me two pages, from which the following items are copied.

The paper is quite thick, and measures 16 by 10 inches. The chirography is peculiar, and there are twenty-six entries of decisions made by that court, under the date of Octerber 21st, 1663. This MS. is interesting, not only from its remote antiquity, but also on account of the information which it gives us as to the religious and legal manners of our southern neighbors, two hundred years ago. Witness the following:

"Mr. John Harlow, and Alice, his wife, being by the grand inquest presented for absenting themselves from church, are, according to the act, fined each of them fifty pounds of tobacco, and the said Mr. John Harlow ordered forthwith to pay one hundred pounds of tobacco to the sheriff, otherwise the said sheriff to levy by way of distress."

"Jane Harde, the wife of Henry Harde, being presented for not 'tending church, is according to act fined fifty pound of tobacco, and the sheriff is ordered to collect the same from her, and in case of non-payment to distress."

"John Lewis, his wife this day refusing to take the oath of allegiance, being ordered her, is committed into the sheriff's custody, to remain until she take the said oath, or until further ordered to the contrary."

"John Lewis, his wife, for absenting herself from church is fined fifty pounds of tobacco, to be collected by the sheriff, from her husband, and upon non-payment, the said sheriff to distress."

"Robert Reynolds, being prosecuted for absenting himself from church, and summoned by the sheriff, this court to make his appearance, and appearing not, is fined for both offences one hundred and fifty pounds of tobacco, to be levyed by the sheriff by way of distress upon his non-payment thereof.

"George Harwood, being prosecuted for his absenting himself from church, is fined fifty pounds of tobacco, to be levyed by way of distress by the sheriff upon bis non-payment thereof."

"Peter White and his wife being presented for common swearing, are fined fifty pounds of tobacco both of them, to be collected by the sheriff from the said White, and upon his non-payment of the same to distress."

"Richard Ring, being presented as a common swearer, is fined fifty pounds of tobacco, to be levyed by the Sherriff, by way of distress, upon his non-payment."

From all I can learn there was but, one "church" in Virginia in 1663, and that was the English, or what is now the Protestant Episcopal Church, and it was for non-attendance on this church that the fine of fifty pounds of tobacco was inflicted by the Old Dominion two hundred years ago; and the chivalrous descendants of the race that passed those laws in Virginia, have been the men, in later times, to taunt us with the memory of "blue laws," as if none such had ever been enacted except by the Yankees.

This record speaks of no fine imposed by the Virginia Court except in "tobacco," from which we learn that this weed was not only a staple commodity at that early period of our country, but it was so much so that it became a substitute for currency.

This ancient Record, thus brought to light by the fortunes of war, seems to me of some historical value, and accordingly I have deposited it for safe keeping in the archives of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, 13 Bromfield street, Boston. LA ROY SUNDERLAND.

Boston, July 19, 1864.

Tomb-Stone.—The oldest tomb-stone in the oldest burial-ground of Philadelphia, attached to the Swedes' Church in Swanson street, bears date the 12th of November, 1716, one hundred and forty-eight years ago, about thirty-four years after the landing of Penn. The lettering is legible, but the representation of an hour-glass and of the head of a cherub, carved in the stone, are very indistinct. The stone contains the following inscription: "Here lieth the body of Mary, wife of Andrew Robinson, who dyed November ye 12, 1716, aged 65 years."

SANITARY.—Some parties in England endeavored to make out that we Americans have blundered in spelling this now familiar word, pretending that it should be sanatory from sanare, to heal. But the London Notes and Queries justly remarks that sanitary, like the French sanitaire, meaning that which tends to preserve health, is derived from the Latin sanitas. Sanatory derived from sanare would mean curative, a different word and different idea.

It would be a pity indeed, if it had been true that we had raised millions to endorse a bad spelling. PRE-DEATH COFFINS AND MONUMENTS.

The London Notes and Queries have recently had some curious instances of these. A few weeks since, a soldier employed in putting up head boards for deceased soldiers in the army of the Potomac, closed his labors by painting his own name on a board, leaving the date blank. He was killed before night, thus actually in a manner carving his own tomb-stone.

NAME FOR THE CONFEDERATE STATES.

—Although we have adopted an appropriate and classic name for the seceding states, to wit, Secessia, from which comes the popular name of the people, Secesh, it would seem that some of our southern friends are busy coining a new name. The Richmond Examiner says:

There may be found advertised in various newspapers as " nearly ready for the press," a new work entitled "Apalachia, its Institutions, Literature, etc., by J. Robertson Reid, M. A. Chatabet, LL. D. What "Chatabet" is we do not pretend to know; but as the book is to be obtained by writing to the British Cousulate at Charleston, we presume its author is an Englishman. Charleston paper heralds it as "an eagerly expected volume," and points to the fact that the learned author, by his title, "gives a preference to the name Apalachia, and denoting the territorial limits of the Confederate States. Thereupon the Charleston journalist, admitting the high importance of adopting "a name for colloquial, journalistic and poetic uses," yet ventures to offer objections against Apalachia, in that it was once proposed for the United States; then mentions several other names which have been from time to time suggested, Allegania, Fredonia, Winland, Panola, Chicora; calls on Mr. Simms to propose or suggest a new name; "invites the consideration of thinkers."

It will take some citizens by surprise to learn that there is already on foot a learned conspiracy to give to their respective states a new name in common, and to make them, the said citizens, go about hereafter through the world as Apalachians, Winlanders, Panolans, or what not. This will not do.

The name of the state where we now indite is Virginia; that was always her name, she has answered to it since she was very young, and will probably bear it for many generations. If a man's godfathers and godmothers have christened him Tom, it signifies nothing to prove to him afterwards that Henry Augustus is more euphonious. The man's name is Tom—" in any bond, bill, quittance or obligation," Tom. We would, therefore, entreat Dr. Reid and Mr. Simms to leave us our old-fashioned cognomen and shall absolutely refuse any other.

Is there any country known to our readers in want of a name to "designate its territorial limits?" And if so where is it? These states we live in are all provided with names long ago; every name of them being historic and actually meaning somewhat—a quality in a name quite as important as euphony—and each State had a baptism and sponsors.

One cannot choose his own god-father and god-mother; and some persons if they could be christened over again would perhaps select different sponsors. Georgia might indeed have had a name associated with nobler memories than those of the four crowned scoundrels, of blessed memory. of that name. The Carolinas might have desired a name not recalling King Charles -but still North and South Carolina they are and will remain. Florida was so baptized by the Spaniards, from the glorious bloom of her flowers, which have never faded and Virginia attests to this day the ever sacred virginity of King Henry's daughter. As for the Confederacy, it is not a country; it is the name of a relation which, for the present, subsists between certain countries. It has no need of a territorial designation, inasmuch as it has no "territorial limits." It is a league, an alliance, a mutual agreement to transact certain business in common, so long as that arrangement may suit the parties, and the name of it is a Confederacy, not a Winland nor an Allegania. A Confederacy has no business with a name, either geographical. mythological or ethnological; and cannot rightly be called anything else than a Confederacy.

Even if there were a country here wanting a name, which there is not, what sort of propriety would there be in giving a designation to the Confederate States which would suggest the idea of their being still a portion of the United States? The Alleghany or Apalachian mountain chain extends from Maine to Alabama, just as the Mississippi runs from Minnesota to Louisiana; therefore, to give our Confederacy the name of "Allegania" or "Apalachia" would be only strengthening that famous geographical argument of Mr. Seward, that the physical geography of the continent has itself peremptorily decreed an indissoluble Union. "Winland" is, if possible still worse; for that is the name (Vinland) which the Icelanders, the first European discoverers of the continent, gave to Rhode Island. Those Scandinavians never came so far south as the most northern portion of the most northern Confederate State. Would any Confederate wish to borrow a name from Rhode Island? The writer in Charleston proposes yet another name, "Southland;" totally inadmissible also; that would be a name expressive of a relation to Pennsylvania, New York, &c.; but if our states are southward from those countries, they are northward from Mexico; it is as proper that their name should express their geographical relations to one foreign country as to another; therefore, Northland would be as appropriate as Southland. While the old Union subsisted, these were Southern States; they are so no longer; Virginia is now a northern State.

But we object to the whole idea of a new name; first, because there is nothing to be named; and second, because a common territorial designation would implant and foster that most mischievous notion of one united nationality, E Pluribus Unum. whereof the states are but counties or provinces.

WAR TROPHIES .- Masonic Matters .-Among the numerous trophies sent to me from the battle-field is an ancient book with the following title:

"A Candid Disquisition of the Principles and Practices of the Most Ancient and Honorable Society of Free and Accepted Masons. Together with some Strictures on the Origin, Nature and Design of the Institution. Dedicated by permission to the Most Noble and Most Worshipful Henry, Duke of Beaufort, &c., &c., Grand Master. By Wellius Calcott, P. M.

> -Ab ipso Ducit opes animumque ferro.

London: Printed, reprinted and sold by Brother Robert William McAlpine, in Marlborough street, Boston, A. L. 5772; A. D. 1772."

From entries made with the pen, it seems this book has been owned in Charleston, S. C., Norfolk and Newport News, Va. It was found in the Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, Va., 1862, whence it was sent to me by a member of the 29th Massachusetts regiment. In looking over its list of subscribers' names, I find Paul Revere, Joseph Warren, Epes Sargent, and other names of personages who took a distinguished part in our revolutionary struggle in 1776. gives an account of "Lodges Held in the Town of Boston, and the Time and Place of their Respective Meetings," and from which it appears that there were at that period three Masonic Jurisdictions in this city, and the Lodges met as follows:

"Under the Jurisdiction of the Right Worshipful John Rowe, Esq., The Grand Lodge and Quarterly Communication—King street." "The Master's Lodge," and "The First Lodge in the same place." Second Lodge at the Bunch of Grapes," and "The Rising Sun Lodge at the British Coffee House."

"Under the Jurisdiction of The Most Worshipful Joseph Warren, Esq., viz: The Grand Lodge and Quarterly Communication, at Free-Masons's Hall, near Hanover street. The Lodge of St. Andrew in said Hall," and "The Lodge of Massachusetts, No. 2, at Concert Hall, near Queen street."

"Under the Jurisdiction of the Right Worshipful and Most Noble John, Duke and Marquis of Athol, &c., &c, Ancient York, No. 169, at Mr. Alexander's, Battery

March."

This book is of some historical value, especially to the Masonic Fraternity, as it contains among other interesting matter, one very ancient document on "Macourge," alleged to have been written by "Kynge Henrye the Sixthe of Engelonde." L. R. S.

ELMA, A FEMALE CHRISTIAN NAME.—In London Notes and Queries, (3d S. v. p. 97,) an inquiry is made as to the origin of Elma, the Christian name of the daughter of the Earl of Elgin. The quærist supposes it formed from the initial syllables of her mother Elizabeth Mary. In this country the name exists, but is an abbreviation of Gulielma. The victim of the Manhatten Well murder, in New York, many years since was Elma Sands, whose real name was Gulielma.

A SINGULAR MARRIAGE IN OLD TIMES. -Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler in a recent letter from Greenfield, Conn., relates the following interesting incident of its early history: "Rev. Stephen Mix made a journey to Northampton, in 1696, in search of a wife. He arrived at the Rev. Solomon Stoddard's, informed him of the object of his visit, and that the pressure of home duties required the utmost dispatch. Mr. Stoddard took him into the room where his daughters were, and introduced him to Mary, Esther, Christiana, Sarah, Rebekah, and Hannah, and then retired. Mr. Mix addressing Mary, the eldest daughter, said he had lately been settled at Weathersfield, and was desirous of obtaining a wife, and concluded by offering her his heart and hand. She blushingly replied that so important a proposition required time for consideration. He rejoined that he was pleased that she asked for suitable time for reflection, and that, in order to afford her the needed opportunity to think of his proposal, he would step into the next room and smoke a pipe with her father, and she could report to him. Having smoked his pipe and sent a message to Miss Mary that he was ready for her answer, she came in and asked for further time for consideration. He replied that she could reflect still longer on the subject, and send her answer by letter to Weathersfield. In a few weeks he received her reply, which is probably the most laconic epistle ever penned. Here is the model letter which was soon followed by a wedding:

NORTHAMPTON, 1696.

Rev. Stephen Mix,

Yes,

Mary Stoddard.

The matrimonial Mix-ture took place on the 1st of December, 1696, and proved to be compounded of most congenial elements.

THE FIRST CELEBRATION OF INDEPEND-ENCE, IN BOSTON .-- "Thursday last, pursuant to the order of the honorable council, was proclaimed from the balcony of the state house in this town, the DECLARATION of the AMERICAN CONGRESS, absolving the United Colonies from their allegiance to the British crown, and declaring them FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES. There were present on the occasion in the council chamber, a committee of council, a number of the honorable house of representatives, the Magistrates, Ministers, Selectmen, and other Gentlemen of Boston and the neighboring Towns: also the Commission officers of the Continental Regiments stationed here, and other Officers. Two of these regiments were under Arms in King street, formed into three lines on the North Sides of the Street, and in thirteen Divisions: and a detachment from the Massachusetts Regiment of Artillery, with two pieces of Cannon, was on their Right Wing. At One o'clock the Declaration was proclaimed by Col. Thomas Crafts, which was received with great Joy. expressed by three Huzzas from a great Concourse of People assembled on the Occasion. After which on a Signal given, Thirteen Pieces of Cannon were fired from the Fort on Fort-Hill; the Forts at Dorchester Neck, the Castle, Nantasket and Point Alderton, likewise discharged their Cannon. the Detachment of Artillery fired their Cannon Thirteen Times, which was followed by the two Regiments giving their fire from the Thirteen Divisions in succession. These firings corresponded to the number of the American States United. The Ceremony was closed with a proper Collation to the Gentlemen in the Council Chamber; during which the following Toasts were given by the President of the Council, and heartily pledged by the Company, viz.:

"Prosperity and Perpetuity to the United States of America.

"The American Congress.

"The General Court of the State of Massachusetts Bay.

"Gen. Washington, and success to the Arms of the United States:

rms of the United States:

"The downfall of Tyrants and Tyranny.

"The universal Prevalence of Civil and Religious Liberty.

"The Friends of the United States in all Quarters of the Globe.

"The Bells in Town were rung on the Occasion; and undissembled Festivity cheered and brightened every Face.

"On the same Evening, the King's Arms and every sign with any Resemblance of it, whether Lion and Crown, Pestle and Mortar and Crown, Heart and Crown, &c., together with every sign that belonged to a Tory, was taken down, and the latter made a general Conflagration of in King Street" [now State Street].

[From the New England Chronicle, published by Edward E. Powars and Nathaniel Willis, Queen Street, Boston, July 25, 1776.]

THE PITTSFIELD ELM.—A correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser speaks as follows of the removal of the celebrated Pittsfield elm, that majestic relic of the past, once so familiar to many of our readers:

"Pittsfield and all who have sprung from the fruitful loins of that ancient town, are in mourning—for the 'Old Elm is not.' A few days since this venerable landmark was taken down, lest in some sudden fall it should spread ruin through the little park that surrounds it, and wake from their prolonged slumbers the rude forefathers of the hamlet, whose graves were first made in the church-yard hard by. The Old Elm HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 40 was one of the noted trees of America; admired by all who saw it, but especially dear to those whose early and home associations had been connected with it. More than a hundred years ago, the Old Elm was noticed and protected by the first settlers, and made, as the Berkshire Eagle well says, 'the first centralizing power of the town, which thus crystalized around a nucleus of natural beauty.'

"It was sixty-eight feet from the ground to the first limb, and above this, a crown of foliage lifted itself into the air for sixty feet, graceful and beautiful for many years, but lately sadly bereft by storm and lightning, and the ravages of age, of many of its ancient glories. The rings of the fallen tree, carefully counted under a magnifier, indicated the ripe old age of three hundred and forty years. Twice since 1840 has the lightning scorched the old tree, rending and wrecking it, and evoking the deepest solicitude from the towns-people, who tenderly ministered unto its necessi-It was ever high treason in Pittsfield to fail of unconditional loyalty to the Old Elm. Under its protecting arms the quota of Pittsfield in 1776 gathered for the first war of Independence. Again, in 1812, similar scenes were repeated; and during this terrible war, thousands of the men of Western Massachusetts have gathered here to receive the last farewell of friends before they entered upon the invasion of a soil, rendered doubly sacred by the martyrblood of the heroes who have fallen in defence of civil order and the Constitution, and the right of all men to personal liberty.

"As the tree fell so it did not lie. It was at once beset by relic-hunters, who would have carried away every fragment of sound and decayed wood, had not an auction been improvised, and what was left sold to a citizen, who promises to make the wood up into memorials.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION OF 1800 (vol. viii, p. 240). On line 25, col 1., for Republicans read Federalists.

NEW ORLEANS .- It is well enough, perhaps, to recur occasionally to the city in which we live, and to consider what changes time makes as to growth and prosperity. When Louisiana was ceded to the United States, New Orleans contained only about eight thousand inhabitants. It then had an existence of more than eighty years, for the first settlement was made by BIENVILLE in 1718. Indeed, when it passed from France to Spain, in 1743, it contained but little more than three thousand inhabitants; but from the time of its cession in 1803 to the United States, the city began to increase rapidly in growth and population, until we find it in a little more than half a century embracing a population exceeding 150,000. Such were the influences attending its association and connection with the other cities of our great Republic.

But it was not only in population that our city made progress. Seated, as it was, at the outlet of the Mississippi, it received at its levee all the products of the great and growing west, and its wealth advanced proportionably with its growth of population. The first newspaper published in New Orleans was in 1794, and was called the Moniteur. In 1860 we had ten daily newspapers, besides several periodicals of a literary and commercial character. Among the earliest of our public buildings was the Charity Hospital, originally, if we remember right, endowed by Senor ALMANZAR DE ROXAS, in 1786, and built at an expense of $114,000—a large amount of money in those days. This building was subsequently burned, but it was rebuilt in 1812. Senor Roxas was a great benefactor to the city. He built the old cathedral, and his remains now lie there covered by a marble tablet, detailing his benefactions and commemorating other of his deeds of kindness and charity. Probably the oldest edifice of note in our city is a building erected for the use of the Ursuline Nuns about the year 1730, known as the Ursuline Convent, subsequently occupied by the Roman Catholic Archbishop. PERIER, who superseded BIEN-VILLE in 1727, caused to be constructed the first levee in Louisanna, for about a mile in front of the city; and from this small beginning we owe all the levees since constructed along the river banks.

It is remarkable to note the increase of exports from about the date of the cession to the United States in 1803. These exports then amounted to about three and a half million dollars; in 1860 to one hundred and eight millions. In 1849 the southern and western produce received in New Orleans amounted to about eighty-two millions of dollars, in 1860 this had increased so as to amount to one hundred and eightyfive millions. The cotton crop received in New Orleans in 1836 was 495,443 bales; in 1853 the number amounted to 1,665,047 bales; and in 1860 the number was increased so as to amount to 2,255,458 balesthis latter amount being one half of the crop produced in the entire cotton states. Such has been the wonderful increase of the city of New Orleana in population and wealth since the destinies of Louisiana were united to the other states of the republic, and it will be noted that in previous years, with all her advantages, she remained for near half a century nearly stationary. It may be remarked, also, in passing, that the banking system in our city was regarded before the war as the safest and best in the Union. We had eleven banks, with an aggregate capital of about eighteen millions of dollars. Our city was at the very acme of her prosperity when the demon of secession invaded the hearts of her citizens, and the changes wrought during these last three years of wreck and ruin are fearful to note. From being the largest cotton mart of the world, and in receipt of millions of bales, she now esteems herself fortunate if she receive a few thousands of bales. Her commerce has fallen off, for she gave in 1860 at the Custom House 2,235 clearances, with a tonnage of 1,248,526; in fact, she was the second city of the United States in the amount and value of her exports, and no city of the world counted at her wharves so large a number of steamboats.—N. O. Times.

THE PROCK AND GYASCUTUS.—The following is a clipping from a newspaper, and purports to be a description of "actual and living inhabitants of our own country."—

The writer does not give his name, which is to be regretted. I have examined "Carver in his Appendix," but have not been fortunate enough to discover any reference to these animals in that work. Possibly I have not the right edition.

"There is a striking similarity between this case and that of one of the animals to which I refer, and which has hitherto been regarded as fabulous, but it is now demonstrated to be, as well as its companion, an actual and living inhabitant of our own country. Most of your readers have, I presume, laughed over the story of the Yankee who advertised for exhibition those extraordinary quadrupeds, the Prock and Gyascutus, but I suspect that very few ever heard of the origin of his description or supposed that it was founded on fact. If I recollect right, the first person who made mention of them, although not by name, was Captain Jonathan Carver, whose voyage to the Rocky Mountains, in 1665, is quoted by Mr. Greenbow, and in whose book the name of Oregon was first given by the river now known as the Columbia.

Carver, in his appendix, describing the various animals inhabiting that region, states that:--"In the country of the Osnobions, (Assinoboins) there is a singular beast, of the bigness of a horse, and having hoofs, whereof two legges on one side are always shorter than the other, by which means it is fitted to graze on the steep slopes of the mountains. It is of amazing swiftness, and to catch it the savages doe head it off, whereby it cannot run, but falls over and is so taken"-And further: "I was also told of one which I did not see. This is like to a bear in size, but covered with a shell as is the tortoise, with many horns along its back. It has great claws and teeth and is exceeding fierce, eating man and beast."

The scientific names, which in the case of the Prock, have been vulgarized, were conferred upon these reported animals by the French naturalists, who imagined them to be American." AN AMERICAN ADMIRAL IN RUSSIA, (Vol. VIII p. 248.)—Allow me to correct some mistakes in your article "An American Admiral in Russia;"

Admiral George Tate of the Russian Navy, was son of George Tate, who was born in England in 1700. George, the father had four sons, all born in England, viz, Samuel, Aug. 3, 1736, William, Nov. 14, 1740, George, June 14, 1745, in London, Robert, January 23, 1751. The father with his family came to Falmouth, now Portland, between 1751 and 1756, as agent for masts and spars for the British Government, and died in Falmouth Aug. 20, 1794. The Tate family in England, was seated at De la Préy abbey in North Hamptonshire. Two brothers were Lord Mayors of London, Sir Wm. in 1488, and Sir John, in 1496. The male line in England is extinct.

Samuel, the eldest son of the first George, commanded a large mast ship trading between Portland and England. Rev. Mr. Smith in his Journal, notes "May 16, 1766, Capt. Tate in a large mast ship, came here in 30 days from London." Again he says, "July 3, 1770, Capt. Tate in a large ship came in." Ann, a daughter of Samuel, his first child born in our Falmouth, March 1767, (two elder, having been born in England,) married Joseph H. Ingraham of Portland in 1789.

George, the Admiral, third son of George, born in London 1745, came to Falmouth with his father, a small boy. He was probably brought up a mariner as his brother and many of our Maine boys were. He entered the Russian naval service, and in 1770, was appointed by Catherine II. a Lieut. in her navy. He rose gradually in the service, and particularly distinguished himself in the siege of Ismail, a Turkish fortress and city, near the mouth of the Danube, by the Russian army and navy under Suwarrow, and in the final attack in December 1790, when it surrendered with an immense slaughter. This strong place was taken by storm after numerous attacks in which the Russians lost 10,000 men. The booty taken was very large, 230 pieces of cannon, 345 standards, 10,000 horses and numerous munitions of war. Tate was severely wounded in this engagement. but was promoted and received an order of merit for his gallant conduct. He also distinguished himself in the war with Sweden, for which he received from the Empress a gold medal; on the face of it was an effigy of the Empress, arround which was the inscription, as translated— "By the Grace of God, Katherine the Second Empress and Sovereign of all Russia." On the reverse, "Neighborly and forever Peace with Sweedland, concluded August 3d 1790." He was also promoted to be a Rear Admiral. He continued in the Russian service, through the reigns of Katherine, Paul and Alexander 1st, a period of more than 50 years, to his death, which took place Feb. 17, 1821 in the 76th year of his age. He was a favorite with Alexander 1st who promoted him to be First Admiral, and a member of the Imperial Senate. He received from his different sovereigns, badges of the order of St. Wladimar, of St. Alexander Newski, of St. Ann, and the military order of St. John, and died respected and honored by his sovereign and the peo-

The medal above referred to, he sent to his grand-niece, a daughter of his niece Mrs. Ingraham, accompanied by a letter to her father dated "Cronstaadt June 28, O. S. 1805," in which he says, "many thanks to Miss. Eliza for her letter and drawings. In return I send her a Gold Medal, the gift of her late majesty Katherine to me, at the conclusion of the Sweedish war, and whose portrait, a very good one, it represents."

Admiral Tate visited Portland in 1819, and was looking remarkably well. He was about the medium height, compactly and firmly built, full but not corpulent, and of dark complexion. A good portrait of him is preserved in the Ingraham family.

WM. WILLIS..

Portland, Sept., 1864.

O'CALLAGHAN'S HISTORY OF NEW NETHERLAND.—The Hackluyt Society Publication of 1860 p. 56, in a Memoir on Henry Hudson, pays the following well deserved compliment to this work:

"We seize this opportunity for recommending Dr. O'CALLAGHAN'S charming work to those few of our readers who might feel interest enough in Henry Hudson to follow up the subject of his splendid discovery. The history of the banks of the Hudson have here been chronicled in a manner not the less attractive for being entirely unassuming and natural."

Hooding.—The operation practised by Sherman at Atlanta on Hood, of getting an antagonist out of a strong place and slipping into it, may well be called Hooding: as it is not the first time a Hood figured in it. During the Revolutionary War Sir Samuel Hood practised it on the Count de Grasse, luring him by a show of fight from a fine position which he took and from which the Count was unable to dislodge them, although he attacked him day afte day for some weeks.

GOVERNORS OF PENNSYLVANIA.—(Vol. VIII. 266). The table published in the Hist. Mag., omits the name of WILLIAM MARKHAM, the first deputy governor of Pennsylvania. His commission from William Penn, dated April 10, 1681, is on record in Secretary of State's office, Albany.

E. B. O'C.

Spanish Priests in New York.—In 1708 some Spanish priests were taken prisoners and brought into New York. On the 10 Dec. of that year, a warrant was drawn in favor of Elizabeth Cole for £16. 13. 6. for their diet and lodging. E. B. O'C.

PICAYUNE APPROPRIATION.—The smallest appropriation probably ever made by an Act of Legislature was in 1713, when that of New York voted "the sum of sixpence to William Smith in full discharge of a debt of £356. 17s. 10½d. See the Law. O'C.

QUERIES.

TRACTS BY ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.—Can any reader of the Historical Magazine send a copy of either of the following tracts, or give notice where a copy may be seen? Answer to the nine objections published in 1827; 2. Answer to Bishop Onderdonk's charge, published in 1833; 3. Eulogy on St. Patrick, published in 1835.

REPLIES.

Bennett Wheeler's Pope's Essay on Man.—(Vol. viii, p. 248). Bennett Wheeler's reprint of Pope's Essay on Man was not the first American Edition. It was printed by William Bradford, Phil., in 1747, which may be called the first edition until an earlier one is discovered.

It was also printed by Hugh Gaines, New York, in 1786, and we have also seen copies printed in New London, 1791; New York, Duyckinck, 1796; and numerous others printed in Plymouth, Springfield, Brookfield, Dover, and other places.

The earliest book we have seen with the imprint of Bennett Wheeler is Watt's Psalms, Providence, R. I., printed and sold by Bennett Wheeler. 1781.

O. Z.

Boodle (Vol. VIII, p. 245.)—Although the dictionaries translate the Dutch word boedel into estate, the English word estate is not translated into boedel. The word probably comes from the low Saxon, "imbudel, budel, bödel, böel," and means not an estate, but property, possessions; not the house or lands, but the property which is in the house; not "real estate," nor "bonds or stocks, but household goods, linen, jewelry, silverware, works of art, &c.—"goods and chattels." Hence the word boedel is almost entirely superseded by imboedel. The contraction of boedel is boel, and is in vulgar use for much or many, or for a quantity or number. For instance, "een heele boel water," or "een heele boel knikkers," for much water, or many marbles; or in this manner—"Some big loafers were very noisy on Sunday afternoon at the corner of the street, but the police took "the whole boodle of them" (see Bartlett's Dictionary of Americanisms) "de heele boel" to the station-house." The word does not seem to be in use in New York.

S. A.

THE TEN ORATORS OF ATHENS. (VOL. VIII, p. 278.)—SHAWMUT can find a copy of the work he seeks in the Library of Harvard College. It is entitled "Harpocrationis Lexicon in decem Oratores Atticos ex Recensione Gulielomi Dindoru." Qtom Oxonu, 1853. 8.

Societies and their Proceedings.

MAINE.

THE MAINE HISTORICAL SOCIETY-Brunswick, Aug. 4.—Held its annual meeting for the transaction of business at its rooms in Bowdoin College, Brunswick, on August 4th. The Hon. Edward E. Bourne of Kennebunk was elected President, in place of the Hon. William Willis, who declined a re-election two years ago; but has held the office until the present meeting at the request of the Society. For more than the third of a century Mr. W. has been identified with this body, and the history of the state. He is now engaged in the re-issue of the first volume, of the Society's Publications. The principal part of which, as well as many other valuable papers in the subsequent volumes, is the production of his pen. This portion of the volume is part of the History of Portland; to be enlarged in both the first and second volumes; and to be continued out of his abundant materials to the present day. Judge Bourne is well known for his historic taste and diligent research, and will be ready to sustain and carry onward all the work proposed by the Society.

The by-laws were so amended as to allow vacancies to be filled and three members added to the number previously chosen. Thirteen new members were elected.

A report from the delegation of the society to the Popham Celebration last year, was presented by Judge Bourne, in which the Society was urged to encourage this celebration, and others of a like nature. Acting on this suggestion, and in response to an invitation from the executive committee on that celebration, a committee was appointed to represent the Society on the proposed occasion, at Bath, August 29th., consisting of Rufus K. Sewell, Esq., Rev. Pres. Woods, Hon. S. P. Benson, Hon. W. G. Barrows, and Hon. J. A. Poor.

The following gentlemen are the officers of the Society for the coming year: Hon. E. E. Bourne, Kennebunk, President; Rt. Rev. Geo. Burgess, D. D., Gardiner, Vice-President; Hon. J. W. Bradbury, Augusta, Corresponding Secretary; Rev. Edward Ballard, Recording Secretary; Rev. A. S. Packard, D. D., and A. C. Robbins, Esq., Treasurers. The last three persons are of Brunswick. Three members were added to fill vacancies on the committees.

No better opportunity can be found for research in history than is furnished in Maine. Its geographical relation to the mother country, led it to be the first of the New England territory to be occupied by an English colony, and the ill-requited labors and expenditures of Sir Ferdinando Gorges. The two Pophams and Gilbert, opened the way for settlements afterwards on our coasts, that were crowned with permanence. The new interest in her history has stimulated inquiry into her remote wants, and patient research has successfully removed the unhistorical allegations, which have been brought against the initial point" of her occupancy by the colony at the mouth of the Kennebec.

At the coming celebration of this event, Judge Bourne will deliver the address.

A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Willis for his long cherished interest and labors; and also commemorative of the work of the late Hon. R. H. Gardiner, one of the corporators of the institution in 1822.

MASSACHUSETTS.

New England Historic Generalogical Society.

—Boston, July 6. The regular meeting was holden at the Rooms of the Society, No. 13 Broomfield street. In the absence of the President and Vice-Presidents, Rev. Dr. Dorus Clark was called to the chair.

The Corresponding Secretary reported that since the last meeting letters accepting resident membership had been received from Rev. B. F. DeCosta, of Charleston, Benj. B. Torry, of Boston, Dr. Walcott Richards, of Waltham, and Edward M. Cary, of Boston.

The report of the Librarian showed that since the last meeting there had been received, volumes, 8; pamphlets, 38; pedigrees of the Scott and Appleton families; photograph of an ancient copperplate, recently exhumed at Castine. The Historiographer read a biographical sketch, of Beriah Botfield, M. P., F. S. A. &c, a corresponding member of the Society, who died at his residence in London, Aug. 7th, 1863, aged 56 years. Also of Wm. Jackson Davis, a corresponding member, who died in New York, March 26th. 1864. aged 45 years.

26th, 1864, aged 45 years.

Rev. John A. Vinton read a very interesting and carefully prepared paper on Deborah Sampson, who served as a soldier in the continental army during three years of the revolutionary contest, under the name of Robert Shurtliff. She was born in Plymton, Mass., December 17, 1760. A descendant of John Alden, of Miles Standish, of Rev. Peter Hobart and of Gov. Wm. Bradford, a cousin of Simeon Sampson, one of the most distinguished naval commanders of the revolution-there was much in her family relationship to awake her patriotism and inspire her prowess. The first male attire she donned previous to her enlistment, and as an introduction to the army, she spun and wove with her own hands. She enlisted under the above assumed name in April, 1781, had a personal share in the seige of Yorktown where the entrenchments were carried at the point of the bayonet, and witnessed the scene of the surrender of Cornwallis. She was afterwards wounded east of the Hudson. On recovering from her wounds she was engaged in some severe engagements with the Indians, and was finally appointed aide-de-camp to Gen. Patterson, and taken into his family; and all this time without a suspicion of her sex, and all subsequent knowledge proves her virtue and chastity without a blemish. Many exceedingly interesting details of her encounters were given by Mr. Vinton. Her sex was finally discovered by the physician who attended her in a severe iliness in Philadelphia, and was disclosed by him only to female attendants. She was honorably discharged from the army, Oct. 23, 1783,—she received the same pension as other soldiers. A few months after she had left the army she was married to Benjamin Gannett of Sharon, and was the affectionate and exemplary mother of a respectable family of children. She died in that town April 27, 1827, aged 66 years.

Mr. Vinton said that in many years of historical study, he could truly say that he thought no parallel to Deborah Sampson is to be found in the annals of any nation. The story of Semiramis is now fully exploded; Penthesilea and the Amazons never existed but in epic poetry; Boadicea, Joan of Arc, Elizabeth of England and Catharine of Russia are great names, but practised no concealment of sex, and the last two were of doubtful virtue. It is to be hoped a life of this remarkable person may be written out more fully by Mr. Vinton at a future day.

William Reed Deane, exhibited a photograph of a tablet in the chancel of the church at Haverhill, England, to the memory of Rev. John Ward of that place, father of Rev. Nathaniel Ward, of Ipswich, Mass., author of the Simple Cobbler of Agawam. The photograph was sent by W. W. Boreham, of Haverhill, to a descendant of the Rev. Messrs. Ward, who resides in this state. The quaint Latin verse on this tablet is well known, having been quoted and translated by Fuller in his worthies of England.

Mr. Deane also exhibited a caricature picture of Eng'and in the time of the revolution, dated 1780; its commerce represented by a milch cow, the American Congress sawing off her horns and a jolly Dutchman, a Frenchman, and a Sp. niard filling their bowls with her milk.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY .- Boston, July 7. -The monthly meeting was held on Thursday, July 7, at 4 P. M. In the absence of the President, Mr. Colburn, V. P., acted as chairman. Various matters of business were transacted, after which a large number of coins and medals were offered for examination. Messrs. Fowle and Pratt exhibited several of the English silver warmedals, mostly in very fine condition; the latter gentleman also had a parcel of gold coins of vari-ous countries, which was viewed with respect and admiration; among them were proofs of the half sovereign, sovereign and double sovereign of George IV. Mr. Davenport showed some curious American presidential medals and other pieces. The Secretary exhibited a number of very beautiful silver medals, principally French. The most remarkable is of size 38, and bears on one side the bust of King Henry II in armor; on the reverse is the full length figure of the King, crowned by two angels, and the inscription "Et pace et bello arma movet." One of Henry IV, commemorates the famous victory of Ivry, and one of Louis XIII, has on the reverse a richly dressed and ornamented bust of Maria de Medici. There was also a beautiful medal of Louis XVI, struck in honor of the peace of Versailles in 1783. The whole lot of medals were in perfect condition, and were very much and justly admired. The Society voted to omit the next two meetings. and adjourned till October.

OBITUARY.

REV. HUBBARD WINSLOW.—The public have read the various accounts of the death of the Rev. Hubbard Winslow, D. D., the widely known author and scholar, which have appeared in the secular and religious press of the land. He has a claim upon us as being an eminent member of an honorable and historic family and we accordingly record a few facts respecting his life and writings.

Dr. Winslow was born in Williston Vt., Oct. 30, 1799, and died at his old homestead, Williston, the 13th of August last, while on a visit there. He was a descendent of Kenelm Winslow, brother of Gov. Edward Winslow, in the seventh generation. It is not necessary to refer to his ancestral virtues and renown. family history is recorded in all the colonial and revolutionary histories of New England. Both of Dr. Winslow's brothers have figured widely in their respective spheres. The elder brother is the Rev. Myron Winslow, D. D., LL. D., the American missionary and Oriental scholar. The younger brother is the late Rev. Gordon Winslow, D. D., M. D., of the Sanitary Commission, drowned in the Potomac June last. Dr. Winslow prepared for college at Phillisp Academy, Mass., and graduated at Yale with the philosophical oration; studied theology there, and was ordained to the ministry of the Congregational Church. He received various calls, but first settled at Dover, N. H., where he remained three years. These years were blessed with fruitful results. He gave his first volume to the public, entitled Doctrine of the Trinity a book which gained extensive reputation for its author.

In 1832, he succeeded Lyman Beecher as pastor of the Bowdoin street church, Boston, where he ministered twelve years. During that time, he published various works, wrote largely for the journals, visited Europe, made various addresses before the literary and scientific bodies of the land, and enjoyed a remarkable degree of prosperity in his pastorate. Over a thousand communicants were added to his church, and he colonized several parishes.

In 1844. Dr. Winslow resigned his pastoral charge, owing to ill health, and afterwards had the care of the Mt. Vernon Institute, Boston, succeeding Jacob Abbott, and E. A. Andrews, the eminent Latin scholar. During this period of nine years he published books, and engaged in the educational reforms of the day. He was engaged with Horace Mann and others in these movements, furnishing contributions to the press and delivering public addresses.

In 1853, he again visited Europe, and spent ten months examining its public institutions, and attending the lectures of its savants. In 1857, he accepted the charge of the First Presbyterian Church, Geneva, N. Y., but was compelled to resign in 1859 owing to ill health. His ministry received nearly two hundred to its numbers by confession of faith. Since 1859 he has resided in New York city, devoting himself to the preparations of works for the press, and contributing to numerous journals and reviews. Among his works we state the following:

Moral Philosophy, Intellectual Philosophy, Christian Doctrines, Relation of Natural Science to Religion, Social and Civil Duties, Design and Mode of Baptism, Aids to Self Examination, Young Man's Aid, The Hidden Life, etc.

The philosophical writings of Dr. Winslow are his ablest and most enduring works. They have received the highest testimonials of their excellency from leading scholars every where. Their sale, as with all of Dr. Winslow's works, have been large. His mind was powerfully made, vigorous in its action, and of a keen, penetrative cast. Discrimination and clearness appear in all his writings. A ripe and generous scholarship embracing the languages, philosophy and science, was added to all his natural endowments. His position among American authors was highly respectable, and in his own province of philosophy he had few equals. In social and religious life, Dr. Winslow was eminently characterized by his genial and generous traits, his fidelity and zeal in the cause of his master. Few men have been so generally respected and esteemed in their avocations as was the subject of this sketch.

Notes on Books.

The Blennerhassett Papers, embodying the private Journal of Harman Blennerhassett and the hitherto unpublished Correspondence of Burr, Alston, Comfort, Tyler, Devereux, Dayton, Adair, Miro, Emmett, Theodosia Burr, Alston, Mrs. Blennerhassett and others, their contemporaries, developing the purposes and aims of those engaged in the attempted Wilkinson and Burr Revolution, embracing also the first account of the Spanish Association of Kentucky and a memoir of Blennerhassett. By William H. Safford, Cincinnati. Moore, Wilstach & Baldwin, 1864, 8°, 665 pp.

This is a remarkably fine volume, and may well be regarded with pride in the West. Publishing has hitherto been confined within a remarkably narrow circle. The mass of works are issued in Boston, New York, Philadelphia or Baltimore. The West must have its share.

Mr. Safford has here with patient and discriminating labor given a full and exhaustive memoir of Blennerhassett who has so long been an object of sympathy as a victim of the plots and schemes of Aaron Burr.

Biographical Sketches of Loyalists of the American Revolution, with an Historical Essay. By Lorenzo Sabine, in two volumes. Boston. Little, Brown & Co., 1864.

Mr. Sabine's Loyalists at its appearance opened a new vein of inquiry and modified many preconceived views of the great struggle for American Independence as well as of the actors on both sides. Valuable and important as that work was it labored under the difficulty of a first attempt in a new field, and it is a cause of no little satisfaction that Mr. Sabine has been leab to continue his researches and ultimately crown his labors by this elegant and comprehensive edition. Living for almost a generation among the descendants of the self-exiled adherents of the English rule, he became interested in them and by studying their history formed a theory of the history of the Revolution rather different from that popularly received. His elaborate historical essay gives a full and extended view of the state of political party in the colonies, the real importance of the question of taxation, the newspapers of the day, as preliminaries to the struggle, and of the motives for adherence, the unlawful treatment of many by mobs, the active services of the loyalists during the war, and their treatment subsequently by the British government and the attempts to obtain compensation for confiscated property from Congress. Every question of importance is thus handled and with ability, skill and research that leave nothing to desire.

Miscellany.

THE SANITARY FAIRS in their departments of Curiosities have brought out many remarkable antiquities and a perfect wealth of autographs. Among the noticeable things at that at Pittsburg were an unpublished letter from Washington to Judge Addison; a plan of Fort Duquesne by Mr. Lyon of Carlisle, who served under Forbes in 1758; Irwin's order book in Wayne's campaign 1777; a copy of Elliot's Indian Bible, wrongly represented as being one of four known copies, a Ballad of the Revolution by James Kemp; part of the letters and correspondence of Gen. St. Clair; an Indian traders account book in 1771-4, kept at Cuskuskies, an Indian town near the junction of the Mahoning and Shenango, Lawrence Co., Pa; letter book of Gen. Daniel Brodhead, 1779-81; Order books of Generals Jerome, McIntosh and Brodhead.

The autograph collection of the Mississippi Valley Sanitary Fair, is one that will repay examination, as the whole collection is to be sold by W. J. Stedman & Co., at the Woodward Bookstore, 90 North Fourth street, St. Louis, Mo., on the 7th and 8th of October. Autographs of Presidents, Vice-Presidents and Cabinet Officers, Signers of the Declaration, Generals of the Revolution, the War of 1812, and the present struggle, authors, artists, &c., will be found here. A letter of Gen. Jackson to Col. Pipkin Sept. 12, 1824, printed in our columns some time since is one of the collection. Foreign celebrities also claim their share.

THE NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY will commemorate, on Oct. 12 (anniversary of the surrender of the last Dutch fort on the Delaware), the 200th anniversary of the conquest of New Netherland by the English. The Hon. John R. Brodhead is to deliver the oration.

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

OCTOBER, 1864.

[No. 10.

General Bepartment.

THE TORY CONTINGENT IN THE BRI-TISH ARMY IN AMERICA IN 1781.

Mr Sabine, who first drew attention to the history of the Loyalists, contributed a work on them some years since, which has exercised a most remarkable effect in modifying views and compelling exact and discriminating research. He showed how large, important and influential both in the cabinet and field was the portion of the colonists who adhered to the king, and established the necessity of considering their motives and acts in the great struggle. The new edition in which Mr Sabine crowns the labor of years by putting into accessible shape his later researches gives us a work invaluable to the student, and of an elegance which does honor to Little, Brown & Co., who have produced it

Numbers of Loyalists joined the royal army, some doubtless as recruits to regular regiments, but many in provincial corps. The latter Mr Sabine estimates as high as twenty five thousand at least, and Loyalists in 1779 and 1782 claimed in public documents that the king had more Americans in his service than Congress had. They were in some of the best fought battles of the war at Bennington, King's Mountain, Pensacola, Savannah, Ninety Six, Hanging Rock, Eutaw Springs and Yorktown.

To give some idea of this force, we give a list published in Gaine's Universal Register or American and British Calendar, for the year 1781, printed we are to suppose late in the preceding year. The invaluable work of Mr Sabine enables us to add notes on many of these officers, which will enhance its interest.

"LIST OF THE OFFICERS OF HIS MAJES-TY'S PROVINCIAL TROOPS RAISED IN NORTH AMERICA.

GENERAL AND STAFF OFFICERS.

Oliver De Lancey, Esq;
Cortlandt Skinner, Esq;
Mountfort Brown, Esq;
Benedict Arnold, Esq;
Alexander Innes, Esq<sup>r</sup>; <sup>2</sup> Inspector General.
Henry Rooke, Esq<sup>r</sup>;
Ebenezer Bridgham, Esq<sup>r</sup>; <sup>3</sup> Deputies Hugh Mackay Gordon, Esq<sup>r</sup>;
Edward Winslow, Esq<sup>r</sup>; <sup>4</sup> Muster Master General.
Ward Chipman, Esq<sup>r</sup>; Dep M. Master Gen.

John Smith, Esq<sup>1</sup>; Paymaster General

Brother of Chief Justice De Lancey; born in New York in 1717; colonel in the French war, member of assembly, and then of the council, brigadier-general in 1776, attainted in 1777. He died at Beverley, England, in 1785.

Skinner was a cousin of De Lancey, speaker of the assembly of New Jersey, and attorney-

Skinner was a cousin of De Lancey, speaker of the assembly of New Jersey, and attorney-general. He died at Bristol, England, in 1799, aged 71.

Brown had been a governor of the Bahamas. Robert Cunningham, of S. C., was made a brigadier-general in 1780; but his appointment was not apparently known in New York.

<sup>2</sup> Innis was colonel of S. C. Royalists. He

<sup>2</sup> Innis was colonel of S. C. Royalists. He was defeated and wounded at Musgrove's Mills, on the Enoree, in 1780.

<sup>3</sup> Bridgham was a Boston merchant, banished in 1778

4 Nephew of Gen. John Winslow, of Acadian fame; graduated at Harvard in 1765; obtained a colonelcy under the crown in 1775; councilor, surrogate-general, judge of the supreme court, and administrator of the government of New Brunswick. Died at Frederickton in 1815, aged 70.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 41

QUEEN'S RANGERS.

J. Graves Simcoe, 1 lieutenant colonel commandant

Richard Armstrong, major

Captains of Cavalry John McGill9 John Saunders<sup>2</sup> Samuel Smith Alexander Wickham<sup>3</sup> John Whitlock David Shank 4 Æncas Shaw.

Captains of Infantry Lieutenants of Cavalry John McKav 5 Allan McNab 10 Francis Stevenson George Spencer John Wilson James Dunlap

Robert McCrea James Murray<sup>6</sup> James Kerr 7 Stair Agnew 8

Lieutenants of Infantry George Ormond

1 Born at Cotterstock, Eng., in 1752; came out as ensign of the 35th; wounded at Brandywine, as captain of the 40th; first governor of Upper Canada in 1791; major-general in 1794; governor of St. Domingo in 1796; lieutcnantgeneral in 1798; died at Torbay in 1806.

2 Saunders was a wealthy Virginian, who joined Dunmore with a troop of horse, raised at his own expense. In 1780 he commanded at Georgetown, S. C., and was twice wounded; was admitted to the bar in England, and died at Frederickton, N. B., in 1834, chief justice.

<sup>8</sup> John Wickham, of Va., ensign, and later, captain in the Rangers; a nephew of Fanning; was one of Burr's counsel in 1807.

4 Shank was a Virginian, who joined Dunmore in 1776, and fought on Long Island; in 1777, lieutenant; captain in 1778; and from Aug., 1779, commanded a troop of dragoons. He fought at Brandywine, Germantown, Monmouth, Charleston, and in Virginia. He retired on half pay in 1783. In 1791 Gov. Simcoe, of Upper Canada, gave him command of the Queen's Rangers Shank went to England in 1799; was made colonel in 1808; major-general in 1811; lieut. gen. in 1821; died at Glasgow Oct., 1831.

<sup>5</sup> Died in York county, N. B., in 1822.

<sup>6</sup> Died at Norfolk, Va., in 1789. <sup>7</sup> Died at Amherst, N. S., in 1830.

8 A Virginian, son, apparently, of Rev. Jno. Agnew. Wounded at the Brandywine, and, while on his way to Virginia, captured by the French fleet and taken to France. Died at Frederickton, N. B. in 1821, aged 63.

Died at Toronto, C. W., in 1834, aged 83. 10 Father of the famous Sir Allan McNab, of the Caroline affair. He was wounded 13 times in the revolution, and was for many years sergeant-at-arms of the assembly of Upper Canada.

William Atkinson Coronets Nathaniel Fitzpatrick Thomas Merrit 4 Thomas Murray William Digby Lawler Alexander Matheson B Muirson Woolsey George Pendred Ensigns. Charles Dunlap Hugh McKavi Swift Armstrong Adam Allen 2 John Wardlow Richard Holland 3 Charles Henry Miller Nathaniel Munday Caleb Howe St John Dunlap Charles Jones 5 Andrew McCann John Ross William Digby Lawler, Adjutant of Cavalry George Ormond, Adjutant of Infantry John Agnew, Chaplain 6 Alexander Mathson, Quarter Master

VOLUNTEERS OF IRELAND. Francis Lord Rawdon, colonel Welbore Ellis Doyle, lieutenant colonel John Campbell, major

Alexander Kellock, Surgeon 7

Captains John Dovle James King William Barry Charles Hastings William Blacker John McMahon David Dalton capt.

Charles Valancy8

Charles Bingham Thomas Proctor James Moffat8 Samuel Bradstreet Hugh Gillespie Henry Munro John Jewell Harman Black Ensigns.

lieut. Lieutenants

Edward Gilbourne Thomas Flynn John Wilson<sup>8</sup>

A Scotchman. He died at St. George's, N. B., in 1848, aged 97.

<sup>2</sup> Died at York county, N. B., in 1823, aged 66. <sup>3</sup> Was alive in 1843, at Dipper Harbor, N. B.

4 Afterwards sheriff of Niagara, and surveyor of the king's forests. Died at St. Catharine's, C. W., May, 1842.

<sup>5</sup> Killed at Yorktown, and buried with military honors.

6 Rector of Suffolk, Va.; read Dunmore's proclamation in his church, and left soon after; taken prisoner at sea and carried to France. Died at Frederickton, N. B., in 1812, aged 85.

An excellent surgeon; he was sent to Brunswick to attend Simcoe, when wounded and taken in 1777.

8 Sabine does not include this, apparently, among the tory corps, unless it be his 2d American regiment. He mentions a James Moffat, of R. I., a lieutenant in the 2d American regiment,

James Thompson Henry Powell Sargent David Whitley Marcus Ranford Walter Cunningham James Cordner

> Barker, Ceaplain James Keens, Adjutant James Slater, Quarter master George Armstrong, Surgeon.

> > NEW YORK VOLUNTEERS.

George Turnbull,1 lieutenant colonel commandant

Henry F. Sheridan 2 Major

Captains. Richard Kane Finley Burns John Coffin 3 Allan Cameron William M Johnstone

Duncan Munro Robert Paterson John Ludwick De Beck

John Althause Lieutenants

Cosby Hunt7 Thomas Walker Benjamin Townsend Allan Cummings Allan Cameron, junr-John Althause, jun

Ensigns

William Gray 4 John McGregor 5 Archibald McLean<sup>6</sup>

who, after the war, went to Shelburne, N. S., and Chas. Valancy, captain in the king's American regiment, and John Wilson, a lieutenant in the 2d American regiment.

1 Sabine calls the regiment the 3d American, or N. Y. Volunteers, which makes the previous one the 2d, as already inferred. In Oct., 1777, at Fort Montgomery, Turnbull was captain in the Loyal Americans, and, for his gallantry, put in command of the N. Y. Vol. In 1779, distin-guished at Savannah. In 1780, he three times repulsed Sumter at Rocky Mount.

<sup>2</sup> Was highly distinguished at the battle of Eutaw Springs in 1781.

3 John Coffin was of Boston. Volunteered at Bunker Hill; got a commission, rose to captain in the Orange Rangers, exchanged to the N. Y. V., and went to Georgia with it in 1778. Distinguished at Savannah, Hobkirk's Hill, Cross Creek; made brevet major for gallantry at Eutaw Springs; retired on half pay, and settled in New Brunswick. Colonel in British army in 1797; major-general in 1803; lieutenant-general in 1809; general in 1819. served many years in the assembly and council. He died in King's county, N. B., in 1838, aged 87.

Perhaps of Westchester, N. Y.; who died in N. B. in 1824. Of Philadelphia.

Drowned in the St. John, N. B., before 1805. According to Sabine, became a captain, dis-

Isaac Brown. 1 Chaplain Benjamin Townsend, Adjutant Quartermaster Surgeon

ROYAL FENSIBLE AMERICANS. Joseph Gorham, 2 lieutenant colonel command-Thomas Batt,3 major

Captains George Burns Gilfred Studholm Philip Bailey, capt. lieut

Ambrose Sherman 4 Constant Conner<sup>5</sup> Alexander Achison

Lieutenants R. Wilson John Walker

EnsignsWink Tongue William D. Street Alexander Sutherland<sup>6</sup> Joseph A. Gorham

John Eccleston, Chaplain Peter Clench, Adjutant Robert Spears, Quartermaster William Cullen, Surgeon.

NOVA SCOTIA VOLUNTEERS.

Governor Legge, colonel

Captains George H. Monck D. Cunningham Thomas Green John Vanput John Solomon Lieutenants

Jonas Tawson

Charles Morris William Pringle

Ensigns Thomas Cussee John Cunningham John Needham Thomas Fitzwilliams

tinguished at Eutaw Springs; staff adjutant in the war of 1812; member of assembly in New-Brunswick. Died at Nashwaak, N. B., in 1830, aged 76.

Probably of Westchester county, and a protester in 1775.

<sup>2</sup> Sabine supposes Gorham to have been a Massachusetts man. He raised his corps in December, 1775.

<sup>3</sup> Batt was major as early as Nov., 1776, and was then at Fort Cumberland.

4 Was also surgeon's mate. He went to New Brunswick, and was drowned there.

<sup>5</sup> Died subsequently at Halifax.

Was after commissioned in the British army.

BRIGADIER GENERAL DE LANCEY'S FIRST BATTALION

Oliver De Lancey, Esq; colonel John H. Cruger, 1 lieutenant colonel Joseph Green,2 major Honorable Bennet Walpole,3 brigade major

Captains James Galbreath Jacob Smith 4 Barrent Roorback 5 Thomas French 6

John Rooney 9 Charles McPherson<sup>10</sup> Thomas Havs Thomas Cunningham

Alexander McDonald7 George Kerr, capt. lieut.

Ensigns Nicholas E. Ord William Supple John Wormley Richard Boyle William Robins

Lieutenant James French<sup>8</sup>

> Charles Bowden, 11 Chaplain. Adjutant. Nathaniel Rogers, Quartermaster. Nathaniel Smith, 12 Surgeon.

<sup>1</sup>Cruger, a son-in-law of De Lancey, was a member of the council, and, at the beginning of the revolution, chamberlain of the city of New York. He is famous for his defense of Ninety-Six, and for his gallantry at Eutaw. He died in London in 1807, aged 69.

- 2 Went to Ireland at the peace.
- <sup>8</sup> Was also, according to Sabine, captain of infantry in the Queen's Rangers.
- Wounded at Ninety-Six; died on St. John's river, N. B., in 1837, aged 88.
- <sup>5</sup> A physician of New York, where, after the war, he settled on half pay. In 1806 he joined Miranda's project.
- Entrapped near Savannah by Col. White of Georgia, who, with six men, captured French with 111 men and 180 stand of arms.—(Sabine); but see H. M., vol. viii, p. 291.
- Not apparently the husband of Flora, but a namesake, who died in New Brunswick in 1835,
- <sup>8</sup> Died in York county, N. B., in 1820, aged 75.
- Wounded in 1780, ln Georgia, in a skirmish with Pickins, and killed at Ninety-Six.
- 10 Died apparently at St. John, N. B., in 1823, aged 81.
  - 11 Perhaps a son of Rev. John Bowden.
- 12 A physician of Rhode Island. Died in St. John, Ñ. B., in 1818, aged 81.

Brigadier General De Lancey's second BATTALION

Stephen De Lancey, lieutenant colonel Thomas Bowden, 2 major

Captains George Dunbar Thomas William Moore Colin Campbell<sup>8</sup> Samuel Hallet<sup>3</sup> Walter Campbell 4 Alexander Constable Daniel Cameron

Daniel Hallett Benjamin P. Griffith Justin McCartney William Brooke

Hawes Hatch 5 Edward Potts,6 capt. lieut

Ensigns Thomas Shrieve

Lieutenants

Henry Ferguson Angus McDermot Alexander McMillan Charles N. Taylor

Benjamin Lister 7 Geerge Brewerton 9 jr. Thomas Field, Chaplain

Daniel Cameron, Adjutant Edward Potts, Quartermaster John Johnson, Surgeon.

BRIGADIER GENERAL DE LANCEY'S THIRD BATTALION

> Gabriel F. Ludlow, 10 colonel Richard Hewlet, 11 lieutenant colonel

1 In 1765, clerk of the city and county of Albany; seized by the people in 1776, and sent to Hartford. In 1786, of the Nova Scotia council; subsequently chief justice of the Bahamas, and governor of Tobago. He died at Portsmouth, U. S., in 1799. His son, Col. Sir Wm. F. De Lancey, fell at Waterloo.

A New Yorker; wen to England at the peace.

3 Of Long Island; arrested in 1776. He finally settled at St. John, N. B.

Died at Musquash, N. B. <sup>5</sup> Of Boston, which he left in 1776 with the royal army. Died at Lebanon, N. H., in 1797.

6 In 1783, became a lieutenant in the British army

<sup>7</sup> Drowned in New Brunswick in 1808.

<sup>8</sup> Had been ensign and quartermaster. He died at St. Andrew, N. B., in 1843.

Probably son of George Brewerton, who died in 1719 in command of this battalion.

10 Of New York. In 1792, judge of vice-admiralty in New Brunswick. Commander-inchief of the colony in 1803. Died in 1808.

11 Of Hempstead. Captain in the French war, and at capture of Fort Frontenac; early took sides for the king. In 1777, he held Setauket against Gen. Parsons. He died near Gagetown, N. B., in 1789. His widow died on Long Island in 1819, Gabriel De Veber, 1 major.

Captains. Edward Allison 2 Gilbert Colden Willet Ichabud Smith 6 Charles Hewlet Elijah Miles 3 Thomas Lister<sup>4</sup>

Lieutenants.

Gerrard Clowes<sup>5</sup>

John Clowes 5 Edmund Evans Ensigns

William McFarland 7 Nathan Barnum Zachariah Brown 8 William Montgomery7

William Walter,9 Chaplain Alexander Clark Adjutant Edmund Evans, Quartermaster Charles Doughty, 7 Surgeon

King's American Regiment Edward Fanning, Esqr; 10 Colonel George Campbell, Esqr; lieutenant colonel James Grant, Esq; major

<sup>1</sup>He was, in 1782, lieutenant colonel of the Prince of Wales American Volunteers. He was sheriff of Sunbury county, N. B., in 1792, and

Of Long Island. Died in New Brunswick. <sup>8</sup> Died at Maugerville, Sunbury county, N. B., in 1831, aged 79.

4 Settled in New Brunswick, but returned to the U.S.

6 Gerard became captain. All three retired to New Brunswick on half pay. Gerardus was killed in 1798.

6 Afterwards captain lieutenant, Died at Maugerville, N. B., in 1823, aged 67.

7 After the peace they embarked on the transport ship Martha, which was wrecked near Tusket river. Of 170 men, women and children, only 65 were saved. Lieut. McFarland and Ensign Montgomery, and, apparently, Doughty, were lost, aged 78.

<sup>8</sup> Died in Sunbury county, N. B., in 1817,

Prector of Trinity church, Boston; a graduate of Harvard (1756); lost £7000 by his loyalty; went to New Brunswick, but returned to Boston, and was rector of Christ church. Died in 1800, aged 61.

10 Born on Long Island; son of Col. Phineas Fanning; graduated at Yale, and removed to North Carolina, where he was conspicuous as one of the causes of the Regulator outbreak. In 1777 he raised a corps of 460 men, called the Associated Refugees, or King's American Regiment, for which £2000 was subscrbied in New York, and £1019 in Kings and Richmond coun-

Dugald Campbell Captains. Abraham De Peyster<sup>1</sup>James McKay Thomas Cornwall Stephen Hustace George Cox Isaac Atwood John Sargent John W Livingston Leonard Reed Robert Gray Barclay Fanning Thomas Chapman Peter Clements 2 Jas De Peyster1 capt. Ensigns

lieut Lieutenants. William Wightman 3 Thomas Barker John Burn Roderick McLeod Peter J. Smith

John Young Alexander Grant David Purdy4 Elisha Budd<sup>5</sup> Edward Mecan Abel Hardenbrooke

Samuel Seabury, 6 Chaplain John Cruikshanks Adjutant George Thomas, Quartermaster Robert Tucker, Surgeon

PRINCE OF WALES' AMERICAN VOLUN-Mountfort Brown, Esq; colonel lieutenant colonel

John Carden,8 major ties. He served in Rhode Island, and on Long Island. In 1782, he was surveyor-general of New York. Sept. 23, 1763, lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia; from 1786 to 1805, lieutenantgovernor of Prince Edward's Island; majorgeneral in 1793; lieutenant-general in 1799; general in 1808. He died in London in 1818. Born at New York in 1753. He was second in command at King's Mountain in 1780. After the peace, was treasurer of New Brunswick. James was a younger brother. In 1786 he became first lieutenant in the royal artillery, and distinguished himself at Valenciennes in July. 1793, and was killed at Lincelles in August of that year.

<sup>2</sup> Died near Fredericton, N. B., in 1833, aged 94.

<sup>3</sup> Wounded at Hobkirk's Hill in 1781.

Son, perhaps, of a Capt. David Purdy of this regiment, who was wounded in 1778.

Born at White Plains; son of James Budd; killed by the Cow Boys. Ensign Budd was at Savannah, and in other actions in the south. After the peace, justice of the common pleas in Nova Scotia. Died at Liverpool, England, in 1813, aged 51.

<sup>6</sup> The well known Bishop of Connecticut. 7 Perhaps the Wilmington (N. C.) physicion, whose property was confiscated in 1779.

8 Was in command at Hanging Rock when at-Captains.

John Bowen
Stephen Hoyt
Daniel Lyman<sup>1</sup>
John Collet
Andrew Maxwell <sup>2</sup>
John Bridgewater<sup>3</sup>
Stephen Holland<sup>4</sup>
Charles McNeil, capt.
lieut.

Lieutenants.

Robert Keating
Patrick Jarret
John Ness
James Place
John Westrop
James Bridgham
John Wentworth Ho

James Shanks

Josiah Wheeler

John O Neill.

Thomas Lindsav

Ensigns.

James M'Donald'

Michael Ambrose<sup>6</sup>

Mathias Ross James Bridgham William Conroy junr. John Wentworth Hol-Monson Hoyt<sup>5</sup> land<sup>7</sup>

George Penton, Chaplain John Ness, Adjutant Monson Hoyt, Quarter master James H. Thomas, Surgeon. (To be continued.)

CAMP LIFE IN 1776—SIEGE OF BOSTON.

[I inclose a few extracts from a MS. journal of upwards of one hundred pages, kept by a revolutionary officer, who was a lieutenant in a Connecticut regiment. The journal is entitled, "Diera from Jan. 4th to April 6th, 1776." As it is too long for the H. M., I have copied what is of general interest, omitting personal details, and modernizing the spelling. I dont know where so minute a description of the particulars attending the evacuation of Boston by the British army in 1776, can be found as in the following diary.]

tacked by Sumter in 1780, and disgraced himself by resigning to Capt. Rouslet of the Infantry of the Legion during the action. Died in April, 1783.

A graduate of Yale in 1770. At the peace, he was major. Member of assembly of Nova Scotia. Died at the Invalids, London, in 1809.

<sup>2</sup>Of Maryland, apparently. A Maxwell, major of this regiment, surrendered Fort Granby to Lee. After the war, accused Arnold of arson, and was sued by the traitor, who recovered 2s. 6d. damages. Hoyt apparently lived on Long Island in 1792.

<sup>8</sup> Died in England in 1803, aged 69.

<sup>4</sup>One of this name at Portsmouth, N. H., was banished in 1778.

<sup>5</sup> Died in St. Martins, N. B.

<sup>6</sup> Perhaps a son of Alexander and the famous Flora McDonald.

Was a lieutenant at the close of the war.

Saturday, Jna. 6, 1776.—We set off about sunrise, [from Fisk's] and had a tedious walk into Providence, where we arrived between 10 and 11-took breakfast at Col. Dexter's -did several errands, and left town a little after 12; travelled a little out of the road, for the sake of seeing a very large burying place, north of the town, where I observed a remarkably fine tomb, in which was deposited Oliver Arnold, Attorney General; went forward to Stark's at Pawtucket, where drank some flip with a man from Guilford. Conn., who had just met with a fall from a horse, by which he was very wet and cold; after a short sitting, marched forward to Daggett's in Attleboro; where we arrived about sunset, and were agreeably intertained with the landlord's company during the evening. who also sung us several psalm tunes, and about 9 o'clock went to bed.

Sunday, Jan. 7,—We set off from Daggett's, about sunrise, came to Macka's, at 9 o'clock, where we ate breakfast; about 10 o'clock set off again; were diverted with Tracy's telling us some of the high transactions of the citizens. We came to Man's about 12 o'clock, at between meetings, where we drank some flip, and did some writing; then came forward to Hedden's, where we drank some more flip, and did some writing, then set off again and came to Cheney's, a little before sunset; concluded to lodge here tonight; had some fried mutton for supper.

Jan. 8,—Set off from Cheney's about sunrise, and travelled as far as Gay's before breakfast; called in again at Ames, Richard's & Child's, and about 3 o'clock came into Camp [at Roxbury]; found our company in the house that Col. Huntingdon lately occupied fixed our straw buncks prepared our lodgins, and went to bed alittle after 8 o'clock; was soon alarmed on the other side of the water; dressed myself, went up on to the hill, where I saw a small village near the water, on the west of Charlestown in flames.

Jan. 9,—After breakfast went over to Col. Parson's Reg't—saw Lieut. Baldwin and some others; drank some sling with them at Eldredge's; went into the Reg't. where I lit of Ensign Lyman, and drank some flip with him; saw a man who was in last night's attack on Charlestown, by whom I learned that about 400 men under Maj. Knowlton were sent there to burn the houses left standing by the Regulars when they burnt the rest of the town last June, [at Bunker Hill fight] which they effected with great success, burning all the houses, except two or three, and took five prisoners without the loss of a man.

Jan. 10,—After breakfast, went and took a view of the ground where we encamped last summer; now a desolate place, the tents all struck and carried off, the chimneys left partly standing and partly thrown down; but none of my companions with whom I have spent so many agreeable hours, now appear there, nor will they again, for some are already numbered with the dead.

Jan. 11,—After breakfast, went up onto our Regimental parade where I lit of one Lieut. Pidge of the minute men, who belongs to Attleboro, as he tells me. I find him an honest, uncultivated fellow who talked very sensibly and freely, on the two capital vices of the country, viz. the tyranny and pride of the Clergy (or as he calls them, the Bandeliers) and inslaving the Africans; he made many just observations thereon, but in coarse, vulgar language.

Sunday, Jan. 14,—About 2 o'clock went to my friend Burrell's where we dined on a noble good turkey, after which I sat awhile with him, his wife and some other ladies.

Jan. 18,—After breakfast, I took a walk up on the hill, and from there down to Gen. Spencer's. Coming back I met Capt Mills, who informed me of a Report in camp that Gen. Montgomery had been defeated near Quebec; but the Report being told several ways, we hope it is groundless.

Sunday, Jan, 21,—After breakfast took a walk up into the woods, beyond Parker's, the Butcher, and wrote twelve lines more, of the Poem I have in hand, viz:

Can any one whom Heaven's care hath bless'd, And by Almighty love hath been caress'd, &c

Sunday, Feb. 4,—Went to the Hospital about 10 o'clock and attended the funeral of Chas. Wright of our Company. He was buried in a new Burying Place at the south end of Jamaica Pond, where I observed about 20 graves which I suppose all to be of soldiers who have died in the Hospital; after the funeral, came home and dined with us; after dinner Capt Jewett and he had a long disputation on Church Discipline &c. I accidentally put in a word about the disputes amongst the clergy which hath appeared of late in Connecticut, rendering it (in my opinion) of as little value as half a dozen old Almanacks. This observation gave great offence insomuch, that a Rev. Divine present presumed to call me a Blasphemer, at least against man (as he said). In the evening had considerable discourse with Capt Jewett on the subjects of Religion, &c.

Feb. 14,—Just before day-light we were alarmed by seeing all the buildings on Dorchester Neck in flames, which made a grand appearance. While viewing them I lost a sly dog of a prisoner, who made his escape from the Guard. Had a good breakfast of fried eels, after which, feeling unwell, took a nan.

Feb. 19,—Made an evening visit at Col. Wyllys; where met a number of gentlemen: while there Col. Robinson and Mr Chase came in with little Ashley who was about to engage Maj. Park in a duel, which was a matter of great diversion to the company.

Feb. 26,—After breakfast, Lieut. Harris and I set off for Cambridge, with Mr Griffin, Capt. Darrow, Ensign Pendleton, &c. Obliged to go round by sign of the Punch Bowl, on account of the bridge over the creek being broken to pieces by the ice: Arrived at Cambridge about 11 o'clock, and went into a tavern for refreshment, where we found Capt. Giles Wolcott; then went over to the Colleges and to the Artillery Park, where we spent some time in viewing the Artillery and other warlike stores; then went to Prespect Hill, where we saw Generals Putnam and Sullivan viewing the works; then to Cobble Hill, after looking at the works there, crossed over a creek on very rotten ice to Leachmere's Point, where they are building a Bomb Battery. works here seem to be the most formidable of any post we have visited. Returned back to Durkee's Regt, called to see the Col. who was very sick of a fever; Lieut Bingham was also sick; came into town, called in to see Lieut Adams, where we found several officers playing cards, amongst the rest was Col. Alden and Coit; we here drank some todda, and dined on fresh cod fish, fried. Set off for home, called in at a tavern in Brookline, where we drank some flip with Capt Mason from Lebanon; our next remove we reached Capt Darrow's quarters where we were very agreeably entertained by Dr. Eley's singing, &c. while about 10 o'clock, when Lieut. Harris and poor Fitch waded home through the mud.

March, 2.—I took a walk up to the Meeting House; saw the train at fixing shells, &c; also saw four mortars which were brought over from Cambridge. A mighty report prevails that the militia of the neighboring towns for 20 miles around, are ordered in to our assistance in the intended attack on Boston. About 11 P. M. alarmed by the heavy report of Cannon or mortars, upon which Lieut. Harris and I went onto the hill, where we saw several shells hove from Boston over towards Leachmere Point; we also observed one hove from Cambridge side into Boston (which we judged to be from the "Congress,") It fell, as we think, near the center of the town, and by the sound of the explosion it probably fell into some cellar. The firing was continued from both sides till a late hour.

Sunday, March, 3d. Turned out before day, to the Alarm Post; then went down to our little fort, where we performed the parapet firing, and crinclecrancle marching, &c. in great plenty. Observed several shells hove each way, one in particular into Boston, which fell a little this side of the Alms House, the explosion of which illuminated a considerable of the hither part of Several shot were also fired. Informed that our people burst a 10 inch mortar last night, which wounded 3 or 4 men. Towards night our men were ordered to draw four days' provisions; a number of boats are carried from Dorchester, and a number of heavy cannon from Dorchester to Cambridge.

March, 4th "Going on to Dorchester neck to night," is now the toast of the day. About 10 oclock, took a walk up to the Meeting House, where I learned that a Brig.

General, Cols. Whitcomb, Reed, and Wyllys, with six other field officers, and two thousand men, properly officered, were to "go on to Dorchester this night" about the middle of the day, a very large party of teams made their appearance in camp engaged for our enterprise to-night.

March, 4th.—A little before sunset marched off from Roxbury; but for more than half a mile before we came to Dorchester lines, we overtook teams in great plenty. nor did we find any vacancy till we came to the lines; in some places they were so wedged in together, we were obliged to leave the road to get forward; reached the lines at 7 o'clock, where we waited half an hour for orders, when a signal was given and the cannonade began at Lamb's fort, and was immediately answered by a very warm fire from the enemy's lines; a brisk fire between N. Boston and our fortifications on Cambridge side, began soon after. It was supposed there was a thousand shot and shells hove this night, by both armies, more than threefourths of which were sent from Boston. Our party consisting of about 2400 men, with 300 teams, were crossing the marsh, on to the Neck, which together with a fresh breeze at S. W. concealed us from the enemy until they could see our works by day-light. The division to which I was assigned, commanded by Col. Whitcomb, was ordered on, to the northerly hill, where in one hour's time we had a fort enclosed, with fascines placed in shandelears; and we immediatley employed as many men at intrenching as could be advantageously, used for that purpose. A larger party was assigned the high hill, where they erected a larger fort, built much in the same manner as ours, There were also four other smaller forts and batteries erected this night on other eminences on the Neck.

March, 5th. 1776.—This is the anniversary of the celebrated "massacre" in the streets of Boston in 1770, and although there may not perhaps be so great a display of eloquence as has for several years been wont on this occasion, yet I dare say there has never been a more honorable appearance of American Policy, than what is this day obvious, both to our friends and enemies, especially in the town of Boston (the ancient theatre of those peculiar exhibitions) in taking possession of and fortifying the important post of Dorchester Neck. It may also be observed, that what is this day wanting in the beauties of rhetoric and oratory, is more than made up in the awful exhibition of artificial thunder and lightning which has been so entertaining to our eyes and ears the night past.—Our party, under the immediate command of Brig. Gen. Thomas, having taken possession of almost every advantageous eminence on the Neck, and considerably fortified them, were relieved by a detachment of 3000 men from the Roxbury lines, without the notice of the enemy: our division marching off in the rear of the whole, crossed the marsh a little before sunrise, but yet we escaped the shot of the enemy, and came home to our quarters sun about an hour high, weary and hungry. The excessive cannonade and bombard of last night, did no damage in Roxbury, except mortally wounding Lieut. Mayo of Col. Leonard's Regiment; he lately belonged to Roxbury; his father and friends now living in this town were some of them with him when he died. He was shot in the thigh by a cannon ball, which so fractured the bone that the surgeons immediately took off the limb up near the body, and although he did not bleed to excess, yet his pain was so exquisite occasioned by the bone being shivered to pieces quite to his hip joint, that he died about 9 o'clock in the morning. I hear that one man was killed, and 4 or 5 wounded last night on the Cambridge side. The firing ceased on both sides this morning, before sunrise; nor was it renewed thro' the whole day and night following. After taking some refreshment, walked up the Hill, to look over to my friends on Dorchester Hill, who appeared to go on with their work bravely, without interruption. About 10 o'clock the enemy gave them a few shots, some 50 or 60, but no damage done except spoiling two guns.

March 6th.—Two of our men were wounded on Dorchester Hill last night, one by a field piece going off by accident, while he was loading her; the other was wounded in the shoulder by a cannon shot from the Castle. A little before noon we were alarmed by a signal at the [Roxbury] Meeting House, that the enemy were landing on Dorchester; the Regiment was turned out, and kept in readiness for action the remaining part of the day; but it afterwards appeared this alarm happened some how thro' mistake.

March 6.—We were turned out at the alarm post, at 2 o'clock in the morning, and continued in line till almost sunrise.

March 8th.—About sunset we marched to Dorchester, and immediately proceeded to cross the Marsh. It rained moderately most of the night and part of next day. Col. Clark ordered our regiment, with Col. Robertson's and Col. Parsons' to march down and relieve Col. Shepherd's party at Nook's Point. We had no shelter thro' the night, but constantly kept fires. I visited the sentries on the beach several times; several false alarms during the night added to our fatigue.

March 9.—As it began to grow light our party was marched over to the Barrack, where they rested most of the forenoon. Our people have erected 7 barracks, each 90 feet long, most of them are covered. Towards night, Gen. Putnam and some other big officers, were at the barracks. Got Gen. Thomas' order for some rum for my party. On crossing the marsh again, were almost drowned in the mud; nor did we fare much better on the road to Roxbury, for in many places the mud was nearly as deep as the top of my boots: reached home a little before 9, with stomachs well prepared for eating, drinking, or sleeping. Soon after we got home, the enemy began to cannonade Nook's Point, probably occasioned by their discovering our intention to fortify that place: heavy firing of cannon all night, which killed Doct. Dole of Col. Whitney's Regt. and also a Lieut. and two other men.

Sunday, March 10.—By late movements in Boston, it appears they are vastly alarmed; and that the enemy are conveying away their treasure with all speed; many think they will soon leave the town. About 4 this P. M. I went with Lieut Harris up on to the Hill, and saw upwards of 20 vessels under sail, going out of the harbor.

March 11.—After breakfast, went up on to the Hill, to observe the situation of the enemy; found that the vessels which fell down the harbor yesterday, were come to an anchor some distance below the Castle, but no uncommon motion is apparent among the shipping. I then went to Gen. Spencer's, where I borrowed a copy of the late Intelligence that came out of Boston, which hath occasioned so much discourse in Camp, and is now doubtless much spread in the country, which is as follows, viz: [This document will be found in the Appendix to the 3d vol. of Sparks's Washington.]

March 11.—Borrowed "Common Sense" of Col. Gay, and find it to be a masterly piece, well adapted to the times. Our Reg't last night received orders to march at the shortest notice, at any time when the necessity of the service requires it.

March 13.—Orders came to night for the Riflemen to march to morrow.

March 14.—Orders were received to-day for Cols. Stark, Patterson, Webb, Greaton and Webb, to march to-morrow morning, at 9 o'clock.

March 15.—Called in at Waterman's, where I saw the effigy of Gen. Putnam, which is indeed a new thing, and bears no great likeness to any thing in heaven, above, &c.

Sunday, March 17.—Attended the alarm post as usual; heard several cannon as we were coming home. While at breakfast, alarmed by the drum's beating to arms, and the Reg'ts were immediately hurried out. I went up to the north of Ruggles' Fort, where I observed some very peculiar movements of the shipping; they continued falling down the harbor, many of them surrounded with great numbers of boats till about noon, when I hear the Selectmen of Boston came out to Roxbury and informed the Generals that the British troops had all embarked and left the town; whereupon a detachment from our army marched in with the American Standard displayed, and took possession of the town about 2 P. M. party from Cambridge, in boats, landed on the Common at the same time. I met with some trouble this night with a praying sentry, which is not very common in camp. Walked out to Brookline before dinner with Lieut Chamberlin, and bought  $\frac{1}{2}$  quire of paper, at the moderate rate of 3s. 4d.

March 19.—This evening the regulars blowed up part of the Castle, and burnt the block-house on the lower point. Wm Sobuck, an Indian, deserted this night.

March 20.—A little after sun-rise, hearing a considerable cannonade down to the Castle, I went up on to the Hill, and viewed the Castle, fleet, &c. Several guns were fired at the Castle while I was looking on. About 2 P. M. I went down to the old Boston fortifications, and saw with great pleasure the curious works of the Regulars, with many cannon, &c. which they left on the ground. Returned about sun-set, and received one month's wages, £5.8.0. At about 9 o'clock was going to bed, but observing a bright light down toward the Castle, went on to the Hill, where I had a fair prospect of the upper Block house and the large Barrack, with several other buildings on Castle Island all in flames, which so illuminated the air, that altho it was a dark night, yet out of curiosity, I read part of a letter lately received from my wife.

March 21.—Marched to Dorchester, where I fixed one of his majesty's Powder Wagons that had drifted over from Boston harbor, and slept a comfortable nap on it without any disagreeable dreams.

March 22.—Went over to Castle Island in a whale boat, where I saw the most curious heap of ruins, and destruction that had ever met my observation. The works were stronger than I expected, but every thing that could be affected by fire, was laid, in ashes; most of the cannon of which a large number were left on the ground, and of very large size, had their ears or horns knocked off, and all spiked up; most of the carriages were also destroyed, with a great variety of camp utensils, &c., so as to be rendered useless, at least for the present.

March, 25.—Went up to our upper fort, from which I saw a part of the British fleet under sail.

March, 28.—Went thro' Brookline to Watertown, calling at many shops by the way; reached Watertown a little before noon, where I spent some time, but could see nothing more curious than a double-geered Grist-Mill, which I much admired.

Went over to Cambridge; walked thro' the burying ground, where I saw many monuments. Afterwards I met one Mr. Lambert, a Boston gentleman lately settled in Cambridge, who showed me the famous [country] seats of Gov. Oliver, Mr. Fayerweather, Gen. Brattle, the Vassals, and several other tories who have fled to the ministerial army for refuge, and thereby sold their country. I took a view of the artillery on Cambridge Common where I observed, among other valuable pieces, the famous "Congress" hooped up with bands of iron in a most shocking manner, as if she had been ailing; called at the College, bought a newspaper, and proceeded immediately to Bunker Hill, where I viewed the grand fortifications of the Ministerialists, which are indeed vastly formidable, and equal, perhaps superior, to any in New England; then viewed the ruins of Charlestown, a place beautifully situated, and advantageous for trade. Not a single building remains standing, except a few barracks, block houses, and huts erected by the British for their own necessity. It was thought to contain over one thousand houses before its destruction. I fell in company with Ensign Pendleton, with whom I crossed Charlestown Ferry, and was conducted thro' Boston, calling at Wm. Porters, where we drank a glass of wine; finally returned home sufficiently weary. It is said most of the British fleet sailed out of our harbor this morning, and that one of the transports is drove on shore in such a manner, it is to be hoped she will not be got off.

March, 29.—Went on fatigue with a party, at levelling the works of the enemy on the Neck, which we demolished much faster than those villains erected. About noon Lieut Waterman and I went into town up as far as the old South Meeting House, and viewed the horrible destruction the Ministerial troops had made in this famous building, which is no less than 86 feet in length and 62 in width, exclusive of the porches. whole inside of this great house is entirely taken out except the gallery on one side, and a great quantity of gravel laid on the floor, to make a convenient place to exercise their horses in. This day Col James Reed's, Nixon's, Poor's, Prescott's, Arnold's, and Baldwin's Reg'ts marched from Cambridge.

March, 30.—After breakfast all the officers of our company went into Boston. We called at several shops to buy such articles as we needed; also went to Fanueil Hall to see the market mightily thronged with people; observed the ridiculous distinction made by the Regulars in this elegant building, in order to fix it for a play house; then to Long Wharf, where we saw a very great quantity of sea-coal, and a number of saddles of a peculiar make, prepared by the Regulars for carrying packs, &c. on their marches thro' the country; then went over to North Boston, viewed that part of the town, and went down to the West Battery, where 1 observed the famous iron mortar left by the Regulars in their late hasty flight; we then ascended Mount Whoredom, where are several small forts; and then proceeded to Beacon Hill where the agreeable prospect of the different parts of the town and places adjacent is vastly more pleasing than the curiosities of this particular fortification. We then viewed the grand seat of the celebrated Col. Hancock, together with the Alms House and adjacent parts of the Common; walked thro the town, observed two very large burying yards, the famous Stone Chapel, &c. We then came home.

Sunday, March 31.—By General Orders this afternoon, Cols. Learned's, Parsons's, Huntington's, Ward's, and Wyllys's Reg'1s. will march on Thursday morning next.

April, 1st.—This morning the Militia Regits marched off in great noise and confusion, maintaining a brisk fire in almost every part of the Camp. After dinner went in to town and took a view of the wharves on the easterly side of the town, where the enemy had erected several batteries to play on Dorchester, &c. on Wheeler's Wharf we saw a large iron mortar which they had spiked up and thrown into the harbor; then on to Fort Hill, and took a look at our new works, as well as the enemy's old fortification. (While there two or three ships came in to Nantasket Road and joined the fleet, when they fired a round of cannon.) We then went over toward North End, as far as the canal thro' the town; then home.

April, 2.—After breakfast went to Col. Huntington's and received my old ration money of quarter-master Fanning, £3. 10. 0. Met Capt. Peters and went with him into Boston again; called at several shops; saw a peculiar scuffle between a soldier and an Irish woman. Went to the Town House; and viewed all parts of this elegant building, though much damaged by the troops; from the turret had an agreeable prospect of different parts of the town; thence to the North End, to Dr. Cutler's church and burying ground, and a three-gun battery on Copp's Hill; thence to Hancock's Wharf, where I saw a number of men dragging the harbor, with a graplen for carriages, &c. which the enemy had thrown in. I saw them draw out one pair of carriage wheels, damaged, also a number of wheels and other articles; saw Daniel Prentice selling bacon to the poor Bostonians. I then went up into the Main Street, and with some difficulty obtained a dinner of codfish; thence to the Hay Market where I stopped some time to see the train remove a heavy cannon from that battery to Fort Hill; thence to Herman Brimmer's where I bought two pair of stockings.

April, 4.—At regimental parade the ceremony of whipping was performed on one of Capt. Bissell's men; after a long time we procured a team to carry our baggage; loaded up and about 11 o'clock marched out of camp and made no stop till we came to Roxbury South Meeting House, while the Regt. was there, I went forward to Richards' and procured a good dinner. We then marched to Gay's in the south part of Dedham, and our Company put up at a widow's house, a little eastward from the road, where I obtained comfortable quarters.

April, 5.—Marched to Headin's, south of Walpole, where we catched a little raw roast veal, and moved on at 1.

April, 6.—About 8 o'clock we marched, and came to Bradford's at about 1, and with much difficulty obtained a very moderate refreshment. We had a court martial here on a disorderly fellow of Hubbard's Company, who was sentenced to be whipped, but the colonel forgave him; marched through Pawtucket, and made no stop till we come to the great burying-place north from Providence, where the Regt. was formed into sub-divisions, in which manner we marched into town, where we arrived sun two hours high. I put up at Rice's south of the bridge. [End of the Diary.]

THE AUTHORSHIP OF "DEMOCRACY IN AMERICA."

BY REV. JOHN W. HENRY CANOLL.

THE recent death of Mons. Alexandre Vattemare, of Paris, well known as the projector of the system of International Exchanges, and the interest now manifested in everything relating to constitutional polity, which has induced an extensive republication of De Tocqueville's "Democracy in America," brings to my remembrance a statement made a few years ago by M. Vattemare respecting the virtual authorship of that celebrated work.

We had been speaking of the influence which the book had probably exerted on the public mind in America, and were almost insensibly becoming engaged in a discussion respecting its political ethics, when, suddenly rising from his seat and coming nearer to me with a copy of the work in his hand, he said, speaking with animation, but with unusual earnestness:

"You think this is not a truly French view of centralization? I will tell you something. This is not a French book! This is not Monsieur ALEXIS DE TOCQUE-VILLE who speaks; it is your fellow-citizen, the Honorable John C. Spencer!"

I expressed surprise, and made a few inquiries. M. Vattemare replied:

"I will tell you. De Tocqueville was like many writers in this respect—he liked to avail himself of the experiences and views of others, when he thought they could be relied on. It happened, when he was in your States, that he became an admirer of Mr. Spencer, because of his great abilities and his knowledge of matters of law and government; and Mr. Spencer became much interested in him, though for a very different reason - he thought he could use him as a trumpet!"

M. Vattemare then proceeded to relate. with minuteness of details, that the historian and the jurist thenceforth met frequently, by appointment; that Mr. Spencer was shown a half-filled outline of the work on which De Tocqueville was engaged, and dissented from the views there expressed; that De Tocqueville finally adopted Mr. Spencer's views, and, during several interviews, actually committed to paper, for his forthcoming volumes, the views dictated by the learned and subtile lawver, and subsequently employed them in his celebrated work, with no essential modification of sentiment — the passages constituting its basis or fundamental points as ultimately issued. M. Vattemare asserted that by the style alone he could identify many passages in which Spencer's concise and elegant English was "reflected in De Tocqueville's French." He, perhaps, was mistaken on that point, but I think it is certain that no one familiar with the great law-maker's policy and action with reference to the Revised Statutes, and the political changes transpiring during his eventful career, can fail to trace the analogy between the sentiments held by Spencer and those advanced in "America" by De Tocqueville.

Interested in the statements made by M. Vattemare, I had some desire to know how he became acquainted with the facts, or, rather, to know whether the statements could be regarded as a reliable narrative of facts. Making, therefore, some remarks calculated to direct his thoughts to that point, he replied:

"You think, perhaps, I may be misinformed. Spencer did not tell me. De Tocqueville did not tell me. But Spencer and De Tocqueville, together, are the source of information. Look at these books." He pointed to the piled-up tomes which he had so industriously gathered. They constituted a curious collection. Some had been donated by princes, some by indigent students, in furtherance of his enterprise; some had been purchased by him at the bookstalls bordering the Seine in Paris; all to be sent forth to various libraries in Europe and America. "Look at these books," he repeated, with evident complacency, his animation kindling as he spoke; "I put here the little volumes my hands can bring, and you see the great collection. So I put together, many times, what with my ears I hear the two men say, and I give you a great information!"

I made a note of Mr. Vattemare's statements, in his presence, and put the substance of them on paper at the close of the interview. Those memoranda have been scrupulously adhered to in furnishing this account, and some of the peculiarities of phraseology are here given verbatim.

New York, July, 1864.

STRAY LEAVES FROM AN AUTOGRAPH COLLECTION. NO. IX.

RELICS OF THE EARLY COLONIAL TIMES.

I.

Will of John Benjamin. 1645.

I. John Beniaman being in perfit memorie as touching my outward estate doe give and bequeathe to my Sonne John a double portion of my estate, and (to) my beloved wife two cowes, ffourtie bushells of Corne out of all my lands, to be allowed her towards the bringing up of my Small Children, yearly, such as growes uppon the ground; one part of four of all my houshold stuffs: all the rest of my lands goods and chattells I will shall be equally divided betweene seven other of my children. Provided yt out of all my former estate my will is y' my wife during her life shall inioy the dwelling house I live in and three acres of the broken up ground next the house and two acres of the medow neare and belonging to the house. That this will be truly performed I doe appoynt my brother John Eddie of Wartertowne and Thomas Marrit of Cambridge yt they doe ther best indeavour to see this performed.

JOHN BENIAMAN.

Witnes to this GEORGE MANING, the 15th of 4th month, 1645.

This was proved to be the Last Will & Testament of Jo: Beniamin & he did further declare (as an Addition to this his will) that his Wife should have Lib'ty to take wood for her use upon any of his Lands during her life, Upon the Oath of Jo: Eddy.

(5) 3: 1645.

Before us,

THO: DUDLEY GOV'.

JO: WINTHROP D. GOV:

(Endorsed)

The will of Mr. Beniamin lately deceased. Recorded 12 (4) 1646 by WILLIAM ASPINWALL V. Recorder.

П.

Letter of Gov. John Endecott, 1650.

Mr. Auditor Generall: There were divers gentlemen that attended mee at my going to the election together with the Servants, that at their going and returning back wth (me) had in beare & wine at Joseph Hermitage eleven Shillings & 4<sup>d</sup>. Which I pray you give a bill to the Treasurer that hee may be paid.

4th of the 8th month 1650. Yors.

JO: ENDECOTT.

TIT.

Deposition taken by Gov. Richard Bellingham, 1652.

Mark Hume of Boston aged 33 years or thereabouts deposeth and Sayth:

That about thirteen yeares since this depont Came into New England in a Shipp called the Jonathan, wth Thomas Blanchard and his wyfe and two children, and his wives mother (as the depont was informed) an old Sickly Wooman and very weak. And this depont Sayth that he well remembers that the sayd Thomas Blanchard took very much paynes wth the said old woman, and was very carefull of her, and Kept a candle burning by her (for the most part) all the night long, in so much that this depont, (having a Cabbin over against her in the said Shipp) did marvaile that he was able to endure the paynes & charges he continually had about her and the two children.

> Sworne 5°.—2i.—1652. before me, R. Bellingham.

IV.

Summons for Debt.—1653.

Benjamin Sweat, by vertue hereof you are required to appeare att ye Next Court to bee holden at Hampton ye (1st) (3d) day of the next (8th) Mo: there to answer to ye complaint of Natt: Winsley, in an action of debt of three pounds ad. money, to bee payd in Current Money: for a runlett of Sack we'n you received of him; hereof faile you nott. Dated ye 27th of ye. 7th mo. 1653.

P. Curiam Tho: BRADBURY.

V.

Tauern Licence: 1660.

Wee the Select men of Salem aprove of Roger Preston to keep an Ordinary at his new dwellinge house ouer at the farme of Mr. Downing, for the refreshing of Strangers, as witnes or hands this 28. 9th. 1660.

EDMOND BRATTIN GEORGE CORNELL WALTER PRITE THOMAS LOWTHROPP.*

VT.

Deposition taken by Gov. John Leverett, 1663.

The Testimony of James Neighbor aged agout 46 years: This deponent testifieth & Sayth, that in his presence & hearing Mr. John Dix, did speak unto the rest of the undertakers menconed in his former Testimony, to goe on, for the recovering of their Ironworks, without him, Saying that he was a greate deal out of purse allreadie, and that when others were come up, in proportion with himself in point of charge, that them.

Taken vpon oath in Boston the 2 May 1663 before JNO LEVERETT Const.

Mr. John Giffourd testified upon oath to the truth of all above written in Court held at Ipswich the 5th of May 1663.

p. me, ROBERT LORD, Clerk.

*Capt. Thos. Lothropp commanded the company of young men who were murdered by King Philip, at Bloody Brook, near Springfield, Mass., in 1675.

VII.

Warrant for the election of Jurymen in Maine, in 1673.

To the Constable of Charles Towne. In his Maties name: You are required to warne yor freemen that they meet & choose three able & meet men to serve on the Jury of Tryalls at the County Court to be held at yor Towne the 17th of this instant. Also you are to warne Mr. John Thrumble Senr-Thos Osbume & his wife, & Bon11. Bowers & his wife, that they appeare & answer ye pr Tentments of the Grand Jury Severally for not attending the Public worship of God on ye Lords dayes. Also Michal Smith & his wife for disorderly living asunder each from other, & for witnesses Mr Samuel Ward & Edw. Carrington. And hereof you are to make a true return under yor. hand & not to faile.

Dat. 3. 4, 1673 THOMAS DANFORTH.

(Endorsed)

There as bee choisin for ivery men Joseph Licoyn: Richard Lovein: Larance Douse. I have warned the peirsins minsined in this warrant.

NATHANEL HUCHESON Consthabel.

[Thos Danforth R. (Recorder acting as Clerk of the Court) took an active part in public affairs in the Province of Maine in the latter half of the 17th Century. He was born in England in 1622, emigrated to Maine about 1655, was elected Deputy Governor in 1679. On the separation of the province from Massachusetts, in the same year, he was chosen as the first President, and continued in that office until superceded by the usurpation of Sir Edmund Andros in 1686. He died in 1699, aged 77.]

AN INDIAN WORK OF COTTON MA-THER.

SIR—In a recent ramble over the eastern end of Long Island, searching for antiquities, I found in an old mansion, where I presume it had probably rested during the last century of its existence, an interesting and I think scarce, perhaps rare pamphlet, printed in Indian and English in the year 1700, at Boston. I send you both the Indian and English titles. The Indian title discloses the fact, certainly an interesting one, that it was written by Rev. Cotton Mather. The pamphlet is interesting in a philological point of view, as well as in many other ways. It is in 16mo., pp. 28, and is in good preservation.

The work is printed on the left hand page in Indian, and on the right hand page in English; so that the corresponding words in the two languages stand directly opposite each other.

Your friend, SAML. B. BARLOW.

62 E. 21st st., New York.

An EPISTLE | To the Christian | INDI-ANS, | Giving them | A Short Account, of what the | ENGLISH | Defire them to Know and to Do, | in order to their Happiness. | Written by an English Minister at the | Defire of an English Magistrate, | who sends vnto them this | Token of Love. | Boston, | Printed by Bartholomew Green, and | John Allen. 1700.

Wuffukwhonk | En Christiancue afuh peantamwae | INDIANOG, | Wahteauwaheonacvnt | Teanteagquassinish, | Nish | Englishmansog | Kodtantamwog Indianog | Wahteaunate kah Ussente, | En michemohae Wvnniyevonganit. | Wuffukwhosik nashpe Cotton Mather, | Englishmanne Nohtompeantog, nampoo | hamunate kodtantamoonk Edward | Bromsield Englishmanne Nanawvnnuaenah, | noh okkodaninnvmav yev womoausve | Magoonk en Indiansut. | Mussawamuk, | Printevnun nashpe Bartholomew Green, kah | John Allen. 1700.

RHODE ISLAND REBELLION AGAINST MASSACHUSETTS, IN 1692

Proclamation by Gov. Sir. Wm. Phips.

Province of A By his Excellency & Massachusets Bay ss. Council a Proclamation.

Whereas, divers persons of ye, Town of Little Compton & parts adjacent in ye, County of Bristol within this, their Magisties province, have been inveigled & drawn into a bett & take part with Christopher Almy Senr., Dan. Wilcox, Henry Head, & Win Briggs of ye Sd Town of Little Compton, in opposition to ye. majisties Government, & with force & arms to protect them against their officers having lawful warrant to take them into custody to be brought to answer for several High misdemeanours wherewith they Stand charged.

His Exceller & Council being rather desirous to reduce them by clemency than to use great severiy, doe hereby declare & make known to all such persons, that if upon publication hereof they shall desist & come in to one or more of their majesties Justices within the S<sup>d</sup> County, submitting themselves to their majesties Authority and Governt, they shall be Indempnified for what is past behaving themselves peaceably & orderly for time to come, but in default of making such submissions they may expect to be proceeded against as High Criminals.

And the said Christopher Almy, Dan Wilcox, Henry Head & Wm Briggs are hereby required in y Majesties names within the space of flourty eight hours next after publication hereof to render themselves unto some of y Majesties Justices of the peace within the sd County of Bristol, that they may be brought to answer what shall be objected against them on y Majesties behalfe as they will answer their (refusal) at y uttmost peril. Given under ye Seale of the sd Province at Boston, ye eighth day of Dec. 1692, in the fourth year of y Majesties Reign.

WILLIAM PHIPS

By order in Council Isa Addington Secret.

Letter from Secretary Addington to Capt. Gookin, Enclosing the Preceding Proclamation.

Boston, December 8th 1692.

S

His Ex:cy and Council have thought it adviseable to Emit a Proclamation of In-dempnity to such persons as have been unadviseably inveigled and drawn in to take part with and Abet Christopher Almy and his accomplices in opposition to their Majties Authority and Government, upon their submission, hopeing that many of them may better Consider with themselves, & be ready to accept of their Majties Grace and Favour therein rendered unto them. If otherwise they shall be so hardy as to persist it will be a high aggravation of their offence, and render them more inexcusable whatever Inconvenience and Severity may follow upon their refusal. The prudent Management and good Issue of this troublesome affair is of great moment. And lest the Weather should prevent his Excy's Coming as was intended, a Letter is written to Majr Walley, desiring him to go over to advise and Labour therein. And it is expected that Caphe Cullimore of Situate may come to you with a further assistance, by that time you receive these. He is esteemed a prudent person and gives Encouragement that he may be able to perswade and bring them to reason; he brings with him a Comission to your selfe. It will be most Eligible that the matter be effected with the least Noyse or Force, so as to prevent the Effusion of blood. When Majr Walley and Capne Cullimore are joyned you, you will be assisted with advice and otherwise. Let the persons that come in upon the Proclamation give in their names and make their submission before one or more of their Majties Justices. Endeavour all possible dispatch, that so you may return home, and in the interim give an accompt of what shall occur, Wishing you good Success. If you have already seized any of the abettors, Let them give Bond with Sureties to answer at the next General Sessions of the Peace in the County, and in the mean time to be of the good behaviour.

By order in Council Isa Addington, Secry.

(Addressed) To Capt. Samuel Gookin
at Little Compton
These

For their Maties Service.

Hotes and Queries.

NOTES.

THE FIRST SCHOOL IN NEW YORK CITY.

The first school opened in New Amsterdam, in 1633. It was an elementary parochial school under the management of the deacons of the Dutch Church. At that period the city extended from the Battery northward only to the present location of wall street and contained a population of but four hundred persons.

THE FIRST TEACHER was Adam Roelandsen, who came from Holland in company with Wouter Van Twiller, to fill the triple office of teacher, chorister and beadle. He came from the land where the pilgrims found their first home on escaping from the religious persecutions in England. While sojourning there they learned to prize education and good schools as the noblest allies of liberty. About a dozen years prior to the advent of the first schoolmaster on the island of Manhattan, the Pilgrims had borne with them across the Atlantic the seeds of public education, which they subsequently planted in the New England colonies, side by side with the church.

About ten years after the first school was opened, those early Knickerbockers began to agitate the subject of erecting a building for its accommodation. It took them twenty years to agree upon a suitable site, collect the necessary means, and erect their first schoolhouse which was completed about 1663. While arrangements for building this schoolhouse were in progress, in 1659, the first "Latin Schoolmaster" arrived from Holland.

In 1687, the first English Grammar-school was commenced in New York. It subsequently received fifty pounds a year from the English colonial government for the support of its teacher. In addition, forty pounds were granted to this institution for the purpose of establishing free scholarships. In 1702 this school was established on the King's Farm, and thus became the germ of King's College. During this period the HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 43

Island of Manhattan was in the possession of the English, and the name of the city had been changed from New Amsterdam to New York. Its population was about five thousand.

The citizens of this young metropolis were very desirous of securing a person who was well qualified to fill the position of teacher in their first English Grammar-school, and accordingly they wrote to the Bishop of London, requesting him to send them a "master, as there was not any person within the city, proper and duly qualified to take upon himself the office of schoolmaster in said city, with whose convenience it would be agreeable."

In 1732 a "Free School for teaching the Latin and Greek and practical branches of mathematics" was incorporated by law. In 1754 a royal charter was granted for establishing an English college, which was called King's College. Two years later an edifice was erected for its use, on grounds granted for that purpose by the corporation of Trinity Church. A few years subsequently, a grammar-school and a medical department were added. This institution was in a flourishing condition at the beginning of the American Revolution; but the war suddenly suspended its operations, and the building was occupied for military purposes. After the Revolution this college was reopened and its name changed to Columbia College, which it still bears.

As the population of the city increased, new schools were occasionally opened; some for private instruction, at expensive rates of tuition; others, under the management of the different religious denominations, and known as charity schools, were chiefly designed for the children of the poor families belonging to their respective churches. Prior to 1800 no provision had been made for public schools, and the means of education were entirely beyond the reach of the great body of the citizens.

Some time during 1795 several benevolent ladies, of the Society of Friends, formed an association for the purpose of aiding poor women who were not of the order of Quakers. In a few years they observed that there was a large and increasing class of poor children who were entirely without the means of education, even at the charity schools of the different churches. Accordingly, in 1802, they opened a school for poor girls, children of that class of women for whom their association provided employment and the means of support. Afterwards they admitted both girls and boys into their schools; but they finally excluded all boys from them, admitting girls only. These schools were taught by these benevolent ladies in person, taking the duty week by week, in turn.

The success of the schools for girls suggested a plan for opening similar schools for boys. On the 19th of February, 1805, twelve philanthropic gentlemen met for the purpose of considering this subject. The result of this meeting was the presentation of a memorial to the Legislature of the State of New York, which was signed by about one hundred prominent citizens, asking for a charter, and such pecuniary aid as would enable them to establish free schools.

On the 9th of April, 1805, the Legislature of New York passed "An act to incorporate the society instituted in the city of New York, for the establishment of a free school, for the education of poor children who do not belong to, or are not provided for, by any religious society." This act provided, that "any person who should contribute to the society the sum of eight dollars should be a member thereof; and any person who should contribute the sum of twenty-five dollars should be a member, and be further entitled, during the life of such contributor, to send one child to be educated at any school under the care of the society; and whoever should contribute the sum of forty dollars, should be a member, and be entitled to send two children, etc."

This act also provided that the society should manage by thirteen trustees, to be elected on the first Monday in May in every year, who should be members of said corporation and actual residents of the city of New York. The first Board of Trustees was elected on the tenth day of May, 1805, and composed of the following persons, with whom the plan of the society originated:

DE WITT CLINTON, President.

JOHN MURRAY, JR, Vice President.
LEONARD BLEECKER, Treasurer.
BENJAMIN D. PERKINS, Secretary.
Gilbert Aspinwall, Thomas Eddy, Thomas
Franklin, Mathew Franklin, Adrian Hege-

Franklin, Mathew Franklin, Adrian Hegeman, William Johnson, Samuel Miller, Benjamin G. Minturn, and Henry Ten Brook.

This association having now assumed a responsible shape, the trustees began to appeal to the public for the necessary means to carry forward their noble enterprise.

Notwithstanding great exertions were made in soliciting subscriptions, nearly twelve months elapsed before they had collected a sum sufficient to warrant them in making the requisite engagements for opening a school.

About this time intelligence reached this country concerning the mode of teaching elementary classes, which had then just been introduced into a school of about one thousand children in London, under the superintendence of Joseph Lancaster. "Economy in expense, and facility and expedition in communicating instruction," were the characteristic distinctions claimed for this method of instruction.

This plan of teaching comprehended reading, writing and arithmetic. A school was divided into classes of ten or fifteen pupils each, who were placed under the care of a monitor, who was a pupil in a class of higher grade. Thus the children were to be made the instruments of their own instruction.

One of the Board of Trustees had visited Lancaster's school in London, and was very desirous of adopting the same system in the schools of this society in New York. At length a teacher was found, who appeared to be qualified for the undertaking, and a small apartment was secured in Bancker street, (now Madison) near Pearl street, and the first school under the charge of this society was opened on the 14th of May, 1806. In a few days this school contained forty-two pupils. This was the first Lancasterian School established in America.

About this time Col. Henry Rutgers presented two lots of ground in Henry street, for the purpose of erecting thereon a schoolhouse to meet the wants of the poor in that part of the city. These lots were valued at $2,500. In addition, the citizens contributed cloth, stockings, shoes and hats, to make the children who attended the schools comfortable during the severe cold weather.

Mission Santa Clara, Cal. - The Mission Santa Clara was founded the 12th of January, 1777, on the banks of the Guadalupe river, at the expense of Charles III, "King of Spain and the Indies." The two first pastors of this mission were Father Jose Antônio de Murguia and Father Thomas de The place in which the mission was first founded was called by the natives "Socoistika," which means laurel trees, from the large quantity of laurels in the vicinity. About the beginning of the year 1779, a great inundation swept over the land, destroying the church and buildings. With undiminished energy the fathers laid, on the 19th November, 1781, the corner stone of a new church, in a place called by the Indians "Gerguensun," which means "Valley of the Oaks," at a distance of half a league from the former site. The dimensions of this church were as follows: Forty and one-half varas long by nine broad on the inside. The walls were of adobe, and were a vara and a half thick by eight varas high, and situated on the ground on which Mr. Redman's house now stands.

On the 15th of May, 1784, the Church was finished and dedicated to Sta. Clara, by the "Holy man, Father Junipero Serra, assisted by Fathers Murguia and De la Peña. The interesting ceremony commenced by Father Serra's handing the key of the new church to Don Pedro Fages, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Royal Troops and Military Governor of the Californias. Don Pedro thereupon proceeded to open the door, and thereby became guardian of the mission. The Governor was assisted by Don Jose Joaquin Moraga, Vice Governor. The moment of presentation was one of great rejoicing, and was celebrated by the firing of guns and festivities.

The report from which we select the above history is from a manuscript record of the year 1777, now in the archives of the Mission of Santa Clara, and is authenticated by the autographs of Father Serra, De la Peña, Francisco Palu, Don Pedro Fages, and Don Jose Moraga, to which are appended peculiar flourishes. Four days provious to the above dedication Father Murguia died, and was interred in the sanctuary of the building which he had helped to found.

In the year 1818 this church was nearly demolished by an earthquake, and it became necessary to build a new one. The effect of the earthquake is still visible.

The third, the present church (and surrounding buildings), was then founded by the two pastors of the mission, Father Jose Viaden and Father Magin Catala, and was finished in the year 1822, and is described as a rectangular building, eight yards in front, and about as deep, one end of which contained the church and parsonage. The church is fifty-two varas long by ten and one-half in width. It was formerly decorated with a steeple, made of adobes, about sixty feet in hight, but the ravages of time and the climate reduced it to such a state that it was found necessary in 1821, to construct another, which was made of wood. This church was solemnly dedicated August 11th, 1822.

The first Governor sent by the Mexican republic to California was Echandia, who arrived in the year 1824. An American describes him as "the scourge of California, an instigator of vice, who sowed the seeds of disease, of dishonor, not to be extirpated while a mission remains to be robbed." His first official act was to subvert the established plan of the missions and take all control from the missionaries. By persisting in this course he drove forth many priests, and through his ill treatment towards the president of the missions, caused the venerable Sanchez's death. This state of affairs continued until 1831, when Don Manue Victoria gave a check to the rapacity of the Mexican representative; but Victoria ruled but a few months when the plunder inaugurated by Echandi recommenced. Father Peyri, a man of great energy and purpose, became obnoxious. He was driven from the Mission San Luis Rey, of which he was founder, and which he had ruled for thirtyfour years. The tears and entreaties of the Indians were of no avail, and he was forced to flee to Mexico. For years afterwards the Indians preserved a painting of Peyri, which they idolized, and when he finally left for Spain every stranger was besieged with questions concerning his safety.

At this period the missions of California contained 30,650 Indians, 424,000 head of cattle, 62,500 horses, 321,500 sheep, and raised annually 122,500 bushels of wheat and This property was delivered to the legal authorities, who alloted some to each The missionaries were allowed rafamily. tions, which were often never sent. So poor indeed had the missionaries become through the policy of Echandia, that one by the name of Sarria died of hunger and wretchedness at the Mission La Soledad, where he had spent thirty years in the instruction of the Indians. In 1840 the work of demolition continued. In 1842 several of the missions were closed—that of San Diego entirely so, and the number of Indians wonderfully decreased. At Santa Clara the missionaries had contrived to save much.

Such was the state of the missions, which still numbered thirteen missionaries; but civil war soon broke out; the remaining missions were occupied by the belligerent forces, and the Indians forced to take a part.

Before the rebellion was quelled the American war ensued, which resulted in the capture of California. The fertility of the soil and the discoveries of gold soon broughta large emigration to our shores, which drove the Indians from their missions to the mountains, where they retaliate their many wrongs by plunder.

Had not the American war ensued there is no doubt but that under the former imbecile rule not a single stone of those interesting missions would remain upon another. War has had but little effect, and government has instituted reservations for the Indians, where they may raise sufficient to live upon, without pillage and murder.

There are six bells at the Mission Santa Clara, one of which bears the following incription: "San Juan Bautista, Ave Maria Purissima,"—St. John the Baptist, hail Mary most pure.

It is presumed that this bell was originally cast for the Mission San Juan, from the fact of the other five bearing the name of the mission to which they belong. On the largestis, "Santa Clara Ave Maria Purissima, Ruelas me fecit,"—Hail Mary most pure, Ruelas is my manufacturer. All bear the date of 1805, and were a donation of Spain for the support of the mission. One is cracked. Four are quite large, and all have deep, sonorous tone, their composition being largely silver.

The Alameda, three miles long, leading from Santa Clara to the Puebla San Jose was laid out in the year 1805. Willow trees are planted on both sides the entire distance. There are many traditionary accounts of the beauty of the Alameda, which was the favorite resort of the Californians. Here horse-races and celebrations of Saint days were engaged in, with that spirit for which the Catholic communities are so celebrated.

one of the most beautiful and picturesque sights to be met with on this coast. The Santa Clara College was founded March 19th, 1851, by the Rev. Father John

Although neglected and decayed, it presents

Nobili.—California Farmer.

RECOLLECTIONS OF THE PAST.—In turning over the manuscript contents of an almost forgotten portfolio, my attention was attracted by the peculiarity and somewhat crabbed chirography of a document concerning Philadelphia within some three score years lang syne. I think it will amuse some of your spectacled readers, and may instruct more recent seekers after knowledge of our city. Farther explanation is deemed unnecessary. The document speaks for itself.

REMINISCENCES.

In the early part of 1793, my father had been to the city of Philadelphia, and made an agreement with a house-carpenter to take me as an apprentice, and then gave me the name and street, and started me off with a little bundle under my arm, of perhaps a shirt, trowsers and stockings; and after getting some dinner, my master gave me orders to go with the other boys, to the building in Front-street below Chestnut, where he immediately put me to sawing boards; and I served my apprenticeship, and followed the business about twenty years.

I belonged to the Society of Friends and attended what was called the North Meeting in Keys' alley, perhaps now New-street where many worthies attended, such as many people will remember, when I mention their names. Such as old Samuel Smith, John Parrish, Samuel Emlen, Thomas Scattergood, William Savery, Henry Drinker, Jacob Thomkins, Leonard Snowden, Nathan A. Smith, Joseph Justice, Thomas Morris, my old night-schoolmaster Joseph Yerks, two Frenchmen, John de Marssellac, and Stephen Gralet, John Webb, and many others. but it would be too tedious to mention them all. On the female side of the meeting-house, were Rebecca Jones, Hannah Catherill and a number of others.

As to city improvements, and county improvements likewise, it appears as though they were just beginning to dawn and break forth. City Councils erected a large waterhouse of stone at the N. W. corner of Schuylkill, Front and Chestnut streets, with a powerful steam engine to raise the Schuylkill water, and send it on to another water-house in the centre of the crossing of Market and Broad street [these streets were also intersected by what was called Centre Square, in the centre of which was the engine house. Square was enclosed, planted with trees, and gravel walks laid out.—F. C. ], built of solid marble in a circular form. My master gave my fellow apprentices and myself liberty, one day, to go to Market, near Water street, and see the first hydrants opened [strange to say, many persons could never be persuaded to drink or, indeed, use at all, the "hydrant water," as it was then called, avering that as the river received all manner of filth, dead dogs, cats, carrion, &c., &c., the water was consequently poisonous. They, therefore, continued the use of the spring water from the old pumps as usual.*—F. C.], with the

*[The same kind of prejudice influenced a great many of our citizens to oppose and remonstrate against the introduction and use of gas into our streets and our houses as an illuminator. It was deemed to be extremely dangerous—rendering the city constantly liable to conflagration! Strange to say, even up to the present time, persons are found who still refuse the use of gas, although every-where met by demonstration of Schuylkill water coming out freely close to the Delaware; this work was a great hobby with William Rush, the wood-carver, and Oliver Evans, in those days. Then Councils, after building a large house, and I think two large steam-engines [certainly one of these by Oliver Evans.—F. C.] to drive the water up the hill at Fairmount into a basin on very high ground, and with pipes lead it through the city; this plan Councils also abandoned. and got [under the active exertions of Jo-SEPH S. LEWIS, WILLIAM RUSH and other enterprising members of the watering committee, on which Mr. Lewis was chairman, the committee employed Frederick Graeff as their superintendent of the works.—F. C.7 to the right way by making the water throw itself up-hill, by a dam and water-wheels, as any one may see in operation at this timeone of the greatest works in this country if not in the world.

Either in the latter part of my apprenticeship, or shortly after, the bridge company began to drive large grooved logs for cofferdams, to build the piers in the Schuylkill for the permanent bridge to rest upon there having been as yet nothing but a floating bridge to cross on, at Market street; and when the ice or a large freshet would drive the floating bridge away, they had to take to a very large scow to cross in. And now, in the year 1836, see the strides which improvements have taken since those by-gone days.

August 27th, 1864.

MINIATURE OF AN AMERICAN REVOLU-TIONARY OFFICER.—A miniature handsomely set in gold, has been deposited at the library of the New York Historical Society, of which the following account is given:

This is the miniature of a distinguished officer of rank in the American Revolutionary army, who perished by starvation in the old sugar house in Liberty street, which was demolished a few years since, near the present Post office.

At his last moments he sent for a young officer in the British army, and entrusted him with this miniature, with the most

the fact, that the consumption of gas is less dangerous by far than our old fashioned way of lighting from the use of oil and candles.—F. C.] earnest request that it should be sent to his only daughter, then living in this country. With this request the officer pledged himself to comply; but such was the deranged political state of affairs, that it was impossible for him to effect his purpose, and on the return of peace, being ordered with the army to England, his consequent location was too remote to make the proper enquiries.

A trifle as this miniature would be considered by the generality of the world, yet still as there are those to whom it would be of inestimable value, it is desirable if possible to find the real owner.

From the sudden death of the British officer, the name of the American officer is lost, and the hope of finding the real owner is extremely complicated thereby.

At all events it is a memento of the "times which tried men's souls," and the resemblance of him, who although dead, yet should forever live, in the remembrance of those who can properly appreciate the sufferings and martyrdom of our Revolutionary sires.

There is little probability of the officer being recognized at this late day, yet as there is a possibility, the present holders deserve the thanks of all, for the effort now to restore to a family what will be a priceless treasure.

WASHINGTON'S FIRST WATCH.—A correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, writing from Annapolis, says that he saw in the hands of Mr C. A. A S. Wolf, watchmaker and jeweler of that city, a relic of antiquity, in the shape of a watch said to have been presented to General GEORGE WASHINGTON at his birth, by his grand-The memento is the property of the Custis family, and was left at the establishment of Mr. Wolf by a near relative, a surgeon in the Union army, for a short period. The watch is much larger than those of the present day, measuring eight and three-quarter inches in circumference, and when in the case, which is evidently of modern make, exceeds nine inches. This curiosity is of silver, plated with gold, and bears the name of-Veigneur, Geneva, maker; the number and year of its manufacture cannot be ascertained. It is set with aqua-marine, and handsomely enameled on the back, with the scales of Justice and liberty cap, which time has somewhat obliterated.

CHARLES SEALSFIELD. — The mystery of the life of Charles Sealsfield seems to have been settled by his will, which bequeathed the greater part of his property to a family of the name of Postel, in Moravia. This recalled to the memory of some people who lived at Prague more than forty years ago, that Postel was the name of the secretary of a religious order who suddenly vanished from Prague, and was afterwards heard of at Berlin and Switzerland. It is supposed that this fugitive secretary was no other than Sealsfield; that he entered the order of Knights of the Cross which held the benefice of the parish in which he was born; was ordained priest, and became secretary of the order: aimed at great things; hoped for a post at the Austrian court and, being disappointed of this, took to flight, and turned up as a literary celebrity. This would of course explain this mystery in which the life of Sealsfield was enveloped, and if true it is a romance in itself not unworthy of a romantic writer. -Athenæum

ORIGIN OF MULES IN THE UNITED STATES.—Up to the year 1773 there were scarcely any mules to be found in the United States—those few had been imported from the West Indies, and were of a very inferior order.

When Washington returned to private life at Mount Vernon he became convinced that mules would be better adapted for use in the agriculture of the Southern States, as they lived longer, were less liable to disease, require less food, and were more economical, than horses.

On his views becoming known to the king of Spain he sent him a jack and two jennies. The jack was sixteen hands high, of a grey color, heavily made, and of a sluggish disposition. About the same time he also received a jack and some jennies from Lafayette, which were procured on the island of Malta. These proved more ferocious and active. By crossing the breed, Washington availed himself of the best qualities of the two, and thus introduced excellent mules for farming labor in this country.

Such was their superiority, that at the sale of the General's effects, one wagon team of four mules sold for $800.

At this day these animals are extensively used in the Southern and Middle States.

GOV. BRADFORD'S BIBLE .-- A communication to the Boston Journal states that the Bible of Gov. Bradford, printed in black letter, 1592, containing his name and those of generations of his descendants, and long sought in vain by antiquarians, is now in the possession of Mr. Joseph Belcher Walters, of Sharon, Mass., of which he is the careful, vigilant and tenacious custodian, as were his father and grandmother, Alice (Bradford) Waters, before him. Mr. Waters was born June 22, 1804, the son of Zebulun Waters, Jr., of Stoughton, by his second wife, Lucy Belcher, who was born August 23, 1768, the son of Zebulon Waters, senior, of Stoughton, by his wife, Alice Bradford (born Nov. 3, 1734; published to him March 14, 1757), the daughter of Elisha Bradford, of Kingston, by his second wife, Bathsheba La Brocke, who was the son of Joseph Bradford of Kingston, born 1630, the youngest son of the governor. Through these six generations the Bible has descended, with a loss of only a few of the last leaves; but the boards of the cover are gone, the margins worn down nearly to the text, and the leather of the back rolled up, drawing the forward and latter leaves backward, and rendering the volume when closed cuneiform.

"Going through the Motions."— From the "Genealogy of the Wetmore Family," a work recently printed, we extract the following anecdote of Rev. Izrahiah Wetmore, of Stratford, Conn.:—"When the news of the surrender of Gen. Cornwallis to Gen. Washington, reached Stratford, it was on Sunday, and during the hours of worship. Word was immediately taken to the pulpit, when Parson Wetmore was engaged delivering his discourse. Drawing himself up to his fullest height, and making known the intelligence, he said: "My friends, the house of God is no place for boisterous demonstrations; we will, therefore, in giving three cheers, only go through the motions." That the motions were given with an emphasis, the reader will easily imagine, and to the congregations of the present day, given to applause, it may convey a useful hint.

COPY OF A HANDBILL IN THE POSSESSION OF THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA.—

DIRECTIONS

For MANOUVRES, to be performed by the RRIGADE composed of the THREE CITY BATTALIONS, on Tuesday, the Fourteenth of November, 1775.

REAR Ranks, take proper Distance!—By Word of Command.

When the Reviewers appear on the Right,

Double Roll—The whole present their Arms, and officers trail Arms.*

When they march round to the Left Flank

— Two Strokes and a Flam, to face to the Left.

When they march to the Rear—Two Strokes and a Flam.

When they march to the Right Flank—Two Strokes and a Flam.

When they come to the Front—Two Strokes and a Flam.

Last Part of Tat-too—All Shoulder, Officers Order.

Roll, One Stroke and a Flam—Wheel by Sub-Divisions to the Right!

As soon as the Front makes the second Wheel—Slow Time.

As soon as the Rear passes the Reviewers— Quick Time.

As soon as the Brigade has gained its former Ground—To Arms, form Battalion!

Flam and Troop—Rear Ranks, take their Distance!

Flam—Rear Ranks, to Front face, and Officers Order.

* It is probable that the officers carried pikes. — Copyist, Double Roll—Present Arms, and Officers trail Arms.

Brigade Major drops the Point of his Sword
—General salute.

Brigade Major raises his Sword—Officers trail arms and put on their Hats.

Last part of Tat-too—Shoulder and Officers Order.

Ruff—Caution to Officers, Sergeants and Drums.

Flam—Face.

Flam and Troop—Officers take Post in the Rear.

Flam—Officers face to the Front.

Flam-Order.

MANUAL EXERCISE—By Beat of Drum.

Flam-Officers Recover.

Flam and Troop—Officers take Post in Front, Sergeants in the Rear.

Infantry of First and Third Battalions, Cover Flanks!—By word of Command. Ruff—Caution.

Flam—Prime and Load!

Flam and Troop—Rear Ranks, close to the Front, and officers take Post in the Battalions!

Ruff-Caution.

First Manœuvre: Double Roll and March —Advance by Files from the Centre of Grand Divisions!

To Arms—Form Battalion!

Preparative—Firings by sub-Divisions from Centre to Flanks, one Round.

First Part of the General—Firing ceases.

Retreat and March—Retreat by Files from the Center of Grand Divisions!

To Arms—Form Battalion!

Flam-To Front Face!

Second Manœuvre: From the Center of Wings advance by Files—The same Signals as the First Manœuvre and Retreat in the same Manner.

Third Manœuvre,—From the Centre of Battalions advance by Files!—The same Signals as above, both Advancing and Retreating.

Fourth Manœuvre:—By Sub-Divisions from the Right form Columns!—The same Signals as above, both in Advancing and Retreating.

N. B. In Retreating, the Right Hand Sub-Division goes to the Right about: the others face to the Right.

ORDER OF MARCH.

The Brigade marches from the Right by Platoons, to the Head of Arch Street, down Arch Street to Fourth Street; up Fourth Street to Vine Street, down Vine Street to Second Street; down Second Street to Spruce Street, and then separate.

SPANISH PRIESTS IN NEW YORK (Vol. VIII, p. 316).—Dr. O'Callaghan, in his Documentary History, vol. iii, p. 277, mentions two other Spanish priests, captured on the Spanish ship Victory, Chev. de Rossell by the Diamond, Capt, Thos. Jacobs. The names of the two are Andre Saens de Bitare and Thomas Grents, a Dominican. The former was very badly treated, robbed of his money, and, after having received permission to go to England, was seized when embarking on the Snow Amason by Capt. Jacobs, robbed of every thing, and confined on the Diamond. Grents, who may have been English, petitioned for his release.

Voting-Mills.—It appears from the following article, which is to be found in the (Philadelphia) Freeman's Journal for January 7, 1784, that complaints of cheating at elections are not confined to our day.

Advertisement Extraordinary. The new invented Voting-Mill.

An ingenious mechanic who has long made the sublime art of political machinery his study, proposes with the blessing of God to construct a number of Voting-Mills upon principles which have been repeatedly tried with success. These mills are particularly adapted to the use of the city and of sundry districts in the different counties of this State. Though somewhat costly in the first purchase, these mills will be found in the end to save much time and money, as well as many unavailing disputes. They are safe, easy and expeditious, and are so contrived that one single hand may work not only one mill; but all the other mills so constructed.

however distant or dispersed, will be found to work together by the same motion.

A sufficient number of them will be fully prepared by the time of the election for members of convention, the plan which was originally devised at Lancaster after many improvements being now so complete that one of these mills upon an emergency will turn out from two to three hundred votes in an hour. The great mill which contains the primum mobile will be erected upon Market Street at the expense of the United States.

Orders from the country will be punctually obeyed, and the mode and time of application will be speedily published. It is expected that this invention will be found to answer upon trial in the other states as well as Pennsylvania. A premium from government or a patent for the sole making of these mills will be expected in case it should be thought necessary that the secret should be divulged.

THE MUSCOVY DUCK AN AMERICAN BIRD - EXPLANATION OF THE NAME.-At a meeting of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, Mr. Hill stated that the habitat of the Muscovy duck is the Lake of Nicaragua. There travelers see them at all times, either in small breeding coteries, or large flocks. In the wild state their plumage is dark without any admixture of white. They were originally procured from the Mosquito shore, the country of the Muysca Indians (see Humboldt's researches), and hence is derived the name of Musco duck, corrupted into Muscovy The West India Islanders had early naturalized them, for on the discovery of Columbus, they speak of "ducks as large as geese," that they found among the Indians.

AMERICANISMS.—It has sometimes been asserted that the word hop, as applied to an informal ball or dancing party, is an Americanism. This is incorrect. It is used in this sense in a letter from Mrs. Delany (whose Life and Correspondence have recently been published in England in six HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 44 volumes) to her sister Mrs. D'Ewes, dated January 10, 1744-5:

"Our little hop which I promised Bell was appointed for Wednesday, but that proving the Fast-day, it is to be this evening."

The use of the word fall for autumn is generally considered an Americanism, but is most probably an English provincialism. William Penn uses the word fall in this sense in one of the earliest letters written by him from America.

Philadelphia. w. D.

The word "fall" which never should have been thrust out of the saxon seasons for "autumn;" and which is as poetical and appropriate as "spring," is local in England. It is found occasionally in print. I have met it in Bishop Challoner's writings published in the last century.

WASHINGTON.—In 1686 John Washington, master of the sloop Two Sisters, was prosecuted in the Court of Admiralty, New York, for violation of the navigation laws, in having imported a quantity of brandy, which had not been laden in England.

QUERIES.

PAROLING PRIVATE SOLDIERS.—Is there any former instance of the practice of paroling private soldiers, now so much in vogue in our war? Is it not a new and very unwise step?

A COPLEY GALLERY,—Can a list be made up of the paintings by Copley still preserved in this country? If his paintings could not be gatherd together, a catalogue ought certainly to be made up.

M.

DAVID ALDEN son of the Pilgrim, is said (Mass. Hist Coll. ii. 6) to have died aged 73. Can any one tell the date of his death. New Haven, Conn.

EARTHQUAKE AT JAMAICA IN 1692.— Savage's Genealogical Dictionary, ii, 469, speaks of a Ralph Houghton as lost at Port Royal in the great Jamaica Earthquake, June 1692. Can any reader of the Historical Magazine refer to a printed account of this earthquake, especially to one in which this sufferer is mentioned? F. B. D.

MRS. HOUGHTON OR HORTON OF STOUGHTON, MASS., A CENTENARIAN.—Where can a notice of the death of this lady be found? She is said to have died at the remarkable age of 105, some time between 1765 and 1780.

F. B. D.

REPLIES.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE "FOLLOWING" OR "IMITATION OF CHRIST," BY THOMAS & KEMPIS (VOL. VIII, pp. 279).—

1802

Of the Imitation of Christ. In Three Books. Translated from the Latin of Thomas & Kempis, By John Payne. New Bedford: Published by Abraham Shearman, Jr. 1802. 12°, pp. 287.

1805

Of the Imitation of Christ. In Three Books. Translated from the Latin of Thomas & Kempis. By John Payne. New Bedford. Published by Abraham Shearman, Jr. Printed in Boston by E. Lincoln. 1805. 12°, viii, pp. 256.

1833

The | Following of Christ | Translated from the Latin of | Thomas A Kempis. | By the Rt. Rev. and Ven. | Edward [Richard?] Challoner, D. D. V. A. | With reflection at the Conclusion of each Chapter. | Baltimore: | Fielding Lucas, Jr. | 138 Market street. 18°, 345 pp.

The copyright bears date in 1833. Four Books.

1812

The Christian Pattern; or a Treatise of the Imitation of Jesus Christ: with Meditations and Prayers for sick persons, by George Stanhope, D. D. Charlestown, 1812. 8°. Doctor Samuel Johnson (Vol. vIII, pp. 258)—In the July No. of he Magazine, an inquiry is made concerning the disposition of Dr. Johnson's library.

With the exception of a few books given away by his last will, his library was sold at auction by order of his executors. The sale was made by Mr. Christie at his great room in Pall Mall, on Wednesday, Febuary 16, 1785, and the three following days.

One of the sale catalogues is now before me.

The books are offered for sale in 662 lots, being about 165 lots per day. The lots are to be taken away with all faults at the buyer's expense within one day after the sale is ended. The public are notified that the books may be examined on Monday and Tuesday preceding the sale, which will begin each day at 12 o'clock.

It is stated in Anderson's Life of Dr. Johnson (3d Ed., p. 615, note) that the library though by no means handsome in its appearance, was sold for the sum of £247, 9s. In many of the books Dr. Johnson had written short notes.

I notice upon the catalogue (Lot No. 644) 13 of Dr. Johnson's Dictionaries with MS. notes.

Among other interesting articles was a MS. relating to the Province of Massachusetts Bay.

Can any of your correspondents inform us what this manuscript was?

Dedham.

E. WILKINSON.

THE TRISTRAM COFFIN MEDAL, (VOL. VIII, page 277.)—Some few years since [1826?] Sir Isaac Coffin, Bart, had a medal struck in commemoration of his ancestor, Trist[r]am Coffin; which with his accustomed liberality he presented to all the male descendants of the name. It bore on one side a full length figure of their ancestor in the Spanish costume, with this inscription, "Trist[r]am Coffin, the first of the race that settled in America, 1642;" and on the reverse were four [two] hands joined—"Do honor to his name"—"Be united.—Thacher's Am. Med. Biography, i, 229.

REVOLUTIONARY PENSIONERS. — (VOL. VIII, 148, 178). — Of the list given, besides Miller and Gates, we must record the deaths of

1. John Goodnow of Sudberry, Mass.

2. John Pettengill, of Henderson, Jefferson Co., N. Y., who died April 23, 1864.

Rev. Daniel Waldo, who died at Syracuse, N. Y., July 30, 1864, aged nearly 102 years.

4. James Barham, who died May 20, 1864, near Nashville. He was born in Fauquier Co., Va., Mar. 31, 1763. He was present at the Capitulation of Burgoyne. He emigrated to Danielson Co., Tenn., in 1808, and lived there till his death.

His great age, his seventy years of faithful service as a pastor in the Congregational Church, and the fact that he was one of the twelve surviving links between our own times and the Revolution, and, the oldest graduate of Yale College, call for something more Daniel than a passing word to his memory. Waldo was born at Windham, Windham county, Conn., on September 10, 1762. When 17 years old he was drafted into the army of independence, performing his share of the honorable struggles of the colonists for the liberty of their new-born nation. In the following year he was captured at the batte of Horseneck, taken to New-York, and imprisoned in the Sugar House, being, however, exchanged after a confinement of two At the close of the war he commonths. menced study, and graduated at Yale in the class of 1788. On leaving college, he entered upon the study of theology under Dr. Levi Hart, of Preston, Conn., and on May 24, 1792, was ordained pastor of a Congregational church of that town. This charge he resigned in 1809, removing to Cambridgeport, Mass., for two years; then to Rhode Island, as a missionary; afterward to Harvard, Worcester county, Mass., and finally to Exeter, Rhode Island, where he presided over the church for twelve years. At this period, 1836, he retired from any stated charge, frequently preaching, however, for various ministers. His son was then pastor of the Congregational Church at Syracuse. On December 22, 1856, Mr. Waldo, then 93 years old, was elected chaplain of the House of Representatives, to which honorable duty he was again called the following year.

Long known as "Father Waldo," from the affectionate veneration in which he was held by his fellow-citizens, the deceased clergyman leaves a record bright with patriotism, generosity, and liberality of thought. long career of such a man, his unclouded memory to the last, enabling him to recall the great events which crowded the history of the last three generations, his undimmed eyes, until two years since allowing him to read the records of our more gigantic struggle for liberty, is something to reflect upon. He had often seen humanity beaten down and trodden under foot, despotism and unholy ambition crushing out the young, strong life of nations, cruel wars crimsoning the fairest portions of earth in the interest of base and wicked men, and before he died he saw the same horrors flung abroad in our own land by the hands of perjured and traitorous men. Such things sadden the faint of heart. But if it is permitted to the sons of men, when they leave us, to view with a clearer sight and a loftier knowledge the deeds done in the flesh, they know that while the innocent suffer, and humanity mourns, He by whom we shall all be judged ordereth all things well.

C. D.—One of your correspondents inquires in what form the song of the Star Spangled Banner was first printed? I think that in The History of the Philadelphia Stage you will find that subject clearly explained. The song was first printed and put upon the press by Captain Edes, of Baltimore, who belonged to Colonel Long's Twenty-seventh Regiment of militia. He kept his printing office at the corner of Baltimore and Gay streets. It was given to him by the author, Mr. Key, of Washington, in its amended form, after the battle of North Point, about the latter end of September, The original draft, with its interlineations and amendatory erasures, &c., was purchased by the late Gen. George Keim, of Reading, and I suppose his heirs have it now. It was printed on a small piece of paper, in the style of our old ballads that were wont to be hawked about the streets in days of yore. It was first sung by about twenty volunteer soldiers, in front of the Holiday Street Theatre, who used to congregate at the adjoining tavern to get their early mint juleps. Ben. Edes brought it round to them on one of those libating mornings, or matinées. I was one of the group. My brother sang it. We all formed the choristers. This is its history. Mr. Key was a lawyer and a great friend to John Randolph. He occasionally favored the press with criticisms on poetry, and used thus to offer remarks upon Walter Scott's poems, and other poets of that day. I believe he also contributed poetical effusions to the press, but generally anonymously. His nom de plume I forget. I heard him once deliver an address in our Court House, at the corner of Sixth and Chesnut streets, about the time of Monroe's administration. He was a very bland, gentlemanly man, plain in his dress and manner, but spoke with ease and fluency."

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE FOLLOWING OR IMITATION OF CHRIST, (Vol. vIII, page 279) 1834.—The | Imitation | of | Chirst in Four Books. | By Thomas à Kempis. | Translated from the Original Latin, | by the | Rt. Rev. Challoner, V. A. | New York, | Published by Owen Phelan, | 57 Chatham St. | 1835. | 32° 320 pp. A. T.

THE TEN ORATORS OF ATHENS, (VOL. VIII, p. 278).—The Catalogue of Harvard Library shows that it possesses the work referred to—"Harpocrationis Lexicon in Decem Oratores Atticos ex Recensione Gulielmi Dindorfii. 4° Oxford, 1853."

MARRIAGES IN NEW ENGLAND, (VOL. VIII, p. 279).—Mr. Savage in his Genealogical Dictionary of New England somewhere says "that no instance is known to him of marriage by a minister in N. E. prior to 1686," yet on p. 364, Vol. IV, he says of Lawrence Vandenbosk, Boston, 1685, a Huguenot clergyman, who probably in virtue of his function had undertaken to solemnize marriage perhaps the first ever performed in Massachusetts except by a civil officer. He had been brought before a tribunal for this enormity and had promised "to do no more such things," yet says Judge Sewall, "in September he joined together Giles Sylvester and Hannah, widow of Benjamin Gillam" New Haven, Conn.

F. B. D—R.

In 1772 the Rev. Mr. Mozley, a Missionary from the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel at Litchfield, Conn., was presented by the grand jury for marrying a couple belonging to his parish after the banns were duly published and consent of parents obtained. The Court fined him £20. In his case, however, he had no proof of his being a clergyman except documents under the hand of the Bishop of London.

[Both cases are sufficiently illogical. Having marriage as a civil contract, the parties make the contract and the magistrate, minister, or any one else who is present, is but a witness; and there was no reason in punishing Vandenbosk for being a witness to a contract or requiring Mozley to prove himself a Clergyman to be a good witness. The fallacy lies in the common but erroneous idea that the Clergyman, or magistrate performs the marriage. The man and woman are really the only parties who perform or solemnize or make the contract.]

Societies and their Proceedings.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO HIBTORICAL SOCIETY.—Chicago, September 20, 1864. The first stated meeting after the summer recess was held, W. L. Newbery Esq., President, in the chair.

The aggregate additions to the library, the past three months, were reported at 1,128, from 108 sources. Of particular interest were—a manuscript Bible (date unknown) in black leter, illuminated, on fine vellum, once in the possession of archbishop English, of Trinidad; and a series of "Pasigraphic" dictionaries (in some fifteen languages) edited at München by W. Stephanus after the system of Bochmayer—being a new attempt at a universal language; also a considerable collection of coins, cheifly Roman.

The Secretary announced, that he had, in the Society's behalf, accepted the custody of the flags of Battery B, first Illionis Artillery, submitting the correspondence on the occasion, which was accepted and ordered to be filed.

Of the correspondence for the three months (112 letters written, 53 received) a summary was given. Letters were read from A. H. Bodman, accompanying the presentation of a beautiful engraved likeness, after Healy, of Governor Yates; from major J. R. Hugunien, on donating the original clearance from Oswego of the Schooner Diana, Robert Hugunin master, bound to Lewistown, District of Niagara, N. Y., June, 15, 1811; also from Z. Eastman Esq., U. S. consul, Bristol, England, presenting the original firman, or pass, in Turkish, permitting the Bark C. G. Kershaw, of Cleveland, O., to pass through the Bosphorus into the Black Sea, and return.

Letters were read from Mr. S. G. Russell, giving particulars of the literary life, correspondence and remains of his father, the late Professor John Russell, of Bluffdale; also from Mr. J. G. Shea, editor of the Historical Magazine, the latter occasioning some remarks upon the importance of giving a liberal support to that organ of the historical associations of the United States.

The Secretary called the society's attention to the fact, that the state of Illinois had fallen behind several of the states of the Northwest, in omitting to establish a "Bureau of Statistics," or to provide in any way for extending encouragement and aid, of an official and authentic character, to the designs of the United States "Bureau of Emigration," recently organized at Washington. He read also an extended communication from Mr. N. H. Parker, on the same subject, pressing the practical importance of a prompt attention by the state, to secure its share of benefits from the Bureau last named.

The following, upon motion, was unanimously adopted.

WHEREAS, The United States Government, by order of Congress, has recently established and organized a "Bureau of Emigration," for the purpose of encouraging and aiding the emigration of foreigners to the unoccupied or newly settled regions of the United States:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Society, the interests of the State of Illinois require the prompt establishment of a State Bureau of Statistics, to be filled by a Commissioner of approved intelligence, judgment and experience, for the purpose of seasonably collecting, digesting and publishing in full, and from time to time, all the means of information respecting the resources, development and advantages to settlers of this state; to hold correspondence with the United States Bureau of Emigration, and in all ways to serve effectually, as occasion may offer, the object of general good contemplated in the late enlightened action of the general government.

Resolved, That a copy of the above be transmitted by the Secretary to His Excellency Gov. Yates, as also to his successor when elected.

A communication prepared by the late Mr. Hooper Warren, of Henry, Illinois, was then read, referring to the so-called "Black Code," of this state, with numerous references to sources of published information relating to that code. In the same connexion was read a letter from Mr. John A. Warren, of Henry, communicating information of the recent death of the writer, his father. Remarks followed upon the life, character and public services to Illinois of the deceased, one of its earliest printers, founder of its third public journal, the "Edwards-ville Spectator," in 1819, as also editor of several other newspapers in the state. Allusion was made to the important service rendered by the late Mr. Warren to the cause of African emancipation, and the esteem in which he was held as a correspondent of this society.

Resolutions expressing respect for the memory of the deceased were adopted.

Professor Goldwin Smith, of the University of Oxford, England, was admitted an Honorary member of the Society; on which occasion remarks were made by Charles L. Wilson, Esq., late Secretary of the United States Legation at London, testifying to the valuable aid rendered by Professor Smith to our country, in the midst of the great perils and embarassments caused by the Rebellion, that aid being by none more profoundly appreciated, and esteemed, than by the diplomatic representatives of our country in Great Britain.

MASSACHUSETTS.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SO-CIETY, Boston, Sept. 7.—A stated meeting was held at three o'clock this afternoon, at rooms 13 Bromfield street, President Lewis in the chair, Edward Sprague Rand, Jr., the recording secretary, read the record of the previous meeting.

Rev. Caleb Davis Bradlee, the corresponding secretary, reported letters of acceptance from the following gentleman previously elected members of the society, viz:-

Resident—George B. Bigelow, Rev. Israel P. Warren and J. P. Preston, all of Boston.

Corresponding—John Gough Nichols, F. S. A., &c., of London, Eng., editor of the Herald and Genealogist; and William T. Cushing of Rochester, N. Y.

John H. Sheppard, the librarian, reported as donations, 27 volumes, (including 8 volumes of records and 2 volumes of the Columbian Centinel, newspaper, of an early date), and 24 pamphlets,

The eight volumes of records are a part of the genealogical collections of the late Andrew Henshaw Ward of West Newton, an early member of the society, and were presented by his sons, Joseph W., Andrew H. and D, Henshaw Ward, in conformity to a wish which their father had frequently expressed during his life. They consist of one volume of the Sudbury Genealogist prepared for the history of Sudbury, Mass., on which he has for some time been engaged; and 7 volumes of copies of county and town records, of births, marriages and deaths, namely, two large thick volumes, of Middlesex county records, containing the returns of 24 different towns and extending from 1630 to 1783, one volume Roxbury records from 1630 to 1783, one volume Woburn records, from 1641 to 1855, and one volume Marlborough records, 1692 to 1847, and one volume of Shrewsbury records from 1721 to 1843. All except Roxbury and Woburn are in manuscript.

They will form a valuable addition to the genealogical materials already in the library, Thanks were voted to the Messrs, Ward for their donation.

Willam B. Trask, historiographer, read biographical sketches of Hon. Joseph C. Hornblower, LL. D., of Newark, N. J., Honorary Vice President of the society for that state, born at Secud River, near Bellevile, N. J. May 6, 1777, died at Newark, June 11, 1864, aged 87; also of two other members. namely, Rev. Alvan Lamson, D. D., of Dedham, Mass., born at Meston, Mass., Nov, 18, 1792, died at Dedham on July 18, 1864; aged 72, and Hon. William M. Wilson, of Greenville, Ohio, born near Mifflin, Pa., March 11, 1864, aged 56.

Usher Parsons, M. D., of Providene, R. I., author of the Life of Sir William Pepperrell, Bart., and other works, was chosen Vice President for the state of Rhode Island in place of the late Mr. Barstow.

Rev. Dorus Clarke, D. D., of Waltham, read a most interesting paper on, Luying the Catechism in New England in Olden Time, and its historical results; selecting the time, some sixty years ago, and the place, the town of Westhampton, in western Massachusetts.

Herelated several anecdotes of the early settlers of that town, particularly of its first pastor, Rev. Rnoch Hale, father of the late Hon. Nathan Hale, editor of the Boston Daily Advertiser, and of Dr. Enoch Hale, for several years an eminent physician in this city. Mr Hale's habits were exact and systematic to a proverb. Every family in the neighborhood could regulate its tall clock by the precise punctuality with which he would arrive to preach an appointed lecture. On the Sabbath, every man who was earlier or later than he at public worship, doubted the correctness of his own watch. He was for twenty years secretary of the General Association of Congregational Ministers in this State. On one occasion the meeting of that body was held in a town seventy-five miles distant from his place of residence. Five minutes only were to spare before the time for opening the meeting. Speculation was rife among the members then on the ground, as to the probability of his being there in season to attend to the duties of his office. One clergyman, who knew him better than the others, said that if he was not there at the time it would only prove that the town clock was wrong, for there could be no possibility of his failure. Curiosity grew intense and more intense; the interest to see how it would come out was prodigious, but fore the last minute expired Father Hale drove up to his "old shay," entered the church and called the meeting to order at the precise punctum temporis which had been apponted.

Dr. Clarkc gave a very graphic description of the beautiful town of Westhampton, of the manner of saying the catechism for several successive years in the "old meeting-house," and the benign effects of this teaching upon the children and youth of that day, and upon the intelligence, the morals, and the religion of the inhabitants to the present day; giving much credit to the master mind of Jonathan Edwards of the adjoining town of Northampton, for the impress of his character upon that and neighboring towns.

Col. Samuel Swett, of Boston, read a paper of John Quincey Adams as a Poet, quoting his poetical writings at various periods of his extended life, particularly a poem which he wrote while a student in the law office of the late Chief Justice Theophilus Parsons, of Newburyport. He could truly be styled an assiduous and ingenious poet from his boyhood to the day of his death.

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF HOOPER WARREN.—It is due to the worth and public services of this good man that the press should lay a wreath of honor on his tomb. He has just closed a long, active and useful life, dying at Mendota, on a visit, the 22d inst., at the age of seventy-four years.

A native of Walpole, N. H., where he was born in 1790, he was a resident, for the greater part of his life, until his majorty, of Vermont, where he learned his trade as a printer in the office of the Rutland Herald. Mr. Warren came to Delaware in 1814 to Kentucky three years later (working with Amos Kendall), and in 1818 to St. Louis. During the fall of 1818 he was agent of a Lumber Company of St. Louis, at Cairo, which was then without a settlement—the only resident family (named Hutchins) occupying, for a home and store, a "grounded flatboat."

In March, 1819, Mr. Warren removed to Ed.

In March, 1819, Mr. Warren removed to Edwardsville, Illinois, and commenced the publication of the Edwardsville Spectator, having for his principal friends and contributors such men as Governor Edwards, Daniel P. Cook, George Churchill, Thomas Lippincott, etc.

The only newspapers published earlier in Illinois were the Illinois Emigrant, of Shawneetown, and the Illinois Intelligencer, of Kaskaskia. The Illinois Republican (the fourth newspaper in the order of publication) was started at Edwardsville by Judge Smith four years after the Spectator.

Mr. Warren edited the Spectator for six years, avowing his anti-slavery principles in his first prospectus. It was the able organ of the anti-slavery men of Illinois in the bold attempt, commenced in 1822, to engraft legalized slavery upon our state constitution. The contest was one of the fiercest ever known in our state history; and it was only by a slender majority that this young commonwealth was saved from the blighting curse which thus early threatened its then promising career. Posterity will not fail to search out the standard bearers in that war of freedom; nor will the name of Hooper Warren fail of its meed of honor.

After his six years of service as editor of that journal, Mr. Warren passed a part of the year 1826 in Cincinnati, editing the National Crisis; when he removed the press of the Spectator from Edwardsville to Springfield, at which last place the Sangamon Spectator was edited by him for about two years. In 1829 he removed to Galena, establishing there (jointly with Drs. Newhall and Philleo) the Galena Advertiser and Upper Mississippi Herald, which was printed about one and a half years. In 1831 he removed to Hennepin, where for five years he filled the offices of clerk of the circuit court and county commissioners court, as also of recorder and justice of the peace.

In 1836 he published for about a year, at Chicago, the Commercial Advertiser, when he returned to Hennepin, and in the spring of 1839 removed his family to Henry, Illinois, where he carried on a farm. In 1850, after the death of his wife, he published at Princeton, for one year, the Bureau Advocate, when he again removed to Chicago, passing there about three years, as associate editor (with Zabina Eastman) of the Free West and the Western Citizen. He then returned to his farm in Henry, where he continued to reside until his death.

Such is a meagre outline of the career of one of the earliest and oldest printers of Illinois—a man of work as well as thought, who rarely had, in his busy toil, time to write, but was a genuine "compositor," his thoughts and his fingers keeping time nimbly the one with the other.

Earnest, yet calm, brave and undaunted, yet wise and just, he remained ever true and inflexible in his principles, liberal in his politics, in warm sympathy with "the people" and the "people's rights;" yet as such, a staunch advocate of the natural rights of all men and all races, and hence the open, unflinching foe of African slavery.

Few men have passed through a long life of such labor as his with a purer record—more blameless, more respected, more trusted. His tranquil old age was not inactive; but was occasionally improved by him in writing upon past events in the history of Illinois, about which few had better information or could write more justly and more wisely. Mr. Warren was a frequent and esteemed correspondent of the Chicago Historical Society.

The subject of this notice lived not to see fully established that emancipation of the American bondmen to which his life-long labors had been devoted. Like Moses, he was permitted only a Prisgah sight of the land of long promise and hope. He has passed in full age away, to join the band of faithful laborers for humanity and right, who, once stigmatized as seditious and disturbers of the peace, will be forever honored as fellow-workers with God and the good friends of their country, advocates and defenders of the oppressed. The loss is our own when such men are forgotton in their death.

W. B.

Ex-Gov. Henry Johnson passed away on Thursday, the 4th of August, on his plantation near the junction of Bayous Grosse Tete and Maringouin, in the parish of Pointe Coupee.

For nearly forty years Gov. Johnson was a leading character in this state, strong in popular favor, and high in public office. In his day he was the head of the old Whig party in Louisiana.

Gov. Johnson was born in Virginia. On the 16th of September, 1809, he received from Gov. Claibrone the appointment of clerk for the second superior court of the territory of Orleans, which office he held until the 1st of May, 1811, when he was made Judge of the Parish Court of St. Mary. In the same year, by the constituency of the country of Attakapas in which he then resided, he was nominated and elected a member of the convention which framed the Constitution of 1812. In the month of September, 1812, he ran for representative to Congress, but was defeated by T. B. Robertson. On the 12th of January, 1818, he was chosen by the legislature of this state to fill a vacancy in the United State senate, caused by the death of Wm. C. C. Clai. borne.

During his first senatorial term, which expired in 1824, he seldom spoke, though he was a faithful attendant of the sessions of the senate. His political friends presented his name as candidate for the office of governor in 1824, to which he was elected.

Gov. Johnson took the oath of office on the 13th of December, 1824, and remained in the executive chair until the 13th of December, 1828. His administration was popular, In 1829 he was defeated for the United State senate by the celebrated Edward Livingston. From 1835 to 1839 Governor Johnson was a representative in congress. but he was not a frequent debater. In 1842 his name was before his fellow-citizens as a candidate for governor. Though his political friends rallied to his standard, he was defeated by Alexander Mouton.

But fortune showed herself more kind two years afterwards, when he was called to fill the vacant place of Alexander Porter in the United States senate. He acted quite a conspicuous part in the proceedings of the senate from 1844 to 1849. With March 4th, 1849, his senatorial term came to an end.

On the death of General Taylor, in 1850, Charles M. Conrad, representative from the second congressional district of Louisiana, having resigned his seat in order to accept the office of secretary of war, in Mr. Fillmore's cabinet, Governor Johnson became a candidate, but after an animated struggle, he was unsuccessful against Judge Bullard.

The last fourteen years of his life were spent in the serene enjoyment of rural pursuits. He was not far from ninety when he sank into the grave. Though once married, to Miss Key, a niece of Francis S. Key, the author of the Star-Spangled, Banner, this union was never blessed with children.

Notes on Books.

Memorial of John Allan. Printed for the Bradford Club. New York, 1864, 39, pp.

The Bradford Club has thus beautifully shown its appreciation of Mr. Allan, by issuing in the faultless style of its publications a memorial from the genial pen of Mr. E. A. Duyckinck, who views the great collector with more indulgent eyes than the friend who contributed the notice of the sale to our columns. The little volume is enriched with a portrait, a facsimile of his hand-writing and his book plate.

Mr. Duyckinck's notice of Mr. Allan is very interestingly given and will be perused by the fortunate few with genuine satisfaction.

The Operations of the French under the Count De Grasse in 1781-2 as described in two contemporaneous Journals. New York, 1864, 80, 216 pp.

The Bradford Club has in this volume, the largest it has yet issued, entered a field hitherto in a manner untouched—the Naval Operations of France during our Revolution. The importance of the naval aid rendered by our ally cannot be overlooked. If fruitless in great direct results except at Yorktown, its indirect assistance was immense.

The basis of this volume is, 1, a manuscript journal kept by an officer styling himself De Goussencourt, (probably a pseudonym) hostile to De Grasse, and 2, an account of the Campaign published soon after De Grasse's defeat, and written either by him or by one of his devoted partisans. Historic truth can steer safely between the two, guided by the narratives of English writers. The translation and notes are by Mr. Shea; the volume itself is printed by Mr. Munsell in his best style.

The Bradford Club series is thus increasing, its issues being, 1, The Deerfield Papers; 2, The Croakers; 3, De Grasse's Campaign. They propose we believe to give us a volume of New Netherland Poets, to show doubtless that the muses flourished here even in the most decried days of Dutch rule.

Miscellany.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION AT NEW BEDFORD. -The two hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of the town of Dartmouth was celebrated at New Bedford, Sept. 14th, with considerable display and spirit. The authorities and citizens of Dartmouth, New-Bedford, Westport, Fairhaven and Acushnet,-all of which were formerly comprised within the limits of the ancient town of Dartmouth-participated in the festivities of the day. A procession was formed, which marched to the First Christian Church, where the forenoon exercises were held. These consisted of a brief introductory address by Mayor Howland of New Bedford, an interesting historical address by Wm. W. Crapo, Esq., of New Bedford, a poem by James B. Congdon. Esq., and appropriate singing. The procession was then reformed and marched to the City Hall, where the guests and citizens sat down to a collation, and after this was finished speeches were made by Mayor Howland, Hons. Thomas D. Elliott, Robert C. Pitman and John H. Clifford, Rev. W. J. Potter and others. At 5 o'clock Messrs. E. S. and J. Allen, the Army Aeronauts, of Providence, R. I., made a fine ascension in their balloon "Empyrean," from the common, which was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators, and this closed the celebration.

The Rev. David Stevenson, state librarian of Indiana is preparing and publishing by order of the legislature of that state, Indiana's Roll of thonor and Patriotic Dead: being a complete History of the Action of Indiana and her Soldiers during the present Civil War in America. It will contain a complete history of all the regiments and batteries of the State. It will form 2 vols. 8° of 1,300 pages with 20 portraits on steel. The first volume is now ready.

HISTORICAL MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII.]

NOVEMBER, 1864.

[No. 11.

General Bepartment.

BRADDOCK'S DEFEAT.

LETTER OF ROBERT ORME TO LT. GOV. ROBERT HUNTER MORRIS.

Fort Cumberland, July 18, 1755.

Dear Sir: I am so extremely ill in bed with the wound I have received in my thigh, that I am under the necessity of employing my friend, Captain Dobson, to write for me.

I conclude you have had some account of the action near the banks of the Monongahela, about seven miles from the French fort. As the reports spread are very imperfect, what you have heard must consequently be so to you. You should have heard more early accounts of it, but every officer whose business it was to have informed you, was either killed or wounded, and our distressful situation put it out of our power to attend to it so much as we would otherwise have done.

The 9th instant we passed and repassed the Monongahela, by advancing first a party of three hundred men, which was immediately followed by another of two hundred. The general, with the column of artillery, baggage, and the main body of the army, passed the river the last time about one o'clock. As soon as the whole had got on the fort side of the Monongahela, we heard a very heavy and quick fire in our front. We immediately advanced in order to sustain them, but the detachment of the two hundred and three hundred men gave way and fell back upon us, which caused such confusion, and struck so great a panic among our men, that afterwards no military expedient could be made use of that had any effect upon them. The men were so extremely deaf to the exhortations of the general and the officers, that they fired away in the most irregular manner all their ammunition, and then ran off, leaving to the enemy the artillery, ammunition, provision, and baggage; nor could they be persuaded to stop till they got as far as Guest's plantation, nor there only in part, many of them proceeding as far as Colonel Dunbar's party, who lay six miles on this side.

The officers were absolutely sacrificed by their unparalleled good behaviour, advancing sometimes in bodies, and sometimes separately, hoping by such example to engage the soldiers to follow them, but to no purpose. The general had five horses killed under him, and at last received a wound through his right arm, into his lungs, of which he died the 13th inst. Poor Shirley was shot through the head; Captain Morris wounded; Mr. Washington had two horses shot under him, and his clothes shot through in several places, behaving the whole time with the greatest courage and resolution. Sir Peter Halket was killed upon the spot; Colonel Burton and Sir John Clair wounded; and inclosed I have sent you a list of killed and wounded, according to as exact an account as we are yet able to get.

Upon our proceeding with the whole convoy to the Little Meadows, it was found impracticable to advance in that manner. The general, therefore, advanced with twelve hundred, with the necessary artillery, ammunition and provision, leaving the main body of the convoy under the command of Colonel Dunbar, with orders to join him as soon as possible. In this manner we proceeded with safety and expedition, till the fatal day I have just related; and happy it was that this disposition was made, otherwise the whole must either have starved or fallen into the hands of the enemy, as numbers would have been of no service to us, and our provisions were all lost.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

45

Our number of horses very much reduced, and those extremely weak, and many carriages being wanted for the wounded men, occasioned our destroying the ammunition, and superfluous part of the provision, left in Colonel Dunbar's convoy, to prevent its falling into the hands of the enemy.

As the whole of the artillery is lost, and the troops are so extremely weakened by deaths, wounds, and sickness, it was judged impossible to make any further attempts. Therefore Colonel Dunbar is returning to Fort Cumberland, with everything he is able to bring up with him. I propose remaining here till my wound will suffer me to remove to Philadelphia, from whence I shall proceed to England. Whatever commands you may have for me, you will do me the favour to direct to me here.

By the particular disposition of the French and Indians, it was impossible to judge of the numbers they had that day in the field.

I am, dear sir,

your most obedient,

and most humble servant, ROBERT ORME.

Hon. Robert Hunter Morris, Lieut. Gov. of Pennsylvania.

K.

THE TORY CONTINGENT IN THE BRI-TISH ARMY IN AMERICA IN 1781.

(Continued from page 326.)

NEW JERSEY VOLUNTEERS, FIRST BAT-TALION.

Brigadier General Cortlandt Skinner, Esq;

Joseph Barton, 1 Esq; lieutenant colonel

Thomas Milledge, 1 Esq: major

Captains Joseph Crowell<sup>2</sup> James Shaw 3 John Cougal 4 James Nealson John Taylor<sup>5</sup>

Joseph Cunliff Isaac Hedden 7 Patrick Hagerty 8 John Thompson John Lawrence

Ensigns

Lieutenants William Hutchinson 5 James Moody9 Samuel Leonard

John Reed James Britain

- <sup>1</sup> Surveyor-general of N. J.; died at Granville, Annapolis county, N. B., in 1816.
  - <sup>2</sup> Died at Carleton, N. B.
- <sup>3</sup> Mortally wounded at Eutaw Springs in 1781.
- 4 Of Delaware; published as an enemy to his country in 1776, by committee of Dover, for refusing continental money.
- <sup>5</sup> Probably the one who died at Weymouth, N. S., in 1820.
- 6 In 1782 capt. lieut.; died in Upper Canada, to which he removed from New Brunswick.
- <sup>7</sup> Isaac Hadden, in Sabine, was clerk of the assembly in N. B., and died in that province. <sup>8</sup> Died soon after peace at Derby, N. S.

One of the most celebrated tory partizans in the war, whom incessant persecution by whig neighbors drove from his farm where he lived quietly and inoffensively. In April, 1777, with 73 neighbors, he reached Col. Barton's corps at Bergen. In his first expedition he was defeated, and lost most of his men; but his services as a spy were found beyond price. In June, 1779, he captured a colonel, lieutenant-colonel, major, two captains, and several other officers, and destroyed a valuable depôt of ammunition and arms; and, on his return, routed another party with terrible loss. He was then used as a spy on Washington, Sullivan and Gates. In 1780 he attempted to carry off Gov. Livingston; and, failing, carried a jail, releasing several loyalists. After capturing 18 militia officers and committee men with a party of 7, he was himself taken, and conveyed to West Point, where he was treated with unexampled barbarity by Arnold. Condemned to death, he broke prison and escaped. He was made a lieutenant for capturing Washington's dispatches. In a second attempt he barely escaped with life. In a third, again, succeeded. In 1781 he attempted to penetrate Philadelphia and carry off the books of congress. He failed, and his brother was taken and hung. Moody, for all his losses and servi-ces, was but poorly compensated by the English government. He died at Weymouth, N. S., in 1809, aged 66.

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps the one captured on Staten Island in 1777.

Zenophon Jewett<sup>1</sup> Ozias Ansley

Henry Barton Phineas Milledge<sup>2</sup>

- Chaplain Isaac Hedden, Adjutant Quartermaster Uzael Johnson, Surgeon 3

NEW JERSEY VOLUNTEERS. SECOND BATTALION.

John Morris,4 lieutenant colonel command-John Colden, major

Captains Cornelius McCleese Josiah Parker Waldron Blaau 5 Norman McLeod George Stanforth

Donald Campbell

William Stevenson Thomas T. Prichard Thomas Morrison George Lambert<sup>6</sup> Samuel Richard Wilson J. Demenzies capt. Adolphus French

lieut

Ensigns

Lieutenants Uriah Blaau 7 William V. Dumont James B. Legrange

> John H. Rowland,8 Chaplain James B. Legrange, Adjutant Thomas Morrison, Quartermaster Charles Earle, Surgeon.

NEW JERSEY VOLUNTEERS, THIRD BAT-TALION.

Isaac Allen, p lieutenant colonel commandant

<sup>1</sup>Zenophon Jouette, or Jewett, was sheriff of York county, N. B., in 1792, and held other offices. He died at St. John, N. B., in 1843.

2 Son of the major; died at Annapolis, N.S., in 1836, aged 71.

<sup>8</sup>Taken prisoner on Staten Island in 1777, and sent to Trenton.

4 Sent in 1777 to destroy salt works at Tom's River, N. J.; but finding them private property, declined.

<sup>5</sup> Waldron Bleau, of N. Y., captain 3d Battery N. J. V., died in St. John, N. B., in 1783, five days after landing.

Taken prisoner on Staten Island in 1777, and sent to Trenton.

<sup>7</sup> Taken prisoner at Eutaw Springs.

<sup>8</sup>John Hamilton Rowland, Episcopal missionary, of Pennsylvania, after the peace removed to Shelburne, N. S.

Robert Drummond. 1 major

Captains Joseph Lee 2 Peter Campbell 3 Charles Harrison 4 Bartholomew Thacher John Coombs11 Daniel Cozens Thomas Hunlock 5 John Barberie 6 Edward Steele capt

John Troop 8 William Chew9 John Hatton 10 James Harrison 7 Enoch Lycon

Ensigns John Camp John Willis Nathaniel Coombs

Lieutenants John Jenkins<sup>7</sup>

lieut

Cornelius Thompson John Swanton John Shannon

- Chaplain John Jenkins, Adjutant John Folker, Quartermaster William Peterson, 12 Surgeon

NEW JERSEY VOLUNTEERS, FOURTH BAT-TALION.

Abraham Buskirk, 13 lieutenant colonel commandant

Pennsylvania; became judge of the supreme court of New Brunswick; died at Fredericton, N. B., in 1806, aged 65.

Died at Chelsea, England, in 1789. He enlisted 200 of his neighbors in the battalion. It was almost entirely swept away by disease in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

<sup>2</sup>Of N. J.; confined in jail at Trenton in 1776, by provincial congress, and fined £100; magistrate in Yerk county, N. B., in 1792.

<sup>8</sup> Died at Maugerville, N. B., in 1822.

property in Pennsylvania was confiscated. A relative of President W. H. Harrison. ter the peace he went to New Brunswick. fate is unknown.

<sup>5</sup>Retired to New Brunswick, but returned to the U.S.

<sup>6</sup>Taken prisoner on Staten Island in 1777. and sent to Trenton; wounded at Ninety-Six and Eutaw Springs; militia colonel and magistrate in New Brunswick; died at Sussex Vale in 1818, aged 67.

<sup>7</sup>Settled in New Brunswick in 1783

8 Mortally wounded at Eutaw in 1781. Died at Fredericton in 1812, aged 64.

Wounded at Ninety-Six in 1781.

11 Died in New Brunswick in 1827, aged 74.

12 Taken prisoner in 1777, and sent to Trenton. 18 Attempted to capture a militia force at Para-A lawyer of Treaton, N. J.; attainted in | mus in 1777. In 1779 he set out from Pawlus Philip Van Cortlandt, 1 major

Captains William Van Allen Peter Rutan Samuel Ryerson 2 Jacob Buskirk 3

John Hyslop 6 John Symondson 7 John Van Orden 8

Lieutenants Edward Earle 4 John Van Buskirk James Servanier 5

Ensigns Justus Earle 9 Philip Van Cortlandt jun.10 Richard Cooper William Sorrell John Jewett

Daniel Batwell, 11 Chaplain - Adjutant William Sorrell, Quartermaster John Hammell, Surgeon.

Hook (Jersey City) up the river with part of the garrison and other troops, to cut off a foraging party, but had to retreat. In 1780, with 400 men, he crossed from Staten Island to Elizabethtown, burnt the church and town house, and carried off prisoners and plunder. He was with Arnold at New London. I write this note in the house of a gentleman whose grandfather, Cornelius Demarest, was killed by Buskirk at Closter in his raid in May, 1779.

The Jersey Volunteers were called, also, "Skinner's Greens."

<sup>1</sup>Born in 1739; descended from Secretary Van Cortland, who came over in 1629; 1775, deputy from Westchester county, N. Y., to meet members of the continental congress; frequently in action; died in England in 1814.

<sup>2</sup>Brother of Colonel Joseph; raised a company of 60 near Paterson, New Jersey; at the peace went to New Brunswick, and thence to

<sup>3</sup> Evidently son of Lieutenant Colonel Buskirk. In 1777, when lieutenant, taken prisoner by Gen. Dickinson, and wounded at Eutaw, as captain in 1781.

<sup>4</sup> Died at Grand Lake, N. B. <sup>5</sup> Died at St. John, N. B., in 1803.

6 Became adjutant; settled at Shelburne, Nova Scotia.

Died in New Brunswick.

<sup>8</sup>Son of Gabriel; also a refugee. Was instructor at King's college, N. S., and afterwards held office in Bermuda.

9 Settled in New Brunswick. 10 Born in New York in 1766.

11 Episcopal minister in York and Cumberland counties, Pa.; committed to York jail in 1776. Congress permitted him to sell his personal effects and remove with his family to New York. He died in England.

ORANGE RANGERS.

John Bayard, Esq. lieutenant colonel com-Guert Spt. Dewint, Esq. major

Captains James Brace 1 Samuel Bayard? Forbes R. McDonald Robert Bethell Robert Rotton John Howard 3 Abraham Van Buskirk

Alexander McDonald5 Bartholomew Uniacke 6 George Dawson 7 Edward James

- De Meynne 4

Lieutenants Donald McLeod John Cummings Basil Rorison Neal Stewart

Ensigns . James Grandidier John Cameron Colin Campbell<sup>8</sup> Roderick M'Kenzieg William Jackson Thomas Van Buskirk10

Ebenezer Townsend, 11 Chaplain William Jackson, Adjutant Robert Bethell, Quartermaster John Frazer, 12 Surgeon.

<sup>1</sup>In 1782 a James Brace was major of the Royal Fencibles.

One of the claimants of the Westenhook patent; arrested by Lee at New York in 1776. In 1782 he was major.

Was at one time under Tarleton, and quarreled with him. He was an intimate friend of Beverley Robinson. Died at Hampton, N. B., in 1824, aged 82.

Sabine gives it Philip De Mayern.

<sup>5</sup> An officer of this name died in New Brunswick in 1885, aged 72.

6 Became captain lieutenant.

7 Captain in 1782.

8 A Colin Campbell was ensign in De Lancey's 2d battalion, quartermaster and lieutenant.

9 Went to Nova Scotia.

10 Sabine says, son of Capt. Lawrence Van Buskirk; a captain in this corps, born in Hackensack, who died at Shelburne, N. J., in 1803. Thomas became a lieutenant, went to Nova Scotia, but returned to New Jersey.

11 This may be Rev. Epenetus Townsend, Episcopal clergyman, of North Salem, N. Y., whom Sabine supposes to have perished in 1777.

12 Scotch. Died at Shelburne, N. S., in 1840, aged 88.

ROYAL AMERICAN REGIMENT.

Beverley Robinson, 1 colonel Beverley Robinson, 2 junr lieutenant colonel Thomas Barclay, 3 major

Captains

William Howison

Christopher Hatch<sup>4</sup> Joshua Barnes 5 Lemuel Wilmot<sup>6</sup> Morris Robinson 7 William Fowler Simon Kollock 8

 $oldsymbol{L}$ ieutenants Caleb Fowler9 William Bailev10 Duncan Fletcher Anthony Allaire11

<sup>1</sup>Son of Hon. John Robinson, president of Virginia; inclined to whigs; figured greatly in cases of defection, and was prominent in Arnold's treason; died at Thornburg, near Bath, England, in 1792, aged 70. He received from the British government £17,000 for his losses.

2 Graduate of King's college, N. Y.; studying law when the revolution broke out; at the peace went to Nova Scotia; lived chiefly at St. John, N. B., but died in New York in 1816.

<sup>3</sup>Son of Rev. Henry Barclay, of New York, born Oct. 12, 1753; a graduate of Columbia college, and law student under John Jay; entered the army as captain in the Loyal Americans; after the peace, speaker of the assembly of Nova Scotia, and adjutant-general of the militia; commissioner under Jay's treaty; consul-general for the northern and eastern states. and commissary of prisoners; and, finally, commissioner under the treaty of Ghent. He died at New York in April, 1830, aged 77. He had a pension of £1200 from the English govern-

Of Boston; proscribed and banished in 1778. While captain, wounded and commended for gallantry. Died at St. Andrew, N. B., in 1819, aged 70.

<sup>5</sup> Sabine gives a captain in De Lancey's corps of this name; captured in 1778 with his company by Major Leavenworth of Massachusetts.

6 Of Long Island, N. Y.; died at Fredericton, N. B., in 1814.

7 Son of Bev. Robinson; died at Gibraltar in 1815, aged 56; lieutenant-colonel in the British army. Sabine says, capt. Queen's Rangers, 8Of Delaware; active in 1777 in using counterfeit continental money, and enlisting men;

went to Nova Scotia.

9 Of Westchester county, New York; a loyal protester in 1775. He became captain, and died at Fredericton, N. B. William and Gilbert were probably relatives; but Mr. Sabine's researches failed to establish the fact.

10 Became captain-lieutenant; died near Fredericton in 1832, aged 97.

11 Became captain before the peace; died in Douglas, N. B., in 1838, aged 84.

John Ward<sup>1</sup> Thomas Hender $son^2$

Oliver Barberie<sup>3</sup>

Ensigns William L. Huggeford<sup>5</sup> Benjamin Ward<sup>6</sup>

John Robinson 7 Charles Colbourne<sup>1</sup> Richard Swords<sup>8</sup> Robert Robinson<sup>9</sup> Gilbert Fowler

> John Beardsley, 10 Chaplain John Cunningham, 11 Adjutant Charles Colbourne, Quartermaster James Webster, Surgeon

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Timothy Hierling, major commandant.

Captains

 $oldsymbol{Lieutenants}$

James Gunganven Anthony Kennedy Alexander McMullen Humphrey Henderson Timothy Wm Hierlihy Caleb Wheaton, jun 12 Joseph Osborne Franklin G. Etter George Wetmore

1 Of Westchester county, N. Y.; entered service in 1776; frequently in battle; died at St. John, N. B., in 1846, aged 93, styled "The Father of the City."

<sup>2</sup> Died in 1828 at St. Andrew, N. B., aged 77.

<sup>3</sup> Died at Sussex Vale, N. B.

Of Norfolk, Va. After the peace, he settled at Digby, N. S., but died in Virginia.

<sup>5</sup> Wounded and taken at Stony Point; lieutenant in 1782.

6 Of New York; wounded in 1777 at the storming of Forts Montgomery and Clinton.

Son of Bev. Robinson, Sr. At the peace, a lieutenant; settled in New Brunswick; became deputy paymaster, member of the council, treasurer of the colony, mayor of St. John; died at St. John in 1828, aged 67.

8 Sabine says, Thomas; taken at Stony Point

<sup>9</sup>Of Virginia; a relative of Beverly; was a divinity student, but fled to escape impressment in militia; died in Canada; deputy surveyor of crown lands.

10 Episcopal clergyman of Poughkeepsie and Fishkill, N. Y.; born at Stratford, Conn., in 1732; studied at Yale, but received his degrees from King's college, New York; ordained in England; returned in 1762; refusing to take oath of allegiance to congress, he was stripped of everything, and retired with his family to New York. Col. Robinson had been the chief supporter of his church at Fishkill. After the peace, became pastor of Maugerville, N. B., and died at Kingston in 1816.

11 Died at Fredericton, N. B.

12 Caleb, of Sandwich, Mass., banished in 1778.

Ensigns John Noble Alexander Stewart John Wheaton1

LOYAL NEW ENGLANDERS.

George Wightman, lieutenant colonel and captain Richard Holland,2 lieutenant

John Wightman, 3 ensign

BRITISH LEGION.

B. Tarleton. 4 lieutenant colonel commandant Charles Cochran, major

Captains of Cavalry J Edwards? Richard Hovendon<sup>5</sup> Jacob James 6 David Kinlock

Peter Stewart John Rousselett Thomas Miller

Lieutenants of cavalry

Captains of infantry Samuel Chapmans Keneth McCulloch Nathan Vernon<sup>9</sup>

1 Went to New Brunswick.

<sup>2</sup> A Richard Holland, of Massachusetts, was ensign in the Queen's Rangers.

A Lieutenant John Wightman died at Carleton, N. B., in 1819, aged 71.

4 Banastre Tarleton, who here appears as commander of a tory regiment, was born in Liver-pool, England, in August, 1754. At the commencement of the revolution he left his legal studies to enter the army, and came to America with Cornwallis. After the war, he was a member of parliament. In 1798 he married a daughter of the duke of Ancaster. In 1817 he was made major general. George IV. made him a baronet, and a knight of the bath.

Of Pennsylvania; acted for a time with the Queen's Rangers, and made many captures. His company was finally incorporated with the Legion.

Of Pennsylvania; active in 1777, kidnapping whigs near Philadelphia; stole horses for British army. His troop finally joined Tarleton. In April, 1780, he was a prisoner in North Carolina; and the president of Pennsylvania asked that he should not be exchanged, but sent home for trial for his many villanies.

<sup>7</sup> James.

8 Of Pennsylvania; joined army in 1776; captured at sea, and carried to Massachusetts. Like James, he was claimed by the governor of Pennsylvania, tried in 1781, but acquitted.

Nathaniel Vernon, sheriff of Chester county in 1775. Property confiscated.

The infamous Christian Huck, "the swearing captain," was killed in 1780, before this list came out.

H Davies Coronets Benjamin Hunt Miller Guildart Lieutenants of in-Hovedon funtry Swain Laughlan M'Donald Ensigns William Darby Donald M'Crummen Murdock M'Caskell Alexander M'Crea Donald M'Leod Ralph Cunningham Donald M'Pherson - Campble

> - M'Leod, chaplain William Taylor, Adjutant 1 Donald M'Donald, Quartermaster - Surgeon

MARYLAND LOYALISTS.

James Chalmers,2 lieutenant colonel commandant James M'Donald, major

Captains Grafton Dulaney3 Patrick Kennedy4 Caleb Jones<sup>5</sup> Philip R. Keys James Trisley Isaac Costen

Lieutenants James Millar James Inglis Thomas H Parker John Stirling7 Leven Townsend

1 A William Taylor, of New Jersey, lawyer, son of John, sheriff of Monmouth county, born at Middletown in 1746; became chief justice of Jamaica, but returned to New Jersey, bought his old estate, and died at Perth Amboy in 1806.

<sup>2</sup> His corps was very deficient in numbers. says Sabine; but the show of officers is quite good. It was at Pensacola in 1781.—H. M., iv, p. 167. In 1783 it embarked at New York for St. John, N. B., but was wrecked off Cape Sable, and more than half perished. Chalmers had gone to England.

<sup>3</sup> Walter Dulaney was major in 1782. <sup>4</sup> Physician of Baltimore; escaped to New York in 1777; saved at the wreck of the Martha.

<sup>5</sup>Sheriff of Somerset county, Md.; escaped from Baltimore in 1776, and arrived at New York in the frigate Brune in 1776; removed to

New Brunswick.

6 Made prisoner in Florida, but paroled and went to England; returned to Maryland in 1785: elected to the assembly in 1794; resigned his half pay in 1806-7. He was elected to the 10th congress, and held his seat till 1818. Died at Georgetown, D. C., in 1815.

Captain at the peace; wrecked in the Martha; died at St. Mary's, N. B., in 1826, aged 76.

Ensigns

William Stirling<sup>1</sup>
Winder Cannon
William Jones

James Henley William Munro John Coffman

--- Surgeon.

PENNSYLVANIA LOYALISTS.

William Allen, 3 lieutenant colonel commandant

John De Lancey,4 major

Captains

 $oldsymbol{L}$ ieutenant $oldsymbol{s}$

Francis Kearney<sup>5</sup> Thomas Stevens Thomas Colden <sup>6</sup> Benjamin Baynton Ross Currie<sup>8</sup> Moses Holt<sup>9</sup>

Joseph Swift7

<sup>1</sup> Had become adjutant at the peace. In the wreck of the Martha, off Tusket river, he floated on a piece of the wreck for two days and two nights to the waist in water. Lieutenant Stirling perished. On the third day the survivors drifted to an island, where they remained seven days without food or fire.

<sup>2</sup>Clergyman of Kent county, Md.; sent to convention as disloyal in 1775; discharged on terms.

*Son of Chief Justice Allen; was a lieutenant-colonel in the continental army, and served under St. Clair; joined Howe in 1776, having had leave to resign his commission. He raised the Pennsylvania Loyalists in 1778. He expected from his family influence to raise a large corps, but, says Sabine, was disappointed. His regiment took part in the gallant defense of Pensacola against the French and Spaniards (see H. M, vol. iv, p. 171); 45 being killed and many wounded at the explosion of the magazine, which compelled the garrison to surrender. Col. Allen was in New Brunswick in 1783.

<sup>4</sup>Probably John Peter De Lancey, a brother of James, whose wife was Allen's sister; a native of New York, educated in England; was at Brandywine and Monmouth, and held a commission in the British army, which he resigned in 1789, and returned to Westchester county, where he died in 1828.

<sup>5</sup> Kearney became major.

6 Grandson of Lieutenant-Governor Colden.

<sup>7</sup> Handsome, but stuttering Joe Swift; a lieutenant in the army before the war; went to Nova Scotia, but died in Philadelphia in 1826.

8 Ross Curry was a lieutenant in the continental army, but was attainted, and his property confiscated; he died in New Brunswick a lawyer.
9 Died at Sorel, Canada East, in 1799, a magistrate, and wealthy.

Ensigns

George Harden Cortland Todd<sup>1</sup>
William McMichael

Jonathan Odell,<sup>2</sup> chaplain Ross Currie, adjutant Moses Holt, Quartermaster John Christal, Surgeon (To be continued.)

HISTORICAL GOSSIP ABOUT THE NEW YORK COURT OF SESSIONS.

A paper read before the Historical Society, Oct. 4, 1864, by A. OAKEY HALL.

These Ante-Revolutionary Records of the Court of Quarter or General Sessions of the Peace for this County, which are now deposited with the Historical Society under an order of the criminal court to which they belong, commence in February, A. D. 1684. They are the minutes of the proceedings of that court.

They begin at an interesting historical period. Charles the Second was soon to surrender the personal sceptre of a "merry monarch" into the grasp of the King of Terrors. Louis the Fourteenth was outvying his voluptuous brother of England in pursuits which it has been reserved for the pen of a woman-Miss Pardoe-to piquantly narrate. The Prince of Orange was awaiting that turn of fortune's wheel, which the excesses of one king and the blunders of another might force in his favor. John Sobieski was glorifying Poland: but illustrating how different a man he could be in the field and in administration. The princely and pontificial dignity of the helpless Innocent the Eleventh was fearing the insult that came to him a twelvementh later from France in the revocation of the edict of Nantes. And at the same time Louis was engaged in consummating a humbling of the grand old republic of Genoa-whose Doge was so soon to implore her freedom at Paris. Sophia, Electress of Hanover, was inditing piquant letters to Ilten, the minister of her husband, while the latter-faithless absentee—was steeped to the lips in the intoxicating pleasures of Venice. young Peter of Russia-not as yet the Great—was silently developing his manly and warlike spirit; and into the mind of the imaginative Czar the accomplished and enthusiastic Leforth was installing a large amount of valuable information. The helpless Carlos the Second was on the throne of Spain.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Proscribed in 1778.

&lt;sup>2</sup>Episcopal clergyman of New Jersey. In 1775, examined by provincial congress, and put on parole; wrote witty and pointed political poetry, since collected. He became provincial secretary, register and clerk of New Brunswick. He died in 1818.

Thus, in 1684, was arranged a part of the chess board of Europe so far as the pieces were concerned. How of the bishops, knights and pawns in law, literature, science, and historical bustle?

Fenelon, La Chaise and Bossuet were pleading the glories of Mother church amid the slowly rising glories of Versailles' architecture. The youthful Abbe Fleury was dreaming of preferment in the distant The afterwards Cardinal Alberoni future. was approaching boyhood's emancipation. Colbert had just died. Louvois was in his zenith, and Dubois was in training to succeed him. The venerable poet, Waller, "maker and model of melodious verse," was entering his 80th year. Dryden was flecking with the threads of poesy, the warp of satire and the woof of criticism. Mathew Prior was at St. John's, Cambridge, practicing "graceful and fluent versification." Swift was about to suffer the disgrace of losing his Baccalaureate: because, in lighter flirtations with the Muses, he was-in the sage opinion of routine Dons-sacrificing a more honorable reputation for severer studies. Addison was preparing for college. Corneille was rapidly sinking in physical strength towards his death in the October following. The English writer of comedy, Wycherly, was performing in a serious drama of debtor and creditor in prison. Jeffries was preparing himself to soon interweave a thorny crown of detestation. While Sir Charles Sedley meditated light and graceful songs, his daughter was dreaming of playing as light and graceful a role: although as yet unconscious it was to be Dutchess of Ports-Cudworth was closing his career. Wm. Penn returned in that year from his last proprietary visit of peace and good will. The noble Duke of Argyle, the ignoble Duke of Monmouth, and the heroic Lady Alicia Lisle were enjoying their last year of life, before another one should succeed to present each of them at the headsman's block. And English worshippers of the star of empire which westward took its way were tediously tracking the seas, bound for those colonies, which, altogether, in 1684, had not so many inhabitants as listened last Sunday to the chimes in our sister city of churches.

The clerk who made the first entry in these minutes was one of 3,800 inhabitants of this city. He could walk through sixteen streets. He could count about four hundred and fifty houses, and smoke his pipe before quaint cottages in Beaver street; with cows lowing in Wall street to be milked. He could have purchased that year a lot in Wall street, 23 feet by 60, for $35. He could have attended 23 marriages in the year previous. He could have called for medical skill upon Dr. De Lange, He could have danced with the belle of that year, Mrs. Brandt Schuyler: née Cornelia Van Cortlandt. He could have played social detective upon the future patriot, Rip Van Dam, as he returned from honest courtship to Sara Vanderspiegel. He could have conveniently got ready, an' he had foretold their worth, documents for Annetje Jans to transmit to her heirs against the often threatened lawsuit for the recovery of Trinity Church leases. With her that year was billing and cooing Vincent de la Montagnie.

Mr. Clerk had witnessed the arrival, in the August previous, of that most liberal Catholic gentleman—that Governor of courteous address and unswerving integrity -Thomas Dongan. He had hailed with delight a calling of a General Assembly in the October previous by that conciliatory ruler who acceded to the petitions of the people, not for their much importunity, but because he deemed that they deserved their City Charter and their secured corporate rights. He had seen a Recorder and a Mayor qualified: Aldermen chosen: and attended upon the passage by the Assembly of fifteen bills. One of them was entitled, "An Act to settle Courts of Justice." It settled four: and one of them was this Court of General Quarter Sessions. The bill itself, with the wonderful but unapproved Charter of Liberties-miscalled the Duke of York's Charter-together with these acts, are carefully preserved in the office of Mr. Secretary of State at Albany. And the history of the Court has been read before this body. and bound up in Common Pleas reports by that honor to society, jurisprudence, polite letters, and geographical science-Mr. Justice Charles P. Daly.

Can we be pardoned before leaving the epoch in which these minutes commence, if we pause yet longer (as original or denizenized Knickerbackers) to recall with pride, in the fame 1683 Assemblymen, these glorious words in their Charter of Liberties?

"Every freeholder and freeman may vote for representatives without restraint: no freeman shall suffer, but by judgment of his peers: no tax shall be assessed on any pretence whatever but by the consent of the Assembly: no seaman or soldier shall be quartered on the inhabitants against their will; no martial law shall exist: and no person professing faith in God by Jesus Christ shall at any time be in any way disquieted or questioned for any difference of opinion in matters of religion."

Do not these germinating words of freedom classify with those sown by the Mayflower covenant and the Virginia Burgesses in the virgin soil of Columbia?

At such an interesting period, then, do these minutes begin. They extend through six volumes. Volume the sixth ends with 1790. But, for our purpose this evening, it closes with 1776 and 1784. Each succeeding volume from 1790 to 1864 is now on file in the office of the present Clerk: who for more than twenty-five years has, during all the chances and changes of politics in the Metropolis, maintained his HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 46 office, a circumstance not less honorable to the Judges, than to his own reputation for industry and capacity. Two breaks in these volumes will be discovered. They are of the highest historical significance. One during the Leislerian troubles: and conclusively evidencing their civic bitterness. The other break is from May, 1776, to May, 1784. The minutes recommence, in period second, just one hundred years after the first century.

In the former month the Court adjourns to the term of August, 1776. But, when August came, the Sons of Liberty had thrown down the battle gage: and inter arma silent leges. The break here is, however, clerically of only one blank page. Then commences a new regime of minutes. On one side of the blank page is this entry: The King vs. Cornelius Van Zile. Upon the other side is: The People vs. James Myers. Here the entry was "in the sixteenth reign of George the Third." There, it reads in the eighth year of the Independence of the State of New York!

But, how expressive is that blank page of separation between those eight years?

How the page will fill with momentous memories, and brighten with glowing rhetoric whenever, haply, the hand of George Bancroft may touch it! Mark, too, as the sides of the separation are examined, how gingerly the pen has squeezed ink into the words, The King vs.—, looking much as if it meant The Thing: but how boldly the clerk of the free and independent State has begun his proud record.

There is every style of penmanship They begin throughout these volumes. with rough turns of quaintness. The finish of a copperplate engraver succeeds, and in often curious arrangement. A few pages are Hollandais. There are varieties of inks: from the dirty liquid of James' to the dainty dinginess of Queen Anne's times: not to forget the besotted blotches of the first George's day: and the many parti-colored inks of the lunatic king, whose greatest lunacy was his American war. Is there a believer, among the society members, in the art of detecting the character of a writer from his penmanship? If so, let him devote a few days to these volumes: and present Mr. Valentine's "Manual" with a biography of each clerk of court.

Court minutes are usually very dry reading: necessarily they are only rough indices to the fuller records which exist in the more perishable condition of unbound or folded But the documents whereto these volumes are indices were long ago lost. Indeed, it is certain they were principally destroyed during the revolutionary war. A few scraps exist in private collections. Some in these archives: a bundle or so are in the office of the County Clerk, mixed in with documents belonging to the Supreme Court. Hence, these minutes now deposited will serve the future historian of our Municipal HISTORY (we have only some annals as yet. Strange that no member of this society* has sought to rival Bancroft, Motley, and Kirke, in marrying historical facts to glowing narrative concerning this Metropolis. Hence, whenever that historian seeks to write the chapter which requires for its preparation insight into the criminal jurisprudence of our Amsterdamic-Manhattanico-Gothamic-Babelish sequences, he will find these pages of value. Neither the professional historian nor the amateur reader will call these Court minutes dry reading. They abound in dramatic incidents, and melodramatic inferences. Nay, there is alternation of whimsical burlesque, quaint comedy, and absorbing, heartrending tragedy. Only some few pages are devoted, and in the first volume, to civil matters. The Court at the outset had a concurrent civil jurisdiction, but this was soon diverted elsewhere, and afterwards repealed. The pages teem with references to the ever-increasing contest between justice with her blind eye, and vice and crime with their never sleeping eyes: or, to the complications of the peace and comfort of society, occasioned by human passions ripening in the atmosphere of an ever-maturing but never perfected metropolis.

The recital by the Clerk in volume the first is a most loyal one; and is in these words "Province of New York at the Generall Quarter Sessions of our Lord the King held at the Citty Hall in the Citty of New York-(this was the Stadt Huys at the head of Coenties, or Countesses' slip) for our sayd Lord the King, and the body of the sayd City, and County of New York. That is to say on Tuesday, the 5th day of February, in the six and thirtieth yeare of the Reigne of our Sovereign Lord Charles the Second of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and before Cornelis Steenwyck, Esq., Mayor of the sayd City, James Graham, Recorder, Nicholas Bayard, John Inians, Wm. Pinhorn, Guyl. Verplank, John Robison and William Cox, Esqs., Adlermen and Justices of the Peace of the sayd City and County, commissionated by authority under his Royall Highness James Duke of York and Albany, and Lord Proprietor of the Province aforesaid."

This loyal style is substantially followed down to the Revolutionary Period: except that the formalities of recital are sometimes clipped by the clerks, and in some instances (soon to be specially mentioned) as if they were not so fond of spreading out royalty in ink to dry for posterity, as was the most loyal clerk who began the volumes.

The names of the Magistrates who are above recited are of course well known to all students of our municipal history, and each one has, I believe, posterity represented upon the catalogues of membership of our society.

Alderman Wm. Cox, whose name is in the first recital, subsequently figures on the minutes as a complainant in burglary: as a Grand Juryman after ceasing to be Magistrate: as having a Coroner's inquest over him: and in the admission to probate of his last will and testament.

After the recital follows the empanelling of the Grand Jury, and the oath of the Grand Inquest is set forth almost verbatim as it is administered in 1864, nearly two hundred years later, and in a year which has all the numerals with which Mr. Clerk begins his minute.

*But the Hon. Francis B. Tillou has about 900 MS. pages of such a history, prepared with greate rudition, and bringing down events to 1710. He hopes soon to complete it.

The Grand Jury would seem to have had for a long series of terms very easy business; not a few of the entries evidencing that they had nothing to present. Once they proudly declared omnia bene.

Mr. Francis Rumbout appears as the first Foreman. But the names of the Grand Jury are not spread upon the minutes until 1754—a practice pursued until now. Henry Thomasson is the only criminal of the first term. He is indicted for Burglary (Burgi latrocinium: theft of the mansion), but on being sent for is found to have broken jail, and Mr. Sheriff is ordered to pursue him. It would seem from this that the Criminal Quarter Sessions did not have a very auspicious commencemeut; but in a few months he was caught, and branded with the letter "B" on the back.

This first volume contains entries made by clerks under Charles, James, and William and Mary. The other volumes recite the graciousness of majesty which belonged to Anne and the Hanoverians.

These entries for the most part bear testimony that vice and crime were then little different in complexion from that which they still possess. The scales of justice were of course smaller, but the weights used were lighter than they respectively now are. Yet for that matter some growling reporter may tell us that judgment is often, yet, weighed out to offenders with drams and scruples!

We find tippling houses severely frowned upon: especially when they harbored negro slaves. So early as 1686, a tanner or two became indicted under the common law of nuisance. Frail ladies make complaints of an interesting character under the law of nullius filius: to the subsequent indemnity of a county not as yet discussing the Malthusian problem. The vulgar punishment of whipping and the effective one of branding appears to be in vogue as a species of primitive stripes and scars. The cartmen give early trouble, because the new charter of Dongan that is in force, and some crude ordinances, oblige them to take out licenses and contribute toward good streets, and pay fees and stand forfeits: all shown upon these pages.

We find significant entry in respect to taxing the five proper wards and the outward (not to intimate, however, that the latter was an improper one), in order to furnish eighty-six cords of wood wherewith to build new stockades for city defence. These wards, let us recall, were recently created—North, East, South, West, Dock, and Outward or Harlaem.

There is also a record—charming to taxpayers and litigants—of the yearly bill of a High Sheriff taxed at nine pounds!

Entries made by the gallant clerks of Queen Anne show that although rowdyism was spasmodic, it was chronically punished; also, that butchers were mulcted in damages as a penalty for forestalling the market—how very primitive! That constables were fined for not attending the court in season. And page 10—let us be exact, because of the precedent—of volume second bears witness that a fine for contemptuous speaking in the court room was imposed. Ward assessors were on two occasions arrested for not doing their duty, but released upon apologies.

Gallant clerks, did we write? Why, at page 20 of volume 2, it appears that for shoplifting, there were publicly whipped with birch rods Mesdames Elizabeth Moore and Mary Vincent? Names very like these, appear even now for the same offence upon Henry Vandervoort's minutes. Would A. T. Stewart & Co. like to have the brich-rod penalty restored? Mayhap their "lady customers in the purloining trade" might fear such a punishment more that that of plying the deft needle, or using the sewing bird, at Sing-Sing!

Other entries disclose—of course—burglaries (for no burglary is complete without an entry), together with a variety of larcenies and misdemeanors. One John Vincent is brought up for throwing hot water in the public streets, and endangering pedestrians: and for thus getting of goodly Knickerbockers into hot water has to apologize to the court. A counterfeiter is ordered to pay a fine for the use of Trinity Church (the connection between the crime and the direction of the penalty is respectfully submitted to the Diocesan Con-

At pages 26 and 28 of volume vention). 2d, appears a precedent for an indictment in a forcible entry of premises by armed force: likely to prove valuable if our most distinguished and accomplished brother Dix shall ever find himself outgeneraled in this same court. As an accompaniment to the prosecution of the butcher in 1688, appears another of a baker for regrating the market in his bread in 1687. From the August of this year to March 1691, is the break in the minutes chargeable, as before alluded to, unto the Leislerian troubles. These latter appear to have made Justice very technical: for at page 72 of volume 2d, we find one David Provost prosecuted for the very insignificant offence of causing himself to be anduly returned as elected an alderman.

Our Puritan members will please take notice (p. 83) that a Quaker meeting house was licensed by the court. On an adjoining page, appears the minute-chronicle of the route of a culprit from the City Hall through to Broadway and down Wall and whipped beside the cart, at every corner. These localities could be improved, the cynical antiquurian might observe, by adopting the precedent in these days of petroleum, gold, and mining false pretences, which our courts sometimes have to notice. Presently one Barclay is tried for keeping a billiard table: but he is acquitted.

But now we must bring up honest Knickerbocker blushes, and cry mercy for our ill thoughts of the Bostonians who dealt with witches. These blushes mantle in consulting pages 212-217, in volume 2d, respecting the trials of negroes for the alleged plot. We find one poor ignorant culprit broken on the wheel, another beheaded and quartered, a third "to be suspended in chains until be died without sustenance;" and a fourth thus sentenced: "to be burned with a slow fire, that he may continue in torment for eight or ten hours, and continue burning in the said fire until he be dead and burned to ashes." Seven negroes are sentenced "in a batch," to be hanged. Alas! in all eras when fear balances the scales of Justice, Mercy is never seated upon the summit of the beam!

In 1716, the Surveyors of the Highways are commissioned by the Court to push a road to King's Bridge, and the goodly inhabitants are ordered to turn out and aid in stubbing the road. About this time appear the first entries respecting procedure for manumitting slaves; and it can only be done by the Masters entering into security that the freedmen shall not become a charge to the city nor engage in riotous conduct. Counterfeit money is burned to ashes in open Court (p. 437). When whipping occurs it must be done "to bleeding" (p. 443). A baker who has been arrested for giving short weight behaves insolently to the Grand Jury, and after being fined is ordered to give his bread to the poor. Madmen are committed to the common jail, after the fashion of our ancestors, who would be called absurd if they had not lived before the days of Pinel.

At page 493 appears the following remarkable Court address to Governor Montgomery, which shows how flunkeyism to authority infected even some phlegmatic Dutchmen who were members of the Court, and who were crossed with the blood of feefaw-fum, etc., etc.:

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, 88.2

At a Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, held for the City and County of New York, at the City Hall of the said city, on Wednesday, the eighth of May, Anno Domini 1738.

Court opened.

The Court having proposed to the Grand Jurors. &c., to join with them in an address to his Excellency, to congratulate him on his safe arrival to this his Government, the same was readily accepted, and accordingly an address was drawn, approved, and ordered to be engrossed and signed by this Court. His Majesty's Attorney General, the High Sheriff, Clerk of the Peace, Coroner, Grand Jurors and the Attorneys-at-Law, then attending this Court, who all waited upon his Excellency with the said address-at his Majesty's Fort George-which was presented to his Excellency by Robert Lurting, Esq., Mayor of the City of New York, and read to his Excellency by Francis Harrison, Esq., Recorder of the said city, in the words following, viz.:

To his Excellency, John Montgomerie, Esq., Captain General and Governor in Chief of his Majesty's Provinces of New York and New Jersey, and Territories depending thereon, in America, and Vice-Admiral of the same, &c.:

The humble Address of the Justices of the Peace, Attorney General, High Sheriff, Clerk of the Peace, Coroners, Grand Jurors and Attorneys-at-Law, at the Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, held for the City and County of New York, on the fourth day of May, in the first year of his Majesty's reign.

May it please your Excellency: If the customary time of our meeting had given us a more early opportunity of expressing our great and very just joy for your Excellency's very safe arrival, we could not have been wanting to ourselves in the most speedy, sincere, and public demonstrations of our duty, and the high regard we have for your Excellency's person and adminstration.

Sir, upon these occasions it has been usual for those who had the honor to address the Governors, to join their prayers for the preservation of their Rights, Liberties, and Properties; with their solemn assurances of endeavoring to deserve so great a blessing—but your Excellency has anticipated even our wishes; and, by your public declarations of your noble and most generour intentions towards this Province, left us nothing to petition for, except it be that your Excellency will believe that you have filled our hearts with esteem and gratitude, which, with all other marks of our duty and affection, shall evidently appear to your Excellency in all our actions, and in our most zealous endeavors to return your Excellency the most suitable acknowledgments.

Sir, as you come from the immediate presence of the best and most indulgent of Princes (first year of the reign of the new king, remember), who reigns unrivalled in the minds and hearts of his subjects, we hope we shall not waste too much of your Excellency's time while we conclude this, our humble address, with assuring your Excellency of our unfeigned Loyalty and Fidelity to his most sacred Majesty King

George the Second, and his Illustrious house, in which we pray that the crown of Great Britain may for ever be established, and that under the happy influence of your Excellency's Government and protection, the blessings of a Reign which already discloses so great Glory and Splendor may very long be derived to us, his Majesty's distant subjects, and your Excellency's most obedient, most faithful, humble servants. (This was the sugar-coating).

To which address his Excellency was pleased to make the following curt answer, viz: (This was the pill).

"GENTLEMEN—I thank you for this kind address, and shall, to the utmost of my power, always support you in your rights and authorities, and hope you who are Magistrates will, at all times, exert yourselves in putting the Laws in execution for his Majesty's service and the good of the People of the City and County."

Volume the second close on the day when Washington opens the book of mortal life. Volume the third almost opens with a minute not complimentary to the Court (p. 43), for it recites a presentment by the Grand Jury of a member thereof, Francis Harrison, Recorder, for a malicious false imprisonment. This was the very Recorder who had read the flunkey address. As the trial took place in the Oyer and Terminer—an upper court—we do not know the verdict. But we can give one here—"Sarved him right!"

A little later the Grand Jury present the extension of William street as a nuisance. Many property-holders of 1864 might commend the action of the Grand Inquest! William street has always been a much vexed street and of crooked ways. We know that in our generation. It had four previous names: Smee street, Glassmakers' street, Borgers Path, and Smith street. In 1745 that worshipful body take an antipathy to Guy Fawkes day, and anathematize the setting off of squibs to celebrate the disgrace of that traitor, whom young John Bulls so characteristically detest. About 1760 the clerks seem particularly remiss in referring by recital to the king, and in chanting the nauseous chorus of "Gracious Majesty." The republican schoolmaster is evidently abroad in the Province. Besides, reverence for royalty was at a discount when subjects heard about "dapper little George the Second," with his red face and white eyebrows and goggle eyes, at sixty years of age dancing a pretty dance with Madame Walmoden, and capering about dressed up like the Turk that he was.

But about eight years latter (and about the time Commissioner the Earl of Carlisle came to New York to doctor up royalty) attention seems to have been invited to this decrease in clerical obsequiousness, and correctional style is made in favor of kingly etiquette. The old strophe and ante-strophe about his gracious majesty was accordingly sung to the Bench and Jury.

All these references—chosen almost haphazard—might be with interest enlarged upon and added to. They could be continued through other volumes. But enough have been made, under favor of the motto "Desipere in loco," to invite attention to these quaint records—completing an entire cycle.

The next cycle has not yet ended: but the progress of the age is well shown in the fact that already one hundred and one volumes of minutes have succeeded these, and by 1884 it is estimated they will number at least one hundred and fifty. The increase is twenty-three hundred per cent.

In the reign of Charles they were "abstracts and brief chronicles" of our New York criminal time. At this crisis of our republic they heve become actual histories of some phases in our social and political life. And so will it continue until the crowning act of Court Minutes—judicial sentences—end in "the last syllable of recorded time!"

GENERAL WASHINGTON'S LANDS.

[From the Pennsylvania Gazette of Sept. 22, 1773]

The subscriber having obtained patents for upwards of 20,000 acres of land on the Ohio and Great Kanawha, being part of 200,000 acres granted by proclamation, in 1764 (10,000 of which are situated on the banks of the first mentioned river, between the mouth of the two Kanawhas, the remainder on the Great Kanawha or New river, from the mouth, or near it, upwards, in one continued survey), proposes to divide the same into any sized tenements that may be desired, and lease them upon moderate terms, allowing a reasonable number of years rent free; provided that, within the space of two years from next October, three acres of every fifty contained in each lot, and proportionable for a lesser quantity, shall be cleared, fenced and tilled, and that by or before the time limited for the commencement of the first rent, five acres for every hundred, and proportionally, as above, shall be inclosed and laid down in good grass for meadow; and, moreover, that at least fifty good fruit trees, for every like quantity of land shall be planted on the premises.

Any persons inclinable to settle upon these lands, may be more fully informed of the terms, by applying to the subscriber, near Alexandria, in Virginia, or in his absence, to Mr. Lund Washington; and will do well in communicating their intentions before the first of October next, in order that a sufficient number of lots may be laid off to answer the demand.

As these lands are among the first which have been surveyed, in the part of the country where they lie, it is almost needless to premise, that none can exceed them in luxuriance of soil, or convenience of situation; all of these lying upon the banks of either the Ohio, or Kanawha, and abounding in fine fish and wild foul of various kinds, as also in most excellent meadows, many of which (by the bountiful hand of nature), are in their present state almost fit for the scythe.

From every part of these lands water carriage is now had to Fort Pitt, by an easy communication; and from Fort Pitt up the Monongahela to Red Stone, vessels of convenient burthen may, and do pass continually: from whence, by means of Cheat river, and other navigable branches of Monongahela, it is thought the portage to Patowmack may, and will be reduced within the compass of a few miles, to the great ease and convenience of the settlers, in transporting the produce of their lands to market: to which may be added that, as patents have now actually passed the seals, for the several tracts were offered to be leased, settlers on them may cultivate and enjoy the land in peace and safety, notwithstanding the unsettled councils, respecting a new colony on the Ohio; and as no right money is to be paid for these lands, and a quit rent of two shillings sterling a hundred, demandable some years hence only, it is highly presumable that they will always be held upon a more desirable footing, than where both these are laid on with a very heavy hand. It may not be amiss further to observe, that if the scheme for establishing a new government on the Ohio, in the manner talked of, should ever be effected, these must be among the most valuable lands in it; not only on account of the goodness of the soil, and the other advantages above enumerated, but from their contiguity to the seat of government, which it is more than probable will be fixed at the mouth of the Great Kanawha.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Mount Vernon, July 15, 1773.

Hotes and Queries.

NOTES.

HISTORY OF FORT NIAGARA.—1668. Sieur De LaSalle established quarters at Niagara, situate south of Lake Ontario, west of the Senecas, twenty-five leagues above them, in the angle of land east of the mouth of the river of the same name, which is the outlet of Lake Erie.

1675. The Senecas burnt the quarters at Niagara.

1686. Monsieur de Denonville proposes to send Sieur D'Orvilliers with Sieur Villeneuve the draughtsman to Niagara to establish a post; thereupon Gov. Dongan writes to M. de Denonville, "I am likewise informed that you are intended to build a fort at a place called Ohniagero on the side of the lake within my master's territories," and remonstrates against such erection.

1687. Gov. Dongan recommends the building of a fort at "Oneigra near the great lake in the way where our people goe a beaver hunting."

"1687. July 31. Monsieur de Denonville returning from an expedition against the Seneca Nation, encamped with all his army at the post of Niagara, constructed a fort and placed one hundred of the king's troops to garrison the same under the command of Sieur de Troyes. Father de Lamberville was the first chaplain to this post.

Aug. 2. La Hontan in a letter of this date says: "This fort stands on the south side of the streight of Herrie Lake, upon a hill at the foot of which this lake falls into the lake of Frontenac" (Ontario).

1688. July 6. Sieur de Troyes with 100 of the soldiers having died, Marquis de Denonville issued orders to abandon the fort.

1689. Sept. 15. Sieur Desbergeres, commandant of the fort, having assembled all the officers, made a Process Verbal of the condition of the fort.

"Firstly: We leave in the centre of the Square a large framed wooden cross eighteen feet in height, on the arms of which are inscribed in large letters, these words:—

REGN. VINC. † IMP. CHRS.

which was erected on last good Friday by all the officers, and solemnly blessed by the Reverend Father Millet.

Item: A cabin in which the commandant lodged, containing a good chimney, a door and two windows, furnished with three hinges, fastenings and locks, which cabin is covered with forty-four deal boards, and about six other boards arranged inside into a sort of bedstead.

Item: Right in front is the Reverend Father Millet's cabin, furnished with its chimney, windows and sashes, shelves, a bedstead and four boards arranged inside, with a door furnished with its fastenings "and hinges, the which is of twenty-four boards." The other items include a "cabin covered with 50 boards, another covered with forty-two boards, another covered with 30 boards; a bake-house partly covered with boards, and the remainder with hurdles and clay, a large frame building clapboarded with eighty-two plank; a large storehouse covered with 130 boards surrounded by pillars 8 feet high; a well with its cover above the scarf of the ditch," which process being completed he embarked with the remaining troops on board the bark La Generale, of which Maheut was pilot, for the Fort of Frontenac (now Kingston).

1725. M. de Longueuil repairs to Onontague, an Iroquois village, and procures consent for the construction of two barks, and the erection of a stone house at Niagara, the estimated expense of which was $5,592.

1726. Sieur Chaussegross, engineer, writes that he erected this house on the same spot where an ancient fort had been built by order of M. de Denonville, former Governor of New France in 1686.

1726. July 25. Chevalier de Longueuil, son of M. de Longueuil, was the commandant at Niagara.

1726. Sept. 5. Chevalier De Longueuil writes from Niagara that there are no more English at Choueguen (Oswego), along the Lake, nor on the River, and, if he meet any of them on the lake he'll plunder them; "that the house is very much advanced; that thirty of the workmen have been ill."

1726. Sept. 7. Gov. Burnet convened the Five Nations at Albany, to ascertain whether they had consented to the establishment of Fort Niagara. They replied that the Onondagas had given some sort of consent, but that they had never consented, and never would consent to it.

1728. May 14: Louis XV. writes to the Gov. of New France approving of the farming out of this post for the purpose of curtailing the expenses incurred there.

1729. Sieur de Joncaire, commandant. Father Crespel arrived here 22d July in a vessel of 80 tons from Frontenac. Crespel remained as chaplain three years.

1730. Sieur de Rigauville commandant. This year two French soldiers of the garrison were arrested for mutiny and sent to Montreal for trial, and condemned to be executed. Awaiting the arrival of an executioner, they were committed to jail, from which, by the aid of two Recollect Brothers, they made their escape to Quebec and placed themselves under the jurisdiction of the Superior of that order. A conflict of jurisdiction arose, and the mutineers escaped to France.

1744. Sieur de Celoron commander. The garrison consists of 64 soldiers and six officers. The stockades repaired and doubled.

1746. Lieut. de Contrecoeur, command-1748. Capt. de Raymond, commandant. 1749. Oct. 20. A return shows there was in the fort.

4 iron guns of 2 inches. 4 " "

4 " " 1½ "
1 iron mortar of 6 inches in diameter.

for grenades. 5 swivels.

13 iron shells (boites a pierriers.)

1750. Aug. 12. Peter Kalm visited the fort and found M. Beaujeu in command.

1755. July. Partially undermined by the lake. The artillery taken at Fort Duquesne arrived here. Foubonne and Pouchot ordered to put Niagara in the best defence.

1755. Oct. 5. Guienne Reg. embark at Frontenac for Niagara in 48 armed bateaux.

1756. June 12. Pouchot has finished Niagara. It consists of a horn work with its half moon covert way, lunettes at the places d'armes re-entering from the covert way. The front of this work is 120 toises. It is fortified according to M. de Vauban's method.

1756. The Béarn battalion is in camp at Niagara, making with those already there a corps of 600.

1756. Aug. M. Duplaisis, commandant, 1757. April. Capt. Pouchot, commandant.

1757. Nov. Capt. Vassan relieved Capt. Pouchot. He describes the buildings as consisting of two large barracks, one church, one powder magazine, and a store for merchandise.

1759. May 8. Pouchot had sailed for Niagara with troops on two little vessels built during the winter at Ogdensburgh.

1759. May 20. Brig. Gen. Prideaux leaves Schenectady with the 44th and 46th British Regiments, the 4th Battalion of the Royal Americans, two battalions of New York Provincials, and 1,100 Indians under Sir William Johnson, July 1. Leaving a detachment at Oswego under Col. Haldimand, they embark on Lake Ontario.

July 7. Saturday. The troops landed about six miles to the eastward of the Fort. Monsieur La Force, captain of the schooner Iroquois, is sent by the commandant of the Fort to destroy the barges.

July 8. Sunday—10 A. M. A captain of the Royal Americans was conducted, blindfolded, into the Fort, and demanded a surrender of the Fort. Capt. Pouchot replied he did not understand English. Breakfasted the officer and sent him back as he came.

July 9. Monday. No entry.

July 10. Tuesday. Rainy and fogy. The Fort kept up a hot fire upon the English, who were engaged opening trenches about 300 toises from the Fort. M. Joncaire burns Little Fort, (the chimney of this Fort still remains standing near Miss Porter's residence), and arrives at the Fort with 70 persons, several women and Indians, amongst whom was the chief Kaendaé.

July 11. Wednesday. The English engaged in throwing up batteries, and at 5 P. M. began to play two Grenadoe Royal mortars. The firing ceased during a parley. At 10 P. M. the English began to fire again with eight mortars.

July 12. Thursday. A battery 200 toises distant from the Fort was thrown up. A parley was had between the Indians. The Iroquois cannonaded the trench all day, and sailed at night for Oswego.

July 13. Friday. The English completed a shell battery of six mortars in spite of the great fire from the Fort, and during the night threw 300 bombs.

July 14. Saturday. The Indians in the Fort obtain leave to cross the river, so that no kettles (as they called the shells) should break their heads. Col. Johnson having but few provisions, persuades his Indians to remain by offering them the pillage of the Fort.

July 15. Sunday. Working at the battery continues. Ten mortars play upon the Fort, in which several were wounded.

July 16. Monday. Rain all day. Firing of bombs continues. Twenty men in all, have been disabled in the Fort.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 47

July 17. Tuesday. Heavy fog. The English unmask a battery of two large guns and two howitzers on Montreal Point, on the opposite side of the river. A shot entered the commandant's chimney and rolled beside his bed, on which he had just lain down. At the same time two other batteries were unmasked. M. de Morambert was slightly wounded in the Fort.

was slightly wounded in the Fort.
July 18. Wednesday. Firing on both sides continued through the day. In the Fort, one soldier was dismembered, and four wounded by bombs.

July 19. Thursday. The English perfected a new parallel eighty yards long in front of the Fort.—The fire was very great on both sides. The schooner Iroquois arrived from Kingston. "This evening Brig. Gen. Prideaux was killed in the trenches by an accident, the gunner inconsiderately firing as the General was passing, the shell bursting as soon as it cleared the mouth of the cohorn, and a large piece struck him on the side of his head."

July 20. Friday. The English perfect a third parallel towards the lake, distant one hundred and sixty yards from the lake, and continued firing with their mortars. In the Fort, one man killed and four wounded.

July 21. Saturday. The English construct a fourth parallel, distant 100 yards from the Fort.—The schooner cruises off Oswego to arrest convoys.

July 22. Sunday. Conflict on both sides heavy. The English fire red-hot balls fireballs. M. Bonnafoux wounded, and tenmen killed or wounded in the fort.

July 23. Monday. M. Pouchot receives letters from Aubry and de Lignery announcing their arrival at Navy Island with 600 French and 1,000 Indians, "who when passing the little rapid at the outlet of Lake Erie, resembled a floating island, so black was the river with batteaux and canoes." At 2 P.M. the English unmask another battery of 18, 12 and 6 pounders. In the evening, Gen. Johnson, learning that a large party of French and Indians were coming from Detroit, Presquisle and Venango to raise the siege, ordered 600 chosen men from the 44th and 46th Regiments, 100 New York provincials, and 600 Indians to waylay them at a place they must pass by on their way to the Fort.

July 24th, Tuesday, 8 o'clock A. M.—The English, under the command of Lt. Col. Massa, Lt. Col. Farquay and Major Beckwith safely entrenched behind their breastworks, received the fire of the advncing party five or six times and then rising up returned the five with immense slaughter. Five hundred French and Indians were killed and 120 taken prisoners, among whom were 17 officers. 4 P. M., Gen. Johnson sends Major Hervy with a flag of truce and demands the surrender of the Fort. M. Pouchot declines, not crediting Major Hervy's statement, sends Capt. de Cervies to the English camp and fluds it true.

M. Pouchot assembles the garrison to deliberate on the situation fo the Fort. The garrison consisted of 149 men detached from the regiments of La Sarre, Royal Rousillon, Guienne and Bearn, under the orders of Captain Pouchot of the Bearn Regiment; Commandants, Capt. de Villiers of La Sarre; Capt. de Cervies of Royal Rousillon; Lt. De Morambert of Guienne; Lt. Salvignac of Bearn; Lt. La Miltiere of Languedoc; of 183 Colonials under the orders of Captain De la Roche; Lieutenants Cornoyer and Larminac; of 133 Militia and 21 gunners, commanded by Lt. Bonnafoux of Royal corps, in an all 486, and 39 employes—five of whom were women and children; who with two Madames Douville attended the hospital, served up gun cartridges and made earth bags, of whom were hors de services or lost 10 men of La Sarre, 9 of Bearn, 8 of Royal Rousillon, 13 of Guienne, 43 of the Colonials, 26 Militia, in all 109 men killed or wounded and 37 sick. Of 54,000 lbs of powder, 24,000 lbs had been consumed, that the garrison had not lain down for 19 days, that help was not to be expected from anyquarter. Thereupon M. Pouchot called in the English officer and negotiations continued the entire night. The entire garrison demanding a capitulation at day break, the following capitulation was drawn up and signed:

Articles of capitulation granted to the garrison of Niagara, inclosed in Sir William Johnson's letter to Major-General Amherst of the 25th of July, 1759.

Article 1. The garrison shall march out with arms and baggage, drum beating and match lighted at both ends, and a small piece of cannon to embark upon vessels which the commander of his Britannic Majesty's forces shall furnish, to convey them to New York, by the shortest ronte and in the shortest time. Granted.

A. II. The garrison shall lay down their arms when they embark, but shall keep their baggage. Granted.

A. III. The officers shall keep both their arms and their baggage. Granted.

Art. IV. The French ladies as well as the chaplain, shall be sent back and the commander of his Britannic Majesty's troops shall furnish them with vessels and subsistence necessary for their voyage to the first French post, and this is to be executed as soon as possible; those women who chose to follow their husbands are at liberty to do it. Granted, except with regard to those women who are his Britannic Majesty, subjects.

Art. V. The sick and wounded, who are obliged to remain in the fort, shall have liberty to depart, with everything that belongs to them, and shall be conducted in safety, as soon as they are able to bear the fatigues of a voyage, to the place destined for the rest of the garrison; in the mean time they are to be allowed a guard for their security. Granted.

Art. VI. The commanding officer, all the other officers, and private men, who are in the service of his most Christian Majesty, shall quit the fort without being subject to any act of reprisals whatsoever. Granted.

Art. VII. An inventory shall be made of all the military stores in the magazine, which, with the artillery, shall be delivered up bona fide, as well as other effects, which are the property of his most Christian Majesty, and which are found in the magazine at the time of the capitulation. The vessels and boat are included in this article.

Art. VIII. The soldiers shall not be plundered, nor separated from their officers. Granted.

The garrison shall be conduct-Art. IX. ed under a proper escort to the place destined for their reception: the general shall expressly recommend to this escort to hinder the savages from approaching and insulting any persons belonging to the garrison, and shall prevent their being pillaged by them, when they quit their arms for embarkation; and the same care is to be taken on every part of the route, where savages may be met with. Granted.

An exact list shall be made of Art. X. the names and sirnames of the different troops, as well egulars as militia, and all others who are employed in his most Christian Majesty's service; and all those who are so employed shall be treated in the same manner as the rest of the garrison. Granted in the first article.

Art. XI. All the savages, of whatsoever nation they be, who are found in the garrison, shall be protected from insult, and be allowed to go where they pleased. Granted; but it will be adviseable for them to depart as privately as possible.

The articles being accepted, the general of his Britannic Majesty's forces shall be put in possession of a gate of the fort, but this cannot be done until to-morrow. To-morrow at seven o'clock in the morning.

Signed by Pouchot, captain in the regiment of Bearn, commanding officer.

Villar, captain in the regiment of Le Sarre. Cervier, captain in the regiment Royal Roussillon.

Oliver de la Roche Verney, captain of the marine.

Bonnafoux, officer in the royal artillery. Cournoyer, lieutenant of the marine.

Soluignac, officer in the regiment of Bearn. Le Chevalier de L'Arminac, lieutenant of the marine.

Joncaire, captain of the marine.

Morambert, lieutenant.

Chabert Joncaire, in the regiment of Guienne.

List of ordnance and stores at Niagara, at the time of its surrendering to the English.

Iron ordnance, 14-pounders 2; 12-pounders 19; 11-pounders 1; 8-pounders 7; 6-pounders 7; 4-pounders 2; 2-pounders 5; travelling carriages, 14-pounders 2; 12pounders 12; 8-pounders 8; 6-pounder 5; garrison carriages, 12-pounders 2; 8-pounders 4; 6 pounders 3; 4-pounders 2.ladles with staves, 14-pounders 3; 12-pounders 12; 8-pounders 9; 6-pounders 7; 4-pounders 2; spunges with rammer heads, 12-pounders 16; 8-pounders 9; 6-pounders 10; 4pounders 4. wadhooks with saves 10; grudox defieu,12-pounders 12; 8-pounders 6; 6-pounders 7; 4 pounders 3; round shot loose, 12-pounders 150; 8-pounders 200; 6-pounders 2,600; 4-pounders 100; cohorn mortars on beds 2; hand granades 500; entrenching tools, axes large 100; hand-bills 300; hand-hatchets 500; shovels iron 300; mattocks 250; pick-axes 400; spades 50; whip-saws 12; corned powder 15,000tb.; small lead shot and balls 40,000fb. match, Signed) George Wray, clerk of the stores. Provisions of all kinds enough.

July 26,—Thursday; In the afternoon the garrison marched out of the fort with musket, on the shoulder, drums beating, and two pieces of large cannon at the head of the column. As soon as the troops reached the batteaux they laid down their muskets and immediately pushed off.

On this occasion a tragical event occurred. -Cadet Moncourt, of the Colonials, had formed an attachment with an Indian in the English army, and when he became prisoner, the latter expressed a great deal of sorrow at his situation, and said to him: "Brother, I am in despair at seeing you dead; but take heart, I'll prevent their torturing you," and killed him with a blow of a tomahawk, thinking thereby to save him from the tortures to which prisoners among themselves are subjected.

The English lost 40 men in the whole, since the landing of troops at Niagara, including Major General Prideaux and Colonel John. son, the second in command. The Indians were allowed all the plunder of the fort. Goods on a neighboring Island were found to the value of £8,000.

The French and Indians who escaped from the field retired to Navy Island, where de Rocheblave, with 150 men, had been left to guard the batteaux, whence they proceeded to Detroit, under the orders of M. Belestre. It is thought that the two vessels now lying sunk at Burnt Ship Bay, were sunk here at this time. Brig. General Johnson, was rewarded by the King with a Baronetcy, and a sum of £5,000 was voted to him by the House of Commons.

BISHOP GEORGE HENRY LOSKIEL, THE MORAVIAN HISTORIAN.—In a recent number of the Moravian, the Rev. S. Reinke says of Bishop G. H. Loskiel:

I frequently saw and conversed with him in my young days. He was a man of medium size, and somewhat corpulent, of a very venerable and respect inspiring aspect. His noble, expansive forehead, surmounted by a neat and well powdered wig, his small dove-like eyes beaming with benevolence, his soft, well rounded cheeks, his handsome nose and mouth, in short, his whole appearance and demeanor, showed him to be not only an intelligent and polite, but also an exceedingly kind hearted man. Hence his surviving colleagues at Bethlehem, described his character by saying that he wept with those that wept, and rejoiced with such as did rejoice. It was his delight to relieve the poor and to do good to all; he always felt grieved when unable to follow this bent of his inclination. We have been told that while in Germany, his native country, he often preached with great acceptance to thousands that flocked to hear him, many of whom became seals to his ministry. There he also published his history of our Missions among the North American Indians, and his excellent devotional manual, entitled, "Etwas fuers Herz," which passed through a number of editions in Germany and Switzerland. He likewise published sermons on the Sufferings of our Lord, and quite a number of hymns.

The following is abridged from the records of the Bethlehem Congregation.

He was born on the 7th of November, 1740, at Angermuende, in the Province of Courland, where his father labored as a faithful Pastor of the Lutheran Church, and where himself was, for the space of eleven years, under the careful tuition of Brother John

Hueffel (the father of Bishop C. G. Hueffel), in whose company he traveled to Barby. and, at his urgent request, was received as a member of the Brethren's Church, on the 26th of December, 1759,

While yet in his father's house, he experienced, four different times, hairbreadth escapes of his life. Once he fell into a large kettle full of boiling water; and once into a stream with a strong current. On another occasion, a man, in a great fury, threw a sharp pointed table knife at his uncle, which missed the latter but struck Loskiel, so that he nearly lost his life; and again, when thirteen years old, he was dragged a considerable distance by a vicious horse, and was rescued in a wonderful manner from the very jaws of death.

At Barby he studied divinity and medicine; and after having for a time practised the latter with great success, he resolved to devote himself wholly to the gospel ministry. After serving three years as a Teacher in the Pædagogium at Nisky, Prussia, he labored from 1766 to 1769 at Neuwied, on the Rhine, Marienborn, in Central Germany, and Amsterdam in Holland. On June 27th, 1771, he was married to Mary Magdalen Barlach. Then he filled various offices at Zeist, in Holland, and Kleinwelke and Barby, in Germany. The Synod of 1782 appointed him Superintendent in Livonia. where he was constantly traveling about. from one station to another. Subsequently he became the Agent of the Brethren's Church at the Court of St. Petersburg, and preached in the Brethren's Chapel of that metropolis. In 1789 he went to Gnadenfrei, Prussia, where, in 1792, he witnessed the great conflagration, that laid the entire village in ashes, and where he is said to have relieved many of the sufferers from his private funds. In 1794 he was called to Nisky, and in 1798 to Herrnhut, in Saxony.

In 1802 he was sent to America as the Superintendent of the Moravain churches, and Pastor of the church at Bethlehem. He arrived here on the 23d of July, after a prosperous voyage. During the nine years of his abode in our country, he frequently visited the churches in the Northern Province, and, in 1803 had the pleasure of becoming personally acquainted with the Indian Mission at Goshen, in Ohio. Ever since writing the History of that Mission, he had cherished a peculiar affection for it, and always remembered it in his prayers before the Lord.

In 1810 his health began to fail, so that, when in May, 1812, he was appointed a member of the Unity's Elders' Conference, in the place of Bishop J. Risler deceased, he found himself unable to travel to Europe. Hence he resigned his entire charge into the hands of Bishop C. G. Reichel, of Salem, N. C., after having ordained Rev. John Herbst, at Litiz, a bishop of the church. For three entire years he suffered intensely from a great variety of maladies, such as vertigo, compression of the brain, and violent headaches. To add to his afflictions, he received a contusion on his leg, from a projecting limb of a tree which lay across the road, on which he was walking. This contusion became inflamed, and not yielding to the remedies applied, proved the cause of great suffering, which was afterward still more increased by an open sore in his back. Amidst all these trials he manifested the most exemplary patience.

On the 23d of February, 1814, the weary pilgrim fell asleep, in the seventy-fourth year of his age.

Loskiel was ordained a Deacon, at Zeist, on the 22d of May, 1768; a Presbyter, at Barby, on the 19th of March, 1775; and consecrated a Bishop, at Herrnhut, on the 14th of March, 1802.

IROQUOIS NAMES OF PLACES.

Schoharie—from S the article and Oquari,
a Bear,

Canajoharie — The village of the Bear; from Canada, village, and Oquari, a Bear.

Estaragoha. The Big Rock (somewhere near Tribes Hill, Fulton Co., about 24 miles west of Schenectady); from Ostenra, a rock, and Goa, big.

Little Falls, Herkimer Co. Astenrogen; from Ostenra, a rock, and Oge, in the river or water.

Canajoharie Creek. Tecayonharonwe; from Te, sign of the dual number; Cayunghaw, creek, and ongwe, men; i.e. The two men's, or people's creek. It is now called Bowman's creek.

Stone creek, Schoharie Co: Oneyagine; from Oneya, a stone.

Rochester, Monroe Co. Gasconsage; The perpendicular Falls. [Bruyas.]

Cumberland Head, Plattsburgh; Squinanton, from Oskennonton, a Deer, which probably resorted that place.

Cookquago, or west branch of the Delaware river; from Kekoa, or Okowa, an owl, and goa, big.

Oghquago, in Broome Co., is another form of the word, and seems to mean, The country of the Big Owl.

Caughnawaga. At the Rapid; from Onawa, Rapid, and Ke, at; custom permitting the changing the initial O into Ka [Dufresne.]

E. B. O. C.

Golden Wedding.—The 50th Anniversary of the marriage of Judge W. T. Martin and his estimable Lady occurred on the 27th Sept., and was celebrated in an appropriate manner by the parties, their children, grand-children, and a few of their near neighbors.

Judge M. and lady were married in Somerset, State of Pennsylvania, on the 27th day of September, 1814; removed to, and settled in the village of Columbus, in the Spring of 1815, and have resided here ever since. Under their observation the little village on the banks of the Scioto has taken the form of, and grown into a beautiful city of thirty thousand inhabitants. What a change they have witnessed during the past half century!

By a long and well ordered life they have been blessed with a competence of this world's goods, from which they have always given liberally, but without ostentation, to the poor and unfortunate of our city. Upon this occasion, we are informed, that Mrs. M. gave to the poor of her neighborhood in the aggregate, over one hundred dollars. Such a life affords an example worthy of imitation.—Ohio State Journal, Oct. 1.

PREDEATH COFFINS AND MONUMENTS. -(Vol. VIII., p. 210.)-The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, says in his letter of Oct. 4: "An eccentric old gentleman has at length deceased in this city, after a most practical preparation for death. Upwards of a dozen years ago, a little lot in Greenwood was fenced, and in its centre was planted a marble shaft bearing aloft the effigy of this strange old gentleman. There it stood, quadrant in hand, braving all sorts of weather, and almost daily came to the lot this quiet old gentleman, mounted with a ladder to the foot of the effigy, and was lost in contemplation of the marble Self. Now the marble has outbraved and outlasted the weather-beaten old gentleman, and he is buried under the shaft which he took so much pride in rearing; which he watched and studied with so much reverence." He was some time since nearly entombed alive in it, the door having fallen while he was making his almost daily inspection. In fact he passed the night there, not being discovered till the next day.

Kearsarge.—The spelling and definition of this word having been settled, Galignani's Messenger enlightens the world as to the geography of Kearsarge. It says "the name Kearsarge is taken from a river in the southern part of North America which falls into the Bay of Vera Cruz."

QUERIES.

M. DE ST. GASPIN.—In Rále's dictionary, p. 493, under the word "Noms," he gives: "Matsibigsadoussek, la rivière où est M. de. S. Gaspin." Who was he, and where did he live?

PSEUDONYMS.—Who wrote the tracts entitled—Strictures on the United States Constitution. By Massachusettensis, United States of America, 1792?

Thoughts on the Increasing Wealth and National Economy of the United States of America, City of Washington. Printed by Way and Groff, 1801? The Preface is signed Observator.

FIAT JUSTITIA, RUAT CŒLUM.—Can this maxim, made famous by Lord Mansfield's use of it in the Somerset case, be found in print or writing earlier than 1647? In that year the Simple Cobbler of Aggavam was first published at London, in which the following sentence occurs: "It is less to say, Statuatur veritas, ruat Regnum, than Fiat justitia, ruat Cælum."

INQUIRER.

Variorum; Diversorum.—Editions of the classics have appeared, some, cum notis variorum; others, cum notis diversorum. Will any of the readers of the Hist. Mag. explain the difference between their editions; who were their publishers, or be so good as to mention some work which treats of these editions and in which the required information can be obtained?

BIBLIOG.

JENNE.—Persons who can furnish names and data respecting members of this family, and the direct descendants of John Jenney, who came to Plymouth in the Little James in 1623, will oblige by sending such information to D. Judson Jenne, State Hall, Albany, who is preparing a genealogy of the family.

THE HENRY PLOT.—Where can an American account of the "Henry Plot" in 1811 be found. A Capt. John Henry, who went from the United States to Canada, was subsequently employed as a secret English agent, in the eastern states, to watch, and probably foster the disunion sentiment. Failing to obtain sufficient remuneration from the English government, he sold his papers to the American government.

M.

WAS THIS STEAM?—On the 28th May, 1714, Joseph Morgan presented a petition to the assembly of New York, setting forth that he had invented a machine, whereby to row a ship or boat with much swiftness against wind and tide, and praying protection. A bill was ordered to be brought in accordingly.

SAWED CANNON.—In 1690, some cannon were taken from a ship for the defence of New York, and are described as "four old yron guns of twelve pounds calabre & one do sawed of do calabre." What are "sawed" cannon?

ENGLISH OFFICERS AND MEN KILLED AT QUEBEC.—Does these exist in manuscript or print, a list of the officers and privates who fell on the British side during Wolfe's defeat of the French on the Plains of Abraham?

REPLIES.

CONTINENTAL MONEY., (Vol. V, page 71).—This article first appeard in the Pennsylvania Magazine, Dec., 1775.

ORIGIN OF MULES IN THE UNITED STATES, [Vol. VIII, p. 342].—The late John Savage Esq., of this city, had in his possession an autograph letter of General Washington respecting the Spanish jack presented to the General by the King of Spain. It is a very humourous letter, but would be considered rather too broad for publication by most persons.

Mr. Savage obtained this letter in a singular manner. Whilst hunting in Maryland he came across a country school-house, outside of which some one was engaged in Thrusting his ramrod burning papers. into the burning pile, he drew out this letter. The owner of the ground on which the school-house was erected claimed the letter, on hearing of Mr. Savage's good fortune, but Mr. Savage told him that he thought he had forfeited any right which he might have had in the paper, by allowing the papers to be consigned to the flames without examination.

Philadelphia,

A. E.

Societies and their Proceedings.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK HISTORICAL SOCIETY-COMMEMO-BATION OF THE CONQUEST OF NEW NETHERLAND. -New York, Oct. 12. The bicentennial celebration by the New York Historical Society of the Conquest of New Netherland, was greatly marred by the inclemency of the weather, the torrents of rain which fell during the whole of the evening doubtless compelling the absence of many who would otherwise have been present on so interesting an occasion. Notwithstanding all disadvantages, a fair audience was collected at the Cooper Institute to listen to an oration on the Conquest of New-Netherland by J. R. Brodhead, LL. D., and precisely at a quarter past 7 the President of the Society, Fred. De Peyster, Esq., made his appearance on the platform, accompanied by a number of gentlemen, among whom were Peter Cooper, G. C. Verplanck, Judge Daly, John Cochrane, Gen. Sandford, Mr. Whitehead, S. Alofsen, Alfred B. Street, James N. Beekman, Senor Romero, — Montgomery, J. B. Walker, Esqs., and Drs. DeWitt, Osgood, Storrs, Askew, Bouton, Bishop Lee of Delaware, and Dr. Usher Parsons, the last surviving officer who was on the flag ship Perry of Lake Erie renown, in that memorable action. Most of the Historical Societies of the New England States, and what was once New-Netherland. were also represented,

The President, Fred. De Peyster, Esq., called the meeting to order, and said: Ladies and gentlemen, we have met to night to celebrate the conquest of the New Netherland, a tract of country embracing a vast territory, and this conquest was the most momentous in the early history of New York. A century later New York was one of the first, if not the first, among the foremost to take measures to overthrow the British rule. and subsequently combined with the other colonies to take measures leading to the national independence. In 1783 that event took place, and thus by a sort of retributive justice, was the event of 1664 consummated by that memorable circumstance. A century later, reckoning from 1664, we find New York—the great and powerful State of New York-taking, with a determined will, gigantic measures to sustain and maintain our National Union, by the overthrow of domestic treason, and also, if necessary, protect it from foreign affirmations against that unity and its perpetuity.

Dr. DE WITT then offered up a prayer, after which the President introduced the orator of the day, John Romeyn Brodhead, Esq., who said: LADIES AND GENTLEMEN-Two hundred years ago, an English squadron came up our bay and anchored near what is now the Battery, and its presence produced most momentous results. In the summer of 1664 the Eastern coast was occupied by colonies of different nations,-England, France, and Holland. France had pushed her colonies along the St. Lawrence and Mississippi. England had kept closer to the coast and had settled the New England States, and further south midway between New England and Virginia were the settlements of the Batavian Republic, the New Netherland. He then gave an account of the early discoveries of this continent and referred to the establishment of the principle under Queen Elizabeth that the rights of European powers over their discoveries of savage lands must be sustained by actual occupa-tion or they were void. He then recounted the early discoveries of Gosnold and Pring, and of English settlements in Virginia prior to the discovery by Hendrick Hudson of the river which now bears his name, in 1609. In 1613, the first Dutch trading establishments were founded at Manhattan, and the present city of Albany and the islands, coasts and rivers along the shore were soon explored. In 1614 the General Government of the Dutch Republic granted a charter to the owners of the vessels authorizing them exclusively to visit the region they had discovered, which was soon named "New Netherland," and in 1621 a West India Company was formed to govern "the fruitful and unsettled regions" in Africa and America it might occupy. Under this charter the new colony grew apace and Fort Amsterdam was built on the southern point of New York Island. In 1620 James the First of England sealed a patent for the colonization of "New England in America," but the terms of that charter clearly excepted New France and New Netherland. In the same year, a part of New England was colonized, but before the patent was sealed, and was soon succeeded by other English in Massachusetts Bay, Fres,h and Connecticut River and at New Haven and Rhode Island, all made under the general authority of the New England patent. In the meantime the Colony of New Netherland flourished, and its young metropolis was named New Amsterdam. Its government was vested in a Director and Council, and a Fiscal and Attorney General; and in 1647 Peter Stuyvesant began his service as Director-General which lasted until the conquest of the colony, and under his administration the colony prospered greatly, attracting numbers of emigrants from Europe and the adjoining colonies

After sketching the character of Peter Stuyvesant, Mr. Brodhead read the following prophecy, contained in a letter written to Stuyvesant by the East India Company in 1652:

"Promote commerce, whereby Manhattan must prosper, her population increase, her trade and navigation flourish. For when these once become permanently established; when the ships of New Netherland ride on every part of the ocean, then numbers, now looking to that coast with eager eyes, will be allowed to embark for your island." Mr. Brodhead continued:

The prophecy was splendidly fulfilled. New Amsterdam rapidly grew in importance, and her foreign commerce soon began to rival her domestic trade. The first vessel ever built by Europeans in North America, after the 'Virginia of Sagadahoc,' in 1607, was Block's significantly styled 'Restless of Manhattan,' in 1614. One of the largest merchantmen in Christendom was constructed by her shipwrights in 1631. Strangers sought burghership in the rising metropolis, and the tongues of many nations resounded through her ancient winding streets. Like her prototype, New Amsterdam was always a city of the world.

The province of New Netherland was, indeed, the most advantageously situated region in North America. Its original limits included all the Atlantic coast between Delaware Bay and Montauk Point, and even farther east and north, and all the inland territory bounded by the Conneticut valley on the cost, the St. Lawrence and Ontario on the north, and the affluents of the Ohio, the Susquehanna, and the Delaware on the west and south. Within those bounds is the only spot on the continent whence issue divergent streams which find their outlets in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the Atlantic ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. Across the surface of the province runs a chain of the Alleghanies, through which, in two remarkable chasms, the waters of the Delaware and Hudson flow southward to the sea. At the head of its tides, the Hudson, which its explorers appropriately called 'the Great River' of the Mountains,' receives the current of the Mohawk, rushing in from the west. Through the valleys of these rivers, and across the neighboring lakes, the savage natives of the country tracked those pathways of travel and commerce which civilized science only and commerce which civilized science only adopted and improved. Along their banks soon grew up flourishing villages, contributing to the prosperity of the chief town, which, with unering judgment, had been planted on the oceanwashed island of Manhattan. In addition to those superb geographical peculiarities, every variety of soil, abundant mineral wealth, nature teeming with vegetable and animal life, and a climate as healthful as it is delicious, made New Netherland the most attractive of all the European colonies in America. From the first it was always the chosen seat of empire.

"It was the wise decree Providence that of this magnificent region should first be occupied by the Batavian race. There was expanded the germ of a mighty cosmopolitan state, destined to exert a moral influence as happy as the physical peculiarities of its temperate territory were alluring. Yet the growth and prosperity of the Dutch province were fatal to its political life.

The envy of its neighbors was aroused. Covetousness produced an irrepressible desire of possession, which could only be appeased by its violent seizure by unscrupulous foes.

"If at this time Englishmen had any one national characteristic more strongly developed than another, it was jealousy of the Dutch. Strangely, too, this sentiment seemed to have grown with the growth of Puritanism. It was enough for the British islander that the continental Hollander spoke a language different from his own. It mattered not that Costar of Haarlem invented the art of arts; or that Grotius, Erasmus, Gronovius and Plancius among scholars, and Boerhave and Huygens among philosophers, and Rembrandt and Cuyp and Wouvermans among painters, were illustrious sons of the liberal republic. Even William the Silent and Barneveldt were of little account among insular Britons-'divided from all the rest of the world.' Coarse wit and flippant ridicule were continually employed in educating the Englishman to undervalue and dislike the Hollander

"On the other hand, Holland, at the zenith of her power, was not jealous of England. The Dutch maxim was "Live and let live."

The speaker here gave a graphic account of the general features of the colony and its prosperity, and which drew on it the covetous eyes of England and of the jealousy existing in the minds of Englishmen of the Dutch. This jealousy was reproduced and exaggerated in the breasts of the colonists of the New Englanders especially. From the time of the first intercourse between Manhattan and New-Plymouth. the latter always pertinaciously insisted that the Dutch Colonists were "intruders." Gradually they crowded on westward at the Connecticut river until, in 1650, it was agreed between Stuyvesant and the New-England authorities that the Eastern boundary of New-Netherland should be Oyster Bay, on Long Island, and a line running northerly from Greenwich on the continent. Cromwell attempted to seize these territories, but, by the trenty of 1654, he recognized the right of Holland to the New-Netherland, and in 1656 the States General ratified the colonial boundary agreed on in 1650, but the British government evaded all engagement on the subject. Mr. Brodhead then recounted the subjugation of parts of Long Island by the Connecticut settlers, and the steps taken by the Director to guard against the dangers threatening the province by calling an assembly of deputies from the different towns at New-Amsterdam, in the Spring of 1664. Urgent appeals were addressed to the West India Company, but without avail, the Company thinking more of their commercial interests than those of the In 1664 the States-General, however, desired the British Government to order the HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

restitution of the places seized by the English colonists; but the Ambassador, Sir George Donning, startled the Grand Pensionary by declaring that the New-Netherlanders were "the encroachers" upon New-England. A council for Foreign Plantations was formed by the English Government, stringent navigation laws passed, and Lord Stirling complained that the Dutch had intruded into I ong Island, which had been granted to his grandfather. On March 12, 1664, Charles II. granted a patent to James the Duke of York, giving him exclusive right over large portions of New Netherland, and authorizing him to expel all persons settled there without his licences. The Duke of York commissoned Col. Robert Nichols to act as his Deputy, and commissioned four vessels of war and embarked in them about 450 veterans commanded by officers in the English army. The expedition set sail from Portsmouth in the middle of May for Gardiner's Bay, Long Island. The States-General were informed of these movements, but replied to Stuyvesant that they were intended to instal some bishops in New-England. The ships arrived at Boston and there the squadron was strongly re-enforced by a number of Massachusetts and Connecticut settlers, and Indians held in reserve. Long Island peaceably submitted to the government of the Duke of York and sent auxiliaries to the English forces. Stuyve-sant was absent when the squadron reached New-York, but hurried back to find the harbor blockaded, and that no aid could be got from Long Island. The regular garrison did not exceed 150, and its supply of powder was short. The burghers were more anxious to protect their property than to save the town; nevertheless, Stuyvesant determined to hold out. Nicholls summoned the town to surrender, and the people of the town, who had learned the liberal offers he made of protection to their persons, properties, and liberties, became mutinous. The squadron came up from its anchorage at Gravesend to New-Amsterdam, and landed five companies of regular soldiers at Governor's Island, and at last the entreaties of the principal inhabitants prevailed on Stuyvesant to surrender the town. which only had fifteen hundred inhabitants. Six commissioners were appointed to negotiate the terms of surrender; which were, that the inhabitants were to continue free denizens, and were guaranteed their property. These were explained to the people on the following Sunday. at the close of the afternoon service, and it was agreed that the New-England troops should be kept on the Brooklyn side of East River, the burghers being more apprehensive of them than the others. On the 8th of September, 1664, the garrison marched off with flying colors, and the English took possession of the town, and occupied the city gates and the Town Hall, and the name of the city was altered to New-York. Soon after, Fort Orange, now Albany, surrendered, and the Dutch fort of Newcastle, on the Deleware, was taken by the English thus completing the reduction of the New-Netherland.

The speaker then discussed at considerable length the effects of the conquest of New-Netherland, which he denounced as a most wanton and unjust aggression on the part of England, and which, prompted solely by her greed and lust of power, had been justly punished by the overthrow of her power on the American Continent in the succeeding century, and to which the conquest of New-Netherland had greatly contributed.

The orator proceeded to show the baseness of the conquest of New Netherland, and continued:

"Yet unjustifiable as was the deed, the temptation to commit it was irresistible. Its actual execution was only a question of time. It could not have been prevented, unless the Dutch government were prepared to renounce their previous policy, and hold New Netherland at every hazard against the might of all enemies.

hazard against the might of all enemies.

* * "If England had not seized New Netherland when she did, France would almost certainly have taken and held it, not long afterwards, in the Dutch war of 1672. * * was for the true interest of America that New York was founded by Holland. It made her the magnanimous and cosmopolitan state which she now is, and whose national influence has been so happy and healthful. Providence never meant our great country to perpetuate the ideas of only one nationality in the old world, or of but one of its plantations in the new. The arrogant claim—so flattering to British pride, so sycophantic in Americans who would flatter England -that the United States of America are of wholly Anglo-Saxon origin, is as fallacious as it is vulgar. 'Time's noblest offspring' was not the child of England alone. There was a fatherland as fruitful as the motherland. There were many parents of our multigeneous people. The great modern republic sprung from a union of races as various and contrasted as the climates to which they emigrated. Sweden, Holland, Germany, Savoy, Spain, France, Scotland, and Ireland, all co-operated, no less mightily than England, in peopling our territory, moulding our institutions, and creating our vast and diversified country 'one and indivisible.' To its heterogeneousness, and not to its supposed homogeneousness-to its collisions and its comminglings of races-to its compromises and its concessionsdoes that country owe its grandest moral, social and political characteristics."

Mr. Brodhead then sketched the character of the Dutch emigrants, and of the other colonists who settled in New Netherland, showing the changes which followed the English conquest, through which all the old Dutch influence survived. After alluding to the injustice done to New York in many American school books and histories, he concluded his oration as follows:

"The retirement of Holland from the unequal strife left France and Spain to contend with England for colonial supremacy in North America. Mistress of all the Atlantic coast between Nova. Scotia and Florida, the power which had conquered New York soon aspired to uncontrolled dominion from sea to sea. The acquisition of New Netherland, which had formerly kept Virginia apart from New England, gave to the British crown the mastery of the most advantageous positions on the continent, whence it could at pleasure, direct movements against any colony that might attempt a premature independence With short-sighted triumph England rejoiced that her authority was dotted on a new spot in in the map of the world. But her pride went. before her destruction, and her haughty spirit prepared the way for her terrible humiliation. The American republic was fashioned in the first Congress of 1765, which met at New York. It. was a most significant but only a just decree of Providence, that the retribution of England should begin with the very province which she bad so iniquitously ravished from Holland, to set, as her most splendid jewel, in the diadem of her colonial sovereignty.

"Yet for a long time the plantations, which had thus become geographically united, were neither homogeneous nor sympathetic, and they never were actually consolidated. While New England, Maryland and Virginia were radically Anglo-Saxon colonies, the mass of the popolation of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware, which had formed the later territory of New Netherland, was, as we have seen, made up of Hollanders, Huguenots, Waldenses, Germen, Frenchmen, Swedes, Scotchmen and Irishmen. A similar want of homogeneousness characterized some of the more southern colonies. Among these manifold nationalities, ideas and motives of action were as various and discordant as the different dialects which were uttered. In the progress of years a common allegiance and common dangers produced a greater sympathy among the English plantations in America, "Nevertheless, while she formed a part of the British colonial empire, New York never lost her original social identity, nor her peculiar political influence. Her moral power lasted throughout the whole succession of events which culminated in the American Revolution. Nor has her salutary influence ever ceased. The history of opinion, furnished the example of the confederation of free and independent states, and made familiar the most instructive lessons of constitutional administration. While that history taught the sacred right of revolt against the tyrany of an hereditary king, it enforced the no less sacred duty of faithfulness to deliberate obligations and loyalty to the general government, founded by the solemn compact of sovereign but united states.

"The patriots who deposed Philip the Second were the great originals of those who in the next century dethroned Charles the First, and in the century following rejected George the Third. From Holland came William, the deliverer of England from the tyrant James. The declaration of the independence of the United Provinces of the Netherlands was the glorious model of the English declaration of right, and of the grander declaration of the independence of United Colonies of North America. The Union of Utrecht was the nobler examplar of the Philadelphia articles of confederation. The Dutch moto: 'Eendragt macht Magt' — Unity makes Might — suggested our own 'E Pluribus Unum.'

"All these teachings of Dutch history are the peculiar heritage of our own Empire state. It was the proud destiny of New York to temper the narrow and sometimes fanatical characteries of her English sister plantations with the larger and more conservative principles which she had herself derived from Holland. It was her lot to sustain more severe trials and gain a more varied experience than any other American colony.

'Midway between the St, Lawrence and the Chesapeake she stood for almost a century, guarding her long frontier against the enmity and might of New France. And when at last the conquest of Canada filled the measure of British aggression and pampered still more the British lust of power, the augury of two hundred years ago was fulfilled; and New York --- worthy to be distinguished as the Netherlands of America - became the pivot province, on which hinged the most important movements of that sublime revolt against the oppression of England, the only paralled to which was the triumphant struggle that the forefathers of her first settlers maintained against the gigantic despotism of Spain."

GULIAN C. VERPLANCE, Esq., proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Brodhead for his address, and to request a copy of it for publication.

to request a copy of it for publication.

The Hon. Geo. Bancroft, in a few appropriate remarks, seconded the vote of thanks to Mr. Brodhead, which on being put from the chair, was unanimously adopted.

The benediction was then pronounced by Dr. DeWitt, the proceedings having been necessarily curtailed owing to the length of time occupied by the address, and the meeting adjourned to the rooms of the Historical Society, in 2d-av. Here a reception was given by the members of the New York Historical Society to their friends, and after a pleasant interval spent in an inspection of the pictures and curiosities in the Society's Museum, the guests descended to the refectory in the basement, where an elegant repast was provided, to which ample justice was done.

Several speeches were made during the course of the evening by the President, A. B. Street of Albany. P. Dawson of Buffalo, and Gen. John Cochrane. Gen. Cochrane was very warmly received, and expressed his pleasure at the meeting, which he hoped would do something to promote that national unity of race of which the orator of the day had spoken. He concluded by expressing his devotion to the National Union, and his confidence of its ultimate preservation.

The assembly shortly after dispersed, highly pleased with the evening's entertainment

LONG ISLAND HISTORICAL SOCIETY. Brooklyn, Oct. 6.—An extremely interesting meeting of this Society was held at their rooms on the corner of Court and Joralemon streets; the Hon. Judge Greenwood presiding. The attendance was large, and included some of the most wealthy and influential citizens of Brooklyn. Rev. Dr. Storrs submitted the annual report of the Executive Committee, which showed that the Society was in a most flourishing condition. Three new portraits of Adams, Franklin, and Red Jacket, purchased out of the Sheldon fund, were received, and ordered to be placed on exhi-The society received as a contribution bition. from Col. Barton the battle flag of the 48th regiment, for which the thanks of the society were tendered. Dr. Stiles, the librarian, submitted an extremely interesting report, from which it appeared that during the past four months the resources of the society have been augumented by the addition of 782 bound volumes, 1200 pamphlets, and several hundred interesting curiosities, all of which are on exhibition. The principal contributors were Alex. McCue, Esq., E. O. Kellogg, Esq., Gabriel Harrison, and E. S. Mills. An interesting paper, entitled "Hints on Working the side mines of history," was read by Mr. John W. Cannington, and greatly enjoyed by the audience.

On the visit of the society to the country towns on the island, the town of Sutherland, through the board of town officers, presented the society with the original charter of the town, which was granted by Gov. Andros in 1676. This interesting relic with some 1,500 others, net less interesting, are on exhibition at the rooms of the society, which are well worth a visit.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PENNSYLVANIA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—Philadelphia, Oct. 10th.—The regular stated meeting of this Society was held at the Athenseum Building, Sixth and Adelphi streets. Owing to the near approach of the election, the attendence was small. At the appointed hour John William Wallage, Esq., took the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were then read and adopted. A number of valuable works were presented to the Society, among which were the following: Memorial of John Allan, presented by the Bradford Club. History of West Point and Military Academy; Industrial and Financial Resources of the United States; Story of the Constitution; Elliott's Debates; Discourses on the Family as an Element of Society; Jogue's Novum Belgium, 1648-4, and several other valuable works.

After the transaction of a few items of busimess of no public interest, the meeting adjourned.

MASSACHUSETTS.

NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY, Boston, Wednesday, October 5 —A quarterly meeting of this society was held this afternoon, the President, Winslow Lewis, M. D., in the chair.

The corresponding secretary reported letters accepting resident membership from Andrew H. Ward of Newtonville, and Charles Colburn of Boston.

The librarian reported as donations since the last meeting, three volumes, twenty pamphlets, and six manuscripts.

Mr. Towne read an official notice of the bequest to the society by the late Hon. Henry W. Cushman, from his executor. It was voted to accept the legacy with the conditions of the will.

Rev. Caleb Davis Bradlee read on elaborate paper on the late Rev. T. Starr King, being a truthful and feeling tribute to that eloquent and devoted patriot and divine.

The Historiographer read biographical sketches of the following members of the society, who have recently deceased, viz: John Barstow, of Providence, R. I., a life member, Vice President of the society for Rhode Island, who died March 31, 1864, aged 73 years; Hon. Josiah Quincy, of Boston, an honorary member, who died at Quincy, July 2, 1864, aged 92 years, 5 months; and Sebastian Ferris Streeter, a corresponding member, Honorary Vice President of the society for Maryland, who died in Baltimore, Md., Aug. 23, aged 54.

One Vice President and two Honorary Vice Presidents of the society have deceased during the present year in the space of less than five months.

John W. Dean, Rev. Washington Gilbert, Rev. Dorus Clark, D. D., Rev. John T. Sargent and David Pulsifer, were chosen a committee to nominate officers for the next annual election.

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF SEBASTIAN F. STREETER, Esq. of Baltimore. He died at his residence on the 28d inst., of typhoid fever, undoubtedly contracted by his great exposures and labors among the Maryland soldiers in the army in front of Petersburg, Va.

Mr. Streeter was the son of Rev. Sebastian and Ruth (Richardson) Streeter, and was born in Weare, N. H., 7th July, 1810. On the removal of his father to Boston' he entered the public schools, from which he graduated with honor, being fitted for college at the Latin School under the late Benj. A. Gould, Esq.

After graduating at Harvard College in 1831, he for a time devoted himself to literary pursuits in this city, being for several years, from October, 1831, to September, 1836, sub-master of the Boston Latin School. He subsequently removed to Baltimore, where he established a high school for young ladies which proved eminently successful.

When the present rebellion broke out, he was found a firm friend of the Union cause and unremitting in his efforts to uphold the government in Maryland, and few men in civil capacity have rendered more efficient service to their country. By his exertions the Union Relief Association was organized earlyin the war, and proved a great blessing to the Union soldiers passing to and from the field.

To Mr. Streeter and his helping wife the country is also indebted for the establishment of various institutions in Maryland for the relief of the wounded in the hospitals and the sustenance of the soldiers' families. He did much as a member of the First Branch of the City Government of Baltimore, in shaping measures for the vigorous prosecution of the war and sustaining the Government.

At the time of contracting his last sickness, he was acting as a commissioner under the appointment of the Governor of Maryland, to visit the sick and wounded soldiers in the field hospitals and furnish them with such assistance as their, helpless condition required.

On the 7th of July, 1833. Mr. Streeter married, at Plymouth, Elizabeth Morton Jackson, daughter of Daniel Jackson, Esq., of that town, by whom he had a daughter, who with her mother live to mourn this great bereavement.

On the establishment of the Maryland Historical Society, Mr., Streeter became the Recording Secretary, an office which he filled with great acceptance; and at the seventh anniversary celebration of the society he delivered a discourse entitled "Maryland Two Hundred Years Ago," which was replete with learning and highly interesting and instructive.

In his adopted state and city he held many important offices in Aarious literary societies, and was an honorary Vice President of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society which holds its meetings in this city. As a teacher he was most instructive, as a historian most accurate, and as a Christian firm and consistent. Irreproachable in his private character, pleasing and affable in his personal relations, and energetic in his devotion to philanthropic and public interests, he commanded the love and respect of all who knew or had dealings withhim.

His loss will be deeply felt and much regretted; and the void caused by his decease will be filled with much difficulty.

N. B. S.

Antes on Books.

The Burning of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, By Rev. B. S. Schenck, D. D., an eye witness and a sufferer, with corroborative statements, &c. Philadelphia: Lindsay & Blakiston, 1864, pp. 72.

This little memoir is a sad addition to the history of Chambersburg. With all the wars waged in this country since its settlment, there has never been such wholesale destruction and pillage as that of Chambersburg. The property amounted, it is clear, to at least a million and a half of dollars, and this was wantonly destroyed on ten minutes notice. With the peace will doubtless come such compensation as was made to the Connecticut men who settled the Fire Lands.

Mr. Schneck's account is full, clear and explicit. It gives the details of the scene, and closes with a list of the houses destroyed.

The Annals of Iowa. A Quarterly Publication by the State Historical Society of Iowa, October, 1864. Edited by Theodore S. Parvin, Corresponding Sect, Davenport, 1864.

The Annals come regularly from the far West. The present number opens with a sketch of Capt. Hosea B. Horn. This is followed by the continuation of his history of Davis County. The conclusion of Hon. Charles Mason's Address before the Hawkeye Pioneer Association of Des Moines Co. and of the History of the Congregational Church of Dubuque. The Constitutions of the Society of First Settlers of Muscatine Co. and of the Hawkeye Pioneer Association of Des Moines Co. and the History of the Presbyterian Church of Muscatine, are then given.

The Cavalier Dismounted, An Essay on the origin of the founders of the Thirteen Colonies. By William H. Whitmore, member of the Massachusetts Historical Society, &c. Salem, Whipple & Smith: 1864.

We are glad to see Mr. Whitmore thus enlarging his article in the Continental. The subject is an interesting one, and the facts seem to send the boasted higher blood of the South to the winds. New England can show more families belonging to the recognized gentry of England, that untitled class so superior to the mass of Continental nobles, than all the Southern States. Mr. Whitmore shows the homogeneity of the New England settlers, and by copious extracts from Southern Historians the mongrel character of the settlers in the Southern States.

In the question of the number of present inhabitants who are either foreign or descended from foreigners who came after 1760, we are net by great difficulties. Different returns are so discordant that after long and tedious endeavors to approximate the truth we abandoned the task. In the present paper we find on page 4, the whole body of emigrants after 1760 with their descendants put down at 6,729,663, but we are inclined to believe this far below the real number.

Historical Collections of the Essex Institute, June 1864

This vigorous Historical repository contains an account of Houses and other buildings in Salem in 1793, by Col. Benjamin Pickman; Hale Memoranda; Gleanings from the Church records at Ipswich Hamlet; from the Burying Ground at Hamilton; Ipswich Town Records; Frost Family; Letter by Jonathan Archer; Rewley Marriages; Ship building in Salem &c.

The Manual of the Corporation of the City of New York, D. T. Valentine, 12°. 856 pp

This noble annual comes this year in a most attractive form. The Historical articles are-Sketches of Principal men in New York during the Colonial Era; History of the Fort in New York; Cornelius Steenwyck, with a portrait and illustrations; Caleb Heathcote, with a portrait; City of New York 1780-1736, being a series of very interesting extracts from papers of that day; Operations of the British Army in 1776, with a map copied by one published in 1777 by J. F. W. Des Barres, and an illustration of the engagement between the Phenix and Rose and the American Fire Ships and Galleys, Aug 16, 1776; Trinity Church Yard by F. R. Tillou; Belvedere Club House, with an illustration; Description of the New York House of Refuge, illustrated; Comparative Wealth of the Citizens of New York, being a list of the chief persons taxed in 1815 and 1820; a continuation of the valuable List of Baptisms in the Dutch Church; An article on the house where Tom Paine died, illustrated with diagrams; a notice of New York north of Canal Street in 1808. This valuable matter occupies nearly two hundred pages of closely printed type.

The lithographic views embrace a number of old buildings and some facsimiles; the wood cuts give a fine series of our public institutions, embracing Columbia College, the Free Acadamy, the Astor and Historical Libraries, the various Dispensaries, several Orphan Asylums, St. Vincent's and St. Luke's Hospitals, Seventh Regiment Armory, &c.

The History of the War for the Union, Civil, Military and Naval. By E. A. DUYCKINCK, illustrated by Alonzo Chappel. New York, Johnson, Fry & Co. Parts 49-52.

These numbers are illustrated with portraits of Meade and Gillmore, and the battles of Gettysburg and Chicamauga, carrying down to the close of 1862 and resume the situation of affairs at the beginning of the ensuing year. Mr. Duyckinck conducts his history with his usual ability; but as the matter grows on him condenses and gives less room to documentary evidence, which we deem wise, as no historian can give even the cream of the seven volumes of the Rebellion Record in his pages. There is a certain attraction in finding documents in full, but when they increase too rapidly we tire and look rather for a narrative embracing results.

The Journal and Letters of Samuel Curwen, an American in England from 1775 to 1788 with an appendix of Biographical Sketches. By George AtkinsonWard, Boston; Little, Brown & Co. 1864, 8° 678 pp.

The Journal of an Amercian so strong in his adherence to the British government as to become a voluntary exile, covering the whole period of the war, could not fail to be an interesting and valuable record. The appearance of the work some years since drew attention to the Americans who at the revolution avowed their attachment to the existing government. The elaborate work of Mr. Sabine, which has just appeared in a new and much enlarged edition, covered the whole field, and brought to the students of Revolutionary history a vast material. Mr. Sabine acknowledges the value of Curwen's Journal, and all students will be thankful to Mr. Ward, for this new and much improved edition of a work of real value.

Indiana's Roll of Honor. By DAVID STEVENSON, Librarian of Indiana. Indianapolis, Published by the Author, 1864: 654 pages.

Indiana is here clearly a pioneer. A creditable volume like this is surely a good commencement of Indiana's history of her part in the great war for the preservation of the Union, and the establishment of the principle that the party defeated at a fair election shall seek a reversal of the result, not by revolution but by the ballot box at the next election. The legislature in the session of 1862-3 directed the collection of matter relative to the Indiana soldiery and its preservation in the State library under the title of "Indiana's Roll of Honor."

The author from this has derived the idea of the present volume, which with its successors will for years give Indiana's sons a work worthy of their pride. To make it such he has well divided the work into campaigns, and after a brief but graphic sketch of each gives a history of Indiana regiments concerned in it. The present volume, after a chapter on the executive department and the organization of the troops and the various departments connected with the service, gives the history of the Western Virginia, first Potomac, Kanawha, Cheat Mountain campaigns; the operations of the Army of the Potomac under McClellan, Pope, Meade, Burnside; the early operations in the Shenandoah Valley, Missouri, Kentucky and concludes with the career of Grant from Belmont to Shiloh.

The Regimental history embraces the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 13th, 14th, 19th, 20th, 22d, 33d, 35th, and, the 3d, cavalry and 16th, battery.

The biographtcal sketches of deceased officers are numerous and like the work generally well written. It is illustrated with portraits of Gov. Morton and of Indiana's Fallen Braves, Commander Gwin. Gen. Hackleman, Colonels Hendricks, Bass, Brown, Hathaway, Majors Tanner, Abbott and Adjutant Mullen. The authentic nature of his material and the care given to the work make Mr. Stevenson's work one of complete authority, the more necessary amid the conflicting newspaper accounts of the day.

General Orders of the War Department, embracing the years 1861, 1862 and 1863, adopted especially for the use of the Army and Navy of the United States. Chronologically arranged in two volumes, with a full alphabetical Index. By Thos. M. O Brien and Oliver Diefendorf, Military Attorneys, Leavenworth, Kansas. New York, Derby & Miller No. 5 Spruce St. Vols. I, II, pp xxiv, 472, xxi, 711.

No collection on the History of the War is complete without this important work, which are rendered doubly valuable to students by the valuable index prefixed to each volume. Some of these orders are of course of a temporary character and relate to individuals who are personally insignificant, but much has a direct bearing on the great struggle, and furnishes the key to great events.

How suggestive that only one order under the last administration bears direct reference to the war. This is the General Order No. 5 (March 1, 1861), dismissing Brig.-Gen. David E. Twiggs from the army of the United States "for his treachery to the flag of his country." It is countersigned by "S. Cooper," who forthwith imitated the treachery. The order of Mar. 20 announces 82 resignations, Cooper, Hardee, Van Dorn, McLaws, Beauregard, Gardner, A. P. Hill, and others of less note who then, when things were seen in a kind of mist, were allowed to go forth and join the enemy.

In the mere matter of Departments this work is worth its price, for if there is one thing perplexing it is the constitution, extension, alteration, and combination of departments rendered necessary from time to time. To Staff Officers of Departments and Division Head quarters, Paymasters, Provost Marshals, and in fact all officers, these volumes must be an incalculable service. State officers will find it no less useful.

The War with the South, A History of the Great American Rebellion By Robert Tomes, M. D., Illustrated with many original Designs, Plans. Portraits, &c. New York, Virtue, Yorston & Co., Nos. 35 & 40. Portraits of Everett, Meade, and Beauregard. Maps of the Southern and Southwestern States, Vicksburg and its defences.

This History has brought us down through McClellan's campaign on the Peninsula and Pope's disastrous career to Lee's entrance into Maryland in Sept. 1862, where he was soon to be signally checked and be shattered by McClellan. It is marked with the known ability of the writer, and describes with skill the various movements of the armies, and the intricate diplomatic and political movements of the government and the revolutionary confederacy. Dr. Tomes still gives documents largely, in his notes, supporting and explaining his position.

The Complete Works of the Most Rev. John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop of New York. Comprising his Sermons, Letters, Lectures, Speeches, &c. Carefully compiled and edited from the best sources by Laurence Kehoe. New York: American News Co., 1864. Vol. I, 8°, 674 pp.

This is a collection of the works of the late Archbishop of New York, who in his day and time filled no small share of public attention and was the first of the Catholic bishops of the Country who ever came prominently before the public. He was the representative man of his Church, a man of superior ability, a keen appreciator of the American people and public opin-ion, eloquent, ready, and fearless. His writings are almost entirely of the desultory character consequent on his position, and they are scattered through newspapers, or in pamphlets. To give students of American history these in a compact form is a service which we are glad to see done as well as Mr. Kehoe has here succeeded, His debate on the School Question, more frequently alluded to than read, is here given infull. with his various addresses and speeches on the same subject. His letters to Mayor Harper and Col. Stone, in 1844, his controversy with Kirwan, together with several Sermons and Lectures, are also in this volume, which is, as our readers perceive, of good size and is well printed and got up.

National Portrait Gallery of Eminenent Americans from orginal Paintings by Alonzo Chappel, with biography by E. A. Duyckinck. Nos. 55-60. Johnson, Fry & Co.

This new American Portrait Gallery is now completed, and is a creditable monument to the patriotic zeal of the publishers, who could carry it through in the face of such a war as now desolates the land.

The Gallery embraces one hundred and nineteen portraits, embracing all the Presidents, the heroes of the Revolutionary era, the patriot leaders, the great generals: then the men of the next age, circling around the War of 1812 and embracing its gallant men, Perry, McDonough, Brown, Porter, Lawrence, with men of science like Fulton, sages like Story, artists like Allston, writers like Irving, Everett, Bancroft, Bryant. The great Politicians, Clay, Webster, Calhoun, with Choate, Benton, Chittenden, come next. Kent, Wilkes, and Fremont are our explorers; Scott, Worth, Quitman, and Wool, give us the War with Mexico; and Grant, McClellan, Foote, Farragut and others our modern group of heroes.

The biographies are beautiful pictures of the life and character of these representative men. It is no easy task to give in so short a space an outline so graceful and yet so full of detail; but Mr. Duyckinck has surpassed himself in this task.

Miscellany.

SALE OF THE LIBRARY Of the REV. J. D. SHANE, AT CINCINNATI,. SEPTEMBER 27-29.—This sale excited considerable interest and drew many buyers. The Cincinnati Gazette of Oct 6 says, in substance, of the collector and the sale:

Mr. Shane was a clergyman of the Presbyterian Church, and a bachelor of eccentric habits. His zeal for the acquisition of books, pamphlets, and newspapers was intense. Nothing was too triffing for his notice. He seemed to have no specialty, or more strictly, everything was a specialty with him. If he exhibited a preference for anything, it was for books relating to early American, particularly Western history, and volumes and more ephemeral publications throwing light upon the rise and progress of the different religious denominations. Though settled over no church, he frequently preached for country congregations, and seldom returned without a bundle or box of books or pamphlets bought or begged from his rural friends, He slept in a room in the fifth story of a store in Cincinnati, surrounded by boxes of his trensures. and other packages were placed in warehouses in various parts of this city. As may be inferred, his discrimination and taste in selection were not

Hence, equal to his ambition of possessing. while he had many valuable works, he had accumulated much mere trash. Few of the hundreds of bundles of unbound periodicals contained complete sets, and in three large boxes of scraps, cut from newspapers and tied in little rolls, there were hardly any that competent judges thought worth preserving. Still the clippings were bid off at $5.25. The assortment of books was decidedly miscellaneous, and, setting aside a few hundred volumes, comparatively valueless. Mr. Shane died last spring, and his administrators put his collection into the hands of Mr. Hubbard for sale. So great was its disorder that it seemed almost impossible to cata. logue it, and the task was finally accomplished only by numbering a considerable part in lots. The cataloguethus arranged comprised 1,657 titles. The bidding was often very spirited, and the total amount realized was $2,40469. The principal purchasers were L. C. Draper, for the Wisconsin Historical Society, Samuel Agnew, for the Presbyterian Historical Society at Philadelphia, S. G. Drake, of Boston. and E. T. Carson, of this city. We append a list of the prices of some of the more important works: Doddridge's Notes on the Indian War of West Virginia and Pennsylvania, $6.75; Drake's Picture of Cincinnati and the Miami Country, 1815, $5.25; Transactions of the Historical and Literary Committee of the American Philosophical Society, Vol. I, containing Heckwelder's Indian History, etc., $7.75. The American Magazine and Historical Chronicle, Vol. II, Boston, 1745, sold for $4. 10; Cist's Cincinnati Miscellany, 2 vols., sold for $2.60; Littell's Family Record of the First Settlers of the Pasaic, N. J., Valley, for $3.50. Twelve volumes of manscript historical collections, relating principally to the State of Kentucky, brought $69. Another collection of letters and manuscripts, relating to the early history of Cincinnati and vicinity, $39; the assessment lists of the town of Lexington, Kentucky, for several suc-ceeding years, $425, Tanner's Societas Jesu Militans, and Apostolorum Imitatrix, realized $7.75 each. A small quarto, printed in London in 1648, and entitled A Survey of the Sum of Churah Discipline, wherein the way of the Congregational Churches in New England is warranted, brought $15.75. Rutherford's Divine Right of Church Government, London, 1646, brought $3.10. A Vindication of the Covenant and Church Estate of Children of Church Menbers, by Thomas Cobbet, Teacher of the Church of Lynn, in New England, sold for $7. Rich's three volumes of catalogues of books relating to America, sold for $32.40. The atrocious Democratic caricature representing Gen. Harrison in a cage, published by the Democrats in 1840, brought 50 cents. A Jackson Coffin Handbill, in English, was sold for 60, and one in German for 80 cents. A large number of unassorted pamphlets, embracing sermons, addresses, school and college catalogues, lectures, etc., brought in the aggregate about $500.

HUBBARD'S INDIAN WARS. We are glad to announce that Mr. Drake will seen republish this valuable and interesting work, which has been so long out of print. Nothing can ever take the place of Mr. Hubbard's work on the early Indian Wars of New England; of this important fact no student in its history needs to be informed, and as to the competency of the editor for such a labor, his numerous works of a kindred character are the best and all the guaranty which can be required.

—At a late fire in New York, the manuscript of Mr. Charles G. Leland's work on "The origin of American Popular Phrases" was destroyed, and unfortunately the author kept no copy. The disaster to Mr. Leland is a real loss to our philological and humorous literature.

Mr. W. Elliot Woodward, of Roxbury, is about to issue in two volumes, uniform with Munsell's Historical Series, and from his press, the Original Documents of the Salem Witch Trials. It will form 2 vols., the number limited to 200, price $3,50 per volume, and 15 large paper copies, all the latter and many of the former being already taken up.

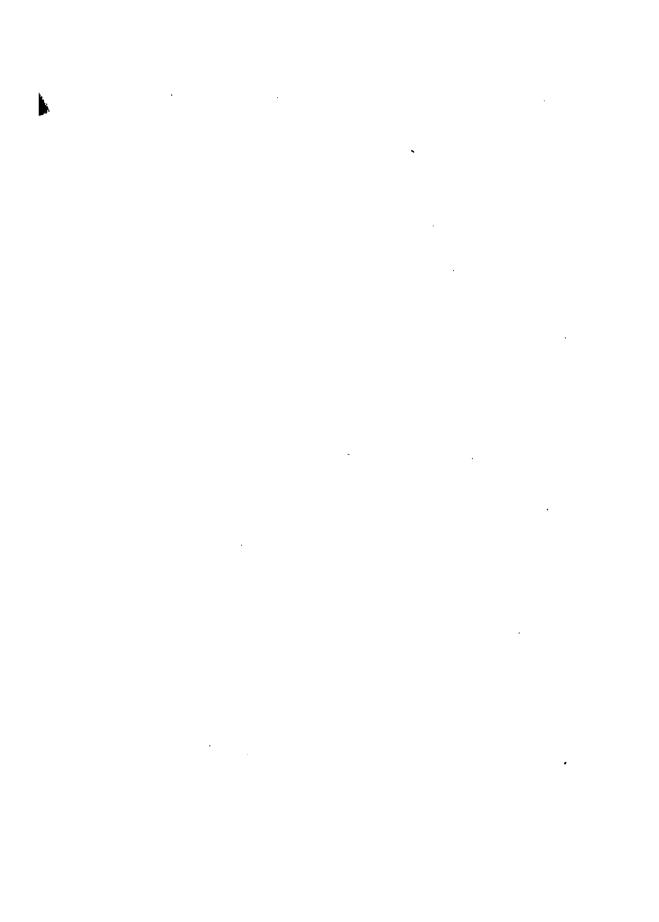

At the recent sale of the collection of Mr. W. E. Woodward, the following prices were reached: Cents.—1793, $27; 1793, $22; 1796, $25; 1796, $7; 1799, $32.50; 1804, $26; 1822, $9; 1842, $9; 25: 1844. $8.75.

$9.25; 1844, $8.75. Half Cents —1796, $92.50; 1840, $14; 1841, $12; 1842, $10; 1843, $12.50, 1844, $12; 1845, $1.260, 1846, $15; 1847, $60; 1848, $18.50; 1854, $4.75.

All these were in a fine state of preservation. A small medal of Jackson sold at $16, and one of Clay $21.

The prices realized for some of the Colonial pieces are as follows:

New-England shilling, $17; Granby copper, $60; do., do., $62.50; Virginia penny, $12; Virginia shilling, $255; Continental currency 1776, in brass, $40; Annapolis. three pence, $16; do. sixpence, $12.50; New-York doubloon, 1787, $400; New-York cent, 1787, $21; New-York cent, 1787, $47.50; New-York cent, 1787, $78; Gold Engle, 1797, $40; do. 1804, $40.50; Half Eagle, 1825, $41; do. 1826, $25; do. 1827, $89; do. 1831, $40; Quarter-Eagle, 1806, $35; one of 1826, $29; Silver Dollar (fiying eagle) of 1836, $60; one of 1838, $34.50; one of 1839, $38; Half Dollar of 1838, one of 1839, $55; one of 1861, $25, Quarter-Dollar of 1838, $26.

first made settlements upon the banks of the Delaware.

Our history as Pennsylvanians and Delawarians may with some propriety be divided into three periods.

I. From the discovery of America to the time when the first actual settlements were made upon this river. If we take the Dutch Fort Nassau on the Jersey side as the first settlement, the date may be put at A. D. 1624. It seems quite as appropriate for us to fix upon the time when the Swedish Colony planted itself permanently on the banks of the Christina in 1638. It is here interesting to note that in 1624 or 1626, authorities do not agree upon the date, confirmed however by the Diet of 1627, Gustavus Adolphus, the lion-hearted King of Sweden, and "bulwark of the Protestant faith," adopted measures for the settlement of the west side of the Delaware. The charter granted to the company is dated Jan. 14, 1626. But they failed to be carried into effect in consequence of the wars in Europe, in which the King was engaged; and his subsequent death in the battle of Lutzen in 1632. The enterprise was, however, accomplished under the auspices of his infant daughter, Queen Christina, a few years later, namely, in 1638, as already stated.

II. The second term may properly include the period from the first settlement of the Delaware to the year 1776, when the ('olonies were declared free and independent States.

Connected with this Colonial period in our history there are some points involved in doubt; one of which is, whether at the time the Swedes arrived here the Dutch had actual pedis possessio of the Delaware or its shores. The Dutch Commander, Cornelius Mey, was the first European that sailed up the Delaware; and he continued his progress as far as Gloucester Point on the east side of the river, a few miles below the site of Philadelphia. He landed near the mouth of Timber Creek, called Sassackon by the Indians, and built a log fort which he named Nassau, with a view to establish a fortified place to open trade with the Indians. The date of this transaction is differently stated by writers on the subject. Mr. Hazard, in his Annals of Penn, puts it in the year 1623; but he cites authorities, some of whom state that the Fort in question was built in 1624, and others that possession of the Delaware was taken in 1626, by the erection of two strong-holds on the river, the largest about sixteen miles (Dutch) up the river on the eastern shore called Nassau. He cites the testimony of an Indian Chief, that a skipper named Cornelis, with one eye, or having a film on the eye, was the first who established himself on the Delaware, or South River."

How long this Fort was occupied, and when it was abandoned, does not appear in the authorities I have consulted. It therefore seems to be a mooted question whether the Dutch had not abandoned the Delaware or South River, and fixed their settlements upon the Hudson or North River, before the arrival of the Swedes.

I pass over the purchase made at the Island of Manhattan by the Heer Samuel Godyn in 1630 from the natives, of lands on the west side of the South River, because no possession appears to have been taken under the alleged grant, except, perhaps, the expedition of De Vries, in 1631, of which it is said that before the next year "he found the house destroyed."

The purchase of Arent Corssen in 1663 of "the Schuylkill and adjoining lands," had a convenient vagueness about it, but it resulted only in establishing a Beaver trade with the wild Indians. These Indians seemed not only willing to sell the lands over which they roamed, but would sell the same territory again whenever they found purchasers. The Iroquois, or the six Nations, whose council fire was at Onondaga, denied the right of the Delaware Indians, to sell any land. They claimed that the latter were tributary and subordinate to It is probable that the disputes as to the title or right to sell rendered it not difficult to procure a grant from the Indians.

The unfortunate settlement already referred to, appears to have been made by Captain De Vries, under the authority of the Dutch West India Company, near Cape Henlopen, called Hoornkill, now the site of Lewes, in 1631. But it was subsequently cut off, and entirely destroyed by the Indians. An event, no doubt, the result of unprovoked injuries to them by the settlers. On this subject the Dutch Governor, Wilhelm Kieft, who was no friend to the Indians, admits that, "they will do no harm if no harm is done to them." I think the better opinion is that no settlements of white people were in existence on the banks of the Delaware when the Swedish Colony arrived at Christina in 1638. There were certainly none on the west side of the Delaware. If you will allow me the privilege, I beg to suggest that your Historical Society designate some one of its members to investigate this subject fully, and prepare a paper in relation to it for publication among your carliest proceedings.

Another doubtful point in the history of the Swedish Colony already alluded to, is, whether during the reign of the illustrious Gustavus Adolphus ships were sent with colonists from Sweden to the Delaware. Campanius, a well known, though not always reliable author, says that several ships were fitted out and sailed from Sweden towards America in the reign of Gustavus Adolphns, but were captured by the Spaniards. The date for this transaction is put about the year 1627. Professor Reynolds, of Pennsylvania College, in a discourse before the Historical Society of the American Lutheran Church, in 1848, referring to this subject says, "before this disaster could be remedied, Gustavus Adolphus had put himself at the head of the Protestant States of Germany, for the purpose of defending the rights of conscience, preventing the utter extermination of Protestantism in the land of its birth, and setting limits to the ambition and tyranny of the united houses of Austria and Spain. Still, he never lost sight of this favorite plan; and a few days before the battle of Lutzen, where his glorious though brief career was terminated, he recommended the enterprise to the people of Germany."

However this may be, it was reserved for his child and successor, Queen Christina, under the direction of Chancellor Oxenstierna, the able and conscientious Minister of both these Sovereigns, to carry into effect the enterprise in question; an enterprise which an old Swedish writer states, "Gustavus considered the jewel of his Kingdom."

The ships conveying the Swedish Colonists sailed from Gottenburg in the autumn of 1637; and arrived in the Delaware in the Spring of 1638. They first landed at a place they named "Paradise Point," now marked on the map of Delaware, Mispillion creek. They seemed to have remained there only a few days for refreshment after their long and tedious voyage. Passing up the river, they landed at the mouth of Mingquas Creek, which they named Christina, in honor of their youthful Queen. Here they immediately built a fort, within the walls of which they erected a church, and laid the foundation of a permanent settlement.

And thus at Christina, nearly fifty years before William Penn founded Philadelphia and the great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, was first planted on the Delaware a substantial colony, founded on the principles of civil liberty, and an enlightened Christianity; granting also to settlers of all nations, who might choose to unite with them, that inestimable boon, freedom of conscience.

I cannot on an occasion of this kind dwell upon the events which subsequently occurred. A brief notice of a few prominent historical facts must suffice.

In September, 1655, the Dutch conquered the country from the Swedes. In September, 1664, the English seized New Amsterdam, which they named New York, and immediately afterwards took forcible possession of the country on both sides of the Dela ware. In 1673, the country again came under the government of the Dutch, but only for a brief period. The next year (1674) the English regained possession of New Amsterdam and the Delaware, under the terms of the treaty of Westminster, and retained their dominion over it until the memorable year 1776, when our fathers for themselves and their posterity threw off their allegiance to any foreign power or au-

During these changes of colonial authority and the century of English dominion, the pursuits and possessions; and they greatly increased in population and wealth. These results were induced not only by the industry. and natural increase of the early settlerswhich was remarkable and extraordinarybut by continued emigration from different parts of Europe, among whom the Welsh . emigrants formed an important part. Emigrants from England, Ireland, and Germany were then, as now, landing upon our shores seeking for freedom and a home in these new regions of the world. During this period, the inhabitants enjoyed liberty of conscience, and their tenures were unmolested. The laws and usages of the Swedes and the Dutch were respected. The magistrates and other officers of the former were continued even when the latter were in the ascendancy. This conciliatory policy was continued by the English. When "the laws" prescribed by the Duke of York, in 1688, were announced on the Delaware, the agents of his government were directed not to offend or alienate the people by any sudden change; and it is remarkable, says Mr. Campbell, in his interesting "Record of Upland," quoting from "Hazard's Annals," that they recommended "the laws" to be merely shown to the law officers, to the end that being therewith acquainted the practice of them may also in convenient time be established.

The courts of justice were continued by the former judges; and the Judicial Districts remained as before established. learn from the "Record of Upland," that in 1673, when the Dutch temporarily regained their possession of Delaware, the deputies from the Swedes and other inhabitants stipulated not only for freedom of conscience and public worship, but for the recognition and continuance of three Judicial Districts then established. These districts were as follows: "One Court of Justice for the inhabitants of the Hoerkill, dwelling between Cape Henlopen and Boomties (Bombay) One for New Amstel (New Castle) for inhabitants between Boomties Hook and Christina-Kill. One for Upland (Chester) for inhabitants between Christina-Kill and upward unto the head of the river." The people were in general undisturbed in their pursuits and possessions; and they greatly increased in population and wealth. These results were induced not only by the industry, and natural increase of the early settlers—think as remarkable and extraordinary—think by continued emigration from different parts of Europe, among whom the Welsh emigrants formed an important part. Emigrants from England, Ireland, and Ger-well as falls at Trenton, called by the Indians Sank-hikans, was the place designated as "the head of the river," and this was the northern boundary of the District. The nomination of the judges was in the hands of the people, who elected eight judges from each District, from which list four were selected and appointed by the Governor. The powers of these magistrates was legislative as grants from England, Ireland, and Ger-

The founder of Pennsylvania fully appreciated the industrious and worthy pioneers who commenced the cultivation and settlement of his after acquired possessions. One especial reason is given by several authorities for his commendation of them, namely, the inflexible opposition of the Swedes and Dutch to all intruders, particularly to the people of New England, who at different times attempted to obtain a footing upon the soil. Mr. Campbell, referring to Hazard's Annals and quoting from Penn's letter to Harrison, says, "the enterprising spirit of our eastern neighbors either had not been developed at that day, or was tired out by the pertinacious resistance which it encountered; for, after many fruitless endeavors. their attempts to effect a settlement upon the western side of the river were abandoned. Had success attended these efforts, it is more than probable that the territory would not have offered to the future founder of Pennsylvania room for such an holy experiment."-Upland Record, 33

As to the character and persuits of the Swedes—the pioneers of the Delaware—I beg to recall to your recollection the testimony of William Penn. In 1683, writing from Philadelphia, then just founded by him "on deed of peace," he says, "they apply themselves to husbandry; have three churches, one at Christina, one at Tinicum, and one at Wicaco, within a halfa mile of this They are a plain, strong and industrious people. They received me well; and I commend their respect for authority and their kind behavior to the English. As they are a people proper and strong, so have they fine children, and almost every house is full of them; it is rare to find one of them without three or four boys, and as many girls; some with six, seven, or eight sons:

and I must do them the justice to say I see few young men more sober and industrious." The Rev. Dr. Clay of the Wicaco, or "old Swedes' Church," in his Annals says: "As a religious people, the Swedes are presented to us in a most favorable light, and may well be held up as an example for imitation of their descendants still occupying the soil so long ago inhabited by their ancestors."

At an early period, these pioneers were happily blended together by intermarriages with the Dutch, the English, the Welsh, and the Germans, and subsequently with the Irish, too, that universal nation; and formed a comparatively homogeneous population, when the bell rang at the old State House in Philadelphia, proclaiming "liberty to this land and all the inhabitants thereof." They were ready not only to assert their independence by words, but accomplish it with deeds.

III. The third period in our history, namely, from 1776 to the present time, I cannot on this occasion even touch upon. The peace of 1783 with England gave us an acknowledged Independence, and the Constitution of 1787 gave us a united and happy country.

With freedom thus established, the study of our history will teach us to maintain and preserve it. History shows us how the present is connected with the past, and what we owe to our ancestors and predecessors. Let us not fail to profit by their sacrifices and example. One good effect in the study of their history, is to keep down that supercilious feeling of self-complacency which is engendered by a contemplation of the present merely. If we are really superior in some respects to our fathers, we should remember that they excelled us in other things. We can improve our knowledge of the arts and sciences from the experience and acquirements of other nations. In matters of civil government, too, let us remember that the Republics of Greece and Rome existed for centuries. It required many ages for our English ancestors to establish on a firm and solid basis the well ordered government which that nation now possesses. but of yesterday; and should guard with jealous care the boon of freedom and united government, which has so recently descended to us from our fathers. Let us not affect to be wise above what is written. History should make us modest.

A free people, being left to govern themselves, should be careful students of history. They will then be able to understand the object of existing laws and institutions; and present a firm barrier to the ignorant or the tyrannical who may be disposed to tear down the edifice which has required many years to erect. It should also make us watchful and vigilant; remembering that "The greatest glory of a free people Is to transmit that freedom to their posterity."

THE TORY CONTINGENT IN THE BRITISH ARMY IN AMERICA IN 1781.

(Continued from page 359.)

South Carolina Royalists.1

Alexander Innis,<sup>2</sup> Esq, colonel —— Robertson, lieutenant colonel —— M'Lairn, major
Charles Lindsay,<sup>3</sup> adjutant Edward Cooper,<sup>1</sup> quartermaster
—— surgeon

FLORIDA RANGERS.

— Brown,<sup>5</sup> lieutenant colonel commandant

<sup>3</sup>Was apparently captain.

<sup>4</sup>Geo. Dawkins is mentioned as a captain in this regiment in 1782.

<sup>5</sup>The famous Thomas Browne of Augusta, Ga., maltreated shamefully in 1775. Raised a corps in 1776. In 1778 marched to Augusta, which, though defeated and wounded, he took. In 1780 he repulsed Col. Clarke, and held Augusta till June, 1781, when he surrendered to Pickens and Lee. His life was threatened, but as retaliation was menaced, he was exchanged; served in Savannah. Routed in May, 1782, by Wayne. In October his corps was sent to St. Augustine. Browne retired to the Bahamas, and in 1786 wrote a reply to Ramsay. Government granted him lands in St. Vincent and £30,000. He died in St. Vincent in 1825.

Two captains, Johnson and Johnston, were killed at the siege of Augusta in 1780.

&lt;sup>1</sup>Sabine mentions John Jenkins as chaplain of this regiment in 1782.

&lt;sup>2</sup>Defeated and wounded on the Enoree, Musgrove's Mills, in 1780. In 1782 inspector-general of the loyalist forces.

GOVERNOR WENTWORTH'S VOLUNTEERS. Daniel Murray, 1 captain Elijah Williams,2 lieutenant

BUCK'S COUNTY LIGHT DRAGOONS. Thomas Sandford Watson, captain Walter Willet, lieutenant George Gerau, cornet

GARRISON BATTALION.

Robert Donkin,3 lieutenant colonel commandant William Anstruther, major

Captains John Grant Waldron Kelly John Terrell Lawrence Delahanty Archibald Blundell

James Darcus Alexander Chisholm David Davies William Sutherland 5

Lieutenants Thomas Baddelv 4 Hugh Stewart R M'Ginnis James Hunt Charles Blundell Alexander Rio

Ensigns William Clarkson Thomas St. John Molloy

Dunn Shadwell

Charles Inglis,6 Chaplain Thomas Baddely, Adjutant William Sutherland, Quartermaster Bell, Surgeon

KING'S RANGERS.

Robert Rogers, licutenant colonel commandant James Rogers, major

Captains John Longstreet Samuel Hayden John Hatfield 2 Daniel Bissonet Arthur Maddox Charles Babbington Patrick Welsh John Stinson 3

Dieutenants Thomas Oackerson Christopher Inslev<sup>5</sup> John Throckmorton6 Michael Smith Joseph Waller Samuel Fletcher John Dean Whitworth 7

Capts. Richard Lippencot8 Azer Betts1 J Rider Mowatt (lieuts. Roger Wetherell

<sup>1</sup>Rogers was a native of New Hampshire, son of James Rogers of Dunbarton. During the French war he raised the celebrated corps known as Roger's Rangers, of which he published an account. He was nevertheless in 1766 arrested on a charge of plotting to plunder Fort Michilimackinac and join the French. At the beginning of the revolution, he was arrested by con-gress and put on his parole. He probably wanted a bid from congress, and at last openly joined the royal army. He was made Colonel of the Queen's Rangers, but soon after went to England. When he was appointed to the King's Rangers, is not known. He died in England at the beginning of the present century

<sup>2</sup>Hatfield is perhaps John Smith Hatfield, of Elizabeth, N. J., who in retaliation hanged one Ball. He returned to New Jersey in 1788, and was arrested and tried in Bergen Co., but no witness appearing he was released on bail and fled. The matter was brought up by Hammond the British minister in 1792.

3 One of the name settled at St. John, N. B., in <sup>4</sup>Azor Betts, of New York, physician, ordered to close confinement in Ulster Co. jail in 1776 by the committee of safety. He died in Nova Scotia in 1809.

<sup>5</sup>Of New Jersey, probably the one killed in the attack on Tom's River, N. J., in 1781.

6 Retired to St. John's Island, Gulf of St. Lawrence, in 1782.

<sup>7</sup>Taken prisoner in 1776, examined and put in jail by order of state government.

Born in New Jersey in 1745. In 1782, when captain, sent with captain Joshua Huddy and

A Daniel Murray, of Brookfield, Mass., was major of the king's American dragoons.

&lt;sup>2</sup>Attorney of Deerfield, Mass., joined the army after battle of Lexington; was proscribed, but died in Mass. in 1793.

<sup>3</sup> Donkin is known as the author of "Military Collections and Remarks," published by Hugh Gaine in 1777, a creditably printed 12mo of 264 pp, with a frontispiece on copper. He had served under the Earl of Granard. His list of subscribers, which embraces a long array of officers, foots up, sterling £290. 8. 7., opposite which is "Distributed in charity."

<sup>4</sup>Captain in 1782.

<sup>5</sup>Went to Nova Scotia-died in England in

&lt;sup>6</sup> Assistant Rector of Trinity Church, New York, from 1764 to 1777, when he became rector. He resigned in 1783. Bishop of Nova Scotia in 1787. Member of the council in 1809. He died in 1816 aged 82.

Ensians

John Robins 1 Peter Anderson 2 Joseph Beers 1

Charles Stockton Eliezer Taylor John Hutton

NORTH CAROLINIANS.

John Hamilton,3 lieutenant colonel commandant

> GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS. Wright, 1 major commandant

HUSSARS.

Frederick D'Diemar, captain Sebastian de Mollitore, George Albus, lieutenants

Benjamin Thompson, 5 cornet others to Middletown point to exchange them, but hung Huddy. Washington demanded his surrender, and on the refusal of Sir Henry Clinton determined to retaliate and compelled his English prisoners to draw lots. Captain Asgill of the guards drew the lot, but was saved by the intervention of the French. Lippencott died at Toronto in 1826 aged 81.

1 Retired to St. John's Island, Gulf of St. Lawrence, in 1782,

<sup>2</sup>A Peter Anderson died at Fredericton, N. B. 1828 aged 95; and a Joseph Anderson, lieut. in the King's regt. N. Y., died at Cornwall, C. W., in 1853 aged 90.

3 Of Halifax, N. J., or Norfolk, Va. "The very crest of the Tory organization in the South." Stedman says the British nation owed more to him than to any other individual loyalist in the British service. He was engaged in nearly every action in the three southern colonies, wounded and taken prisoner. He was subsequently in command at St. Augustine. After the peace British consul at Norfolk, died in England in 1817.

4 Sir James Wright, Bart. of Ga., son of the first Sir James. The Georgia royalists were raised in 1779, and distinguished at Savannah, which his father claimed the honor of saving. The second Sir James went to England; succeeded his father in the title in 1786, and died in 1816.

<sup>5</sup>Evidently the celebrated Count Rumford, born in Massachusetts in 1753. At first inclined to the whigs, but distrusted. Went to England in 1775, under secretary to Lord Geo. Germain; came to New York toward close of war and finally commanded the King's American dragoons. On his return to England he was knighted, and going to Bavaria was made a count. He died in France in 1814. Eminent for his philosophical labors.

GUIDES AND PIONEERS.

Beverley Robinson, Esq., colonel

Captains John Aldington Charles Blaskowitz Peter McPherson William M'Alpine Francis Frazer George Blair John Sobrisky

First licutenants

Ebenezer Brown Angus M'Donald1 John Stark Jonathan Williams John Hunt2

Second lieutenant<sup>3</sup> Alexander McDonald3 Andrew Husband Abraham Closs Eli Benedict!

Colin Kier

John Stark, Adjutant. Colin Kier, Quartermaster

> SECONDED OFFICERS. Edward Cole, 5 colonel

 $oldsymbol{Lieutenants}$  colonels

Majors

Thomas Leonard 8 Andreas Emmerich Elisha Lawrence 6 Daniel Isaac Brown 9 Rudolphus Ritzma<sup>7</sup> Robert Timpany 10

<sup>1</sup>Perhaps the one who died in New Brunswick in 1842, aged 106.

<sup>2</sup>Apparently of Philadelphia; in 1777 sent to Virginia for disaffection to the whig cause.

<sup>3</sup> Perhaps the one who died in New Brunswick in 1835 aged 72.

Of Danbury, Conn., guided British to it. Returned to it after peace, but on threats of violence fled. He seems to have died in N. B. in

<sup>5</sup>Of R. I. Commanded a regiment at Quebec \ in 1759, and after in Havanah.

<sup>6</sup>Sabine says Elisha Lawrence, of Monmouth Co., N. J., born in 1740, and at the revolution sheriff of the county, raised the first battalion N. J. volunteers. Was taken prisoner in 1777 on Staten Island; retired to Nova Scotia, but died at Cardigan, Wales, in 1811.

Probably the son of Rev. Joannes Ritzema, of Sleepy Hollow, N. Y.

Perhaps the Thomas Leonard of Freehold,

<sup>9</sup>Perhaps the Scotch settler at Castine; who died in S. Stephen's, N. B., in 1835 aged 91. <sup>10</sup>Robert Timpany of N. Y., major in the 3d Batt.

N. J. V., born in Ireland, educated at Glasgow, emigrated to America in 1760. A teacher at Hackensack. Was at the battle of Long Island, and soon after commissioned. He took the Parker House, N. J. Was distinguished at Guilford, Cowpens, Eutaw, and Charleston. Was on

Richard Stockton! William Stark John Lynch John Vandyke 3

Captains David Alstone John Vought James Stewart1 James Raymond Matthias Hanley Nicholas Wiergan Thomas Yelverton John Hopton ,

Daniel Bowen Zebedee Terry® Samuel Wilson William Clarke? Michael Houseal William Price Samuel Lindsay Thomas Rutherford 19 Alexander M'Leod Alexander M'Donald: Neil McArthur<sup>12</sup>

John Leggett<sup>15</sup> Alexander Mackey

the way to join Ferguson at the battle of King's Mountain, but was ordered back. Died at Yarmonth in 1844.

<sup>1</sup>Richard Stockton, major of N. J. V known as Stockton the famous land pilot. Surprised Feb. 18, 1777, by Col. Neilson, and sent to Philadelphia in irons by Gen. Putnam, which Washington disapproved. He died in New Brunswick.

Perhaps the brother of Gen. John Stark, if so he was accidently killed on Long Island.

One of the name commissioned in 1777 or 8, and raised a corps of 306 men in New Jersey.

A loyalist officer of the name died at Nashwaak, N. B., in 1887 aged 82.

20f Charleston, S. C., banished and property confiscated in 1782. Died in 1861, <sup>6</sup> A Zebedee Terree, of Freetown, Mass., went to Halifax in 1776, was proscribed in 1778. After the peace went to New Branswick, but diel at Freetown.

Wm. Clarke of New Jersey was very active in stealing horses for British army. Lurel to Woodbridge N. J. in 1782 and shot.

SIN 1782 captain of intuitive in the American legion under America son permats of Rev. Bernard M. Houseall, Lutheran, J. N. V.

"Of Pennsylvania, refused the commission of major in the continental army. Sir Wolfiam Howe appointed him captain in De Contry's corps and inspector of the guards. Duct at Montreal in 1818 aged 85

Membral in 1818 aged 89

1 Membral it assembly from Cumberland 111

N.C. In 1774 membral of the providence in a pross, and in 1774 membral of the providence in a prossion of the providence in the convenience with a section of the convenience of the providence in the providence in the convenience of the providence in the providence in

A Company of the Comp

John M'Leod Alexander M'Leod jun. James M'Donald<sup>1</sup> Matthias Sapponfield? Maurice Nowland

Lieutenants John Munro Patrick Henry Francis Frazer John Barclay John Peter Eck Luther Hathaway: Francis Corey Levi Chase James Hume Edward M Michael Caleb Wheaton 5 William Frazer John Knight John Craige John Bittle

Jonathan Robinson Abraham Pistoras Curtis Lewis 6 Nathan Vernon 7 Abraham Airdell Jonathan Jones – Tupper<sup>9</sup> John Murchison Boderick McKennon Norman M'Leod 10 Archibald M'Eachran John M'Leod Donald Stewart John M'Leod jun Laughlan M Kennon

Ensigns Richard Finnemore Samuel Stretch Shadrack Chase<sup>11</sup> Donald Morrison James Munro Francis Phinney<sup>12</sup>

H. Chalmers, Adjt.

J. Nowland, J. Cloud, H. Simm, Quar-

H. Dongan, Ab. Bambridge, Surgeons,

A draggen officer of the name died in St. John, N. B., in 1894.

Of N. C., authorized by Gev. Martin in 1776 to raise leyal trops in Rowan co. Of Freet wn. Mass., banished in 1778; died at Cornwallis, N. S., in 1840; Sabine says a liout, in the Lyal N. Englanters.

A licutemant of the name deserted to the English from Fort Schuyler in August, 1776.

· Perhaps of Sandwich, Mass.

(A.1 yalist captain named Lewis was killed while in a hand to hand fight with Col. Horry of Mari n's e ris near the close of the war: but a Chris Lewis hal his property confiscated in Pensylvania in 177%. "Nathaniel Vern in sheriff of Chester co., Pa.,

Authoritie, Vern in Scenific Chesterco. Pa., chest it is estated if the errors, was captain of cavalry in the Borrish Legion in 1752, the there is take Modrea's lover: raised a company in dannia.

Fillal Torrer was a guile to the British in the myasum of Dost Lean Massa, in 1778, the November 1778.

The November 1778, Sabine says ensembled 1778, Sabine says ensemb signatula langy sli Bat. Plei in N. Brunsof Southern Mass Veined British army in K. Lam 1997

Hotes and Queries.

NOTES.

The Old Province House, Boston.—At half-past five o'clock, on Tuesday evening last, 25th October, the noted building on Washington street, long known as the Province House, was destroyed by fire, leaving the walls standing, but all else consumed, except a portion of the wood work, which in its scorched and smoked condition is of little value. The fire originated in an upper story of the building, and is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. For some time past, the building has been used as a place of entertainment by the Morris Brothers, Pell and Trowbridge, minstrels.

The loss of this old landmark of the olden time will be much regretted by the lovers of antiquity, as it was almost the last link of any great importance, that carried them back through the Revolutionary period of our history, and through the provincial days of Massachusetts, to colonial times.

It has been generally supposed that this edifice was erected in early times by the existing government of Massachusetts, for governmental purposes. But such is not the case. It was built by private enterprise, by one of the most opulent merchants of good old colony times, Peter Sargeant, Esq. He had purchased the land, on the 21st of October, 1676, of Col. Samuel Shrimpton, one of the largest landholders of the town, for the small sum of £350. In the Book of Possessions, which dates back more than two hundred and twenty years, it appears that Thomas Millard, who was a planter, as styled in those days, had for one portion of his possession, an estate on the High Street, or great highway to Roxbury, described as "one house and Garden bounded with Francis Lyle north, Thomas (frubb south, Arthur Perry west, and the Street east."

It may be interesting to some to know of whom this little coterie, the immediate neighbors of Mr. Millard, the planter, consisted. His nearest neighbor on the north was HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII. 50

Mr. Lyle (or Lysle), a noted surgeon barber, who could undoubtedly "breathe a vein" or clip the hair to pure puritanic measure, as the case might be. Lyle separated him from Samuel Hough, a disgusted and retired clergyman, who dwelt at the corner of the street that led to the Beacon, and which is now known as the corner of School street. On the south side was the residence of Mr. Grubb, the leather dresser; and on the rear, in a house fronting on the present School street, was Mr. Perry, the tailor.

In the course of events, Mr. Millard died, and his estate, which was encumbered, passed into the hands of Col. Samuel Shrimpton, a noted landholder, in 1672, the title not being perfected until 1674. Col. Shrimpton, as said before, sold the estate to Mr. Sargeant in 1676, at which time it measured 86 feet on the street, 266 feet southerly on Paul Butt, the village glazier, 77 feet westerly on the estate of the heirs of John Blowers, deceased, and 266 feet northerly on land of the heirs of Thomas Robinson, also deceased.

After Mr. Sergeant had acquired his title to his liking, he commenced building his house in the most substantial manner: and he completed it in the year 1679, and affixed upon the famous iron balustrade his initials and date, thus 16 P S 79. Mr. Sargeant was a Londoner, and came to Boston in 1667. He was as remarkable in his marriages, as in his wealth; for he had three wives, his second having been a widow twice before her third venture; and his third also a widow, and even his widow, and lastly the widow of her third husband. Mr. Sargeant died on the 8th of February, 1713-14, and his widow took her third husband on the 12th of May, 1715, Simeon Stoddard, Esq.; and here was a fair race,-for she was his third as well as he was her third; and although he lived till the 15th of October, 1730, and then died in his 80th year, she kept along until the 23rd of September, 1738, eight years later, but died ten years younger.

When the widow married Mr. Stoddard, she had no further use of the palace, for her new husband had one about as desirable; and therefore the estate was offered for sale. In 1716, the Provincial legislature voted to purchase it, and some of the ornamental hangings; and the heirs of Mr. Sargeant, passed the deeds on the 11th and 12th of April, 1716, to Jeremiah Allen, the treasurer of the province, to Jeremiah Dummer the treasurer of the county of Suffolk, and to Joseph Prout, the treasurer of the town of Boston.

When the Mansion House became public property it was a magnificent building; no pains had been spared to make it not only elegant, but also, spacious and convenient. It stood somewhat back in its ample lot, and had the most pleasant and agreeable surroundings of any mansion house in the town. It was of brick, three stories in hight, with a high roof and lofty cupola, the whole surmounted by an Indian chief, with a drawn bow and arrow, the handiwork of Deacon Shem Drown,—he who made the grasshopper on Faneuil Hall. The house was approached over a stone pavement and a high flight of massive stone steps, and through a magnificent doorway, which might have rivalled those of the palaces of Europe. Trees of very large size and magnificent proportions, shaded this princely mansion, and added much to its elegance and imposing appear-

During the time of the provincial government it seems to have been used by the governors: but, after the expulsion of Gen. Gage in 1776, it was converted into accommodations for our own officers, for the transaction of the public business. In 1796, after the building of the new State House on Beacon street, the Province House was sold to John Peck: but the bargain fell through, on account of inability of the purchaser to make payments, and, in 1799, the whole estate was reconveyed to the state; and subsequently, was granted by the state to the Massachusetts General Hospital, whose trustees, in 1817, leased it to David Greenough, Esq., for the term of ninety-nine years.

Subsequent to the last date (1817), this aristocratic mansion has been put to almost all sorts of purposes; and soon after Mr. Greenough's lease, the stately trees were taken down, and a row of brick houses and stores built upon the street, excluding it from view until approached through a narrow archway, leading to its front door and the houses which had been erected in the rear of the estate.

In 1851, the whole building was changed in appearance, its interior having been remodeled for the purpose of accommodating a company of Eolian vocalists under John P. Ordway, Esq., in 1852; and it was at this time that the outside was covered with a coat of yellowish mastic. The old Indian chief, the wonder of the small children of by gone days, has been removed to the town of Brookline, where, perhaps, he will shoot the arrow, as rumor says he formerly used to do, on hearing the clock strike one.

When the great change came over the old building, there was a great exertion in procuring relics of the "old Govenor's house;" and parts of it were eagerly sought for and obtained by savers of memorials of the past. The old iron fence, which formed a balcony over the principal entrance to the mansion, and which was pronounced by competent judges—as well by amateurs sa by connoisseurs—to be the most beautiful specimen of wrought iron work in the country, was removed. A large part of the wainscoting was purchased by B. Perley Poore, Esq., and removed to Indian Hill, in Newbury, where it will be used for the finish of one or more rooms of the famous antiquarian palace, which he is constructing there from the noted building which the ruthless hand of "improvement" is so fast removing; so that what the late eminent scholar Hawthorne has preserved in legend, an antiquarian with a fervid interest in the past, will strive to reproduce in reality.

It is undoubtedly the desire of very many persons, that this old relic of the days of our fathers may be allowed to remain; and that the walls, with a rejuvenated interior, may pass down to many successive generations, as a memorial of the days that tried men's souls. It is, therefore, with much pleasure that it can be stated, that the Greenough family, so favorably known by its gifted sons, who have given such good evidence of their extraordinary taste in the fine arts, intend to preserve what remains of the old building, and restore what has been destroyed, and even replace the old Indian chief as he was in days of yore.

"HISTORY OF GOV. ANDREWS'S SCHOOL-HOUSE."—The following is copied from the Portland Transcript.

Editor Transcript:—A fire broke out in the shoe shop of James Smith, in Windham, on Sunday night last, destroying the building and all its contents. No insurance—loss $700. The building was put up by Jonathan Andrews, of this town, for a study room, in which his two sons, under the care of a private teacher, were fitted for the academy, one of whom now holds the office of Governor of Massachusetts.

Since that time the old school-room has been moved to thirteen different places—first used as a school-room, then a confectionery store, then a grog shop, then a place for storing apples, then a store room for the sack business, and so on, being used at each place for a different purpose. Twice it has been out of town and twice returned.

S. L. COONLEY.

Windham, Sept. 19, 1864.

FOLK LORE—The Bible and Key.—I find in the Dutch records of the year 1662 in the state office, Albany, N. Y., a case mentioned where parties had recourse to the Bible and Key in order to discover a thief, for which superstitious act they were presented by the Fiscal. The complaint which I condense from the original Dutch MS. sets forth that a certain Englishman named William Britton living at Mespath Kill, on Long Island, near New York, had been robbed of 100lbs of tobacco, whereupon George Huwel. Doctor James Clarke, and Daniel East came together and resolved to turn the Bible. which George Huwel said he had repeatedly done, or seen done, whereby the thief would be discovered. Thereupon Dr. Clarke, and Huwel began, and East read the text and one Jacob Elderse was declared to be the thief. Jacob immediately complained of this slander to the Fiscal, who denounced the proceeding "not only as a species of witchcraft, but even a horrible profanation of the Holy Scriptures, which are here made use of to invoke the aid of the Devil, thereby perverting the word of God to the Devil's service, in direct contravention to the canon and civil laws, as may be seen by Leviticus 19: 31; 20: 6; Deut. 18: 10, 11, 12 et seq; Exod. 22: 18, in which all learned Doctors agree;" and demanded that the accused be punished by the rope until death ensue. The prisoners Clarke and Huwel said they had only held the key and that East read the text.

On 22 June, 1662, judgment was pronounced setting forth, that the prisoners had dared, in the presence of several bystanders, to turn the Bible on a key, and moreover to read some verses from the 50th Psalm up to the time the Bible fell from their hands, impiously presuming that the thief could be discovered. These being Devil's tricks &c., the prisoners were sentenced to be conducted to the place of public justice in New Amsterdam (now New York) and there fastened, to the stake or post, with a placard fixed to their breasts having inscribed thereon these words: BIBLE TURNERS and PROFANERS of God's Holy Word, and to pay costs.

E. B. O'C.

The American Flag. — In looking through my Library I chanced upon a curious little book, beautifully illustrated with portraits of reigning sovereigns, and effigies, printed at London, by Benj. Motte in (?) 1704 (the date is somewhat indistinct but concurrent circumstances prove that was about the year). It is entitled "The Present State of the Universe &c.," and is very much on the principle of the Almanack of Gotha. The volume referred to is the 4th edition.

In it the United Provinces of Holland are styled the United States, the title our confederation or nation has since assumed.

The close of the book is devoted to effigies of the flags of different nations, and presents two flags the writer has never before seen referred to, as connected with our own government.

It has been always taken for granted that the 13 stripes were first suggested by the union of the American thirteen provinces. But it appears that there was already a flag in existence having just the same number, and arranged and colored exactly the same, 13 stripes, red and white, like our own, namely, the flag of the East India Company; and the stripes are disposed as our own are, red top and bottom, and alternate with white.

Had the existence of this flag any connection with the idea of our own? Why had it thirteen stripes, and those stripes red and white? This question is interesting.

In place of the union of our flag there is a red cross, the red cross of St. George, on a white ground.

This brings us to the next flag shown in the book. The "New England Ensign," field red with the same red cross on a white ground in place of our union, and in the upper square of white next the staff formed by the red cross, common to this and the flag of the East India Company, there is what appears to be a tree, color green. Was this the Pine Tree of Massachusetts?

If there is anything new in these facts, it is to be hoped that some one having better access to books and documents will try and explain the coincidence of the thirteen red and white stripes in the East India Company's flag, and our own, and discover the date, origin and signification (for all flags in those days had meanings,) of the New England flag of that early date.

It may be an oversight, but there seems to be no mention of, or allusion to, this flag in Gen. Schuyler Hamilton's "History of the American Flag," 1853, and the facts herein referred to are claimed as something new in connection with that glorious ensign, traitors and rebels and their sympathisers have in vain sought to humiliate, but which will, eventually, in the Providence of God, float the emblem of purified liberty over a continent, the signal of welcome and protection to the oppressed and homeless of the world.

Yes, yet victorious,
"Flag of the brave! thy folds shall fly
The sign of hope and triumph nigh."
ANCHOR.

Tivoli, Oct. 4, 1864.

NEW UTRECHT.—On 16 July 1692, Jacques Cortelyou, J. P., and Rev. Rudolphus Varick, of Kings Co. presented a petition to the commander in chief of the Province of New York, praying that Joost de Baane be restored to the office of reader and schoolmaster to the town of New Utrecht, he having been turned out of the place by the followers of Jacob Leisler, whom he refused to join, "although the land out of which the schoolmaster and Reader of ye Towne is maintained, was given to the Town, by the said Justice (Cortelyou) out of his proper Estate." It appears by N. Y. Counc. Min. 6: 111, that De Baane was licensed accordingly and it was ordered that he receive the Salary of Schoolmaster and Reader of said Town, and that none other officiate in the quality of a schoolmaster in the sd Town without a lycense from the Gouvernment, nor in the quality of Reader but by the appoinment of the Minister. Is the land thus given in trust for educational purposes, still devoted to that object, or what has the Town done with it?

THE JOHN ST. METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH NEW YORK.— This church approaches the term of its first century of existence. On Sunday Oct. 30, 1864, it celebrated its ninety-sixth anniversary with interesting services. The original deed which gave to Methodism the ground on which they were worshiping was produced by Mr. Wakeley. It was picked up by William Norris in a garret in that city. The paper stated that the ground was bought from Mary Barclay, the widow of Henry Barclay, who was pastor of Trinity Church, and bore the names of Philip Embury, Charles White, and others.

The minds of the audience naturally went back to the founders of John street Methodist Episcopal Church, and they seemed to see Philip Embury wending his way up the hill on that very day, (the 31st of October, 1768,) and dedicating the church that he had erected, with his own hand. It was a singular fact that three British officers who were in New York at that time were the three main financial and spiritual pillars upon which the John street church was built. Their names were Capt. Thomas Webb, Philip Lobdiel, and John Shay.

CAPTAIN ISAAC DAVIS.— As many inquiries have been made, and hitherto unsuccessfully, to ascertain the lineage of Capt-Isaac Davis, who fell at Concord Bridge in 1775, the writer, one of the descendants, would copy from a family record just completed an authentic account. He was the son of Ezekiel, son of Dr. John Davis of Acton, son of Dr. Simon Davis of Carlisle, son of Lieut. Simon Davis, so called, a representative, and otherwise distinguished in Concord in 1660, son of Dolon, or Dollar Davis of Cambridge, Groton, Concord and Barnstable. In the latter place he died.

c. w

PUNISHMENT FOR BLASPHEMY.—By the Rules and Articles of War "for the Government of the Militia and other Forces in the Province of New York" in 1691, it was enacted as follows:

"§ 2. If any Officer or Souldier shall presume to Blaspheme the Holy and undivided Trinity or the Person of God the Father, God the Son, or God the Holy Ghost or shall presume to speak against any known Article of the Christian faith, he shall have his Tongue bored thro' with a Red hot Iron."

JOHN SINGLETON COPLEY AND HIS STEP-FATHER PETER PELHAM. It is entirely improbable that Smibert, who died in 1751, could have been the instructor of Copley, who was at that date only a trifle over twelve years old. But it is highly probable that Copley's stepfather, Peter Pelham, was fully competent to give him all necessary instruction in the rudiments of the art. Pelham was an engraver, and at the Boston Athenæum will be found ranged round the wall, near the entrance, some six or more engravings by him of the prominent clergymen of the day. More than this, there will be found one engraving dated 1753, made by Copley himself, then only fifteen years old, showing clearly that he was brought up to exercise the same art as his stepfather. Pelham engraved one or two plates from Smibert's pictures; hence, presumably, he was a friend of the latter, and this intimacy may account for the story that Copley was the pupil of Smibert.

The only point now to consider is this:

was Pelham a painter as well as an eugraver? I think he was, and that the proof is at the Athenæum. The visitor will find there an old engraving of Cotton Mather thus inscribed: P. Pelham ad vivum pinxit ab origin fecit et excud. Over the entrance door will be seen a portrait in oil, kindly loaned by the American Antiquarian Society, which came from the Mather family. It is precisely the same portrait, except that everything is reversed; as if the artist having painted the sketch had copied it exactly as it stood. Now since we have Pelham's statement that he painted just such a picture, and there is no other artist suggested for this, is it not fair to claim this for Pelham as his original? I believe I am right in adding, that this portrait is the work of a better artist than Smibert.

As to the time of Pelham's decease nothing is known, though it seems probable that it was in 1752. This would account for Copley's name being placed on the engraving before cited. It seems incredible that he should have done the work at so youthful an age. One of his earliest pictures, no doubt, is the portrait of Rev. Arthur Browne, of Portsmouth, N. H., dated 1757, and now, by the kindness of Rev. Charles Burroughs, D. p., in the exhibition at the Athenseum.

Though the widow Copley before and after her second marriage, undoudtedly was a to-bacconist, Pelham did not interfere in the business. Pelham kept school, but left the other matters to his wife at home. Instead of "spining pigtail," John Singleton Copley no doubt, was very soon found serviceable at his stepfather's studio, and there passed busy and useful hours in learning the rudiments of painting and engraving.

WASHINGTON CENTS.—The following extract in relation to the Coins which have brought such enormous prices, at the late sales in this city will he read with interest at this time. The prices at which these pieces were sold when they were first coined in England was from a six pence to a shilling. One of English origin was lately sold here for $450!

"I have in my possession fifty-five different American pieces, some minted there, and others in Great Britain; several of which, circulated in this country, were improperly included in the lists that have been published; as the Medalet of "Washington," "United States," "New York Tokens." They may be collected as American pieces, but can never be regarded as British.

JAMES CONDOR.

Ipswich, August 1, 1778.
Arrangement of Provincial Coins &c.
Ipswich, 1798.

VENERABLE VOTERS. The number of aged citizens on the island of Nantucket who voted the Union ticket at the Presidential election is somewhat remarkable. Not less than fifty-five men, the age of each one of whom was more than three score years and ten, went to the polls and cast their ballots for Abraham Lincoln. Among them was the venerable Capts Peter Russell, who has not walked a step for many years, but who in spite of the inclement weather, insisted upon being carried to the ballot-box.

Their ago	38	are	$\mathbf{a}\mathbf{s}$	tol	lows:-	-
Fourteen	-	-	-	-	aged	75	years.
Seven	-	-	-	-	٠,,	76	"
Six	-	-	-	-	"	77	"
Two	-	-	-	_	"	78	"
Thirteen	_	-	-	-	"	79	"
Eight	-	-	-	-	"	80	"
One	-	-	-	_	"	81	"
Two	_	-	-	_	"	83	"
One	-	-	-	-	"	85	"
One	_	-	-	_	"	89	"

An Ancient New-England Nom de Plume.—The reverend and very eccentric Nathaniel Ward, of Ipswich, in an amusing tract printed in 1647, and styled the "Simple Cobler of Aggawam," converts his own name into "Theodore de la Garde." Nathaniel and Throdore anciently had the same interpretation, "the gift of God;"and Ward and de la garde have the same signification in the English and French.

OLD SHEEP PASTURES.—In some parts of Britain, particularly Wales and Scotland, land has been constantly grazed by sheep for more than a thousand years, with no diminution of fertility or production, as is known from the number of sheep kept from year to year. Of course, the newness of our country does not admit of its furnishing any such example as this; but we have lands on which sheep have been pastured ever since the forest was cut off, embracing in some instances a period of nearly two hundred years.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE NEGRO.—Sweer Teunissen's negro Jacob, of Schenectady, ran away in 1679, and a hue and cry was sent forth for his arrest. He is described as of a very dark complexion, wearing a half worn gray hat, "buttoned of on one side." "He speakes good English and Dutch, and can readDutch; he speakes good Maguase and Mahikanders, Indian Langadge."

QUERIES.

FUNERAL SERMONS OF GOV. BURNET, AND HIS WIFE.—I have before me an old MS. copy of two sermons, namely "A Sermon Preached at the Interment of Mrs Anna Maria Burnet, Wife to his Excy William Burnet, Esqr in the Chapple in his Majestie's Fort in New York the day of in the year by the Revd Mr Orum," and "A Sermon Preached at the Interment of his Excy William Burnet, Esq' in the King's Chapple in Boston in New England the 12th day of September, in the year 1729, by the Revd Mr Price."

I should be pleased to have, 1, the date of the first sermon; 2, what was Mrs Burnet's aneestry; 3, did Governor Burnet leave any children; and 4, are these sermons in print.

T. H. M.

COTTON MILL.—Mr. Beck, vice-director of Curaçao, writing in 1657, to the chamber at Amsterdam, advises them of his efforts to encourage the cultivation in that island of the Cotton plant, having sent to the island for good and fresh seed. When the crop is ready, we shall, he goes on to say, "exert our best knowledge and ability to clean it, having brought with me here from Barbadoes, one of the same sort of little Mill (meulentie) as is made use of in Siara, and by that can have made as many as will be needed." Mr. Beck had served previously in Brazil, where, it is supposed, he had seen the above cotton mill in operation. It will be observed that one of the properties of this mill was to clean the cotton, it is supposed, of the seed. The question then naturally suggests itself, whether it had any affinity to Whitney's celebrated Cotton Gin.

o' c

WHO WAS JOHN CAREY, THE EDITOR OF WASHINGTON'S LETTERS IN 1795?-Mr Sparks, while giving his name, makes no allusion to his history. In his preface the editor says the letters were copied from the originals in the state department, Philadelphia, and that their authenticity would be vouched for by the then minister to Great Britain, Thomas Pinckney. I have searched vainly in works on Washington to ascertain who this John Carey was; none of the biographers of Washington seem to know who he was. Any particulars as to him will be interesting, not only to the inquirer, but to many others. edition is highly prized, and now so scarce that it readily commands from seven to ten dollars. INQUIRER.

NEW YORK PAPER MONEY.—Was any paper money issued by the city of New York, between the years 1784 and 1810?

Ρ.

What was this Book?—A gentleman residing in Paris in 1791 writes in his journal" I am informed by Mr. Short, American charge des affaires that there is a book now in Paris that one may with propriety assert was manufactured wholly in America—that is to say, the types were founded there, the paper made, the treatise composed and printed, and the material of the binding produced and fabricated there—and the nobleman who now has it in possession says the impression is equal to that of the types made by the famous Baskerville."

Can any of your readers inform us of the title of this then celebrated book?

B. Boston, Oct., 1864.

In what year was Mendham, Morris co., New Jersey, founded, and in what year was the first church built there? P. W. S.

REPLIES.

REVOLUTIONARY PENSIONERS, Vol. VIII, p. 148.—Of the twelve Revolutionary Pensioners mentioned in vol. viii, p. 148, as then living, Amaziah Goodwin, born Feb. 16, 1763, not 1759, and William Hutchings, born in York, Me. 1764, were both on the pension roll of Maine. Goodwin received his last pension in March 1863, and died in June, of that year, which would make his age 100 at the time of his death. Hutchings is still alive at the age of 100 years, residing in the town of Penobscot, Maine.

The great age attained by some of the Revolutionary pensioners may be seen by the following list of those living in Maine, in 1859, viz:

Job Allen, Cumberland County, aged in 1859, 96, dead. Nathan Doughty, Cumberland county, aged in 1859, 95, decd. Wm. Tukey, Cumberland County, died in 1858, aged 93. Isaac Abbott, Oxford County, aged in 1859, 97, died 1861. Samuel Ackley, Oxford County, aged in 1859, 94, died 1861. Benjamin Berry, Somerset County, aged in 1859, 97, dead. Josiah Parker, Somerset County, aged in 1859, 95, dead. Ralph Farnham, York County, aged in 1859, 103, died 1860. Amaziah Goodwin, York County, aged in 1859, 96, died 1863. John Hamilton, York County, aged in 1859, 99, deed. Jacob Rhodes, York County, aged in 1859, 95, decd. Wm. Hutchings, Hancock County, aged in 1859, 95, living. James W. Head, Lincoln County, aged in 1859, 93, died Aug. 1861. John C. Mink, Lincoln County, aged in 1859, 96, dead. Foster Wentworth, Lincoln Co., aged in 1859, 95, decd. Wm. Wyman, Lincoln County, aged in 1859, 97, decd.

The Rev. John Sawyer, a clergyman of the congregational order, of great worth, died in Bangor, Oct. 14, 1858, at the age of 103 years. He was born in Hebron, Conn. Oct. 4, 1755, graduated at Dartmouth College in 1785, after having served in the army of the revolution. He was settled in the ministry first in Oxford N. H., next in Garland, Me. He was many years a revolutionary pensioner, and retained his faculties to his last days. So also did Ralph Farnham, who was born in Lebanon, Me., July, 7, 1756, was at the battle of Bunker Hill, and having served with honor through the war, he returned to his peaceful agricultural pursuits. At the age of 104, he was able to make a journey to Boston, and was there received with much honor as the last survivor of that brilliant battle. excitement was too much for him, and lost him his life, which closed in December, 1860. He retained his intellect and memory to his latest day.

Portland, Nov., 1864.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN FENWICK (Vol. VIII. p. 210).— Your correspondent (who, by the way, does not answer my query) says that there appears to be a close connexion between the families of Lorraine of Northumberland, and Fenwick. I can state exactly what that connexion was. Grace, daughter of — Lorrain, Esq., was the second wife of Sir John Fenwick, Bart. He was born in 1579, made baronet 9th of June 1628. Their children were William, Alan, and Grace.

THOMAS MARIA WINGFIELD.—Camden mentions Wingfield, known in early Virginian history as one of the two private men in England who in his time had two Christian names. The other instance was Sir Thomas Posthumous Hobby, (see Remaines concerning Britaine, p. 44). King Charles and his son Henry are the royal examples given.

Betrospections, Literary and Antiquarian.

NEGRO SLAVERY IN NEW ENGLAND.— That Negro Slavery was never of much account in the New England colonies is very manifest from various sources. one of these sources it is the business of this paper to call attention, viz.: to "An Abridgement of the Laws in Force and Use in Her Majesty's Plantations; namely of VIRGINIA, JAMAICA, BARBADOES, MARY-LAND, NEW ENGLAND, NEW YORK, CARO-LINA, &c., digested under proper heads in the method of Mr. Wingate, and Mr. Washington's Abridgements."—This volume is an octavo about 500 pages, printed in London, 1704. The name of the Compiler does not appear in it. His preface is dated. "London, March 1, 1703." Whoever he was, he tells the reader "he had been considerable time in preparing and perfecting it," which gave opportunity for procuring from the colonies, "several laws in manuscript, and some very lately made."

Of this curious collection of colonial laws. Virginia occupied ninety-two pages; Jamaica. eighty-eight; Barbadoes, ninetyseven; Maryland, eighty-eight; New England, one-hundred; New York and South Carolina are thrown into an appendix of nineteen pages.

In the collection of laws here brought together, slavery is specially noticed, with the remarkable exception of New England. That there should be no notice of any law or laws regulating the institution in the New England colonies, is evidence quite eonclusive that "Negro slavery was never of much account" in them. But as slavery was not illegal anywhere, and as the country grew populous, slaves were from time to time brought in. Yet there was always a part of the community who took a very decided stand against it. In 1701 the representatives to the general court of Massachusetts from Boston, were instructed "to promote the encouraging the bringing in of white servants, and to put a period to negroes being slaves." Slavery, however, continued in Massachusetts to the time of the Revolution of 1775; about which period it virtually ceased.

In Virginia there was a law made in 1669 providing that, "if any slave resist his master, or others by his master's order correcting him, and by the extremity of correction should chance to die, it shall not be accounted felony, but the master and other person appointed by him shall be acquitted from molestation."

The next year the following curious enactment relative to slaves appears:-"All Servants, not being Christians, imported into this Country [Virginia] by shipping, shall be slaves for their life time, but such as come by land shall serve, if boys and girls till 30 years of age, if men and women, twelve years and no longer."
There is nothing further in this volume of laws bearing upon the subject of slavery in Virginia, while it contains several pages on the subject in Maryland; but as my object in this paper was merely to revert to slavery in New England, and to show from an authentic source, that it was not regarded at the beginning of the last century as having anything like permanency here, the subject will now be dismissed.

Societies and their Proceedings.

NEW YORK.

Long Island Historical Society.—Brooklyn Nov. 3, 1864. A regular meeting of the Society was held at their rooms, in the evening of November the 3rd, which was attended by a large and fashionable audience. Judge Greenwood presided. Dr. H. R. Stiles, Librarian, announced that during the past month there had been received by donation 55 bound and 77 unbound volumes, and by purchase and exchange 26 bound and 9 unbound volumes; total, 81 bound and 86 unbound works. Also 180 Mss. and 97 articles of a miscellaneons nature, such as coins, pictures, &c.

Special mention was made of a valuable donation of autograph letters of distinguished men, presented by Mr. Gabriel Harrison; and, also, of an exceedingly curious and interesting collection of 10 Ms. volumes, in the handwriting of Rev. N. Huntting, of Easthampton, L. I., covering the period from 1700 to 1748; also, a package of 78 autograph letters, of nearly all the pastors of Easthampton, the gift—together with many rare and valuable Long Island pamphlets, of the sons of Jonathan Huntting, of Southold, L. I. Also, an original copy (in form) of the "Boston News Letter," of July 3. 1710, printed sixty-six years before the Declaration of Independence, presented by T. W. Valentine, Principal of Public School No. 19; a fine water-color sketch of the house in Philadelphia, in which Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence, printed and presented by Mr. Gabriel Harrison; a rebel soldier's cap, with the Pelican button; and a piece of Perry's flag ship, the Laurence, presented by the Rev. J. E. Rockwell, D. D.

HIST. MAG. VOL. VIII.

The second set of colors of the First Long Island Regiment, have been deposited with the society, and are now festooned over the folding doors which open into the lecture room. The national flag, perforated with bullets, bears the scar of the ball which killed its gallant bearer in the battle of Spotsylvania, in May last. His portrait hangs in the Society's Trophy and Relic Room, under the first set of colors, which after having been carried through 17 battles, were given last year to the keeping of this Society.

The Committee on the Natural History of Long Island reported, that considerable progress had been made with the collections, during the past month. Several jars of crustacea and reptiles, with a few species of shells, have been received from Mr. W. S. Pelletrean of Southampton. A fine bald eagle, shot near Flatbush, has been secured, and several other birds are promised and are nearly ready for the cases. A large woodchuck, (a species of marmot), has been received from Elias Hopkins, of Westbury, L. I.; the skin of a raccoon had also been procured and would be prepared. Henry G. Reeve, Esq., of Brooklyn, has kindly placed at the disposal of the committee $100 towards a collection of the aquatic or swimming birds of Long Island, The committee take great pleasure in announcing this liberal donation, and trust they may be aided and encouraged by similar contributions to other branches of this department. A like sum would secure a good collection of the larger land-birds, and another hundred dollars would go far towards procuring specimens of the warb-lers, thrushes and finckes. As the Committee have reason to anticipate contributions of birds already prepared for exhibition, it is probable that the sums named would nearly complete the collection of Long Island birds. In addition to Mr. Reeve's gift, five life-memberships to the Society have been taken on account of the organization of this department, showing the interest felt in its success. The Committee, with its sub-committees have arranged to meet at the Library on the last Thursday evening of each month, for the exhibition of interesting specimens, and the discussion of matters connected with their work. A paper will be read at the next meeting by Mr. John Hooper, on "The Algo of Long Island." As soon as the collections are sufficiently advaned, cases will be prepared and specimens placed on exhibition.

Fifteen new members were elected. The Society then listened to a very interesting paper by A. J. Spooner, Esq., on "Montauk Point, its Indian History and Traditions." As the essential portion of this paper will be published in.

this magazine, we need attempt no criticism of it. At its close, the usual vote of thanks was passed, and the meeting adjourned.

DELAWARE

DELAWARE HISTORICAL SOCIETY .- Wilmington, May 31. At a meeting of the citizens of Delaware held at the Institute Hall, Wilmington, Tuesday, May 31st, 1864, for the purpose of organizing an Historical Society for the State, pursuant to a public call made by Wm D. Bowe, Esq., Chairman of the Committee on the Historical Department of the Wilmington Institute.

On motion of Rev. George Foote, the Hon. Willard Hall was chosen Chairman of the meeting, and Willard D. Dowe was chosen Secretary.

The Chairman declared the meeting fully organized, and ready for the transaction of business. Henry F. Askew, M. D., then offered the following resolution viz:

Resolved, That this meeting deem it expedient to organize an Historical Society for the State of Delaware.

The resolution was seconded by Rev. George Foot, and unanimously adopted.

On motion of Wm. R. Bullock, M. D., it was resolved that a committee of three, consisting of Wm. D. Dowe, Esq., Dr. H. F. Askew, and Wm. T. Read, Esq., be appointed to draft a Constitution for an Historical Society.

Mr. Dowe then stated that information had previously been given to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, by the Committee on Historical Department in the Wilmington Institute, of an effort being made to organize an Historical Society of Delaware, and that it was our desire that the Historical Society of Pennsylvania should send to us a delegation to assist at the organization of an Historical Society in Delaware. The Historical Society of Pennsylvania had responded by appointing the Hon. John M. Read, LL. D., Hon. Oswald Thompson, LL. D., Col. J. Ross Snowden, and Horatio Gates Jones, Esq., a delegation to visit and aid us upon this occasion. All the members of the delegation were present except the Hon. Oswald Thompson, whose health prevented his being with us.

On motion of Daniel M. Bates, Esq., it was Resolved, That this meeting acknowledges with reat satisfaction the interest manifested by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in the formation of a similar Society in Delaware, and the aid afforded towards such an organization by the appointment of delegates to attend this meeting.

Resolved, That we cordially welcome the gentlemen who are present representing the Ilistorical Society of Pennsylvania, and invite them to share in the deliberations of this meeting.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

The Hon. Judge Read, Chairman of the delegation, spoke of his pleasure and gratification in being present to take part in the deliberations. He had always had a strong affection for Delaware-it was the home of his grandfather. He wished for the Society success and prosperity.

Col. Snowden then delivered the inaugural address.

At the close of Col. Snowden's address, on motion of Rev. Charles Breck, it was Resolved, That Col. Snowden be requested to place at the disposal of the Society, the able and interesting paper read by him at this meeting.

The Committee on drafting a Constitution stated that they were prepared to report a constitution for the Society. The report was received, and the Constitution adopted, with the accompanying By-Laws.

Horatio G. Jones, Esq., then addressed the meeting, expressing his great satisfaction at the successful organization of the Historical Society of Delaware, which he had just witnessed. His only regret was, that the Society had not been established many years ago. He felt, in common with those present, a lively interest in all which belongs to Delaware. He himself was descended from a Delaware family. He felt himself almost a Delawarian. He was glad to see the day when the Historical Society of Delaware and the Historical Society of Pennsylvania strike hands in a noble effort of social, civil, and moral improvement. Delaware is a rich field for historic inquiry and research. Here Penn effected his first landing on the American shore; and here, too, was the first permanent settlement on the Delaware River.

On motion of Rev. William Aikman, it was unanimously

Resolved, That the thanks of this meeting be iven to the gentlemen composing the delegation from the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, for their able and interesting addresses delivered this day; and that the Hon Judge Read and Horatio Gates Jones, Esq., be requested to reduce their remarks to writing, and, with the address of Col. J. Ross Snowden, to deposit them for preservation in the archives of this Society.

On motion of Rev. Mr. Foot, a committee of three was appointed by the chair, consisting of Daniel M. Bates, Esq., Rev. George Foot, and Wm. R. Bullock, M. D., to nominate officers for the Society, under their Constitution, to serve until the next annual meeting, on the second Thursday of next October.

Major John Jones, through Dr. Askew, proposed certain queries of interest in reference to money sent from New Castle County by Nicholas Vandyke and George Read, Esq., to alleviate the wants of the citizens of Boston, while suffering under the Port Bill, and the return of the same by the Council of Boston, with interest, at the time of the great fire at New Castle.

On motion of the Rev. Charles Breck, they were referred to Wm. T. Read, Esq., of New Castle, for consideration, and to report to the Society.

The committee on the nomination of officers for the Society, having prepared their report presented the same.

Wilmington, Oct. 13. The First Annual Meeting of the Historical Society of Delaware, was held at the Wilmington Institute. There was a large attendance present.

At 11 o'clock, the Society was called to order, the President, Hon. Willard Hall, in the chair. After roll call, and reading of the minutes, the various committees reported.

Mr. Wm. T. Read, from the committee appointed at the Inaugural meeting on the subject of the fire in New Castle, April 26th, 1824, and the correspondence between the citizens of that town and Boston, Mass., presented a complete report with accompanying documents. Report accepted, ordered to be filed, and the thanks of the Society tendered Mr. Read

From this report it seems that there were twenty-three houses destroyed by the fire, and some twenty-three families left entirely desti-tute, and the loss estimated at $10000. The fire was arrested by the aid of citizens of Wilmington. That measures were adopted to make the calamity known, and solicit relief, and that Hon. Nicholas Van Dyke wrote to the Mayor of Boston relating to the relief afforded by New Castle County, Delaware, to the sufferers, from the Boston Port-Bill, with the expectation that gratitude for this act of benevolence to their forefathers might move the people of Boston to return it by aid to the then afflicted citizens of New Castle. the councils of Boston recommended that collections should be taken up in the churches of that city for the relief of the destitute people in New Castle. The public meetings were held in Philadelphia and Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and committees appointed to solicit donations for the sufferers by the fire in New Castle, April 26, 1824. That the whole amount received and distributed was seven thousand six hundred and thirty dollars and nine cents, of which eleven hundred and fifty dollars and seventy-three cents was from Boston. That the city of Boston was not destroyed by fire when it was evacuated by the British army, March 27, 1776, nor at any time during the revolution, and therefore there could have been no sufferers from such calamity, nor money ever raised in New Castle county for their relief.

That the citizens of New Castle county in 1774 subscribed and remitted, by their committee, George Read and Nicholas Van Dyke, in 1775, one thousand dollars, estimating the dellar at seven shillings and sixpence, Pennsylvania currency, for the relief of the sufferers from the Boston Port-Bill. Attached to this report is an interesting correspondence between George Read and Samuel Adams in 1775.

Other committees reported.

Major John Jones presented to the Society a copy of the history of Drawyer's Presbyterian church.

H. Robert Penington, Esq., in behalf of Mr. Albert O. Newton, presented to the Society with the original muster roll of a company of Infantry under the command of Capt. Henry Grindage of St. Georges, in the 14th Regiment U. S. A., in the year 1812.

Asso a letter from Brig. Gen. Joseph Bloomfield to Capt. Grindage, dated Headquarters Trenton, April 29, 1812, containing a list of officers appointed in the 4th Department, from the State of Delaware.

The thanks of the Society were tendered Mr. Newton for his valuable gifts.

The Committee on Room and Cabinet, reported favorably, and were continued to make suitable arrangements.

The Rev. Mr. Breck called up various amendments, already proposed to the Constitution, and on his motion were severally adopted, viz:

In article II, insert after the word "ballot,"
"or otherwise as the Society may determine."
In article V, strike out the words "from the members of the Executive Committee."

In article VII, strike out the words "11 o'clock, A. M., and 10 o'clock, A. M."

Also adding an article that every active member shall be required to sign the Constitution, upon the first convenient opportunity after his election.

A resolution referred to the annual meeting relating to the appointment of committees to visit various portions of the State, was called up, and passed,

On motion of Mr. H. Robt. Penington, it was Resolved, That the Corresponding Secretary be instructed to write to Mr. J. T. Headly, requesting whatever information he may be disposed to give concerning the Rev. Messrs. Magoon, Alexander McWhorter, and such other persons connected with the state to whom he refers in his recent work entitled "The Chaplains of the Revolution."

On motion it was resolved, that the Society proceed to the election of officers. Wm. T. Read, Esq., Rev. Charles Breck, Major John Jones, Dr. L. P. Bush, and Dr. William Cummins were appointed a committee to nominate officers. The committee reported the following as the nomination for officers, which was accepted, and the gentlemen declared elected for the ensuing year.

President—Hon. Willard Hall, Wilmington. Vice-Presidents—Wm. T. Read, Esq., New Castle; Hon. S. M. Harrington, Dover; Gov. Wm. Cannon, Bridgeville.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. Leighton Coleman, Wilmington.

Recording Secretary—William D. Dowe, Esq., Wilmington.

Librarian-Dr. J. Frank Vaughan, Wilmington. Treasurer—Wm. S. Hilles, Esq., Wilmington. Directors—Dr. Henry F. Askew, Wilmington; Rev. George Foot, Glasgow.

Major John Jones, Middletown. Dr. William Cummins, Smyrna. Mr. James Ponder, Milton.

A number of gentlemen were nominated and elected members of the Society.

General Wm. H. French offered the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of two be appointed by the President to investigate, and furnish for the archives of this Society, the Constitution and laws furnished for the governance of the colonists of Delaware, and who was the author of said Constitution.

General French and Mr. Read, appointed the committee.

On motion of Dr. Bush it was Resolved, That Jacob B. Vandever, Esq., be requested to prepare a geographical map of the east front of Wilmington as it existed at the time of the original occupation by the Swedes, together with the names of the original settlers.

The Rev. Chas. Breck moved the following: Resolved, That for the present the stated meetings of the Society be held on the second Thursday in each month, at 7½ o'clock, P. M., excepting February and June, when the Society shall meet at 10 o'clock, A. M. Adopted.

On motion of the Rev. Leighton Coleman it was Resolved, That the question by whom, where, and when was the first settlement of Europeans made on the Delaware River be left to a committee of one to be appointed at this meeting; and that such committee be requested to prepare a discourse upon this subject to be read at the next annual meeting. Rev. George Foot was appointed.

On motion Rev. Chas. Breck, William T. Read. Esq., was elected Historiographer of the So-

Major John Jones having stated some interesting facts in regard to the conduct of the Delaware troops at the battle of Long Island, Major Jones was requested to prepare a written statement of the same for the use of the Society.

On motion the Society adjourned until 74 o'clock in the evening.

EVENING MEETING.

At 7½0'clock the Society was called to order, Hon. Willard Hall in the chair. The minutes of the morning session were read and adopted.

The report of the Treasurer was read and accepted.

On motion of Rev. Chas. Breck it was Resolved, That the financial year shall begin and end in May.

The members of the Society then in a body went unto the large Hall of the Wilmington Institute, when before a large audience and the Society, Gen. John M. Read, Jr., of Albany, New York, being introduced by Hon. Willard Hall, delivered an oration on "The Life and Services of Sir Henry Hudson." Immediately after the oration, Dr. H. F. Askew moved the following: Resolved, That the thanks of the Delaware Historical Society are eminently due, and are hereby presented to Gen. John M. Read, Jr., for the eloquent and highly interesting oration before the Society this evening.

Resolved, That Gen. Read be requested to furnish a copy of his address, to be preserved in our archives, and that the same be published by the Society.

Wm. D. Dowe, Esq., then read the following letter:

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 25, 1864.

My Dear Sir:

I have but just received your favor of the 19th, which has been forwarded to me at this place. The purpose of bringing more into light the too much neglected history of Delaware is a noble one, and a hearty co-operation of your wise and intelligent citizens, united in a society, seems the fittest mode of promoting that end. I should be very glad to join with you in the meeting you propose, but I am so much occupied that it will not be in my power to do so.

Wishing you the most perfect success,

I am, my dear sir, Very faithfully yours, GEO. BANCROFT.

The public exercises being over, the members of the Society returned to their meeting room, when, upon the Society being called to order,

Mr. Dowe and Dr. Askew made an informal report of the delegation to attend the exercises upon the occasion of the commemoration of the two hundredth anniversary of the conquest of New Netherland, held in the Cooper Institute, New York, Wednesday evening, October 12th, 1864. The Chairman of the delegation, Right Rev. A. Lee, being absent, no formal report was made at this meeting, but will be made at the stated meeting in November next.

On motion of Rev. Mr. Coleman, a committee was appointed to take into consideration the propriety of giving a course of historical lectures during the coming winter.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON NUMISMATIC SOCIETY .- Boston, Oct. 5. The regular monthly meeting was held on Thursday, Oct. 5, at 4 P. M.

After the transaction of various matters of private business, Mr. Davenport read two letters from J. J. Mickley, of Philadelphia, concerning a curious medal of which a rubbing was enclosed. The obverse bears a head of Washington, and the reverse resembles one of the types of the well-known "Confederatio" pieces. Various opinions have been expressed as to its genuineness, and the letters were on that subject. Mr. Fowle presented a parcel of the New York coppers of 1863, and exhibited some antique cameos and Greek and Roman coins. Among them were some good specimens of gold of the Lower Empire. Mr. Seavey exhibited a few American coins, including some beautiful cents of early dates and a remarkable half-dime of 1805. The Secretary showed a number of fine and very perfect silver medals, among which were seventeen of the Emperor Napoleon, familiar in bronze, but not so often seen in the more costly metal. He also showed the large bronze prize-medal of the International Exhibition of 1862, with the elaborate design by Maclise of the Royal Academy. It was much admired. The Society adjourned at about a quarter past 5.

AMERICAN ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY, - Worcester. Oct. 21st. The annual meeting of the American Antiquarian Society was held on the 21st inst., being the anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus. In the absence of the President. Hon. Stephen Salisbury, the chair was occupied by Hon. Levi Lincoln, one of the Vice Presidents. The attendance was quite large, and among those present were noticed, Gov Lincoln, Judge Barton, Judge Mellen, Judge Bacon, Rev. Dr. Hill, Rev. Dr. Sweetser, Hon. Rejoice Newton, Hon. Dwight Foster, Samuel F. Haven, Esq., Hon. George F. Hoar, Frederic W. Paine, Esq., and Nathaniel Paine, Esq., of Worcester, Rev. Dr. Ellis, of Charlestown, Charles Deane, Esq. George Livermore, Esq., and Charles Folsom, Esq., of Cambridge, and Dr. Shurtleff and Rev. Mr. Hale, of Boston. The report of the council was read by George Livermore, Esq., and was exceedingly interesting. It treated of the duties of antiquaries in the present crisis of the country, and paid deserved tributes to the memory of Isaiah Thomas and Josiah Quincy, two deceased members, who had been distinguished as antiquarians and patriots. The Librarian, Samuel F. Haven, Esq., presented his report, representing the library in good condition. Nathaniel Paine, Esq., Treasurer, submitted his report, exhibiting a fund of $45,364,44 on hand. These reports on motion of Charles Deane, Esq., were accepted and referred to the publishing committee.

Gov. Lincoln (Dr. Shurtleff in chair.) then made extended remarks on the life and character of the late Josiah Quincy, and offered a series of resolutions, which were adopted, and ordered to be entered upon the records.

The society then proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows:

President, Hon. Stephen Salisbury, of Worces-

Vice Presidents, Rev. William Jenks, D.D., LL.D., of Boston; Hon. Levi Lincoln, LL.D., of Worcester. Council, Hon. Isaac Davis, LL.D., of Worcester; George Livermore, Esq., of Cambrdge; Nathaniel B. Shurtleff, M.D., of Boston; Charles Folsom, Esq., of Cambridge; Hon. Ira M. Barton, of Worcester; Hon. W. Herrick, LL. D., of Boston; Hon. John P. Bigelow, of Bos. ton, Samuel F. Haven, Esq., of Worcester; Rev. Edward E. Hale, of Boston; Joseph Sargent, M.D., of Worcester. Secretary of Foreign Correspondence, Jared Sparks, LL.D., of Cambridge. Secretary of Domestic Correspondence, Hon. Ben-jamin F. Thomas, LL.D., of Boston. Recording Secretary, Hon. Edward Mellen, LL.D., of Wor-Treasurer, Nathaniel Paine, Esq., of Committee of Publication, Samuel F. Worcester. Haven, Esq., of Worcester; Rev. Edward E. Hale, of Boston; Charles Deane, Esq., of Cambridge. A committee, consisting of Charles Deane, Esq., Hon. George F. Hoar, and Judge Barton, was appointed to prepare a list of members.

Interesting remarks were made by Messrs. Deane, Hill, Ellis, Hale, Folsom, and others.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY—October 18, 1864. The regular monthly meeting was held. W. H. Brown, Esq., in the chair, in the absence of the President.

The Secretary reported the total contributions to the library for the month to be 3,409, of which 2,611 were manuscripts deposited with the Society by the family of the late John Russell, LL. D., forming a body of interesting material relative to the history of Illinois, for over thirty years. Col. J. G. Wilson, of the staff of Major General Banks, contributed extensive files of newspapers of Louisiana, with documents and publications relating to the war, including the State Convention journals of 1862 and 1864. Mr. George P. Upton presented a numerous collection of specimens of army newspapers, primed by our soldiers in the field, carefully preserved by him from the commencement of the war.

Col. J. W. Shaffer, U. S. A., forwarded a copy of the "Book of Common Prayer," printed and revised under the authority of the Confederate States.

Mr. F. Munson, of Chicago, contributed to the cabinet a bottle of medicine taken from the Arctic ship Resolute, and an ancient mining tool exhumed near Lake Superior.

Perhaps the most valuable individual contribution for the month, was a bound manuscript volume, containing records of deeds and grants of land at Mackinaw and the surrounding country—some more than a century ago—together with various notarial registries, presented to the society by Mr. Ronald McLeod, of Mackinaw.

The correspondence for the month as reported, comprised twenty-seven letters received, and forty-nine letters written. Letters accepting membership were read from Prof. Goldwin Smith, of England. Col. J. W. Shaffer, U. S. A., Charles L. Wilson, Esq., and Mr. Geo. P. Upton of Chicago.

A communication was received from Col. J. G. Wilson, U. S. A., presenting interesting historical memoranda, collected by him at Brownsville, Texas, in 1863, relative to the first bridge on the Chicago River (South Branch), and the Taylor family of Chicago.

Letters were read from Rev. R. Babcock, D. D., Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on the subject of the "Peck MSS;" from J. D. Caldwell, Esq., of Cincinnati, respecting an early editor at Chicago, yet living; also from Messrs. R. McLeod, G. P. Upton and Col. J. W. Shaffer, accompanying donations.

The Secretary produced a recent correspondence between himself and various individuals, relating to a loan, for removal out of the city, of the regimental flags placed in the Society's custody. He stated that on advising with members of the Society, it was judged improper to allow them to be removed, unless by the express authorization of the Society, regularly given. The Society then voted their approval of the action of the Secretary, and also the following:

Resolved, That the regimental flags deposited with this Society, being regarded by them as deposited for the benefit of future generations, are in no case to be removed out of the Society's custody, except such removal be authorized by a vote of the Society in the particular case.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY. — November 15, 1864. The annual meeting for the choice of officers was held in the evening, at the office of Messrs. Scammon, McCagg and Fuller. In the absence of the President. (on a voyage to Europe) J. Y. Scammon Esq., Vice President, took the chair.

The Librarian reported the following, showing the contributions to the Library for the past month and the past year, as also, the grand total received since the foundation of the Society in April, 1856.

Class.	Mo.	Year.	Total.
Books	2	555	13,379
Books unbound & pamp'ts.	266	5,932	57,874
Newspapers, old and rare	. 2	36	356
Newspaper files	. 3	149	1,169
Files of Serials	. 2	271	1,844
Maps and Charts		25	1,122
Manuscripts	4	3,485	4,729
Prints, &c	4	22	181
Cabinet receipts		24	97
Miscellaneous		38	120
-

Totals.......283 10,505 80,871 The receipts of the month have been furnished by 34 contributors; those of the year by 550.

Letters received during the month, 16; written, 33; received during the year, 254; written 584.

The contributions for the month included official publications from the Governor of Arizona Territory; extensive publications on the war, including political documents of the late Presidential campaign, from Boston, New York, Washington, Cincinnati, etc.; publications from the astronomical observatory of Harvard College; numerous public documents from the state of Rhode Island, and British publications relating to the American rebellion, from C. L. Wilson, Esq.

The correspondence of the month embraced fifteen letters received, and thirty-three written. Letters of acknowledgement were received from the Maine Historical Society; accompanying donations from Hon. I. N. Arnold; Prof. A. S. Packard, Maine; Francis Burnass, Rockford, Ill.; James Barnet, Chicago, and Hon. J. R. Bartlett, R. I. A communication was received from the Librarian of the Pennsylvania Historical Society asking information respecting the finances of the Society; a letter was read, writ-ten in behalf of Hon. James Hall, formerly of Illinois, now of Cincinnati, obligingly offering helpful service to the objects of the Society; a letter was received from Z. Eastman, Esq., U. S. Consul at Bristol, England, communicating some reminiscences of the late Mr. Hooper Warren; also, naming the late Benjamin Lundy as one, in his judgement, worthy of particular honor in Illinois, not having yet received due and com-plete justice in the compilation of his journal and writings, published some twenty years ago.

The Treasurer's report was read and accepted. The officers and committees of the preceeding year were reflected, with slight variation, as follows, viz:

EXECUTIVE.

President—Walter L. Newbury. Vice Presidents—W. B. Ogden, J. Y. Scammon.

Treasurer—George F. Rumsey. Rec. Secretary and Librarian—W. Barry. Corresponding Secretary—E. B. McCagg.

COMMITTEES OF BUSINESS.

Constitution and Bye-Laws—I. N. Arnold, Van H. Higgins, J. Y. Scammon, Thomas Hoyne. Publication—S. W. Fuller, W. Barry, E. B. McCagg.

Finance—W. L. Newberry, W. H. Brown, C. H. McCormick.

Library—E. B. McCagg, S. C. Griggs, E. W. Jones.

Nominations—H. G. Loomis, Wm. Blair, B. W. Raymond.

Investments—J. Y. Scammon, H. T. Dickey, E. B. McCagg.

COMMITTEES OF RESEARCH AND CORRESPONDENCE.

Aboriginal History, &c .. - W. B. Ogden, H. T. Dickey, E. B. McCagg, J. H. Kinzie.

European Discovery—W. Barry, M. D. Ogden, S. W. Fuller, B. F. Culver.

Civil History—W. H. Brewn, J. Y. Scammon, J. L. Stark, H. H. Magie, W. H. Osborn.

Ecclesiastical History-W. Barry, Rt. Rev. James Duggan, D. D., Rev. R. H. Clarkson, D. D. Science, Art and Industry—H. A. Johnson, M. D., J. H. Foster, James Carter.

Literature-Cyrus Bentley, E. B. Talcott, H.

G. Miller, William Bross.
City of Chicago—Henry Farnam, G. F. Rumsey, William Blair, J. H. Dunham, John H. Kinzie.

Fine Arts-E. B. McCagg, Mark Skinner, W. Barry, I. N. Arnold, G. F. Rumsey. E. H. Sheldon, W. S. Gurnee, W. L. Newberry, D. J. Ely.

The Society's thanks were directed to be returned to the editors or publishers of numerous serials obligingly forwarded for its collections for the past year.

A committee was appointed, in pursuance of the by-laws, to revise the list of members.

W. H. Brown, Esq., ex-President of the Society, accepted an invitation to address the Society at its adjournment, on the history of the Anti-Slavery movement in the State of Illinois. Rt. Rev. Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, was admitted a corresponding member of the Society; the Hon. Richard J. Oglesby, Governor-elect of Illinois, an Honorary member, and E. S. Isham, Esq., and Col. F. A. Eastman, resident Members.

At the close of the meeting, the Society accepted a proposed plan for a lot and building for the uses of the Association; and appointed a committee to complete the subscription to secure the same.

The meeting was then adjourned to such time as might be found convenient for hearing the annual addresses.

PENNSYLVANIA.

NUMISMATIC SOCIETY OF PHILADELPHIA -Philadelphia, Oct. 22d, 1861. At a meeting of the Numismatic Society of Philadelphia, held on Thursday Evening, September 1st, it having been anounced that Frederic Graff Vaux, the youngest member of the Society, had deceased on the 4th of August last. A feeling of deep regret pervaded the Society, and on motion of A. B. Taylor, the following Resolutions were unanimonsly adopted.

Resolved, That this Society has heard with deep pain the intelligence of the loss which it has experienced in the demise of our late junior member.

That while yielding a dutiful submision to the Divine decree which has thus early snatched from our midst one who, by his rare social and intellectual qualities, extraordinary amenity of disposition and refined taste: by the warm zeal and untiring perseverance with which he entered upon the investigation of subjects connected with Numismatic Science, as well as most other scientific and literary pursuits, and which so well fited him to adorn a career of usefulness and success;—we cannot refrain from giving expression to the feelings of unfeigned regret occasioned by the sad event, and offering this poor testimonial to the memory of one so greatly endeared to all his friends and associates.

Resolved, that we deeply sympathize with his bereaved parents, in this their deep affliction, and that the corresponding Secretary be hereby directed to furnish them with a copy of these proceedings, and cause the same to be published in the Historical Magazine .- Extracted from the Minutes of the Society.

EMIL CAUFFMAN. Corresponding Secretary.

Hotes on Books.

History of the Anti Slavery Measures of the Thirty Seventh and Thirty-Eighth United States Congresses. 1801-4. By HENRY WILSON. Boston, Walker Wise & Co. 12°, 384 pp.

This work is a marvel of condensation, and done by one to whom the whole subject was thoroughly familiar. The great revolution in legislation is here depicted. The Congress, from which the South unwisely withdrew, step by step sweeps away the great Southern constitution.

The measures whose history the book records are indicated in the titles of the chapters, namely: "Slaves used for Insurrectionary Purposes Made Free;" "Fugitive Slaves not to be Returned by Persons in the Army;" "The Abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia;" "The President's Proposition to Aid States in the Abolition of Slavery;" "The Prohibition of Slavery in the Territories;" "Certain Slaves to be Made Free;" "Hayti and Liberia;" "Education of Colored Youth in the District of Columbia;" "The African Slave Trade:" "Additional Act to Abolish Slavery in the District of Columbia;" "Colored Soldiers;" "Aid to the States to Emancipate their Slaves;" "Amendment of the Constitution;" "Repeal of Fugitive Slave Laws;"
"Pay of Colored Soldiers;" "To Make Free the Wives and Children of Colored Soldiers;" "A Bureau of Freemen;" "Reconstruction of Rebel States" "Confinement of Colored Persons in the Washington Jail;" "Negro Testimony;" and "Coastwise Slave Trade."

Miscellany.

Messrs. Ticknor & Fields, who so well continue the Atlantic Monthly, have been allured into another and much needed periodical—a monthly illustrated magazine for young folks. OUR YOUNG FOLKS, an illustrated monthly magazine for boys and girls, edited by J. T. Trowbridge, Gail Hamilton, and Lucy Larcom, will include in the staff of coniributors many of the most popular writers of juvenile works in America and in England: Capt. Mayne Reid; J. T. Trowbridge, the author of "Father Brighthopes;" Gail Hamilton and Lucy Larcom, the associate editors, will preside over that portion of the magazine especially designed for girls; Mr. and Mrs. Agassiz; Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe; "Carleton," author of "My Days and Nights on the Battle-field;" Dr. Dio Lewis, author of "The New Gymnastics; Edmund Morris, author of "Ten Acres Enough," will write several articles on farming for boys; Edmund Kirke; "Aunt Fanny;" Mr. Longfellow, Mr. Whittier, and Prof. Holmes. In addition to the writers named above, regular contributions will be furnished by Richard H. Stoddard, Horace E. Scudder, Grace Greenwood, the author of the "Little Susy" Books, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Miss Maria S. Cummins, Mrs. Lydia Maria Child, Miss Louisa M. Alcott, and others.

Every number of Our Young Folks will contain capital pictures, drawn and engraved by our best artists. A finely engraved steel portrait of some popular author will be given in the first number of each volume.

The publishers of Our Young Folks will endeavor to furnish to their young readers a magazine whose monthly visits shall be always welcome, and shall be expected with pleasure. They will cooperate with the editors in procuring for Our Young Folks whatever is excellent and original in stories and sketches, biography, history, and poetry, travel and adventure, outdoor and in-door sports, games and puzzles, and every variety of miscellany, entertaining and instructive, serious and comic.

The size of Our Young Folks will be more than two-thirds the size of the Atlantic Monthly. Each number will contain not less than sixtyped from pages. The magazine will be electrotyped from new and beautiful type, and handsomely printed at the University Press, Cambridge.

Single subscriptions, $2 a year; single Nos., 25 cents.

An Affecting Election Incident took place in Sturbridge, Mass., on Tuesday. Dea. John Phillips, who was one hundred and four years, four months and nine days old on that day, appeared at the town hall and deposited his ballot for presidential electors and State officers. He was brought in a carriage and then conveyed into the hall in a chair, supported by a platoon of returned soldiers, and received by the citizens of the town, rising from their seats with uncovered heads. Mr. Phillips then expressed a desire to shake hands with all the returned soldiers; after which a Democratic and Union-Republican ballot being presented to him, he chose the latter, stating his choice to all present. The town then voted that the chairman of the

The town then voted that the chairman of the selectmen present the ballot box to the old gentleman, who took his ballot with both hands and deposited it in the box, stating that he had voted for Washington for President, and attended all the Presidential elections since, excepting that four years ago, when he was sick and unable to attend.

Resolutions embodying the above incidents were passed and entered upon the records of the town. Edward Phillips, a son of the venerable patriot, was present, and made some remarks in which he stated that he was the oldest citizen of the town born within its limits. His age is eighty years.

WALKEB, WISE & Co, have in presstwo works which cannot fail to interest historical readers. The History of France by Martin, a work which has been recognized by the Academy of Inscriptions as the most learned and by the Academy of France as the most eloquent work on the history of France. The American publishers will present as a seperate work the Age of Louis XIV in 2 vols. and no part has more connection with American history.

The other work is Miss Martineau's History of

The other work is Miss Martineau's History of the Peace; which with its introduction and conclusion is really a thorough history of England from the commencement of the present century to the present day.

They are both to be supplied to subscribers only, the former at $3.50 the latter at $2.25 a volume.

Seventy-five large paper copies of each will be printed.

A NEW PRINTING CLUB, "The Franklin Club" has been formed in Philadelphia and has we think most unwisely began its issues with Melvin's Journal of Arnold's Expedition in 1775, a work already printed here by the gentlemen some of whom subsequently formed the Bradford Club, and not of sufficent importance to justify so speedy a reprint.

The price of the Franklin Club Edition is $5; large paper copies $10.

The sale of Autographs in St. Louis has been deferred in consequence of the condition of the state.

INDEX.

Abercrombie, Major, 110. Adams and Cunningham Correspond-Adams and Cunninguam Correspondence, 101.

Adams, John, address of, Grand Jury of Dutchess Co. to. 231.

Adams, John Q., 32, 40, 101, 117.

Alden Family, 42; David, 345.

Alexandria Lodge, Portrait of Washington et. 40 ington at, 49. Allan, John, Library, 223; Memorial Allan, John, Library, 223; Memorial of, 352.
Allen, Col. William, 359.
Alsop, John, 185, 250.
American Admiral in Russia, 248, 315.
Americanisms, 345; in German English Dictionaries, 37.
Ancient clock, 239; Landmark, 38.
Andre, Major, Report on Exchange of Prisoners, 230.
Andros, Sir E., 239, 246.
Annals of Iowa, 88, 381.
Androscoggin, tribes on, 150; Indian names on, 236. names on. 236.
A Political lesson, 154.
Armstrong, Gen. John, Letter to Gen. Irwine, 16. Arnold, Benedict, letter of, 178. Attewaren, 67. Aubrid, Nicholas, 176 Aubrid, Nicholas, 176, Autographs, Authenticity of, 116, Barclay, Major Thos, 357, Barnsley, Thos., 358, &c. Battery, statue on the, 154, 185, 249, Beardsley, Rev. John, 357, Bears oil, 34, Bee, Introduction of the, 78, Bullinkey, (189, 234) Bellingham, Gov., 334. Bellomont, Earl of, name of misspelt, 38.
Beltrami, 179.
Benjamin, John, Will of, 333.
Bibliographical anecdote, 38.
Bibliography of Thomas a Kempis,
Following or Imitation of Christ, Following or Initiation of Christ, 279, 346-8.
Bishop of London's jurisdiction in America, 37.
Black River, 175.
Blue Hen's Chickens, 244.
Boerum, Simon, 185.
Boodle, 245, 317.
Book collectors, 277.
Boquet river, 37.
Borrowing names of places, 72. Boquet river, 37.
Borrowing names of places, 72.
Borton, prison walls in, 154; old house in, 182; siege of, 326; old Province House in, 333.
Braddock's Defeat, letter of Robert Orme, 353.
Bradford Club, 161, 352.
Bradford Club, 161, 352.
Bradford, Gov., Bible of, 343.
Bradford, William, Zenger's Indentures to, 35; first book printed by, 274.

Breck's Historical sketch of Continental paper money, 47.
Brodhead, Hon. J. R., Discourse of, 375. 375.
Bromfield, Ed., 335.
Bronck, Jonas, his library, 214.
Brothers, German. 70.
Browne, Lt. Col. Thos., 389.
Buchan, Earl of, letter of Jefferson to, Buffalo, last in Ohio, 71; on the Ohio, 239.

Buffalo, Historical reminiscences of, 69; question as to name, 278.

Bunker Hil, Dearborn's account of the Battle of, 286.

Burnes, Gov., Funeral Sermon, 398.

Burr, Aaron, reminiscences of his latter days, 113.

Burrll's Ferry, 106.

Buskirk, Col. Abraham, 355.

Butler, Richard, journal of the siege of Yorktown, 102.

Butricke, Geo., letters of, 258.

Butternuts, 79.

Cadwalader, John, 41.

Calcott's Disquisition, 311.

Calcott's Disquisition, 311.

Caldwell, Capt. 244.

Camp life in, 1776, 326.

Camp bell, John, publisher of first newspaper, 30.

Canada Bark Days and Earthquakes in, 60. Buffalo, Historical reminiscences of, Canada, Dark Days and Earthquakes in, 60.
Canal, Early, 114, 184.
Canarsic, Indian deed for, 67.
Canajoharic, 373.
Capucins in Maine, 176, 301.
Caricature of an early fracas in Congress, 9. Carondelet, Metrical account of origin Carondelet, Metrical account of origin of, 68.
Cartier, Jacques, 297.
Cartridge paper in 1778, 150.
Cary John, 389.
Caughnawaga, 373.
"Cease Rude Boreas," 41.
Centenarian in Maine, 176, 247, in Massachusetts, 346.
Chapultepec, fortress built, 141.
Chippeway, 179.
Chippewayns, 167. Chippewyans, 167. Christian names, curious origin of Christian names, curious origin of some. 71.
Christina, founding of, 387.
Clams, 248.
Clinton, Gov. Letter to, 305.
Clockville, Madison Co. N. Y. 38.
Cobb, Lt. Col., 106.
Cobham Point, 103.
Cochran, Maj. 108.
Coffin, Gen. John, 323; Joshua, 241, Medal, 277, 346.
Colden, Cadwallader, 114.

Colonial Policy of France in N. America in the 18th Century, 225.
Columbus, Statue of, 256; tomb of, 273; Letter, 289.
Common Prayer, Book of, for the Confederate States, 174.
Condy, Jonathan W. 9.
Confederacy, 116.
Confederate States, Name for the, 310; Book of Common Prayer for the, 174. Continental Money, 375, 47.
Continental Money, 375, 47.
Conyant Chiefs of, 34.
Cookquago, 373.
Copley Gallery, 345; Copley and Pelham, 397.
Copperhead, 40, 118.
Corlear's Hook, Hessian Camp t,a 58.
Coraplanter, Letter of, 34.
Cosart family, 116.
Cotton Mill, 398.
Cowdry's Journal, query as to, 78.
Cox family, 279; Richard, 154.
Crawford, Archibald, 179.
Crugor Lt. Col. 291, 323.
Curious Hexameters, 99.
Curwen's Journal, 382. Currous Hexameters, 99.
Curwen's Journal, 382.
Daly C. P. The first Theatre in New York, 292.
Damas, Count de, 106.
Danforth, Thos. 384.
DaVinci, Mapley, 256.
Davis, William J. 161; Mrs. 235: Capt. Isaac, 396.
Daviess, Joe, 38, 80.
Dawson's Federalist, 47; Stony Point, 254. Dayton, Jonathan, 9.
Dearborn's account of the Battle of Bunker Hill, 297.
DeBarras, 106.
de Dillon, Count, 295.
de Grasse, Count, 102, 106: Operations of the Reet under, 352.
de Kalb, Gen. 17.
dela Galirsonniere, Gov. 225.
De Lancey, Lt. Col. Stephan, 334.
de la Touche, 110.
de Lauzun, 107.
Delaware, Snowden on the early history of, 385.
Delawares, 21. tory of, 385.
Delawares, 21.
Delaware, 21.
Delaware, Col. J. R. Snowdon's address on early history of, 385.
d'Estaing, Count, attack on Savannah, 18-16, 289-7.
de Noaille, Viscount, 295.
De Peyster, Capt. A. 325.
de St. Gaspin, 374.
Deux Ponts, Count, Viscount, 114.
de Viomesnil, 109.
Dexter, Lord Timothy, 238.
Dogs, 279.
Donkin, Robt., 390.

